HOOPER WON OUT

"Battle Creek, Mich., July 22, 1925

Advocate, North Adams:—Kindly permit me to express to the voters of North Adams and vicinity through your valuable columns my deep appreciation of their loyal support of my candidacy for Congress as shown by the votes of last Tuesday. If elected, it will be my constant aim to so truly represent the district that my record will merit the confidence placed in me. JOSEPH L. HOOPER"

According to reports Hooper received a majority in this county of 2845 over his nearest competitor, McArthur, who represented the Klan. The Klan carried several townships in this county. McArthur lost his own county.

We are not prepared to say what this indicates, but we believe it has a significance in Michigan politics.

Announce Speakers For Farmers' Day

Governor McKelvin is today editor and publisher of "The Nebraska Farmer", a successful stock man, and president of Standard Farm Papers, a group of state and local farm papers having a combined circulation of nearly 2,000,000 farm readers. At the age of thirty seven, he was Nebraska's youngest governor.

Those who have heard the governor speak, refer to him as a speaker of power, sincerity and inspiration. He is expected to treat some vital phase of modern farming in his address.

President Butterfield will make his first appearance before a summer Farmers' Day meeting. As president of his alma mater, he is building up an enviable institution. As president of the American Country Life association, he is one of the nation's outstanding leaders in rural and community building.

Chairman of the general program is Dean Robert S. Shaw, of agriculture, Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse Association of America will assist in putting on the novel horse pulling contest. With combined features of choir singing, horse pulling contests, special machinery demonstrations, and detailed inspection of livestock and farm crops, the 1925 Farmers' Day is being planned as the big summer gathering of Michigan farmers and their families.

The Sunday School Picnic

Our annual Sunday school picnic at Devils Lake this year did beat the Dutch for attendance and general enjoyment and we have yet to learn of anyone there not having a good time. The tables were full to overflowing with the good things folks know how to prepare. A count showed over 320 seated and more came. The pot-luck dinner was superb and that's saying a mouth-full. After dinner the matter of sports engaged attention, and Messrs. Arthur Holcomb and W. Lawrence chose sides and played a real old-fashioned ball game in the sand lots. It is said the rooters made it so hot for the "Umph" he swallowed his gum. Lawrence's bunch had to give up the goat, and the score stood 7 and 4.

Bathing facilities at the lake were never better and the toboggan slide was certainly a great attraction to the young folks. Judging from the remarks of most of the crowd they will probably insist on holding the event at the same place next year and make it a little more general. Team work in getting up the affair is responsible for most of the success.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

German Note Gives Hope of Restoration of Friendly Peace in Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GERMANY'S reply to France on the subject of the security pact, in the opinion of official Europe, makes bright the outlook for peace in the old world. Foreign Minister Stresemann's note, delivered to the French foreign office, was considered in general quite satisfactory, though article 16 of the League of Nations covenant still stands in the way of complete accord. The German government says that although it does not consider its entrance to the league as a necessary condition for the establishment of a security pact, as France and England insist, it is willing to join the league, but with the express condition that article 16 does not apply to Germany.

"In spite of the explanation brought about by Germany's note to the league council on March 13 last, there is danger that after its entrance into the League of Nations Germany, disarmed and surrounded by powerfully armed neighbors, situated in the center of Europe and having in the course of history served as the theater of great wars, would be drawn into conflicts between third states," continues the note in expressing the Germans' fear of stirring the anger of Russia by helping France to aid Poland.

Article 16 theoretically gives France the right to send troops and supplies across Germany to the aid of Poland if the latter is attacked by Russia, but in Paris it is declared no French government would think of sending troops through a hostile Germany.

Germany says in the note that it would not have equal rights as a member of the league until its own disarmament is followed by general disarmament. It denies any intention of trying to modify the treaties of peace, but adds:

"At the same time it takes for granted that one must not forever exclude the possibility of adapting existing treaties to more friendly accords."

The third question discussed in the note is the right of France as a guarantor of future arbitration treaties between Germany and Poland and Czechoslovakia to have the privilege to decide who is the aggressor. The note demands that this right be given to a disinterested power, the Hague court, or the League of Nations.

M. Briand, French foreign minister, said: "In my personal opinion there is absolutely nothing in the German note which stands in the way of a satisfactory settlement." Later he apprised French diplomatic representatives in other countries of numerous reservations which the note calls for on the part of France, especially concerning the interpretation of article 16 of the covenant. The Paris press on second thought did not like the German reply so well, noting that it opens a debate on the revision of the peace treaties.

Addressing the reichstag, Herr Stresemann urged the nation and the allies to back the peace plan. He said, however, there were still some important points outstanding, especially with respect to arbitration treaties and the position Germany is to take within the League of Nations.

The minister was confident that further discussion would lead to positive results. He expressed great satisfaction at the good will shown by both France and Belgium in completely evacuating the Ruhr before August 16, and the French premier's declaration that Duesseldorf, Duisburg, and Ruhrort also shortly would be evacuated, within the time set by the treaty.

France was doing her part, as Stresemann said, by hastening the evacuation. Her troops were moving out of the German cities rapidly, at night so as to avoid clashes with the citizens.

An explanation of the improved relations between France and Germany, current in diplomatic circles, was that Benjamin Strong, president of the United States Federal Reserve Bank system, and Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who had been in Berlin, had threatened to refuse further credits to Germany unless it showed a reasonable spirit in the negotiations.

IN AN interview granted last week Premier Painleve said:

"France has the firmest intention to come to a settlement with the United States. There will be a settlement before November 1, and, although it has not been finally decided, M. Caillaux will go to the United States to arrange that settlement if the American public desires him to do so."

Henri Franklin-Bouillon already has been appointed chairman of the French commission.

The premier confirmed the report that France would seek a huge loan in the United States after the debt settlement had been agreed upon.

JOHN T. SCOPES of Dayton, Tenn., was found guilty of violating the state law forbidding the teaching of the theory of evolution, and was fined $100 by Judge Raulston. The conviction was a foregone conclusion. Notice of appeal was given and the case will be carried up to the Tennessee Supreme court. If that tribunal sustains the verdict, presumably the Supreme Court of the United States will be asked to rule on the case.

The fundamentalists are not satisfied with this victory. Walter White, Dayton's school superintendent and the prosecuting witness in the Scopes case, announced that a bill would be drawn up and introduced in congress withdrawing all federal support from institutions in which the doctrine of evolution is taught.

The Scopes defense at the start of the week surprisingly put William J. Bryan on the stand, and he and Clarence Darrow engaged in a lively duel of question and answer. Which had the better of it was a matter of individual opinion. However, Bryan was forced to admit that in some instances, notably the account of the creation in seven days, the words of the Bible might not be accepted literally. The Bible stories of Adam and Eve, of the tower of Babel, of the Flood, of Jonah and the whale, of Joshua and the sun, he said he believes are literally true. Speaking generally, he asserted: "I believe the Bible absolutely as it stands."

Next day the court decided all this exchange between Bryan and Darrow should be ruled out, and he refused to let Bryan put Darrow on the stand. So the case went to the jury, which needed but a few minutes to agree on a verdict of guilty.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE JARDINE has been spending some eight weeks touring the West, and on his return to Washington reviewed the agricultural situation as he saw it. There is a return of confidence, he said, and the farmers are getting out of the "shadow of bankruptcy." He thinks there will be no great demand for further farm legislation and that the farmers themselves are competent to solve their own problems. Many of the farmers with whom he talked told him to "let it alone, as things were going along pretty well." Mr. Jardine continued:

"Cattle and hog men are better off than they have been since 1920 and I didn't see any sheep men down at the mouth. If the wheat men are careful in marketing their crops they will get good prices and they are learning not to flood the markets.

"Conditions in the corn belt are reversed from what they were a year ago, when hogs were still cheap and corn a poor and expensive crop. Indications are for a large cotton crop and a favorable income in the belt."

ACCORDING to figures just made public by the Department of Agriculture, the farmers of the United States received a gross income of $12,136,000,000 from agricultural production for the year ending June 30 last, as compared with $11,288,000,000 for the previous year.

In arriving at the gross income the department deducts cost of feed, seed, and waste from the value of production. According to the department's experts, the increase over last year, amounting to about 7½ per cent, was due almost entirely to higher returns from grain and meat animals, particularly wheat and hogs.

Exclusive of live stock and feed sold to other farmers the gross income from sales was $9,777,000,000, as compared to $8,928,000,000 in 1924. Food and fuel produced and consumed on the farms was valued at $2,359,000,000.

VIOLENT attacks by the Riffians failed to break the French lines along the Ouerga river, though some posts were abandoned, and at last reports the Moroccan tribesmen were falling back on the center and apparently preparing to concentrate their efforts on the wings with the hope of taking the important towns of Taza and Quezzan, respectively about 60 miles east and northwest of Fez. Reinforcements for the French, together with the arrival of General Naulin, the new commander in chief of the field forces, and of Marshal Petain, have given renewed confidence that Abd-el-Krim will be defeated. The French are getting ready for a great offensive if the native leader rejects the peace terms that have been offered him by France and Spain.

CHINESE papers in Shanghai predicted last week that war would break out within a fortnight between the Fengtien troops and those of Chekiang province, which were massing near the city and were only ten miles apart. The international and French concessions were being protected with barbed wire entanglements and all foreigners were called in from the outposts. From Hongkong came word that two native armies were preparing for an attack on Canton. Meanwhile the foreign diplomats in Peking drew up proposals for the settlement of the controversies. The most important of them are:

Convocation of the Chinese customs revision conference with a minimum of delay and creation of a commission to inquire into extraterritorial matters, at a date still to be fixed.

Reference of the question of responsibility for bloodshed in the recent Shanghai riots to a judicial inquiry, with the Chinese government participating and all governments bound to abide by the findings.

AUSTRALIANS gave the American fleet uproarious welcomes at Melbourne and Sydney, which ports were visited last week by sections of the divided fleet. The people gathered from all parts of the country to witness the arrival of the gray warships, there were many speeches of greeting, and impressive aerial demonstrations. Admiral Robinson, commander of the section, was at Sydney, where he received a salute of seventeen guns, made official calls and reviewed a fine parade of men from his vessels, Sir Dudley Dechair, governor of New South Wales, standing by his side.

HENRY FORD'S bid for the fleet of unserviceable vessels of the United States shipping board has been held up for the present, objections to it having been raised by unsuccessful bidders under the first advertisement. There is a chance that the sale of the ships for junking may be prevented entirely, for someone has raised the point that this may be a violation of the merchant marine act. It was announced Chairman O'Connor had asked for a ruling by the attorney general.

THE Van Sweringen Nickel Plate railroad merger project was still before the interstate commerce commission last week, and the most interesting incident was a hot exchange between O. P. Van Sweringen and H. W. Anderson, counsel for protesting minority stockholders, concerning prospective profits for the promoters of the deal. Anderson presented a tabulation of original costs and potential values as a profit summarization, which Van Sweringen declared led to false conclusions.

HEARINGS on postal rates were begun by the congressional commission, and as a starter Postmaster General New told the body that postal revenues, under the new rates, which went into effect April 15, were only $4,131, or .0091 per cent greater in May of this year than in May, 1924. The postmaster general made it clear that insufficient time had elapsed to judge accurately the result of the changes.

Playgrounds Save City Children From Death

New York.—Fatal street accidents to children are much fewer in cities amply supplied with well-distributed playgrounds than in cities not so well supplied with these safety zones.

This conclusion of the National Safety council engineers was made public recently by the Playground and Recreation Association of America, with which the council is co-operating.

The investigations of the safety experts in most of the cities cover the three-year period 1922-1924. They show that cities with the most playgrounds had only one-third to one-fourth as many child pedestrian fatalities as adult fatalities.

In Cleveland, with a high pedestrian fatality rate, less than 30 per cent of the victims were children. The city has 72 playgrounds.

In Toledo, very few child fatalities were found within normal drawing distance of playground locations. Toledo has 12 playgrounds.

In Richmond, Va., which has many playgrounds in proportion to the population, the child automobile fatalities were less than 25 per cent of the total number in which pedestrians were involved. Only 12 children were killed by automobiles in the city during a three-year period ended December 21, 1924.

Two hundred and thirty-one cities established 635 new playgrounds last year, the Playground and Recreation association reports. New athletic fields number 132.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Bay City—Fire starting in the shop of the Defoe boat works, threatened destruction of the entire plant. In the shops are many cabins and other wood parts, as well as engines for the rum chasers now under construction for the government.

Jackson—Gambling devices of all kinds will be barred at the Jackson County Fair this year and Chief of Police Vandebogart will be instructed to arrest any concessionaires who attempt to operate such devices. This was the assurance given a representative of the W. C. T. U.

Flint—In an effort to stimulate patronage and increase revenues, the Detroit United Railway will not take advantage of the 3-cents-a-mile fare rate granted recently by the State Utilities Commission, as far as the Flint division is concerned, but instead a reduction is planned.

Pontiac—After a discussion between the city manager and the city commission, a decision was reached to abandon the plan to widen East Huron street. The heavy cost for property in this district made it inadvisable to proceed with the work, despite the fact that the street is in the downtown section and carries heavy traffic.

Battle Creek—Five persons were in Nicholas hospital and several others in jail as the result of the race riots here. Soldiers and civilians formed great mobs and invaded the negro district, and later went to a carnival grounds where several clashes occurred. All available police and sheriff's officers were called out in an effort to halt the riots.

Lansing—Indications that the merchant's bureau of the chamber of commerce does not intend to drop its fight against projecting signs on the principal streets, despite the protests of several merchants, were given when Charles G. Mackichan, president of the bureau, announced the appointment of a committee to plan for the removal of the signs.

Albion—Believing that many fish were killed by a quantity of acid dumped into the Kalamazoo river at the plant of the Albion Bolt company, Deputy State Game Warden Daniel O'Leary of Marshall, analyzed samples of water from the river above and below the sewer from the plant. Prosecution under the state law on pollution of streams is expected.

Lansing—The assessment of property in Michigan will be boosted half a billion dollars this year, according to preliminary figures compiled by George Lord, head of the state tax department. The assessment will be completed by August 3 for service on the municipalities. The board of equalization will meet August 17 to hear protests and comments from the various counties.

Mt. Clemens—A reorganization of personnel and the institution of a policy of rigid economy by the State Department of Public Safety was announced here by Alan G. Straight, commissioner. The changes involve also the establishment in both the lower and upper peninsulas of State Police troops and a centralized operations office in Lansing, comprising a system not unlike that employed by the army.

Lansing—Announcement was made at the Y. M. C. A. here that the camp for under-privileged boys of the city, financed by the Rotary club and conducted under direction of the Y. M. C. A., will be held at the Boy Scout camp at Clear Lake, near Jackson, from August 15 to 22. About 65 boys recruited from the social service center, the under-privileged "Y" boys club, and by members of the Rotary club, are to go to the camp.

Lansing—The State of Michigan faces a deficit of at least $1,100,000, it is revealed in figures given members of the administrative board by Henry Croll, Jr., state budget director. The state's books for the fiscal year, which ended June 30 this year, will show when the accounting is completed a paper surplus of $1,800,000. This paper surplus, however, is obtained on the basis of considering as assets large sums owed the general fund by the prison fund and the state highway department.

Lansing—Distribution of the primary school fund for the present year will be made on the basis of $13.70 per child, Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, announced. This is 30 cents a child less than last year, due principally to the abnormal increase in the number of school children in Michigan last year. The recent school census shows the increase to be approximately 50,000, or double the increase of recent years. The number of school children in the state is 1,124,000.

Lansing — Secretary of State Charles J. DeLand acted to put into force regulations aimed to eliminate fraudulent dealings by building and loan associations. The new regulations were drawn following an examination of the books of some 40 associations, many of which were found to be violating the law passed by the 1925 legislature. The rules place the building and loan salesmen exactly in the class of the stock salesman, in that he must be registered and approved by the department before he is permitted to do business.

Muskegon—Three youthful bandits made away with the $33,000 Lakey Foundry company payroll, after holding up the three carriers, near the paymaster's office, where a score of employes were waiting for their pay. The carriers were unarmed and did not resist. As the carriers approached with two boxes containing the money, two of the men stepped through the gate into the factory yard and brandished pistols. They loaded the boxes into the automobile and it sped down a side street hidden from view of witnesses.

Albion—The Michigan Artificial Ice Company, which has plants at Albion and Ypsilanti, will break ground August 1 for a new factory at Ann Arbor.

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids has a population of 168,812, according to estimates based on the new school-census just completed. Children of school age total 42,203.

Detroit—Organization in Detroit of a $2,000,000 bank has been approved by the comptroller of currency, according to reports. It is the Griswold National Bank of Detroit.

Ionia—Antoine Rushford, 106 years old, the oldest Ionia county resident and believed to have been a first cousin of Napoleon Bonaparte, died at the county home near here.

South Haven—Rapid work by Coast Guards saved the life of H. L. Green, 21 years old, of Winnipeg, clinging to an overturned canoe a quarter of a mile from shore. B. L. Roberts, 23 years old, also from Winnipeg, swam to shore.

Saginaw — Police Chief William Kurtz has notified all police patrols operating in this city that they must obey the state motor vehicle laws relative to speeding. This is in response to ordinary calls, emergency calls being allowed the necessary speed to get results.

Northville—Northville is to have a new modern movie theater and play house. The Allen-Penniman syndicate, of Plymouth, has purchased the property on Main street left vacant by the recent fire which destroyed the Alyseium theater and the grocery store of W. H. Elliott.

Chesaning—Chesaning boasts an unusual pair of citizens, twin brothers, 81 years old. John S. Southwell and Stephen J. Southwell were born in Brantford, Ont., in 1884. The aged twins are in the best of health and have had but few occasions to need the services of a doctor.

Port Huron—The Electric Railway Co. here, which provides local street car transportation, must provide improved transportation facilities to the city's beaches before a fare increase will be granted, Mayor McIlwain announced. The company had asked the city to permit it to charge a higher fare.

Kalamazoo—Isaac Quigno, 75 years old, former chief of the Pottawatomie Indian tribe near Hartford, has been married to Mrs. Lizzie Gibson, of Watervliet. Quigno for years has been a leader in an attempt to gain settlement of Lake Michigan property at Chicago, which he claims belongs to the Indians.

Pontiac—The announcement of the purchase of the plant and equipment of the Michigan Drop Forge Co. by the Wilson Foundry & Machine Co. was made by D. R. Wilson, general manager of the Wilson company. The property was surrounded by the Wilson plant and will be used for future expansion Mr. Wilson said.

Lansing—A conference of Michigan shippers on the general freight rate revision petition now before the Interstate Commerce Commission has been called for July 28, Sherman T. Handy, utilities commission chairman, said. The Michigan body plans to revise and consolidate arguments to be made at a future hearing before the I. C. C.

Owosso—A workman who suffers a sunstroke cannot be awarded compensation from his employer, Charles Ravens, of the State Industrial Accident Board, ruled here in denying compensation to H. F. Ginther, of Laingsburg. Ginther was overcome by heat while demonstrating a tractor last spring and has been unable to work since.

Port Huron—John Long has brought suit in this city against the Saginaw Fair association for $5,000 damages. Long alleges that he was injured badly while attending a carnival in Saginaw when a motorcycle jumped the rim of a motordrome and ran over him. He holds the fair association responsible for not providing proper safeguards.

Lansing—A suit to prohibit the City of Detroit from collecting more than $23,000 assessed against the State Fair property in connection with the widening and improving of Woodward avenue, has been started in the Ingham County Circuit Court by Victor H. Spike, assistant Attorney-General. The State contends that the Fair Ground property is used for public educational and welfare purposes and is exempt from participation in the cost of the improvement.

Monroe—A gang of about 100 extra men has been brought to Maybee, 12 miles west of here, by a contractor from Detroit, with a view to laying rail for the proposed double track of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad, starting at Derbin, Raisinville township, and connecting at Wauseon. The distance between the two points is about 50 miles. It is hoped to finish the tracks for the new cut-off during the year. The entire road, which is owned by Henry Ford, is to be electrified.

Grand Rapids—The administration committee of the city commission and city manager, Fred H. Locke, has acted to force the Grand Haven & Muskegon Railway company to so route its passenger and freight cars in this city as to remove them from downtown streets. The Grand Rapids Railway company has petitioned for permission to build track to connect the G. R., G. H. & M., with the Michigan Railroad company's lines to permit of through freight traffic. The committee and manager granted the petition.

Flint—City Attorney John Farley has acted to protect the city's interest in collection of delinquent taxes in a petition to the circuit court for an injunction restraining stockholders of a defunct automobile sales agency from disposing of the company's holdings pending collection of the taxes. The petition came as the aftermath of a judgement for $4,085 granted the city against the Hurd Auto Sales company, which has since gone out of business. The delinquent taxes are included in the $50,000 personal taxes uncollected.

Mannish Mode Is Losing Prestige

The spring compromise has been extended to summer and the mode is still casting bewildered glances, now at the unadorned severity of the mannish costume and now at the dainty fragility of the feminine frock. The situation is unique in the annals of fashion—perhaps never before have two diametrically opposed tendencies pursued their even tenors so long undisturbed, each stubbornly retaining its popularity. If the semi-masculine drive had commenced a year earlier, its domination would have been complete; if the firm hold of the straight-line had been less tenacious, airy femininity would have reigned alone. As it is the issue is still clouded and the mode, sanctioning both, has been forced into a liberality it seldom relishes and will not long continue, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune.

The severe mannish vogue was occasioned by a series of circumstances, fortuitous for those to whom that type of dress appeals. The tailleur had been knocking at the door for several seasons, and milady, tiring of older styles, had begun to lend a more responsive ear. The unprecedented popularity of the bob and the short skirt furnished splendid propaganda for further extensions of the less frilly masculine ideal. Greater than these, the youthful straight-line had come to the beginning of the end, and the beginning of the end of any mode is a phase always characterized by the most bizarre extremes.

The feminine vogue on the other hand was a natural reaction against a group of "simple and youthful" tendencies which had overstayed their time—which had actually begun with the war and which were now being pursued to limits which lacked the relieving grace of charm. Smart women eagerly welcomed the flare and its vogue was wide and instantaneous, and yet the flare was far more significant as a gesture than as a fashion—its decorative touch was a definite protest against an increasing unadorned severity which was threatening the art of the mode.

The Eternal Feminine Returns.

Eventually one of these tendencies must prevail, and only a close analysis can clear the maze. The fact that frills are more abundant these summer months has little bearing on the situation—torrid days always necessitate gossamer fabrics and these do not easily lend themselves to the severe tailleur. It is apparent, however, that of the two governing impulses of fashion one is the final flare of a departing cycle, while the other is the initial manifestations of the future mode. The mannish style is the last attempt of the simple straight-line to maintain its place in the sun—the gentler jabots, frills and flares are harbingers of the graceful femininity that is to be the newer portion of the mode. Both are en regle for the moment, but if you wish to march with the advance guard of the fashionables, you will make your selections from the frocks which do not essay to make the modern maid an amazing duplicate of her brother.

Some interesting models are mute evidences of the approaching triumph of the eternal feminine—and they are typical of the styles launched at what are called the demi-openings.

In her demi-season collection Chanel features some attractive black frocks having the same charm and youthfulness of lines so distinctly her first consideration in all creations. One of her new dinner frocks is of black mousseline de soie and has a flounce attached to the skirt at the hip-line which is edged with a ruching made in the same manner as the single flower which Chanel used on the lapel of her spring coats. The scarf continues to be a feature of such dresses. With this particular model the scarf is a straight piece of black chiffon about ten inches wide and is not attached to the dress. Often these little scarfs take the form of a tiny shoulder cape, a practical touch, as the cape is frequently not more than a handkerchief to carry in the hand when not needed to cover the shoulders.

Panel, Flounce and Godet.

Chanel has entirely departed from printed fabrics in her new models. Indeed, there is a tendency in all of the demi-season collections to get away from the printed materials which have been so popular for the last two years. The Miler Soeurs are showing a new collection featuring the most wearable frocks, all of solid colors, using no printed fabrics even as trimmings. The line is fairly straight but there is considerable more flare to the skirts than heretofore. Red [illegible] favored color in evening dresses [illegible] crepe georgette or mousseline de soie, these usually having two circular flounces on the skirt and often a long straight panel either at the side or attached to one shoulder so that it may be used as a scarf. One of the most popular models is made of a rich red crepe with a plain flat bodice and a skirt of many godets finished around the bottom in small scallops. A beige crepe afternoon frock is attractive made on straight lines with the skirt slashed at the front to show a black satin foundation, giving the effect of a tunic coat—a style that is being featured by many of the important French dressmakers.

Only two of the Miler Soeurs evening models have a beaded design. All other dresses depend entirely on good lines for their charm. This house shows a tendency to slightly shorten the waistline, though it does not go as far as to insist upon the normal waistline. Practically all of the models that have been shown in red have been reproduced in black. Brown has a similar popularity and there is no doubt that these sober shades will be most acceptable in the autumn after a very colorful summer.

Coming Vogues Are to Be Distinctly Feminine

It requires no crystal gazer to read the handwriting on the wall. From the details of the summer and advance autumn collections and from the marked preference shown by the continental haute monde, it is clearly evident that the mannish vogue has reached the end of the trail. In less exclusive circles its vogue may be prolonged for another season, but for the beau monde its appeal is waning. Numerous attempts will be made to extend its dynasty by those whose interests are involved.

The tendency is distinctly toward a greater amount of softening details—gradual flares, back flares, lace, jabots and the like—and the smart mode for summer and fall will once more be dominated by the eternal feminine.

Black, navy blue and brown are favored in the Jenny collection for all types of dresses, the monotony of the somber colors being characteristically broken by bits of trimmings in bright colors. A trimming of colored buttons is frequently employed on black dresses, and tiny composition pendants developed in varied colors often appear instead of flat buttons. A black poplin de laine frock has a row of these pendants in red, green and yellow around the bottom of the skirt and finishing the sleeves. A brown kasha dress has a plaited skirt with the plaits held down by bands of brown silk of a darker shade, these bands trimmed with buttons. Another kasha frock is trimmed in colored square buttons. Diamond-shaped buttons in bright colors are also employed to carry out Jenny's favorite trimming in Roman stripes.

Sports Dresses

Two-piece sports dresses made of wool knitted in a fancy weave, and with no color to relieve their whiteness are among the season's pleasant surprises.

Sweaters in Black and White

With designs reminiscent of the Fair Isle patterns, stunning sweaters of white with designs in black are appropriate for half mourning and are most uncommon and smart.

Fashion Briefs That Will Interest Women

Very attractive sleeveless coats are worn over the new long-sleeved gowns.

Colored lace frocks trimmed with chiffon or crepe of the same shade are very smart.

Narrow ribbons are first favorites in dress and hat trimmings. Some lovely soft corded ribbons are in two-tone and shot effects, or have alternative cords of different colors. Scalloped edges are seen.

Belts are revived, some about an inch and a half wide, some two inches and some narrow. Large round or oblong bakelite buckles are used.

Sports stockings and shoes should always be worn with sports suits and frocks. This rule of dress is frequently violated.

The underarm bag remains in the mode. In almost every variety of material it clings to the flat envelope shape.

A vogue for white sports dresses is expected for midsummer, and striped silks will be used, too.

Novel Wool Trimming

A coat of much charm, made of leaf-green wool, is trimmed around the collar and cuffs with bands of wool hooked through in large loops and left uncut. The same novel decoration forms a deep border on the skirt.

Of Brightest Hues

The new shoulder capes becoming so popular for afternoon wear are of the brightest possible hues with scarlet, russet and flame, and sunset predominating.

"Old Ironsides" To Be Restored

The famous old sea fighter Constitution commonly dubbed "Old Ironsides" which has been rotting at her wharf in Boston Harbor for 28 years since being abandoned as a training ship by the Naval Reserve, is to be put into shape again and steps taken to preserve her as a shrine of American liberties.

The Imperial Order of Benevolent Elks of America will take in hand the task of rejuvenating the Constitution and saving her from a watery grave. Twice has the Navy Department condemned the old brig to annihilation, and twice has the hand of public sentiment interfered. It is calculated that the expense of putting her in shape to resist the wear and tear of time will be about $300,000. Altogether 1000,000 members of the order will contribute each a small bit and the school children of America will be asked to help. Plans are afoot, so says John G. Price of Columbus, Ohio, who is Exalted Ruler of the Elks, to send a speaker to every school in the land to tell the story of "Old Ironsides" to the children and collect a small donation of ten cents per child. Nothing larger will be accepted from the students.

She is a hundred gun ship and was built and launched at Boston in 1797 her oak planking came from the forests of Georgia, her tall masts from the pine forests of the new England states. She was manned by as gallant a commander and crew as ever left an American port.

It will be remembered that in 1836 it was decided by the Navy Department of this country that this old wood boat was a burden and the amount of copper which she contained was quite valuable. Therefore she should be scrapped but young Oliver Wendell Holmes in a memorable poem, so eulogized the old fighrer that public sentiment arose en masse and repudiated this ruling.

Accordingly the Department decided to convert the Constitution into a training ship for the young blades of the naval school at Annapolis, which was kept up until 1897. The plans now in consideration for rebuilding this old relic will include a practically new hull and so much new timber throughout it will hardly be considered as the same boat. The episode of the "Constitution and Guerrierre" is familiar to every school boy in this country.

In the year 1836 after it had been decided to scrap the "Constitution" public indignation rose to a high pitch and then rising young poet Oliver Wendell Holmes penned the following immortal lines which are destined to go down in history:

OLD IRONSIDES

Aye' tear her battered ensign down
  Long has it waved on high
And many an eye has danced to see
  That banner in the sky:
Beneath it rung the battle shout
  And burst the cannon's roar;
The meteor of the ocean air
  Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Her deck once red with heroe's blood
  Where knelt the vanquished foe
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood.
  And waves were white below
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
  Or know the conquered knee;
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
  The eagle of the sea!

Oh better that her shattered hulk
  Should sink beneath the wave·
Her thunders shook the mighty deep
  And there should be her grave;
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
  Set every threadbare sail·
And give her to the God of storms
  The lightning and the gale."

To Certify Potatoes Through State Body

The Michigan Crop Improvement Association, nationally known cooperative farmer's seed improvement body, will in the future be the certifying organization for Michigan potatoes as well as for other field seeds. Announcement to this effect was made this week from the office of the farm crops department at the M. S. C., and the action is said to follow requests from the various potato growers organizations of the state.

The new plan will provide standardization of the potato certification requirements for the entire state and throws the force of the Crop Improvement Association back of a great certified seed potato program, already developed by the potato groups themselves. Improvement of the market quality of the state tuber crop is said to be the goal back of all the improvement program.

The statement given out by Prof J. F. Cox, head of the college farm department, summarizes briefly the new certification system: The Michigan Crop Improvement Association will be the certifying organization for potatoes. The farm crops department of the M. S. C. will supervise inspection and the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange of Cadillac, through a pooling arrangement with the Michigan Certified Seed Potato Growers Association, will act as official sales agent for certified seed potatoes, a function cared for by the state farm bureau seed service with other field seeds.

The action taken by the Board of Directors of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association and the Farm Crops Department of the M. S. C. automatically makes all Michigan growers of potatoes, who have applied to the State College for inspection, members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association and entitled to all benefits of the latter organization.

The new plan does not interfere with private sale of certified seed potatoes by growers who wish to market in that way, it is said. H. C. Moore, potato specialist at the college, will continue to supervise the potato inspection work for the state.

Passing Of The Great Commoner

"Free Silver, 16 to 1" how distinctly we remember the caption as we hark back to the days when "Gold Coin Harvey" put out his little treatise in Chicago calculated to upset the theory of better money William J. Bryan just coming onto the stage of public politics took for his slogan "Free Silver" and as he roamed the country stump speaking for his favorite party the Democratic Greenbackers, there was plenty of excitement and some amusement at what the stand patters termed Democratic folly of tampering with the money standards of this country. Bryan as editor of the Kansas Commoner was being heard for his much speaking in his native state of Kansas. In 1896 as a rising young lawyer he made his maiden speech in a democratic convention on free silver and it looked to the novice as if he had a splendid future in prospect. The Democratic guard went wild over him but alas and alack! They couldn't bring the great body of politicians to their way of thinking. The superb nerve which was always with him enabled Mr. Bryan to overcome his keen disappointments. Several times he appeared before the great American public seeking election but twas no use. The electorate would not do a thing for him. After due consideration of his case they laid him away to keep, first garnishing him liberally with offers of chautauqua engagements. The question is often asked "why was Mr. Bryan repeatedly turned down" and the echoes only answer.

The most natural conclusion would be to say "He talked himself to death" and secondly his principles and ideals were not the principles and ideals of a political party such as he seemed destined to head. He supported Wilson in the convention at which time Bryan was at the heighth of his career. There is probably no glory spot more shining for him than that of the party reconstruction in the convention that nominated Woodrow Wilson to the presidency. Here he posed as the official wise man of the party and his advice was eagerly sought. That's the strangest and most pathetic history of any political leader—as long as he labored for others he was a prince but the minute he sought to further his own interests he was a reprobate—a man without a political home.

We never could believe that William Jennings Bryan had a single look at the presidency after his first failure. His case is simply an unfortunate profession of faith which junks any politician, yet the masses will respect Mr. Bryan because he could neither be bought nor bulldozed. He lived a clean domestic life—a christian decency which is as far from politics as the west from the east and his reward is oblivion. When Mr. Bryan entered the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson his days were already numbered—the Mede was on his throne and the Persian at his gate. In every sense the Medes and Persians of politics sang his swan song. The cabinet of a president was no more fit for a reserved christian man than hell is fit for angels, yet Mr. Bryan did his best to conform to conditions. After his resignation and after he had practically surrendered he was tick tacked by the republicans and democrats alike until it is a miracle that he cared to even quote politics.

As a temperance man William J. Bryan deserves more than passing mention because he established a new regime among great statesmen The rule at Washington among our lawmakers (be it their shame) has been to drink all you need and a little more for good measure· Men on the floors of congress have voted bone dry and went down below and quaffed until drunken—a series of principles that has astounded the foreign nations, yet Mr. Bryan indulged not and he had the courage of his conviction. He cleared the way for decency in politics and his reward is a stone—you might call it a mill stone hanged about his neck. The other part of the performance was literally carried out by party leaders-but we believe he has a greater glory in the hereafter.

Japanese Confirmed Bath Fiends

The Japanese are the cleanliest of all races. Their clothes are kept scrupulously clean, and their bodies bathed with the most absurd frequency. In Japan one is obliged to take a bath every day on penalty of being disrepectable, and a bath in Japanese is a literal parboiling in the American language. Not only are bathing facilities a part of every home, but public bath-houses are found on every street, and from them is constantly pouring clouds of steam wafting the clean odor of soap and a babel of voices, for the bath-house serves as a sort of club for the poor man. Even the most wretched hovel has a public vat for bathing. The very nature of the country with its numerous waters, is suggestive of cleanliness; hot sulphur springs are numerons and the natives come from distances to bathe. In the island of Kyushu in South Japan exist many mineralized hot springs and the water is piped from boiling lakes at the right temperature according to the Japanese idea, for a bath.

Everything about this veritable fairyland of Japan is diminutive. The very build and stature of the people harmonizes with this idea. Trees are stunted and short in growth. The houses and temples are small and tiny as compared with our's, and the whole country reminds one of a doll house. The Japanese short stature is attributed largely to habits of squatting when reclining. There are no such things as chairs in the Japanese home and the family sit on cushions or kneel or sit on their heels on the floor, a position which they can assume for hours and arise easily and gracefully, which for the American is a mighty painful process and attended too often with disasterous consequences, if it is accomplished at all.

Living a more or less sedentary life, the Japanese' bodies lack the graceful Grecian contour and shapeliness that comes from exercise.

However, the increased zeal for sports is improving their physique. Ancient Japan is a nation that dislikes to give up its customs. Until recently the Japanese never segregated the sexes in any diversion such as bathing, toilets, etc., and in their centuries of practice these matters were not regarded as objectionable, until some civilized Christian missionaries located in Japan, and began the teaching of new ethics. The Japanese made all manner of ridicule, and do today, of a prudery that would require different bath-houses for the sexes. Instances are known where the proprietors of baths pretending to humor the foreign teachings, erected glass partitions between men's and women's bath apartments! They thus made a hoax of the whole thing. It is possible the Japanese have seen the inconsistency of our temperance laws, also they may have sensed the empty mockery of our divorce laws.

Special Warm Weather Radio Concerts For the Summer Listener

By CHARLES B. POPENOE
Manager, Stations WJZ and WJY, New York City

Keeping the air filled with good things—that is the job of the Broadcast Station Manager. To do this requires organization—a staff of specialists. From the first day of 1924 till the last day, station WJZ was on the air a total of 3,085 hours, transmiting 4,935 separate program features. The twin station WJY was on the air a total of 686 hours, transmitting 1,174 separate program features during the same period.

Back in the early days of radio broadcasting, the program manager didn't have to worry about "filling" his time on the air. One or more phonographs and an automatic piano were fixtures of the broadcasting studio, and when there was a lull in the program the studio announcer made good use of a few of the latest record releases or pianola rolls to fill in the time.

That practice, however, is a thing of the past. The radio audience no longer wants to listen to just plain "fillers" to kill time, so to speak. To-day, everything that comes over the air must be fresh or first-hand. Moreover, the various features must be fitted into the program with the utmost care and judgment, so as to make for a harmonious ensemble.

Occasionally, when an artist or a speaker fails to appear at the appointed time, the studio staff must improvise a feature to span the gap in the program. Gifted studio announcers are now a part of the staff and their musical talents serve to good advantage for just such emergencies. Going even one step further, the leading studios have skilled musicians on their regular studio staff, available for all occasions as accompanists or to play solos. WJZ and WJY of the Radio Corporation of America, are fortunate in having Godfrey Ludlow, an accomplished Austrian violinist, on the regular staff. Mr. Ludlow not only plays with the rare skill of a great artist, but he possesses one of the very few real Stradivarius violins in existence. Lovers of violin music have many treats in store for them this coming season, for Ludlow will often play for them. Mr. Keith McLeod is also well-known to the radio audience, for his unusual ability as a concert pianist.

When Summer Comes

Radio is no longer seasonable. The recent technical advances in transmitting and receiving equipment, the increased power of the broadcasting stations and other significant factors have done much to overcome the early handicaps of warm weather. Then, too, the program managers have come to recognize the importance of summer-time radio, with the result that their efforts go on just the same in summer as in winter. If anything, program managers consider that sumer-time radio has some decided advantage over winter-time rdio, in the mtter of securing sporting events from the great outdoors, thus giving their programs a dash of seasoning.

For several weeks back we have been getting ready for summer-time broadcasting. Certain changes have been made in the scenery of our studios somewhat after the manner of the housewife who changes the living-room decorations from the heavy and warm style of winter to the simple and cool style of summer. Atmosphere and surroundings have their effect upon the broadcaster. For that reason we have prepared our studios to carry out the idea of summer and all it stands for with the vast radio audience. This must have a "summer-time" influence on our programs in the making.

We must take into consideration the changing seasons and the changing interests of our vast family of listeners-in. Speaking for stations WJZ and WJY specifically, we are going to broadcast many things of interest to summer-time folks. We shall have excellent talks on swimming, which is a subject of very general interest. We shall have talks on golf—that fascinating imported game which have gained such wide popularity in America. We shall have talks on tennis, basketball, baseball, and other American sports. We shall have talks by practical campers to campers and motor tourists, and once those campers are in the far-off corners, we shall keep them in touch with the world and furnish them with the best of musical entertainment. We shall have talks on the care of the automobile, on motor tours and on other subjects of interest to the vast army of Americans who travel the highways of our vast country during the coming months.

The Radio Reporter and the Sporting Events

Summer-time being the outdoor time of the year, the program manager goes out more than ever after out-of-the-studio features. During the past year the out-of-the-studio features amounted to 54 per cent of the programs from stations WJZ and WJY, the remaining 46 per cent being studio features. The program manager today no longer waits for radio performers to come to the studio. If he knows of a desirable feature for his audience, which cannot be brought to the studio in the normal course of events, he sends the radio reporter after it with the microphone and the "pick-up" wires which radiate from the studio in all directions.

From Philharmonic Music to the Latest Jazz

There is plenty in store for the music lovers. We have scheduled a series of concerts which will be broadcast direct from Washington, D. C., given by the United States Marine Band and the United States Army Band, and broadcast through WRC of Washington and WJZ of New York City and probably WGY of Schenectady. The Marine band will be broadcast twice a week, and the Army band once a week.

There are several other musical treats in store for the summer-time listeners, which will be announced later. Meanwhile, the usual studio programs will go "on the air" all through the summer, terminating each evening's program, except Sunday, with the latest dance music which will set tens of thousands of feet in action in the city as well as in the remote camp and summer resort.

With regard to informative talks on subjects other than sport, we shall have much interest to summer-time folks. For the ladies—especially during the daytime when they comprise an overwhelming majority of our audience—we shall have talks on gardening; how to arrange the home for warm weather; what to wear during the summer, and so on. For the home-builder and home-owner, we plan to have talks on the building and maintenance of the home.

During the Civil War soldiers often carried a piece of bacon with them with which they rubbed infested parts of their bodies after the day's march, the grease and salt serving the double purpose of prevention and remedy.

Lullaby Tots in WLS Radio Play

Children, all under ten years of age, put on radio playlets as a new feature of WLS, the Sears-Roebuck station, Chicago. The troup of juvenile Thespians are known as "Big" Ford and Little Glenn's Woodshed Theater Lullaby Players." The first production was "Robinson Crusoe's Princess."

Ford Rush and Glenn Rowell, creators of Lullaby Time for the radio kiddies, started to tell the Lullaby Tots of the construction of the "Woodshed Theater" October 15. Each night during "Lullaby Hour" Ford and Glenn, in a chatty way, told the children how they were building the Woodshed playhouse piece by piece. It was finished November 5. Every Thursday night this is a feature of WLS. The other playlets include "Going to School in Mother Goose Land," "Mr. and Mrs. Robin Find a Home," and "The Sleeping Beauty." The program starts at 7 o'clock and lasts for twenty minutes.

Better Enforcement Coming

In addition to the government's new crusade against "rum row" on the Atlantic coast, the details of which we published a month ago, an extensive and very important reorganization of the land forces is announced by Asst. Sec. Andrews of the Treasury department, who has this work in charge. There will be some radical changes in the personnel now engaged in the work. Only the broad outlines of the program were made public, but Mr. Andrews turned immediately to the task of working out its details and to a survey of the fitness of those now on the job for reappointment when it is put in operation.

Neither Mr. Andrews nor other treasury officials would discuss the probable changes further than to say that only those with ability would be retained.

The plan for reorganization divides the United States into 22 federal districts bounded exclusively by judicial district lines, their size having been determined by the amount of permissive work to be done and by the difficulties of enforcement to be met due to local conditions, public sentiment, etc. Because of time required for written communication, the Hawaiian Islands and Porto Rico are made each a district by itself.

The Washington headquarters, where authority has centered since the Volstead act was passed, will be conducted under the present officers, but their duties will be more of a supervisory and less of an administrative character. They also will have a greater opportunity to spend time in the field and to work more closely with the prohibition administrators, 22 of whom will be named to have charge of as many districts in the United States with two others in Hawaii and Porto Rico.

Each of the district officials will have two assistants, one of whom will have charge of permissive work, or control of permits and distribution while the other will devote his efforts to enforcement. The district offices also will have a chief chemist and a counsel, eliminating the necessity of transmission of hundreds of cases to Washington.

A centrally situated city has been designated as headquarters for the administrators in each of the 22 districts in the United States.

Detroit was named as headquarters for Michigan and Indiana, Columbus for Ohio and West Virginia, and Chicago for the northern district of Illinois and Wisconsin.

The new program has the approval of the president and in making it public Secretary Mellon expressed also his whole hearted support. "Assistant Secretary Andrews," said Mr. Mellon's statement, "having analyzed the situation in prohibition law enforcement, has submitted a plan for reorganization and policy which he has worked out in collaboration with Commissioner Blair of internal revenue and Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and the heads of his various departments. The plan has met the unqualified approval of the president and this department.

"The change will be started Aug. 1 and the whole plan put into effect as rapidly as conditions warrant.

"It is believed the federal function in prohibition enforcement is to stop the sources of supply, important diversion of legitimately manufactured alcohol, illegitimate manufacture and transportation of alcohol and alcohol beverages. Federal law enforcement energies will be directly primarily against the bootleg industry in all phases of its operations. Effort will be made to assist and develop local enforcement.

"The treasury department will work in closest possible cooperation with the department of justice and its agents, both headquarters in the field. All control of alcohol, except the collection of the federal tax, is made the sole responsibility of the prohibition administrators representing the commissioner of international revenue.

The Anti Saloon League and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, whose goals in the prohibition question are exactly opposed, find themselves paradoxically in agreement on the shake up in the enforcement system. Both organizations, however, qualified their indorsement of the new order in statements Tuesday night.

"If prohibition can be enforced" the wets' statement declared, "this man and these methods will enforce it. We are equally confident, too, that if the law cannot be enforced, which will be the case, then Gen. Andrews will be just as straight forward in announcing his failure as he has been in his efforts to bring about honest enforcement,"

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti Saloon league, declared the new plan doubtless would eliminate politics "better than under the present system, but we will of course ask congress to put all the prohibition agents under civil service so that this policy will be fixed by statute."

The director of the new grouping, Lincoln C. Andrews, who has been an Army officer for thirty years, has world wide experience as a disciplinarian and organizer. He served as a Brigadier General in France, and it was he who reorganized the military police in France after the Armistice was signed. The newspapers report him as "hard boiled."

Cull Liars From Layers, Institute Urges

Twenty five percent of the hens on Hillsdale county farms are not paying their board and should not be carried over for next year's layers. This conclusion by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute is based on a summary of reports of hen culling campaigns in areas where poultry conditions are similar to those prevailing in this county.

It is easier to detect a slacker hen than a poor producing cow, according to the Institute. The poultryman need but step into the poultry house at night and by feeling the ends of the hen's pelvic bones, convince himself absolutely whether that particular hen is a layer or a liar. In an undeveloped pullet these bones are very close together but as she approaches the laying period they gradually spread further apart to permit the egg to pass between the pelvic bones in leaving the body. When laying stops the bones tend to draw closer and closer together. Since an egg measures two to two and one half fingers in width, it is readily seen that the hen with bones not spread the width of an egg is not laying while those with bones extended are producers. It will also be noticed that the vent of the layer is moist and expanded while the non layer's vent is small and dry.

This is the best time of year to start going through one's flock to cull out the non layers and early molting hens, the Institute states. Hens that stop laying in July and August are generally the poorest layers and it is a mistake to assume that they will lay more eggs this winter because they ceased laying early.

Stage Set For Big Farmers' Day Meet

Plans for the entertainment of thousands of Michigan farmers who will gather here on Friday, July 31, for the eighth annual summer Farmers Day at M. S. C, have been completed this week, with only the weather man left as a vital factor in the preliminary details. With favorable weather, it is predicted that last year's record breaking crowd of more than 7,000 will be equaled.

Numerous interesting features are included in the announced program for the day. Inspection of the various college experimental plots and livestock herds, visits to the buildings and special departments and the horse pulling contest will take up the morning. After the basket picnic lunches at noon on the beautiful college campus, the whole crowd of visitors will gather for the big outdoor meeting, which is to begin at one o'clock, eastern time.

Samuel McKelvie, former governor of Nebraska and nationally known farm writer and speaker, together with President K. L. Butterfield of the M. S. C. will headline the speaking program. Band concerts, a singing contest, and other features are also included in the afternoon program.

Farmers Day is an occasion when all the college departments are at home for visitors, every effort being extended to provide as much information and entertainment as possible on the "open house" day.

New Pyrotol Shipment Coming to Michigan

A new allotment of Pyrotol, war salvage explosive released by the U. S. government, will be available for Michigan farmers this fall according to word received by Larry Livingston, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the M. S. C.

Large quantities of Pyrotol were distributed through the state last fall, proving highly satisfactory for a stone and stump blasting explosive. It is estimated that it has saved the farmers of the state thousands of dollars, both on the price of the explosive itself and in increased efficiency in the fields cleared. Pyrotol is distributed at cost, through the various local county agricultural agents of the state.

Sixteen Dollars Price of Hazing

A bunch of bellers near Pittsford got in very bad with the county officers recently because they went out for a little lark one night and according to reports played rough with Byron Baxter, recently wed. These ten funny cut-ups went over to Byron's, forcibly seized him and removed him to other parts, where under protection of the darkness they stripped Baxter and sans clothes he submitted to a number of cute didoes such as being besmeared with grease, lard and other high-class substances. The boobies who thus maltreated Baxter did not seem to keep their identity since all were arrested on complaint of the bridegroom, and jugged in Hillsdale. Justice Miller soaked the birds $16.00 each, and he should have sent 'em into the kindergarten with a nursing bottle and a few simple toys. They are in their infancy as far as putting over original jokes are concerned. We have in mind a number of belling parties of the past where the bridegroom just to be cute, took a shotgun and filled his assailant's carcasses with double B's and the next day the neighbors said it was a disagreeable task well performed

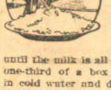
The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

It is good to rub and polish the brain against that of others.—Montagne.

TASTY FOODS

Rice is such a wholesome food that different ways of serving it are always appreciated.



Imperial Rice.—Put three cupfuls of milk into a double boiler, add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of well-washed rice. Cook until the milk is all absorbed, then add one-third of a box of gelatin soaked in cold water and dissolved over heat. When the mixture is cold and beginning to thicken, add one-half cupful of powdered sugar, one teaspoonful of of lemon juice and the same of orange juice and a little of the grated rind, and lastly fold in one cupful of cream whipped stiff. Turn into a well-lined mold and set away in a cool place.

Oysters a la Richelieu.—Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and when well melted add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika, two tablespoonfuls of chopped celery and cook five minutes, then add two dozen large oysters free from liquor. Cover and when plump add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and the same of orange juice, then serve.

Lenten Cutlets.—Use one pint of flaked fish, one cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of onion juice and a grating of nutmeg. Put the milk over the fire to heat, add the butter and flour well mixed to the milk, cook until smooth and thick, then add the beaten yolk of an egg, cook a moment, take from the fire, add the seasonings, then mix with the fish and sauce and set aside to cool. When cold form into cutlets, dip into egg and crumbs and fry until well browned.

Apricot Floats.—Take one-fourth pint of leftover apricots, four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, the whites of two eggs. Press the pulp of the apricots through a fine sieve. Beat the whites of the eggs very stiff, add the sugar, add the fruit pulp, a tablespoonful at a time and beat constantly until stiff enough to hold its shape. Set aside to chill. Fill individual serving dishes one-third full of cream and drop a tablespoonful of the apricot float on top of each.

Probate Order

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Hillsdale in said County, on the 25th day of June A. D. 1925.

In the Matter of the Estate of Josebh L. Beecher Deceased. Catherine Beecher having filed her petition praying that an instrument filed in said court be admitted to Probate as the last will and testament of said deceased, and that the administration of said estate be granted to her or some other suitable person.

It is Ordered, That the 13th day of August, A.D. 1925 at ten A. M., at said Probate Office is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is Further Ordered, That Public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy hereof for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing in the North Adams Advocate a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

An attack of chiggers is very painful and difficult to relieve. A hot or salt bath immediately after exposure often alleviates the burning sensation, or does away with the insects altogether. Vaseline or kerosene rubbed on the skin before visiting the habitats of the pest is a very efficient preventive but soiling to clothes and otherwise unpleasant. Flowers of sulphur dusted in the clothes from the waist downward is thoroughly effective under ordinary circumstances, and being inodorous and harmless, is more agreeable to use than vaseline or kerosene.

They Know Their Business

During the time that the STAR LAUNDRY has been in the Dry Cleaning and Dyeing business at Hillsdale, many others in the same line have come and gone but the STAR LAUNDRY, by reason of the general excellence of their work, has continued to increase their business.

The STAR LAUNDRY is popular with all who have tried it, and that they put forth their best efforts is shown by the general satisfaction that is given in each case.

The establishment is splendidly equipped for all classes of Dry Cleaning, Dyeing, Repairing and Pleating Ladies' garments and no work is too difficult to be handled in the most satisfactory manner.

A specialty is made of the Dyeing Cleaning, Pressing and Pleating of Ladies Garments, while they have a list of men for whom they do the same class of work which includes every man in Hillsdale and vicinity who cares anything at all about his personal appearance, for the pressing of garments at this establishment is "Always Corectly Done."

The dry clenaing system used at the STAR LAUNDRY not only cleans your clothes but thoroughly renovates them in the most sanitary manner They also turn them out in the most approved style without the disagreeable odor that accompanies the work of so many cleaning establishments.

The latest cleaning and renovating machinery in their plant makes it possible for them to handle the most delicate fabric and to turn them out so that "They Look Like New." Bring your clothes to VAN AKEN'S BARBER SHOP, at North Adams, or take them to the STAR LAUNDRY, Hillsdale.

This is a business that requires experience and the management only employs practical help. Their assistants are all able and efficient workmen who know their business thoroughly and thus you are assured the most satisfactory service.

The management are among Hillsdale's most promising business men who are making many of our citizens present an excellent apearance.

One Of Our Valued Assets

It is a well known fact that no one industry within the limits of Hillsdale County has made more rapid progress as an industrial factor during the past decade than the HILLSDALE ELGIN CREAMERY COMPANY, at Hillsdale, Phone 119, whose model plant is one of our most valued industrial assets.

Since the location at Hillsdale of this plant it has been continually improved due to the rapid increase of the business, until today the creamery, from every standpoint is the equal of any similiar industry in the county, while its GOLDEN BAR BUTTER is sold over many retail counters throughout this section, thus doing more to advertise this county from a successful standpoint than any other enterprise.

Their GOLD BAR BUTTER is universally conceded to be the Perfection of American Creamery Manufacturer's Art. To give our readers an adequate idea of the large operations of this concern we will state that they transact business with hundreds of farmers who supply them with Cream and they pay out thousands of dollars each year for their supply.

The farmers are well satisfied with the prices paid for cream and the number of those sending in their products here is increasing all the time.

The production of Cream is a proposition that ought to appeal to every owner even of a small farm, as it is a known fact that this mode of farming builds up the land at the same time making the producer more money that he can make by straight farming and then he gets paid in cash right along.

The HILLSDALE ELGIN CREAMERY COMPANY is thus adding much to Hillsdale County as a valuable market at our door for the products of the Farm. The splendid business transacted by this creamery is shown by the demand for their GOLD BAR BUTTER, which is taxing its utmost operating resources and is a distinctive tribute of F. M. Smith, the Manager, which is truly commendable.

We all should join in congratulating Mr. Smith upon the very valuable service that the HILLSDALE ELGIN CREAMERY COMPANY is rendering the public.

The Bank Of The People

From the time of the organization of the HILLSDALE SAVINGS BANK, 8 North Howell Street, Hillsdale, the Directors have been men of high moral character, business experience and civic enterprise. While its officers have been uniformly men of conservative action with never a suggestion of speculative tendedncy or sporting proclivivty. It has always had the confidence of the public and has pursued in the past as it will in the future a policy of helpfulness to the business needs and requirements of the citizens of Hillsdale, Hillsdale County and adjoining territory.

The HILLSDALE SAVINGS BANK are manufacturer's, whose product is "CREDIT." Their nowledge of the raw material from which credit is made, knowledge of men and markets, commerce and finance; drawn from original sources tested and woven into fabric of mutual confidence—which is "Credit." The resources of this bank insure a credit production which is adequate to meet the needs of expanding business. Business of fifty years ago used banks for only two things, deposits and loans and the banker sat back and waited for the public to come to him.

Today, when finance has become one of the most intricate phases of business, banking has developed a breadth of service that enables it to be of general usefulness to the business man and farmer, as well as the individual. Today, the banker does not wait for the people to come to him—the Banker is Offering Service and Good Service. No business can stand still. It must either go on upward to greater success or sink to ultimate nothingness. In co-operating with business men in building up their business the HILLSDALE SAVINGS BANK brings energy and understanding that comes from long experience and a really progressive policy.

Character is an attribute of banks as well as individuals. Your connection with a financial institution such as the HILLSDALE SAVINGS BANK which is highly esteemed in the community and is known for its adherances to proper business methods, gives insurance of lasting cooperation in your affairs.

As with character in your friends, character in a bank makes for association that is both pleasant and profitable.

Always progressive and sound in business policy, the HILLSDALE SAVINGS BANK has created a confidence among the public which brings forth a justified pride to its Officers and Directors and which is prized most highly as one of its assets.

A Complete Banking Service, including Commercial, Savings, Trust, Investments, Service and Safe Deposit Departments, together with the Friendly Co-operation extended, has won for this bank thousands of satisfied customers.

Rhubarb Very Important as Perennial Vegetable

Rhubarb, or pieplant, is an important perennial vegetable. Like asparagus, it produces a supply early in the spring when fresh vegetables are in great demand. New leaves appear from early spring to midsummer, but the leafstalks produced early in the season are most in demand and the harvest does not usually last more than eight weeks. After pulling has stopped, the leaves are allowed to grow and supply the roots with food material for the next year's crop. Rhubarb roots are hardy and require no winter protection. The plant is capable of surviving both the extreme heat of summer and the cold of winter in the central latitude.

Time to Seed Alfalfa

If fall seeding of alfalfa is deferred till the first week in September, there is some danger of not getting a sufficiently strong stand to go through the winter unharmed, but if the seed can be gotten into the ground by the tenth or fifteenth of August, there is little danger under average conditions of not obtaining a good, uniform stand. Do not sow less than 15 pounds of seed per acre and see to it that the seed is properly inoculated.

INSPECTION SHOWS HEALTH OF STOCK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Of approximately 80,000,000 meat animals passing under the scrutiny of federal inspectors, during the last fiscal year, the vast majority proved to be healthy and went into the various channels of the meat trade. But the fact that slightly more than a third of a million carcasses and nearly 1,500,000 parts of carcasses were condemned at slaughter indicates the searching character of the inspection. The report of the chief of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, recently issued, gives the latest comprehensive information on the health condition of cattle, sheep and hogs.

Though designed primarily to safeguard the wholesomeness of meat offered to the public, meat inspection renders a valuable service to live stock producers also in keeping them informed of the health of their animals at time of slaughter.

Of the 35 principal diseases and ailments that affect live stock, tuberculosis is by far the most serious. It was responsible for about two-thirds of the condemnations of cattle carcasses and near half those of swine. Tuberculosis conditions were found also among a few sheep, though these animals rarely are affected. The next most serious disease, according to meat-inspection records, is hog cholera. Actual losses are considerably heavier than those records show, since hogs affected with that disease usually die on the farms.

Pneumonia, peritonitis, and a group of similar ailments rank next in the damage they cause, followed by septicemia. In the case of calves, immaturity is an important reason that many fail to pass inspection. Among the figures for cattle, injuries and bruises rank high, causing the condemnation of the meat of more than 1,000 entire carcasses.

Sheep Shearing Clipper Does Its Work Rapidly

When the cold spring rains have gone and the warm weather comes on, flock owners should give attention to shearing their sheep. Shearing is best accomplished by the use of machines rather than hand shearers. By investing a few dollars, it is possible to get a machine which has one attachment for shearing sheep and another for clipping horses and mules. The machine clipper does work more rapidly, the fleece is cut closer, and the sheep are not injured so frequently.

In doing good shearing, the livestock specialists say, it is necessary to get the fleece without tearing it apart. After setting a sheep on its rump, an experienced shearer will hold it comfortably and there will be very little struggling. The sheep's body should be tilted toward the operator so that it cannot get a footing and thus attempt to rise. It is customary to shear first the head and neck, then down the belly, then the sides and back, and last the rump.

After shearing the fleece should be carefully arranged with the inside out and tied into a neat pack. This adds much to the appearance and thus makes a better market.

The use of the wrong kind of tying twine causes more trouble than any other one thing. Binder twine or any other twine which sheds its fiber should not be used. Hard glazed twines, or paper twine should be used.

For Fattening Cows

Silage is the cheapest feed which can be used for fattening cows. Two or three pounds of cottonseed cake, together with corn fodder, prairie hay, or other roughage is recommended in addition to the silage. May is usually the best time of the year to sell fat cows. The price next spring might justify the feeding of corn for the last 30 days of the feeding period, according to Dr. C. W. McCampbell, Kansas State Agricultural college.

Still bobbed hair is much more fair to the suitor. He knows all of it is fastened to one end.

Care for Sow and Litter

The sow and litter can be left in the small pen until the pigs are five to eight days old, after which both sow and pigs should get a little exercise. Care must be taken not to feed the sow too heavily on rich feed or she will produce so much milk that the pigs will very quickly become too fat and some will be lost simply because they get too fat. Once a litter of pigs has reached two weeks of age, losses should be very small.

Healthy Hogs Best

"The three first principles for healthy hogs are segregation, sanitation and vaccination," said L. E. Drury, a farmer of Morgan county, Ill., who markets about 1,000 head yearly. Cleanliness, sunlight, and plenty of commercial disinfectant he cited as necessities in sanitation. He regards it of importance to have the farm fenced in small well-watered fields with portable hog houses, and also to keep the herd assorted according to size.

Often Buttered--But Never Bettered

The staff of life is bread and we should be very particular the kind of bread we eat. That it is made in a Sanitary Bakery by Bakers who are Particular as to Personal Cleanliness and who use only Wholesome and Pure Ingredients.

That is why "Butter Nut Bread" manufactured by the PURITY BAKERIES CORPORATION at Jackson is found upon so many tables in this section.

The housewife has discovered that this bread meets all the requirements of a "good bread" and that is why she insists upon her dealer keeping "Butter Nut Bread."

No other bread meets with the universal satisfaction as this and that is why the PURITY BAKERIES CORPORATION is kept busy at their bakery in Jackson.

The baking industry is practically as old as the discovery of fire and the methods used in ancient times have changed from baking on stones and in rudely constructed ovens, as like other great industries, it had a humble beginning. Today it is quite different at the Modern and Up-To-Date plant of the PURITY BAKERIES CORPORATION, where the Latest Style of Ovens and Machinery are in operation for the production of "Butter Nut Bread."

Another feature of this establishment is the Cleanliness which is insisted upon throughout the entire plant. Everything is Kept Scrupulously Clean and in a Strictly Sanitary Condition. Only the Very Best of materials are used and the most competent help employed.

The Housewives of North Adams and vicinity can always obtain "Butter Nut Bread" at the stores of MR. WILIAMS, MR. WERTZ, MR. BARBER and MR. BENGE. We assure you that you will always find in "Butter Nut Bread" a uniform standard of quality that has won for it a place among the housewives of this section who know good bread and therefore will only have "Butter Nut Bread."

The Baking Establishment of the PURITY BAKERIES CORPORATION is among the most modern and up-to-date within the State of Michigan, their "Butter Nut Bread" having gained a reputation far and wide as the "Bread That Is Ofter Buttered—But Never Bettered."

SEPARATED MILK IN RATION FOR SWINE

The Michigan experiment station has recently reported an interesting experiment in growing pigs on corn and water as compared to corn and separated milk. Two pigs that got milk gained 221 pounds each in five months. Those on corn and water gained only 9.5 pounds.

At the end of five months the milk-fed pigs were marketed and the two stunted pigs put in separate pens. Pig No. 4 got shelled corn, water and a good mineral mixture. Pig No. 3 got corn and separated milk and though he only weighed 43 pounds at seven months old, weighed 350 pounds at a year old, a gain of 307 pounds. No. 4 gained only 28 pounds, weighing 76 pounds at one year. Then No. 3 was marketed and No. 4 got separated milk and corn for five months. At the end of this time he had gained 274 pounds, weighing 350 pounds, showing that separated milk can bring out even a stunted pig to make good gains. The gains with separated milk cost 6.7 cents per pound, with skim milk at 35 cents per 100 pounds. Gains without milk cost 19.7 to 39 cents per pound.

Although separated milk contains valuable mineral matter, this was evidently not what was lacking in the corn. The main deficiency was in protein and in the growth-promoting vitamines, both of which were supplied abundantly by the separated milk. Many people try to feed pigs on corn alone, while others who have dairy cows separate the milk and throw the skim milk away. Both are making a serious mistake. If separated milk is not available one should use alfalfa pasture, tankage or some other protein supplement along with corn.

Some will say that they get better results on corn alone than were obtained by the Michigan station. This is probably true where pigs are getting some grass or weeds to supply them with mineral matter and vitamines and with some of the supplementary proteins. The main thing to remember is that corn is not a complete feed for growing animals.

Separated milk should be considered as a supplementary feed, not as a complete feed in itself. Where fed in moderate quantities, 2 or 3 pounds of separated milk may take the place of 1 pound of corn. In large amounts count 8 or 10 pounds of milk equal to 1 pound of corn. A good rule is to count 100 pounds of separated milk worth half the price of corn per bushel.—Chas. I. Bray, Colorado Agricultural college.

Good Fleeces and Lambs Are Always Profitable

Profitable sheep production depends largely upon the ability of the ewes in the flock to produce good fleeces and to raise strong, vigorous lambs. Proper feeding of the ewes prior to lambing and during the suckling period will go far toward insuring these returns.

Experiments at the Ohio Experiment station have shown that when the ewes are in good thrifty condition heavy grain feeding prior to lambing is uneconomical and does not increase the efficiency of the ration. A light grain allowance, however, is to be strongly recommended even though legume hay and corn silage make up a large part of the daily feed for the ewes. Fine wool breeding ewes fed one-third to one-half pound of grain per head daily in addition to legume hay and corn silage yielded strong lambs and had an abundant supply of milk.

After lambing, the grain allowance should be increased sufficiently to maintain the condition of the ewes as far as possible and to insure a good flow of milk. When the lambs have learned to eat grain, and they should always have a creep where they can eat without interference, the grain allowance of the ewes can be somewhat reduced without reducing the efficiency of the ration.

The election, however, didn't have anything to do with the enormous expansion of the pumpkin pie industry.

Are Your Shoes Wearing Out?

It makes no difference of whom you buy your shoes or at what store you buy them. They are like everything else in this world of ours. They will wear out.

But on the other hand, it is not necessary as soon as a small break is noticed in them to discard them and pay the large price that we are compelled to pay for new shoes, but take them to the RAPID SHOE REPAIR SHOP, Howell Street, Hillsdale, Phone 404, and say: "Here boys, is a pair of shoes. Fix them up." They will, and guarantee their work.

While they are rushed with work, they will give you courteous attention, and by the use of the latest electric machinery they are able to turn out a large amount of work and at a Reasonable Price, in fact much cheaper than in the average city shops.

A very important feature of the Repair Business of this establishment is the Parcel Post Department. They pay the charges one way on all this trade.

Here also will be found Shoe Laces, Polishes, Stains, Rubber Heels for All Kinds and Colors of Shoes.

We are pleased to be able to bring before our readers an establishment of this kind as they are a concern that brings to Hillsdale the atmosphere of a real metropolitan city as we can truthfully state that there is no better or a more progressive establishment than the RAPID SHOE SHOP which is conducted at Hillsdale.

Real Battery and Tire Service

Perhaps your car has not been performing with maximum efficiency. The trouble may be with your storage battery. Like some delicate but important organ of the body, the Storage Battery performs well when given good attention but is likely to prove a source of trouble if it does not receive such attention.

If there is any possibility that this is what is impairing the efficiency of your car,, take it to SIMPSON & SIMPSON, Sutton Block, Hillsdale, and have an expert look over your car. He may trace your trouble to the battery. Incidentally, as a part of this shop's policy of "Service to the Public" above everything else, this inspection is made free of charge. It does not even obligate you to have the repairs to your battery made here, if any is needed but if you do need any repairs or adjustments, there is no Battery Shop in this section of the State that is better prepared in the way of equipment and workmanship to "Render Real Battery Service" than SIMPSON & SIMPSON at Hillsdale.

The owners of this shop foresaw the tremendous growth of the automobile business in this community. They therefore equipped their shop to take care of a growing need. Although batteries for automotive use is a specialty with SIMPSON & SIMPSON, Repairing and Adjusting are done on Storage Batteries of all Types.

The EXIDE BATTERY CORPORATION was not long recognizing the quality of work turned out by this shop and gave them the agency for the Exide Batteries in this locality. SIMPSON & SIMPSON accepted this Agency only after a thorough investigation of the good points of all batteries and were convinced no battery could excel the "EXIDE" in quality and service.

In their Tire Department are the well known AUBURN and GENERAL CORDS. The tires that are becoming known as "Tires of Quality and Service."

We wish to emphasize on the motorists of this community that they are fortunate in having a Battery and Tire Service located here in our midst at Hillsdale such as that of SIMPSON & SIMPSON.

Jonesville's Real Flour Mill

The Jonesville Flouring Mill at Jonesville is one of the most modern and Best Equipped Mills in Hillsdale County and is admirably located in regards to receiving and shipping to all parts of the country of "SNOWFLAKE FLOUR" which it manufacaures extensively.

Through its model mechanical equipment only the choicest of wheat is used. After the wheat is received at the mill the flour is not touched by hand until it reaches the consumer. This method assures the patrons of the JONESVILLE MILLING COMPANY the most healthful and sanitary flour that modern science can produce.

Here also the farmer can bring his wheat and exchange it for flour. This is a convenience that the farmers of this section appreciate. Here also the farmer can have his grinding done by machinery that gives him back all that is coming to him.

The acute business judgement of the manager has placed this concern in the front ranks of mills throughout the state. They are responsible to a large degree for the agricultural development of this section as their institution is one that brings to Jonesville business that would go elsewhere if their service and goods were not so reliable.

In our First Annual Farm Edition we are glad to bring before our readers such a reliable institution as the JONESVILLE MILLING COMPANY as one of our real assets and its proprietors as progressive business men who are real boosters for their home community.

Every Farmer Should Have His Own Light Plant

There is no need for the people of this section to be without Electric Lights, no matter how far from the city you may live, for science has produced a compact, safe, lighting plant that will satisfactorily illuminate the largest plant, largest or smallest country residence, cottage, factory, store or home, no matter how far from a city it may be located.

This is a wonderful product that has brought day by night within reach of the entire populace. It is a Complete Lighting Plant within itself and carries as many as seventy lights or more, which is more than enough to illuminate your house, out buildings or store or factory in the most satisfactory manner. It can also be utilized to turn the Churn, the Cream Separator, the Washing Machine or any other Light Machinery.

The ALAMO CORPORATION at Hillsdale are the representatives for this famous product in this section and let us say right here that they know their business from the ground up. They are familiar with the electrical field and by a consultation with them you can secure an ALAMO for your country estate or city home that will be a revelation in allumination along twentieth century lines.

The ALAMO FARM LIGHT is the safe light. Danger from oil lamps or other forms of illumination are all eliminated. It is the economical light for the cost of operation is very low and it is so simple that even a child can understand it.

There is no reason why any farmer in this part of Michigan should be without proper illumination, for the ALAMO CORPORATION are prepared to install this wonderful compact, economical and safe lighting system on a moment's notice. The "ALAMO" will run without being bolted or base. Is equipped with Bosch High Tension Magneto and Schebler Carburetor and other high grade equipment. The ALAMO CORPORATION do their own wiring and furnish all necessary parts, also fixtures and lights as you may desire.

In this Annual Farm Edition we are pleased to call our readers attention to the ALAMO FARM LIGHT PLANT, as one of the modern conveniences for the farm and to the ALAMO CORPORATION as one of our most progressive institutions.

Realize Real Eyes

Probably no profession has made greater advances during the last few years than OPTOMETRY. Many men have devoted a large portion of their time in making this profession of the greatest possible benefit to the public. "Optometry" today occupies an honored position in the public estimation and is protected by law in every State in the Union.

The progress of "Optometry" like that of every profession, has been gradual but sure. Years ago many readers will remember, it was the custom for those who required glasses to do their own choosing by trying on various lenses or until a pair was selected that seemed to produce the most satisfactory results.

That was in the days before accurate instruments, at present employed by "Optometrists" were in existence and which today is employed by Dr. C. J. HOWE, Optometrist, Hillsdale, Phone 587 J. Today in examining a patient for errors of vision it is possible for DR. HOWE to fit a patient with an "Accurate Correction" without asking a question.

the best of service to his patients

By examining the eyes with necessary instruments the condition of the eyes is plainly revealed to the "Optometrist."

Thus by checking upon his results DR. C. J. HOWE gives his patients a double examination, the result of which can be absolutely relied upon. Don't wait until your eyes picture the effect of errors of vision. Defects of Eye Sight taken in time are easily corrected. If they are allowed to go uncorrected, they may do great harm. Your eyes will serve you well if you treat them well.

DR. HOWE makes a complete eye examination, determining the health of the eye first. He does not treat diseased eyes, nor does he use "drops" in making an eye examination. Instead of holding lens after lens before the eye and asking questions relative to the vision, he makes mathematical and physical measurements to determine the eye needs and muscular tests to ascertain the powers of the eye. From this data he knows what the eye requirements are, what the defects are, and proceed accordingly. He may prescribe temporary glasses, permanent glasses, or exercises to eliminate the need of glasses. His aim is to conserve eyes and eye-sight.

Incorrectly ground or badly fitted glasses hurt the eyes. Even if you are able to see with them they may be causing eyestrain, though you may not realize it at the time.

DR. HOWE does not use "In- "Inferior Lenses or Frames." The best is none too good for his patients. Do not purchase glasses from unreliable firms or persons. About nine out of every ten cases of cataract can be traced back to a pair of cheap glasses that the patient has worn at some time or another.

We are personally acquainted with DR. C. J. HOWE and know that he is well versed in his profession, being registered by examination in three states, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. His office is equipped with only modern instruments, and he takes personal interest in rendering

What Is Home Without A Holland

In past years man was satisfied and manged to keep warm in a way, by the heat from a fireplace built within the walls of his abode. First warming his back, then one side and so on until his entire body had consumed a portion of the heat derived from this crude device.

In later years, during the period of the stove for heating, man was convinced that the acme of perfection had been reached from the heating standpoint.

But the Modern Furnace of today, not only heats one room but distributes the heat uniformly over the entire house, regulated at the will of the family.

That is what a "Good Furnace" accomplishes and there is good and bad on the market today. A person buying a furnace should be very particular in investigating the merits of the furnace that he is thinking of installing, before purchasing.

That the manufacturer is reliable and depends upon the success of his furnace through satisfaction that it gives and the materials contained in its construction.

The "HOLLAND WARM AIR FURNACE," sold in this section by the HOLLAND FURNACE COMPANY, 15 Mechanic Street, Hillsdale, phone 419, under the management of J. I. Mason, Costs Less of Operate and Less for repairs than any other heating plant, barring none. The "HOLLAND WARM AIR FURNACE" is built to give "Economical Service," all the time and is not an experiment.

It is so well known that it adds more than its cost as a selling or renting feature to your building; and if you use the HOLLAND WARM AIR FURNACE, fuel economy and savings on doctors bills will soon pay for it.

While you are thinking of ways to increase happiness, think of the "HOLLAND WARM AIR FURNACE" as the spirit of Genial Warmth that will bring Happiness and Good Cheer into your home every year.

Think of the "HOLLAND" as the spirit of Comfort that will make your home brighter and more cheerful.

Think of the HOLLAND as a Convenience that will regulate temperature throughout your house and will banish the dirt and drudgery of old style heating methods.

Think of the HOLLAND as Economy that will eliminate one-third to one-half your fuel bill and save more money for the things worth while.

We can truthfully say that you will make no mistake in selecting a "HOLLAND WARM AIR FURNACE" and you will find MR. MASON, a courteous and progressive business man whose word can be taken in full confidence in every way.

They Are Community Builders

You can build a home to suit your own individual tastes more cheaply than you can buy one which has been built to suit the taste of another.

The advantageous buying power of the GRAVES & FORD LUMBER COMPANY with yards here in North Adams and the JONESVILLE LUMBER COMPANY with yards at Jonesville, make the Best Grades of Lumber Supplies available to the citizens of this community at Most Reasonable Prices. Prices are so reasonable that it is actually possible to Build a Modern Home more cheaply than it is to purchase one ready built.

The GRAVES & FORD LUMBER COMPANY does not make possible these low prices by selling inferior quality lumber. The mangers know too well the value of a high reputation in a community to make any such mistake, and it is paramount then that only the Best Quality Lumber be Sold.

The great purchasing power of this concern is made possible through their wide knowledge and acquaintance with the Lumber Business. They have spent many years studying the ins and outs of this business, the source of the Best Lumber supply, all the finer points of the Buying Game. Ample resources enables them to take advantage of the market and which in turn works benefits to this community. No community can progress without a building program. If material costs are prohibitive, building cannot go on. No new homes are erected and the people lose their progressive spirit.

By placing the Price of Building material within easy reach of everyone desiring to build a home, this firm is rendering a real community service.

Years ago they had a vision of a progressive community—a community of fine homes. In continuing to make possible fine homes for the people of this community, they are still following the light of that vision.

These companies have become favorites with the farmers of this vicinity for they not only carry in stock Lumber, Lath, Doors, Sash, Interior Finish, Building Paper, Roofing, Cement and Coal, but "Everything and Anything" to build the Farm Home, Barns, Cattle Sheds, Silos, Garages and Poultry Houses.

If our readers will take our advice and go and investigate the large stocks of Building Supplies carried by these concerns, we feel that you will not see the necessity of going elsewhere.

Diversity of Crops

A diversity of crops makes possible better utilization of farm labor and provides feed for live stock. In choosing the crops to be grown, only those that are of major importance should be included. Usually not more than five or six crops should be grown and these should be chosen so that they will provide labor throughout the season, give a cash crop, and provide feed for th live stock.

Bridge Grafting Saves Trees Injured by Mice

Trees injured by rabbits, mice and collar rot can often be saved by bridge grafting. The injured surface of the tree should first be trimmed to a clean, smooth edge at both the top and bottom. Select scion wood of the same variety that is of sufficient length to bridge the area. The base of the scion should be cut straight across and beveled edges about one and one-half inch long should be made. After measuring the scion against the injured surface to determine the length of scion required, trim the top in the same manner. The bark of the tree above and below the wound is split and the edges are loosened. The beveled ends of the scion should then be inserted in the slits, with the beveled edges on the inside, against the wood of the tree. After being pushed into place, the scion should lay reasonably close to the trunk. Following this it is well to tack both ends of the scion to the tree with a slender brad. Additional scions should be set at intervals of about one and one-half inches until the girdled portion is entirely covered. Both ends of the scions should be thoroughly waxed to prevent drying out.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

SPRAY SOLUTION FOR EACH TREE VARIES

How much spray solution is required to spray an apple tree? Of course the answer to this question depends very largely upon the opinion of the operator. Some one has said that the orchardists who obtain best results from spraying are those who "waste" material. In other words best results are obtained by putting on the solution until the tree is thoroughly covered and dripping quite heavily.

In keeping a record of the cost of spraying at the Ohio experiment station, a record of the amount of material required for bearing trees of various ages has been kept through two seasons.

Factors that make the amounts vary in addition to the opinion of the operator are the wind, material used, and whether gun or nozzle is used to discharge the solution.

Naturally when the wind is high, material will be used in excess of that actually required on a calm day. One cannot always wait for ideal days to spray, especially during the time of applying the pink spray.

Oil sprays require less solution than other sprays because of their "creeping" qualities. No doubt less material would be required by using a rod and nozzle rather than the gun but the time element is so much in favor of the gun that the gun has more to recommend it than the rod and nozzle, especially if the gun is in the hand of a careful operator.

Most of the orchards on which spraying records have been kept at the experiment station have been sprayed either five or six times each season.

The petal fall spray usually requires more solution than any other spray although there is not much difference in the amounts used on any of the summer sprays. The pre-pink and pink applications usually require less. This is partly because it is not necessary to drench the body of the tree quite so heavily as on the dormant spray and there is no foliage to cover at this period.

There is no difference in the amounts required of bordeaux or lime sulphur, which are the two main sprays used.

Baldwin Apple Has Been Grown for Many Years

According to the New York state experiment station, the Baldwin apple is probably more generally distributed throughout the United States than is any other one variety of apple.

This variety has been grown for a great many years, and under a wide range of soil and climatic conditions. As a result of this, perhaps there will be some difference in the size and quality of the fruit, as it is grown under the different conditions, and many fruit growers have advanced the theory that when Baldwins are grown for a long period of time under different conditions, new strains of the variety are developed.

Some thirteen years ago the horticulturists at the experiment station at Geneva determined to try out the theory. They purchased 84 Baldwin apple trees from 40 different locations in the United States. These were set out on the trial grounds to determine definitely as to whether the distinct strains of this variety had developed under these widely different environments. These trees are now in full bearing, and every one of the 84 trees produces fruit similar in size, color, season and quality to the fruit produced by the others.

The results of this experiment will be quite interesting to those who like to inquire into some of the theoretical side of plant growth, and so far as this experiment is concerned, it seems rather certain that no strains of this variety have originated because of differences in environment, but if there are strains of the variety in different sections of the country, they have originated probably for some other reason.

Horticulture Hints

Strawberry plants are usually put up in bunches of 25 plants to the bunch.

Look up the latest control measures for insect pests and plan for them beforehand.

Fertilize the home orchard. Prune and spray fruit trees before the buds begin to swell, if this was not done earlier.

Every home garden should have its strawberry patch. The early part of May is the most desirable time to set out the plants.

Orchard trees made their principal growth and demand on the soil for both water and plant food during May and June. This early cultivation conserves moisture and increases the supply of available food.

Keep the strawberries cultivated and select now the ground for a new planting. It is a good plan to plant each year a third of the home patch and after the crop is gathered in the spring plow up the old third. This keeps an unfailing [illegible]

The greatest event of the year to the residents and farmers of HILLSDALE COUNTY should be the HILLSDALE COUNTY FAIR that will be held at Hillsdale, September 28 to Oct. 3.

Not only from a pleasure but from and educational standpoint, should the HILLSDALE COUNTY FAIR be attended by every one and their entire family. More so this year than any other the country needs every acre planted so as to produce more than ever before and there is no institution that gives the farmer more real practical experience and universal information than the machine and farm appliances that are exhibited and the high grade products that are shown and produced on Michigan soil.

The Superintendents of the different departments are going to do their part this year in making the fair the best from an educational standpoint and should receive the full support of every resident of Hillsdale County.

It's your fair and for your benefit. Look over your corn-crib, take an invoice of your stock. You may have some extra fine vegetables or your wife may be an exceptionally good butter maker, or does she have some excellent canned fruit? See if you cannot find a display that will beat the other fellows. You should hold your head up, push out your chest and let everybody see by both your actions and your boasting that "this is my fair and I am proud of it." The Advocate is swelled up over the fair and the editor is glad that he lives in Hillsdale county and we know you are too.

A half-mile track which is one of the best in the state, with a good grand-stand and bleachers offers to the lovers of racing the best there is for speed and comfort. Good honest race events are carried out, the association receiving a state-wide reputation for being one place where all receive a "Square Deal."

Every Exhibiting Department Indicates that it will be filled to the limit which will insure the largest and most interesting fair to be held this year in Southern Michigan

Mr. Terwilliger, the Secretary believes in looking out for the comfort and pleasure of the fair's patrons. One of these real little comforts are the large number of seats which are distributed throughout the grounds for the tired visitors who can rest and visit friends, look at the crowd, listen to the band music, or watch the races and ball games. Another convenience that is generally appreciated by those who drive to the fair is the ample room for parking automobiles upon the grounds which is very easy to get to and there is plenty of room for all.

We feel that due credit should be given C. W. Terwilliger and his associates whose untiring efforts have been the means of placing in the front ranks of fairs, the HILLSDALE COUNTY FAIR.

Refreshing and Delicious

The HILLSDALE BOTTLING WORK'S plant at Hillsdale is a model of its kind and is one of the best to be found in Southern Michigan. It is equipped with all the necessary appliances for the manufacture of "BON TON ICE CREAM" and all kinds of "CARBONATED BEVERAGES" in the preparation of which only the "Purest and Most Wholesome Ingredients" are used.

The management of the HILLSDALE BOTTLING WORKS exercises the greatest care in the preparation of their popular "BON TON ICE CREAM" and CARBONATED BEVERAGES, which from every standpoint are the best to be had in this section for their Purity is Unquestioned and no more refreshing and delicious Ice Cream and beverages could be asked for than their celebrated "BON TON ICE CREAM" and CARBONATED BEVERAGES, as all who have partaken of these dainties can testify, while they are no dearer than those of much inferior makes, a fact that is worthy of due consideration by all who partake of Ice Cream and Beverages in any form.

The plant of the HILLSDALE BOTTLING WORKS is a credit to the community and is open at all times to the inspection of the public.

The HILLSDALE BOTTLING WORKS operate several trucks which are continually on the go supplying the wants of their many customers, in Hillsdale and vicinity and all and telephone orders receive prompt and careful attention. In North Adams their products are sold by E. C. WILLIAMS, REX NORTHRUP, E. J. BENGE, R. A. BARBER, and E. J. BLACKMAN.

We wish to say to those who desire the best there is in Ice Cream and Beverages should always ask for "BON TON ICE CREAM and CARBONATED BEVERAGES which is manufactured by the HILLSDALE BOTTLING WORKS and you will not be disappointed. The management are gentlemen with whom it is a pleasure to do business and stand ready at all times to assist any proposition for the betterment of their home community.

High Class Work of Quality

At the E. P. REFNER GRANITE WORKS 65, Hillsdale St., Hillsdale, Phone 659, the public has at its disposal the services of men who possess the "know how" and who obtained their manufacturing and business education in the "School of Practical Experience."

From the inception of the enterprise, "Quality" has been the aim and the standard of excelence has been maintained from the beginning.

They are equipped with the latest of scientific machinery for the production of "High-Class" Work. The name of the E. P. REFNER GRANITE Works, stands for Quality, Reliability, Progress in the Monumental Line of this section of the country and as the advances of the period have marked improvvements in the Monument Makers art. This Company have adopted these late scientific products as rapidly as they were approved by the trade.

That Mr. E. P. Refner, the Manager, has been especially active along these lines is evidenced by the Most Modern and Up-To-Date Plant in this section in which ideas originating with them in machinery and the artistic production of the various lines in vogue.

The large number of Monument Markers and Cemetery Supplies placed in cemeteries of this community show in what appreciation the people hold the E. P. REFNER GRANITE WORKS.

The Universal Beauty of Design of their Monuments and Markers stands as examples of their "Expert Designing and Workmanship" and are the admiration of all who see them.

The E. P. REFNER GRANITE WORKS have won a reputation as being among the leading Monument Dealers in Michigan and their work is considered by experts as the best that can be produced in the "Monumental Line."

It is a pleasure to mention the E. P. REFNER GRANITE WORKS, and their modern plant at Hillsdale and assure our readers that they will receive the best treatment at their hands and you will find them most fair in their business dealings.

The trial of a scrub bull in which every part of the proceedings—except of course, the prisoner—was taken by boys' and girls' club members, recently occurred at a farm bureau meeting in Lincoln county, Oregon. The event took place during a picnic and was the chief attraction of the day. The bull was found guilty. The 200 spectators rendered an additional verdict, unanimously, that the work of the boys and girls was extremely creditable.

In reporting the event to the United States Department of Agriculture J. R. Beck, county agent of Lincoln county, Oregon, described a scrub-bull exchange plan recently inaugurated. Under this plan the owners of pure bred cattle list their surplus bull crop to scrub-bull owners at a flat price of $30 each if taken by the time the bull calves are six weeks old. The purchaser must agree to butcher his scrub bulls as soon as the pure bred calf is old enough for service.

Cause of Lumpy Milk

The usual cause of a cow giving lumpy milk is the inflammation of that quarter of the udder from which the bad milk comes. Ordinarily this condition will not continue for a very long time. Incomplete milking is often the cause. The application of turpentine and lard, or camphorated lubricant will aid materially in restoring the udder to its normal condition. The administration of epsom salts is also advisable, as the bowels are apt to be sluggish.

Transferring Pigs

If another sow, with a small litter farrowed about the same time as the large litter, is available, some of the pigs from the large litter can often be transferred to the sow with the small litter. Seldom will any sow raise more than one pig to each teat successfully if all are allowed to remain with her. Attempting to raise little pigs on cow's milk right from the start is of doubtful economy, as it requires more work than the pig is worth.

Jonesville Commercial Bank

JONESVILLE, MICH.

BACKED BY OVER HALF A MILLION DOLLARS.

Saving cultivates habits of thrift and a safe place to get the habit is to start an account with the JONESVILLE COMMERCIAL BANK at Jonesville.

Start a small account and deposit each week and you will be agreeably surprised at the end of the year at what you have saved. Parents should encourage their children to open accounts here.

The JONESVILLE COMMERCIAL BANK does a large amount of business by mail, and if you do not happen to have an account with this, one of the strongest financial institutions of Southern Michigan, you should get in touch with the management either by mail or in person and they will explain the whole proposition to you.

The JONESVILLE COMMERCIAL BANK offers a safe and profitable investment to all, and for those who wish to save something each week from their earnings it is especially recommended.

Go to this bank when you want advice. Test its service, and know the free welcome atmosphere so appreciated by its score of patrons and friends. The officers of the bank are HARRY GODFREY, Pres.; A. G. HOUSENECHT, Vice Pres.; A. H. RODLAN, Cashier.

We are glad in our first Farm Edition to point with pride to this strong financial institution that is responsible for building up the community of Jonesville and surrounding territory.

In This Gasoline Age "Red Crown" Is It

In this gasoline age where "Gasoline is King" there are many products which try to ascend the throne but through its high grade and service rendering qualities "RED CROWN" has become king.

When HERBERT PATTON started in the Gas and Oil business here in North Adams, he determined to sell "Goods of Merit," and how well he has succeeded is evidenced by the large demand for "RED CROWN" Gasoline and "POLARINE" MOTOR OIL.

The farmer appreciates the modern service delivering by truck, which supplies him Gasoline and Oil for Tractor, Farm Engine and Auto right at his door, which means the saving of many valuable hours in the busy season as well as assuring him of receiving the "Best There Is."

The marvelous success achieved by HERBERT PATTON reads like one of the tales of the famous Aladdin of the olden time. Not that there has been any magic lamp in his success for the only magic used, was hard work and wisdom and knowledge of selling "goods of quality" which always breeds success.

In buying gasoline and motor oils the public should not ask for just Gasoline and Oil but should demand the best and ask for those products by name and always say "RED CROWN" and "POLARINE." It only takes a minute of time to say it and it will save you hours of time in making your engine run smoothly and having no lost power.

Every person driving a car today knowns that the most of the gasoline sold along the way is inferior quality and the best is none too good. But if for his own protection the motorist would demand the best and ask for his gasoline and oil by name and always say "RED CROWN" and "POLARINE" he will get gasoline and oil of quality sold by a world-known firm with a world's reputation and represented by your neighbor, HERBERT PATTON, whose integrity and fair dealing has never been questioned.

Mrs. Ashcroft's Remarkable Recovery After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework as I could not stand because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen. I sat down most of the time and did what I could do in that way—as washing dishes, etc. One day a book describing Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines was put in my mail-box. I saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength but I certainly praise this medicine. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time. I would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat. I also used the Sanative Wash and I recommend it also. You may publish this letter and I will gladly answer letters from women and advise my neighbors about these medicines."—Mrs. HARRY ASHCROFT, 632 Beech Avenue, Covington, Kentucky.

Janet Church, tired of standing by herself and very curious to know what was going on, edged slowly toward the table at which Tommy was sitting. The king, who has very sharp eyes, noticed her.

"By the way," he said, "why did you bring your aunt with you? Casimir tells me that she's your aunt. I suppose she is your aunt? I used to say cousin myself sometimes, and occasionally sister—not that any one ever believed me — but I never thought of aunt. I suppose now that she isn't—but she can't be, can't possibly be. But still some men have queer fancies. I suppose she isn't Miss Temple, is she?"

"No, she's not," said Tommy.

"That's almost a pity," said the king. "I don't think Calypso would have objected to her. I don't think even the patriarch would have minded. However, if she isn't—"

He had to drop his voice at the last words, for Janet had come quite close to them. The king greeted her in the most friendly manner.

"I'm just giving your nephew a little advice," he said. "I was talking about the financial position of Lystria. Low rate of exchange and all that, you know. But the worst of it is that the people simply won't pay their taxes. At least, they wouldn't in my time. Ever since I've been here I've been thinking things over and I see now that I went the wrong way about collecting taxes. All governments make the same mistake. They send 'round disagreeable men with large blue papers and threaten people who don't pay up. That's the wrong way to get money. As head waiter in the Mascotte I make more in a single month than I ever got out of Lystria in a year. I don't threaten any one. I don't ask any one for a tip. A good waiter can make a man feel like a worm if he orders anything cheaper than champagne, and without speaking a word can see to it that he gets a ten per cent tip at least on every bill that's paid. I take fifty per cent of what the waiters get. That's revenue, collected without the slightest difficulty. What I'm advising your nephew to do is to try the same plan in Lystria. Fire all the exisiting tax collectors. They're an utterly worthless lot, and their methods are antiquated. Hire a staff of waiters from some place like this. Employ them on a fifty-fifty basis, and just see what you get in. Now what do you think of that plan, Miss Temple?"

"My name isn't Temple," said Janet. "It's—"

"Of course not," said the king. "Norheys told me it wasn't."

"It's Church. Miss Janet Church."

She spoke stiffly. Her impression was that the king was a very drunk head waiter.

"Church," said the king. "How very ecclesiastical! And Norbeys says he's a curate. You ought to be able to handle the patriarch between you."

"I'm going to Lystria," said Janet, "to enlist the patriarch's sympathies in the cause of World Peace Through the Union of Christian Churches."

The king looked at her for a moment with a little puzzled frown on his forehead. Then he turned to Tommy.

"I must say you're managing this uncommonly well," he said. "If you can start the patriarch arguing about religion, he'll forget— It's an extraordinarily ingenious plan. I wish I'd thought of it in my time. But then I never had an aunt who could have done it. I wish I could be there, Miss Church. I'd like to hear you and the patriarch at it together. But I can't go. They'd never let me cross the frontier. Besides, I must hold on to my job here. It's all I have to live on."

CHAPTER X

I have had several talks with Tommy about what happened in Berlin. It was easy, or fairly easy to get at the facts. It was very much more difficult to find out what Tommy thought about it all.

"But didn't the whole thing strike you as odd?" I asked him.

"Of course it did," said Tommy. "Odd is hardly the word for it. It was simply mad."

"Still, you went on with it. I mean to say, you didn't try to clear things up."

"I did nothing else except try to clear things up," said Tommy. "I kept on trying. I told every one I met there'd been a mistake, that I wasn't the man they took me for; but they wouldn't believe me."

"So at last you made up your mind to take the goods the gods provided, a princess and a throne?"

"Well, of course, there was Calypso," said Tommy. "I didn't really think at first that I had much chance of getting her, marrying her, I mean. Well, I told you how I was feeling about her."

"Yes. I understand that. But all the same—what I'm trying to get at is this: what did you think was happening? How did you explain it all to yourself? Did you try to think it out?"

"I thought it out all that night," said Tommy, "at least as long as I stayed awake. I dare say I was awake for as much as an hour or an hour and a half after I got into bed, and I was thinking hard all the time, partly about Calypso, of course. But—"

"Mostly about Calypso, I expect."

"Well, you may say mostly," said Tommy. "Still, I did think about the others, Casimir and the king, and about the absurd way they were going on, insisting that I was some one I wasn't and all that."

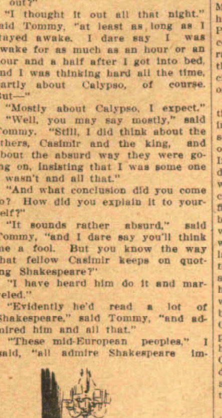
"And what conclusion did you come to? How did you explain it to yourself?"

"It sounds rather absurd," said Tommy, "and I dare say you'll think me a fool. But you know the way that fellow Casimir keeps on quoting Shakespeare?"

"I have heard him do it and marveled."

"Evidently he'd read a lot of Shakespeare," said Tommy, "and admired him and all that."

"These mid-European peoples," I said, "all admire Shakespeare immensely. They know him a great deal better than we do."



Janet Church, Tired of Standing by Herself and Very Curious to Know What Was Going On, Edged Slowly Toward the Table at Which Tommy Was Sitting.

"That's what I'm getting at," said Tommy. "Casimir admires Shakespeare tremendously, and I dare say the king does too. I don't profess myself to know all the plays off by heart. Still I've read them. At least, I've read most of them. Do you remember the beginning of one of the plays—I didn't remember which it was at the time, but I've looked it up since, and it's "The Taming of the Shrew." At the beginning of it there's a kind of little play which hasn't anything to do with the shrew, or the taming or anything else."

No more than Tommy am I a Shakespearean scholar. But I recollect that there was a kind of prologue to "The Taming of the Shrew."

"It's about a sort of spoof," said Tommy, "which a lot of people played off on a ragged beggar called Christopher Sly, pretending to believe that the poor man was a king or a great lord or something until they very nearly persuaded him that he was!"

I remembered the scene when Tommy described it. A certain lord, returning from hunting with his attendants, all of them in merry mood, found a beggar in a bed in an inn. And out of sheer gaiety of heart set to work to persuade him that he was a wealthy nobleman.

"My idea was," said Tommy, "that they were trying that trick on with me. I don't know how the game ended in Shakespeare. In fact I don't think it did end. But I thought I might just as well go through with it and see what happened. There was Calypso, you see."

"Yes," I said. "You've told me how you felt about her. Did you believe she was a princess?"

"Of course, I didn't," said Tommy. "At least not at first. I thought she was just a dancing girl. And I thought her father was a head waiter, and that Casimir was a silly ass who'd got Shakespeare on the brain. I'd have chucked the whole thing and kicked Casimir next time I saw him, only that I really did want to—"

"You wanted to marry Calypso?"

"Most frightfully," said Tommy, who is a very simple soul.

"Considering your position," I said, "and your profession, and—and my sister Emily, don't you think you ought to have hesitated about marrying a girl like that?"

"I suppose I ought," said Tommy. "But I didn't. A fellow doesn't, you know, when he's— I told you that Calypso laid me out, absolutely a gone man, the very moment I saw her."

That is all very well; but I still think Tommy ought to have thought what he was doing. If he married her, supposing her to be, as he thought, simply a German dancing girl, he would have had to take her home with him and she would have been the curate's wife in my sister Emily's parish. What sort of example was Calypso likely to set to members of the Girls' Friendly society? What would the members of the Mothers' union have thought about her? What would dear old Canon Pyke, simplest, gentlest, most innocent of men, have thought of a curate's wife who kicked her legs into the air on the platform of his parochial hall at the annual entertainment of the Temperance society?

And Emily herself? My imagination utterly failed when I tried to imagine Emily's reception of Calypso. She had not a very high opinion of Tommy before he went to Berlin. In her original letter to me about his disappearance she had said that he was not altogether suited to be a clergyman. She would have been confirmed in that opinion when he came back with Calypso for a wife. There was no real harm in the girl. She was as thoroughly respectable as Viola Temple was. But Edmund Troyte, who was a man of the world, shied at the idea of his nephew marrying her. Emily, who is a lady not of this world but of the next, would have been outraged and scandalized, if Canon Pyke's curate, a man who preached to her on Sundays, brought home Calypso as a wife. How would Calypso have taught a class in Sunday school? Emily would regard it as part of the duty of a curate's wife to teach a class in Sunday school.

There are things which Tommy certainly ought to have thought about; but did not. As he said, "a fellow doesn't" when he has fallen suddenly and violently in love. And, of course, there were other considerations. Calypso really was a princess. Tommy did not know that, at the time. Perhaps no one in the parish would have known it at first; but in the end it would have leaked out. What would have happened? My sister is no more a snob than the rest of us; but, like all decent people, she has a respect for royalty. She might severely condemn the manners, customs and morals of a Berlin cabaret dancer; but she is not the woman to do more than whisper nasty things about a princess. Her position would be really awkward. A curate's wife occupies a definite, quite humble place in a parish. But a princess in any well regulated church is received at the door by the clergy in full canonicals, has a gilt and crimson chair to sit on, instead of being herded into a pew like other people, and is often prayed for by name in the course of the service. What could be done about a princess who is also the curate's wife?

But these complicated problems did not trouble Tommy. He was able to go to sleep after little more than an hour's wakefulness, rest quietly and awake next morning prepared to play out to the end what he supposed to be Casimir's game.

When he came down next morning he went to the head clerk in the reception office and asked whether Count Casimir had called or sent any message. Casimir had done neither. But the head clerk, who felt it his duty to watch over his guests, told Tommy that he ought to go to the police office at once to show his passport and obtain permission to remain in Berlin. This, he said, was necessary in the case of all foreigners who wished to stay more than two days. The whole business, so he assured Tommy, was purely formal, tiresome, but nothing worse. Tommy had nothing to do except display his passport. He would immediately receive the necessary written permit. It was called—Tommy wrote down the word to make sure of remembering it—an Ausweis.

Conscience Ruled Him

One of the witnesses at a royal commission appointed to inquire into a case of alleged bribery in an election stated that he had received $25 to vote Conservative, and in cross-examination it was elicited that he had also received $25 to vote Liberal.

Mr. Justice Matthew, in amazement, repeated:

"You say you received $25 to vote Conservative?"

"Yes, my lord."

"And you also received $25 to vote Liberal?"

"Yes, my lord."

"And for whom did you vote at the finish?" asked the astonished judge, throwing himself back in the chair.

And the witness, with injured dignity in every line of his face, answered with great earnestness:

"I voted, my lord, according to my conscience!"—Vancouver Province.

"For the Merry Heart Is a Gladsome Thing"

Fortunately for the world its supply of Bottled Sunshine far exceeds that of its Wet Blankets. If this were not so what an unbearable place the world would be! Some lands, peoples and centuries are richer in it than others. Children and puppies and kittens and lambs and all young things (unless they be ill) are Bottled Sunshine. Precious stones and coal, flower buds and seeds and the kernels of fruit are Bottled Sunshine. Flashes of kindly wit and peals of laughter from out a merry heart are its very essence.

Beautiful, bewitching, attractive in an unstable, uncertain sort of way, are the dispositions of some people, of whom it may be said, "They have a mercurial temperament."

Better to be merry, to be known as Bottled Sunshine, with a heart as full of the joy and gladness of living as are the woods of singing birds in the springtime.—Montreal Family Herald.

Only Enduring Peace

No peace was ever won from fate by subterfuge or agreement; no peace is ever in store for any of us, but which we shall win by victory over shame or sin—victory over the sin that oppresses, as well as over that which corrupts.—Ruskin.

POULTRY FACTS

CURE BROODINESS IN OPEN YARD IS BEST

As the hatching season is ended the problem of broody hens will be confronting most poultry raisers for the following months.

Numerous methods have been advocated from time to time for handling broody hens. Almost every one in any neighborhood has a pet plan for breaking the hens of this condition, which is guaranteed to work. Many of these are founded on sense and will give results, while a good many are founded on abuse of the hens, which should not be practiced.

One favorite methods we used to have on the farm was to dip the hens in a tub filled with water, says a writer in the Michigan Farmer. We kept them under the water just as long as we dared without drowning them. This was supposed to scare the hen so badly that she forgot about wanting to set. Sometimes it worked and sometimes it didn't. When it didn't, something else had to be tried. The broody trait of hens is not a "notion" but a natural condition in response to natural laws. The longer the hens are tolerated in this condition, the longer it will be before they return to laying and the less the profit realized from the investment.

It is foolish to think that mistreatment and abuse which breaks up the tendency is a wise one. One idea sometimes used was to starve the hens when they became broody in order to break them up and get them back to laying. We now know that this was the exact opposite to what we should have done in order to encourage early laying. What is advisable is to feed the hens liberally on a good egg ration which would within a few days have induced the hens to lay. Once laying is resumed the broody trait will disappear.

The open-yard method of breaking up broody hens is one of the most humane treatments we can give the fowls and is also most productive of results. The method is simple. A small area is fenced off in a grassy and shady corner in which a box is placed for protection in bad weather. The hens are turned loose in this yard and plenty of fresh water and feed is given, and as a rule the broodiness ceases in a short time.

Slatted and wire mesh coops indoors or out work fairly well when the bird is caught in time, but in warm weather do not give satisfaction. According to my judgment, the best method for curing broodiness is the open yard. There is less expense, work and trouble involved in this plan than in any other tried. It breaks up the birds more quickly and thus gets them back into the laying class with a minimum loss of time.

Prevent Limberneck by Removal of Carcasses

If poultrymen would spend a little time in looking over their range during the summer months to keep it free from dead carcasses they would undoubtedly prevent a great many outbreaks of so-called "limberneck," or botulism, in poultry.

This is the advice of Dr. F. R. Beaudette, poultry pathologist of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station, who says:

"At this time of the year decomposition takes place quite rapidly. Flies are attracted to carcasses and there lay the eggs which later hatch forth maggots. If these maggots are eaten by a fowl an outbreak of botulism is very apt to occur. The outstanding symptom is the limberneck, and generally the affected bird shows a bright red comb. The temperature of such a bird is usually always subnormal. This is of considerable importance in making a diagnosis. The disease is not spread from one fowl to another, and therefore can easily be controlled by eliminating the source of poisoning. It is still a question whether the maggots themselves are responsible or whether the poisoning is due to the botulinus toxin which the maggot mechanically carries.

"Ranges which are overrun with weeds or with anything that would obscure a dead carcass are more dangerous than a range relatively free from tall vegetation; hence, it is a good practice to keep weeds mowed during the summer months. Of course there is no danger of botulism in flocks that are confined to runs.

"The disease cannot be cured after marked symptoms have made their appearance, though mild cases will often make a spontaneous recovery. Epsom salts in the usual dose aids in early cases. Confinement in a cool dark place seems to give good results."

Green Feed for Fowls

If possible, rest the poultry yards for a month and grow a green crop to purify the soil. A certain amount of green food is essential to the health of the poultry. When in addition to the food value, we can have the service of purifying the soil, it is thrifty to sow oats, or wheat, or rye in the poultry yard. Even when the yards cannot be spared, and the chickens must have their usual run, by heavy seeding there will be growth enough to benefit the soil.

Qualities of Black Turkey

The Black turkey is of a bright greenish black all over, and is equally as domestic and easily managed as is the White Holland. However, it is a profitable bird to raise, as it is an industrious food searcher and, if given plenty of range, it requires but little other feed. In weight those of the different ages average nearly the same as the White Holland, namely, adult cocks, 27 pounds; yearling cocks, 22 pounds; cockerels less than one year old, 18 pounds, and pullets, 12 pounds

Valuable Ore Fields Now Easily Located

By their unique electrical prospecting methods Swedish mining engineers have located for the government valuable ore fields in the northern part of the country. The newly discovered deposits contain copper, arsenic, zinc and even gold in small quanties, says a writer in the New York Herald-Tribune.

These successful methods of location are based on the greater conductivity of beds of ore than of the surrounding rock. At one point a deposit of copper pyrite was located 30 feet down under a sandy plain nearly two miles from the nearest ore-containing bowlders. At another place a mother lode containing 7 per cent of copper was found under a frozen lake, below 30 feet of water and 10 feet of mud. The Lundberg-Nathorst method utilizes electrically charged wires laid in shallow trenches. Through a telephone the prospectors literally "listen out" the presence of ore.

A Lady of Distinction

Is recognized by the delicate, fascinating influence of the perfume she uses. A bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water to thoroughly cleanse the pores followed by a dusting with Cuticura Talcum powder usually means a clear, sweet, healthy skin.—Advertisement.

Bernhardt's Popularity

In Sarah Bernhardt's "The Art of the Theater," she tells of a farewell performance in New York. "I was 25 minutes getting to the stage door," she writes. "Hundreds of people shook my hand, begging me to return. One lady removed her brooch and fastened it to my mantle. At each step I took I was detained. One lady had the idea of producing her pocketbook and asking me to write my name. The idea spread like lightning. Very young people made me write my name on their cuffs. I was completely exhausted. My arms were loaded with small bouquets. I felt some one behind me pulling my hat. I turned around quickly. A lady with a pair of scissors in her hand was trying to cut a lock of my hair, but she only succeeded in cutting my feather. Detectives had to liberate me."

Gallant Rebuff

Benny, aged seven, was always mixed up in fist fights with other youngsters of his town. His mother made several futile attempts to get him to stop. Finally, she told him that whenever he felt an inclination to fight it was the devil tempting him, and that he should say: "Get thee behind me, Satan."

A few days later the little boy rushed into the house and said breathlessly: "Mamma, them boys down there tried to get me to fight, but I just said: 'Get from behind me, Satan,' and then ran home to you."—Indianapolis News.

Several professors were recently fired from the Ohio State University because they supported a third party last Fall, couldn't have happened in any civilized country in the world but America appears to be only at the stage of higher barbarism.

We made a mistake last week concerning M. Morehead's purchase of a new auto, but the blame must be placed upon some Hillsdale garage men who said something like this in our hearing "Morehead will have a new auto before Sept. 1st" so when we saw Murl driving around in his newly painted car we thought that the garage men's predictions had been fulfilled.

The Boy Scouts of the Eagle Patrol had charge of the services at the church Sunday evening. Donald Frantz leader of the patrol directed the services and talks were given by Robert Baker, Norman Burr, Herbert Anson and Glenn Kane of the Scouts. Mrs. Morehead directed an orchestra composed of Robert Baker, Geraldine Carpenter Lewis McGee, Mrs. Wm Anson, Beatrice Morton. Mrs. C. W. McGregor and W. W. Ostrom also assisted with the music.

New Store At Jonesville

Our enterprising and genial townsman O. D. Dellinger who about three years ago went to Jonesville and established himself in the trucking business there has forged steadily ahead and with his sterling business judgment he has built up a mighty good trade through the surrounding country. O. D. Dellinger is known from far and near as a man of square deal and always with an eye out for the best interests of the country. Sometime ago he purchased a nice home in Jonesville where he expects to spend a number of years of his busy life. Recently he decided that his part of the town needed a farmers trading point and so has erected a commodious store building where he will enter the mercantile business and will make the lowest possible prices on all kinds of goods needed by the average farmer and home keeper. He is inviting ever dweller within ten miles of Jonesville to come into town on Saturday August 1, 1925 and enjoy his hospitality. On the lawn adjacent to his house he has provided seating capacity and plenty of room for every one who will be in attendance and to say he will be expecting a large number of his business associates and friends to be present is superfluous. They'll be there anyhow. Mr. Dellinger will show them a real good time and a gala day. Refreshments will be served, free tickets to the shows will be distributed and a good band has been engaged to entertain the crowd. He wishes to say right here if there is a person who hasn't met him or his family or who has never traded with him that person is more than welcome to the opening. He will endeavor to show his customers some of the best bargains in groceries and all round supplies for the home they have ever known If you don't quite believe that —a trial will convince you at once. Mr. Dellinger has labored among us and we are pretty positive he expects to use all his friends—present and to be—in such a way they will continue their patronage. Come along over to Jonesville next Saturday and enjoy yourself at O. D.'s expense. If he can't fill you up on good bargains and someting to refresh the inner man—it simply can't be done. You know him, he's just that kind of a chap. His motto is "Square Deal and More to Follow."

Why They Leave the Farm

We received the following article from the Industrial News at Detreit and you can take it for what it is worth. Some of it is downright truth but a lot more is doped up rather fanciful, as if the writer had filled his pipe with opium or some other similar elixir. before he began:

"Young and old leave the farm because they think city life is more attractive but the same agency which has given attractions to the city is now turning its energy toward the farm. Electricity will revolutionize farm life just as it has the city. Light is the great civilizer. When a farmer's wife can press a button and flood the house with light, wash her dishes pump and heat water, run the churn, sewing machine, washing machine, ironing machine, and vacuum cleaner, make ice in the refrigerator, curl her hair and do innumerable things with electricity, how much more attractive will be the farm homes. Electric road lamps will begin to appear at cross road corners; the telephone and radio will give the same universal communication facilities that are enjoyed in the city. Thus as electricity takes light to the farm it will emphasize the advantages of farm life over crowded city life and draw the people from the thickly populated districts back to the rural districts."

While it is true that the beautiful electric current which we get here by spells is an inspiration, it is also likely the guy who wrote the above sloberino is a swivel chair tenderfoot who never tilled a foot of soil his life. We should judge he was a dreamer. and it is a fact the young folks down on the farm don't care a whoop concerning the electric juice. and they quite cheerfully leave the old place as soon as they develop If it were possible to stage a fire each week, bring along a dago a monkey and a hand organ, put up a few street fights, two or three shooting scrapes, several large hippodromes and a bunch of chinks at the farm, we presume the young folks would remain there.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

Chiggers

The barefoot boy who tramps the fields, woodlands, and brushy country from June to September in his search for birds' nests, ground hog holes, snake skins and other summer trophy, often falls prey himself to a host of invisible insects commonly known as chiggers or harvest mites.

This parasitic insect is native to the West Indies and tropical America, but allied species are very common in other parts of the world, with Michigan no exception. A species of sand flea, the mite has for its habitat the beaches of lakes and the grass and brush of wooded land, where it feeds luxuriously on the bodies of other insects snakes and animals, and when opportunity avails, on the flesh of man. Children are particularly susceptible and adults whose skin is thin and delicate. Persons accustomed to exposure or who perspire freely are often immune.

Burrowing beneath the skin, the mite gorges itself with blood with an intemperance which leads to its hasty death. The death bed area becomes congested, causing swelling and inflammation. It is at this stage of the disease, occurring from one to several hours after exposure and lasting for two days or more, that acute irritation or a sharp tingling sensation apprises the victim of the presence of the mites imbedded in his flesh. The inflammation subsides after a few days and a small scab forms which upon falling away disposes of the remains of the deceased pest.

The young people of Rev. Hunt's S. S. class enjoyed a steak roast and automobile party at Geneva last Tuesday night. There was a good crowd and the young people all had a good time.

Fred Noll and family of Montgomery were Sunday guests of Ben Pendell and wife.

Buck School Reunion

The sixth annual reunion and Home coming of the Bert Buck school was held at the school house with very good weather and a large attendance on Tuesday July 28. The number of ex-pupils, exteachers and patrons reached sixty and a right royal good time is reported. At noon the tables groaned under the weight of eatables served potluck after which the program was in order.

Previous to the noon hour a business meeting was held and officers as follows chosen to conduct the home coming next year: President Lillian Hawley; vice president, Mrs. Mayte Brown; secretary and treasurer, Leslie Stevens. Committees were appointed as follows: Program, Ivy Coon Riggs, Crystal Denning, Emma McMullen Hall, Bion I. Lynch. Refreshments, Mollie Lynch Bleech, Mary Sawdey, Addie Jones Taylor, Etta Buck Zorman, Anah Travis Kimball. After the dinner hour Hetty Lawrence gave a solo and the whole assembly engaged in an old fashioned spelling school, the sides being chosen by Misses Donna Lynch and Bessie Vickers.

The intricacies of numerous words and tongue twisters proved amusing but Miss Donna Lynch was able to out spell the bunch. Three former teachers were present Mrs. Jennie Kellog Shaffer of Somerset, Lois Gray David of Jackson and Maud Coon Tripp of Horton Jackson county of whom the first Mrs. Shaffer wielded the rod in this district 42 years ago.

As a final windup refreshments of ice cream and cake were served and the crowd said their farewells and wended their homeward way feeling that the affair was a social privilege second to none in importance and hoping to meet again all intact the last Tuesday in July 1926.

Jonesville Gravel Company is now opening a new pit on the Holt farm and a side track is being built to the pit where washed gravel will be loaded directly onto cars and shipped. Pipes have been laid to the river to convey water for washing purposes. This company started with considerable capital sometime ago to market gravel for road building purposes.

O. D. Dellinger reports that his opening sale on Saturday last at the home store in Jonesville proved to be a surprising success. He estimates that altogether 2,000 people were present to partake of his hospitality and $1,900 worth of goods were disposed of. It is a fact that a new stock will have to be purchased before business can be resumed. Pretty good for one day's work we should say.

W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, entered Walter Reed Hospital this morning for a brief rest according to an announcement made from his office in the United States Department of Agriculture today. Secretary Jardine has been uffering from a slight disorder for a number of years and although it has responded satisfactorily under reatment he felt it advisable to take a rest for a short time in order to completely restore his health. There is nothing disturbing about his condition and plans have been made for him to handle his official duties during his stay in ths hospital.

Three distinct kinds of cattle are used in the Chicago Roundup—Brahmas for riding, black "muley" calves for roping and longhorn Texas steers for "bulldogging" or steer wrestling. Herds of each kind are picked from the best breeds and these are now on grass in Wyoming awaiting the world's championship roundup. The harses used in the riding contests are the "outlaws" who have never let themselves be fully conquered. The "outlaw" is selected by the Western horse breeders from their herds and saved for cowboy sports. When he has shown his determination to resist the saddle by vanquishing the best riders in his section, he becomes eligible for the world's championship rodeo, such as Chicago will witness this August.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

March 19. 1860. July 26, 1925.

W. J. BRYAN DIES SUDDENLY; IS VICTIM OF APOPLEXY

End Comes at Dayton, Tenn., While Great Commoner Was Preparing for Important Religious Campaign.

Daytop, Tenn.—William Jennings Bryan died suddenly while he slept in the afternoon at the residence of Richard Rogers here. Apoplexy, probably aggravated by indigestion, is said to have been the cause of death. Bryan was sixty-five years of age.

Apparently in perfect health, full of plans to make a nationwide fight for laws protecting the Bible against the teaching of evolution, Mr. Bryan went to his room for a nap after a hearty meal.

Mrs. Bryan sent the family chauffeur, who also acted as companion to Mr. Bryan, to awaken him.

Found Dead in Bed.

The chauffeur found Mr. Bryan lying in an awkward position on the bed, as if he had fallen while trying to rise. There was no sign of heart action.

Physicians were then summoned. They found that Mr. Bryan had been dead for some minutes.

Mrs. Bryan was in a wheel chair on the porch when she learned that her husband was dead. She was overcome with grief. According to their intimates, no more devoted couple ever lived.

Devoted Couple.

Up to the time of her illness Mrs. Bryan had made her one object in life the comfort and care of her husband, and since she has been an invalid Mr. Bryan's tenderness toward her has been most striking.

Her consolation in his sudden death was that it took place at a time when he was happiest.

"I am glad that he died without pain," she said.

Mr. Bryan was to have left Dayton shortly for Knoxville, where he was to make two addresses on the Scopes trial and to outline his idea of a national campaign to arouse the people to the danger in which he believed the Christian religion stands today.

Last Triumphal Tour.

Less than twenty-four hours before his death the Commoner spoke to a great crowd at Winchester, Tenn. He was in fine form. He delivered a stirring speech and took delight in the applause and in the evident affection and admiration in which the crowd held him.

Returning from Winchester, Mr. Bryan's train was like his famous election special of 1896. From the rear platform he made speech after speech at each stop, and the crowds cheered him wildly and kept the train until its schedule was thoroughly disjointed.

Thrice Named for Highest Honor in the Nation's Gift

When he electrified the Democratic national convention of 1896 and won its nomination for the Presidency of the United States with his "crown of thorns" and "cross of gold" speech against the single standard of monetary value, William Jennings Bryan was but little known to the bulk of the American nation. He was at that time only thirty-six years old, the youngest man ever nominated for the Presidency. He was born at Salem, Marion county, Ill., on March 19, 1860.

Young Bryan attended the local public schools and at the age of fifteen entered the Whipple academy at Jacksonville, Ill., to prepare for college. Two years later he entered the freshman class of Illinois college, a small institution at Jacksonville.

Entered Politics Early.

In the political campaign of 1872, when he was only twelve years old, his father put him forward to address a Democratic convention, and although he was greeted with derisive laughter, he closed his speech amid hearty and appreciative applause.

Upon leaving college he began the study of law in the Union law college at Chicago and, at the same time, as a student clerk in the office of the eminent jurist and statesman, Lyman Trumbull, of whom Mr. Bryan said in later years: "Any distinction I have gained I owe in great part to him."

A year after his admission to the bar he married Miss Mary Elizabeth Baird, the only daughter of a prosperous merchant of Perry, Ill., whom he had known and courted in his college days. Soon after their marriage Mr. Bryan went to the Union Law college, pursued the full course, and then, when they removed to Nebraska, was admitted to practice at the bar of that state. The removal to Lincoln, Neb., was made in 1887, on the invitation of Mr. Bryan's former chum at college, Adolphus R. Talbot, with whom a law partnership was formed under the style of Talbot and Bryan.

The next year, 1888, saw the young man's entry into practical politics. He was sent as a delegate to the Democratic state convention at Omaha.

In Congress in 1890.

Mr. Bryan was first elected to congress in 1890. In 1892 he was re-elected to congress by the narrow majority of 140. During that congress, the Fifty-third, he was a conspicuous lieutenant of Richard P. Bland—of "Bland Dollar" fame—in his campaign for remonetization and free coinage of silver at the 16-to-1 ratio, distinguishing himself with a three-hours' speech against the repeal of the silver purchase act. He was, of course, in strong opposition to the monetary policy of the Cleveland administration.

At the end of that second term, in 1894, he declined renomination and in the fall of that year became editor of the World-Herald of Omaha, purposing to conduct a journalistic campaign against the Cleveland administration in favor of free coinage of silver and in favor of his own election as United States senator. But his plans went soon a-glimmering. The Republican state committee had some time before secured by contract the use of two columns of the editorial page of that paper to fill with any matter they pleased; and they filled it daily with matter squarely and aggressively opposed to Mr. Bryan's policies. He retired from the editorship in disgust. Then John M. Thurston was elected United States senator and Mr. Bryan was left in private life.

He re-emergence came in 1896, when he was sent as a delegate to the Democratic national convention.

First Nominated for President.

David B. Hill, the veteran Democratic leader and United States senator from New York advocated maintenance of the existing gold standard.

Bryan replied to him in an impassioned speech against the "money power" and in favor of free silver; closing with the almost hysterical peroration: "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

That utterance stampeded the convention. Mr. Bryan was nominated for the Presidency upon a platform demanding the immediate remonetization of silver and its free coinage at the ration of sixteen to one; and Arthur Sewall of Maine, a believer in the single gold standard, was named for Vice-President.

The Populists also nominated Bryan for President with Thomas E. Watson of Georgia for Vice-President. A considerable faction of "Gold Democrats" bolted and nominated John M. Palmer for President and S. B. Buckner for Vice-President. The Republicans on a gold standard platform, nominated William McKinley and Garrett A. Hobart.

Defeated by McKinley.

The campaign which followed was one of the most exciting in American history. Mr. Bryan made a whirlwind campaign, speaking in as many places as possible and rousing much enthusiasm by his remarkable oratorical powers.

The election of 1896 resulted in Mr. Bryan's defeat, but it did not destroy his political ambition; rather it stimulated it. In December, 1897, he visited Mexico, returning home before the outbreak of the war with Spain.

Although a pronounced pacifist, he entered the army and was commissioned as colonel of the Third Nebraska infantry but had no active service at the front.

Nominated Again in 1900.

In December, 1898, he resigned his commission and resumed his campaigning, making not free silver but "anti-imperialism" his leading issue.

On that issue, which principally meant American abandonment of the Philippines he secured the Presidential nomination in 1900 from the Democratic, Populist and Silver Republican parties. After another exciting campaign he was again defeated by William McKinley.

He then re-entered journalism, founding at Lincoln, Neb., a weekly political paper called The Commoner.

The Democratic convention of 1904 passed him by and nominated for the Presidency, Judge Alton B. Parker. Judge Parker was defeated by Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Bryan's return to party leadership was effected in 1908 after he had made a tour around the world and had done a vast amount of newspaper writing.

Defeated for Third Time.

He had his third Presidential nomination in 1908 and suffered at the hands of William H. Taft, his third and worst defeat.

In 1912 when the convention met at Baltimore, he was its dominant figure. He bitterly opposed Champ Clark, the leading candidate and it was probably because of his course that Woodrow Wilson was finally nominated. Because of the schism in the Republican party, Mr. Wilson was elected and in recognition of his work at the convention and in the campaign and of his undoubted popular following in the Democratic party he made Mr. Bryan his secretary of state.

In that office one of Mr. Bryan's accomplishments was the negotiation of treaties with 30 countries providing for investigation of disputes before going to war.

The World war began in 1914. Mr. Bryan's pacifist views were well known. On numerous occasions his views and those of President Wilson did not coincide. On June 9, 1915, he felt constrained to resign his office.

Active in Later Years.

In 1921-23 he became deeply interested in evolution, the theories of which he discredited. He delivered many lectures and addresses against "Darwinism" and published a book on the subject, entitled "In His Image," in which he argued for a literal interpretation of the Biblical cosmogony. If man must choose, he said, between being descended from a monkey and being made out of mud, he preferred the mud.

He had already published several volumes: "The First Battle," 1897, a review of the campaign of the preceding year; "Under Other Flags," 1904, and "The Old World and Its Ways," 1907, based on his foreign travels, and "Heart-to-Heart Appeals," 1917.

He received the degree of LL.D. from the Universities of Nebraska and Arizona.

In 1925 he was the leading figure in a world-famous trial in which he defended the Bible against the theory of evolution of man.

Bryan's Death Great Shock to President

Swampscott. — President Coolidge was profoundly shocked at the news of the death of William Jennings Bryan. While carefully making no comment on the legal controversy which marked the last phase of the picturesque and spectacular life of the Commoner, the President has been following it with profound interest.

Mr. Coolidge has always been keenly interested in Mr. Bryan. Just two months ago, when Mr. Bryan was passing through Washington, the President had him to lunch. Though different in almost every conceivable respect, the two men seemed to have what seemed sometimes to observers to amount to an attraction for each other.

Mr. Coolidge could stand for the high tariff or any other issue which Bryan thought pernicious, without creating in Bryan's mind any thought of criticism. In the same way Mr. Coolidge was always very soft spoken when it came to speaking of Bryan.

Bryan's death, it is believed here, will have a profound effect on the course of American politics in the next few years.

Man of Integrity

There is nothing so delightful as the hearing or the speaking of truth, says Plato. For this reason there is no conversation so agreeable as that of the man of integrity who hears without any intention to betray and speaks without any intention to deceive.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Sudden Death of W. J. Bryan Shocks the Country—His Burial in Arlington.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, one of the most notable figures in American public life, has passed on to another world, and his body now lies in Arlington National cemetery—a consistent disciple of peace surrounded by the tombs of those who died in the armed service of their country. But he belongs there, for he was not a "pacificist" in the objectionable sense of the term, and when the nation went to war with Spain he held a commission as colonel and raised a regiment in Nebraska.

The sudden death of Mr. Bryan in Dayton, Tenn., where he had just won a temporary battle against the theory of evolution, came as a shock to the country, and indeed to the world, for he was known in all lands. He died while he slept, of apoplexy aggravated by indigestion. He was sixty-five years old. After the holding of memorial services in Dayton the body was transported in a special train to Washington. There, in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, the funeral rites were celebrated on Friday, and the casket on an artillery caisson and escorted by a military detail, was taken to Arlington where the War department officials had selected for the burial a fine site near the Admiral Dewey tomb. It was in this most beautiful cemetery in the world that Mr. Bryan had expressed his desire to be interred.

It would be presumptuous to undertake to characterize Bryan. There can be but few Americans who have not formed their own opinion of his character and his work. He had a devoted following of hundreds of thousands; a host of persons knew him personally and loved him; and everyone was familiar with his life record and his views on all manner of topics. Thrice nominated by the Democratic party for the Presidency, he virtually controlled that party for years, and though he lost that control in 1920 he was still the leader of a powerful faction. Outside of politics his influence on the life of the people was immense—an emotional rather than an intellectual influence. From President Coolidge's telegram of condolence to Mrs. Bryan may well be quoted these phrases:

"Mr. Bryan has been a prominent figure in public affairs for a third of a century. He has been a leader in the advocacy of many moral reforms and was representative of the effort for purity in our political life. He was endowed with the great gift of eloquence.

"The sincerity of his motives was beyond dispute. He was three times chosen the head of a great political party and held the exalted office of secretary of state. His career is another example of what American opportunity affords to those who have the will industriously to apply themselves.

"It would be difficult to find among his contemporaries any one with so large a circle of friends and acquaintances who had so generously bestowed upon him their esteem and confidence."

By direction of the President, Secretary of State Kellogg announced Mr. Bryan's death, and the flag was displayed at half staff on all public buildings in Washington on the day of the funeral.

DEATH took another eminent American last week—Edgar A. Bancroft, our ambassador to Japan. He had been ill for several weeks and died at Karulzawa, a health resort. Throughout Japan the mourning for Mr. Bancroft was general and sincere, for he had endeared himself to the Japanese people and was held in the highest esteem by the officials there. Our own State department feels his loss deeply, as do his many friends and admirers in the United States. Mr. Bancroft, who was born in Galesburg, Ill., in 1857, had achieved distinction as an attorney, a business man, a railroad official and a civic leader, and was appointed to the Japanese post last August. He went to Tokio in November and already had done much to smooth out the difficulties between the United States and Japan arising from the immigrant exclusion law.

THOUGH compelled to postpone his reorganization of prohibition enforcement machinery, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews is carrying on the government's enforcement campaign most vigorously. Just now he is devoting especial attention to stopping leaks along the Canadian border and in the South, particularly in Florida, for he is determined to check the entry of illegal liquor into the country. It is the plan of the federal authorities to build up a working patrol of prohibition forces at the borders to co-operate with agents working in the interior so that any shipments that slip through may be traced to their destination. In this way the prohibition chiefs hope to obtain evidence for wholesale arrests and prosecutions against organized bands violating the Volstead act.

Considerable excitement, which was more than local, was caused by the raiding by dry agents of the Fish Fans' club, a political organization in Chicago, and the seizure of liquor found in members' lockers. There was promise that the club would lead in a fight against the present methods of the prohibition officials. At Swampscott the information was given out that President Coolidge takes the position that the federal government, while specializing in national enforcement, holds itself in readiness to step in wherever local enforcement lapses, and he assumes that in such cases as the Chicago raid there were special reasons for the action of the federal agents.

BELGIUM'S debt commission, consisting of Former Premier Theunis, Baron Cartier de Marchienne, ambassador to the United States; Emil Francqui and Felician Cattier, is expected in Washington on August 4, and a meeting of the American debt funding commission has been called for August 6. All the members of the latter body except Congressman Crisp will be present and it is believed the negotiations with the Belgians will not require more than ten days.

Meanwhile the Belgian newspapers are saying mighty mean things about the United States for claiming the war debt, asserting the late President Wilson promised the Brussels government that Germany should defray all of Belgium's foreign indebtedness. The papers accuse America of imperialism and of an ambition to exploit Europe, citing the large American colony and the American newspapers in Paris.

French delegates are now in London negotiating an agreement on the French debt to Great Britain. Until their business is settled the make-up of France's mission to Washington will not be formally announced. It is understood, however, that it will be headed by Henri Bergener and will include M. Franklin-Bouillon and Joseph Simon, and that it will come over in September. M. Caillaux, finance minister, will follow later.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND, chairman of the fact finding commission created during the coal mine strike of 1923, has visited Swampscott several times to discuss with Mr. Coolidge the danger of another strike this summer. Mr. Hammond holds that the right of consumers to a continuous supply of fuel is paramount to the rights of operators and miners, and that as a last resort the government would be justified in assuming control of the mines.

"The President's position, as I interpret it," Mr. Hammond said, "is that it would be premature to assume that the dispute is not going to be settled. He has advocated repeatedly a policy of the minimum amount of government interference with industrial affairs. The public should grant with patience every opportunity to the parties at interest to settle the controversy themselves.

"If by any chance, however, occasion should arise for President Coolidge to exert his influence, I believe he could rally public support as have few other Presidents. He will find all political parties united behind him."

Premier Baldwin has had personal charge of the efforts to avert the threatened strike of the British coal miners, but at this writing his success is problematical. A mine strike in England would be backed by the British transport workers and by the miners' organizations of the continent and of the United States. An economic crisis in Europe would result.

ENERGETIC action by the French forces in Morocco resulted in the retreat of the Riffians from the center of the Ouerga river line northward to the foot of the Atlas mountains. But Abd-el-Krim's troops stood fast at both ends of the valley and their leader was reported to be preparing for an offensive against Ouezzan, in the west. His activities north of Taza were regarded as a diversion intended to reduce the French reserves in the west sector where a successful drive would take him to the rich Charband plains and also would separate the French and the Spanish. Marshal Lyautey has turned over to General Naulin all military and political responsibility in the zone of operations, and the latter has established his headquarters in Fez.

The reorganized Lafayette escadrille of American aviators who have offered their services to the sultan of Morocco was expected to fly from France to Morocco early this week.

MUSSOLINI'S government in Italy has promulgated a new law which provides in effect that when a hostile newspaper is not subdued by repeated seizures of editions, the director shall receive two summonses, after which the publisher is no longer recognized, which means the paper is suppressed. This has happened in the case of the Popalo, and the directors of several other great journals have received the first summons. The Corriere della Serra has arranged to continue publication abroad when it receives its second summons. Last week George Seldes, correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, was expelled from Italy because his dispatches did not please the government.

IT IS rumored in Washington that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will retire from the cabinet next spring, by which time he hopes a tax revision bill, embodying most of his ideas will have been passed. He believes, also, that satisfactory progress will have been made toward the funding of the debts owed the United States by foreign nations and that the time will be favorable for his retirement. Mr. Mellon's private secretary, however, declared there was no foundation for the report.

The main points of the treasury's tax program are set forth quite definitely in a letter written by Undersecretary of the Treasury Winston in response to an invitation to a meeting of the Iowa tax clubs. It carries the inference that the treasury will not be content merely with a reduction in federal estate tax rates, but will insist on their complete repeal. Without qualification the treasury says that the maximum surtax should be cut from 40 per cent to at least 20 per cent and that the combined surtax and normal tax should not be more than 25 per cent.

"It should be possible from a revenue standpoint to have a maximum normal and surtax combined of 25 per cent," Mr. Winston's letter said. "The treasury thinks, therefore, that 20 per cent is the highest surtax rate which should be in the law.

"An income tax on corporations graduated on the amount of income has no logical basis. The theory of a graduated income tax is that it is related to the capacity of the taxpayer to pay. A man with $100,000 can spare a larger proportion of his income than a man with $10,000.

"This reasoning has no relation whatsoever to corporations. A large corporation having a large income may be owned by a great number of small stockholders who cannot afford to have their dividends cut down; whereas another corporation, having a moderate income may be owned entirely by one man who can well afford to pay a larger proportion of his income to the government."

Treasury officials, it was learned, have evidences of widespread support of the treasury surtax and estate tax program by Southern Democrats.

Free City of Danzig Monte Carlo's Rival

Zoppot, Free City of Danzig.—This fashionable watering place on the Baltic is rapidly acquiring the name of "Monte Carlo of the North." From all over Europe, especially from Danzig, Poland and Germany, people bent on playing roulette or baccarat flock hither to indulge in games of chance, though, of course, they claim they come for their health.

Theoretically, gambling is forbidden in the free city of Danzig. The owners of the beautiful up-to-date casino hold no concession from the state for conducting these games of chance.

However, the free city is vitally interested in the casino, for 60 per cent of the gross income from the gambling tables goes to the city of Danzig, and to the other communities within its confines.

From the remaining 40 per cent the owners of the casino must defray all running expenses.

Every attempt to get at the actual revenue obtained from the casino meets with an evasive reply on the part of Danzig's officials. One is merely told that the proceeds cannot be used for general purposes, but must be devoted to social welfare. That the profit must be considerable, however, may be judged from the fact that the company which runs the casino is investing its share of the net profits in a magnificent new hotel facing the ocean and located a short distance from the villa formerly inhabited by the German crown prince.

SICK 3 YEARS WITHOUT RELIEF

Finally Found Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbia, S. C.—"Your medicine has done me so much good that I feel like I owe my life to it. For three years I was sick and was treated by physicians, but they didn't seem to help me any. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got strong enough to do my housework, where before I was hardly able to be up. I have also taken the Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and it has left me in good health. I recommend it as the best medicine for women in the Change of Life and you can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. S. A. Holley, R. F. D. No. 4, Columbia, South Carolina.

Why suffer for years with backache, nervousness, painful times and other ailments common to women from early life to middle age, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will bring relief? Take it when annoying symptoms first appear and avoid years of suffering.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 200,000 replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by its use.

The Canadian-Detroit Border Bridge

Plans are afoot now to construct an enormous suspension bridge across the Detroit River between Detroit and Windsor which will out class anything else in the United States.

The towers instead of being masonry will be constructed of steel and trussed together so as to withstand all the strains of an increasing traffic. Some years ago it was deemed necessary to build such a bridge but the Detroit Council treated the matter with contempt and eventually turned it down. When built the bridge will consist of two decks or levels, one for railroad tracks and below three separated causeways for autos and pedestrians. The expense of the new bridge will be borne jointly by Canada and United States.

However, before the thing can be begun it will be necessary to take a voice of the people in all the suburban towns or outlying districts near the city who will be taxed according to the proximity of their zones, similar to the levying for a public road. The preliminary work of getting the consent of the people will take some time and at least a bond of three million dollars must be in sight to start. The Canadian Government at present is working out the scheme and as soon as they have completed plans our government will act.

An Editorial Opinion

Fred Rock handed us a copy of the DeFuniack Springs (Florida) Herald the other day and we have for some time been much interested in the editorials of Editor Larkin Cleveland. Among other things we noted an article headed "Nothing Doing" It seems some one has handed Editor Cleveland some kind of a dissertation on the new evolutionists who are troubling the country of late. This is part of the article which Mr. Cleveland publishes: "Occasionally we are asked to champion a given cause, or to condemn another, and where there is no conflict with our conscience or what we conceive to be our duty in the premises, we are always willing to oblige. With reference to jacking up the young folks. We are not so bad about jumping on people about their opinions as we once were. If some other fellow has a religion different from ours, and is making an honest to goodness effort to live up to it, then he's doing a lot better than a whole thundering lot of people we could mention including ourselves. If it comforts the heart of the evolutionist to know his grand daddy was a monkey or a fish or a polecat or a populist, then let him hop to it. His family relationship is nothing to us, and we have no desire to meddle with his family affairs. The young people are all right. When the last war ended it left the whole blooming world suffering from shell shock, or something of that nature and anybody who felt any inclination to dabble in prophecy hopped up and "foretold" another great war immediately following. People seemed to lose their grip on themselves and many gave themselves up to gloomy forebodings. To them everything looked bad. Their roses changed into bull nettles on the tempestuous sea of life, the only flag visible was the grinning skull and cross bones of the pirate; the thrill of the mocking bird gave place to the omnious croaking of the raven. And all of us held our breath as we saw (or we thought we saw) this old world headed straight to the demonition Bow wows on account of the way our boys and girls were going. We say so because we kinder' felt that way ourselves. Next the Catholics were suspected of conspiracy to capture the United States and hand it over to "His Holiness" and "His Royal Jiblets" the Pope. Then the Jew came under suspicion of conniving at something mean—nobody seemed to know exactly why or wherefore, but Henry said so, and then every fellow who owned a Lizzie became convinced that every Jew was up to some sort of "devilment."

Now it is evolution. Brethren: "In your patience possess ye your soul" Quit thinking and worrying over the other fellow and his sins. Its none of your business what he thinks, and none of his business what you think. If he wants to run a heresy and go to the devil let him do it. Cut out worrying. Go fishing once in a while, and think of the other fellow at his best—not his worst."

The Constitution

Last week we mentioned the United States Frigate "Constitution" which now lies at the dock in Boston Navy Yard in a rotten condition, and we also mentioned she was once manned by a gallant crew. Below we wish to mention just briefly some of her history.

After the engagement with the Gueriere and the Java "Old Ironsides" had been completely equipped with new clean sails, repainted and refitted an operation which required seven months—some different from the re-fittings of today when a battleship can be made ready to put to sea in seven weeks. When she left the harbor at Boston that afternoon Sunday December 18, 1814, she was as trim and rakish a frigate as you would wish to see and the best ordered ship that ever answered the helm. On her quarter deck stood Captain Charles Stewart, a salt horse since he was a lad of thirteen when he went to sea as a cabin boy on a merchant ship. At the early age of twenty he was in command of a trading ship of the merchant marine and such was his ability that he was offered a commission in the United States Navy. It was considered a great bonanza in those days to be thus honored, and so we find Stewart at the age of thirty four, commander of the Constitution. We were in error last week in stating the Constitution was a hundred gun ship. She carried 36 guns and was classed as a frigate.

The captures made by the Constitution read like fairy tales since ship after ship were met and captured and sent home under prize crews. Stewart kept a daily diary and in it recorded the incidents of fights which he had, and today this is handed down as one of the best histories being written in a clear legible hand almost like copper plate. It has been one hundred and eleven years since the episodes of this log were enacted but their memory stands out as clear as day. On one occasion just before going into battle, the crew of the Constitution complained they had not had their regular ration of heavy grog. The grog sat on the tables in the cabin ready to be served out to the crew. An old quarter master hearing the crew grumbling about this oversight exclaimed "Shame. Shipmates we need no Dutch courage on this ship" and springing to the place he kicked the buckets into the scuppers of the ship. This made hard feelings among the crew but the battle was won just the same.

Captain Stewart took the captains of the antagonists boats prisoners, but he never mistreated them in the least. These officers were guests at his private table in the cabin of the Constitution and it is related that they used violent and profane language at times among themselves, blaming each other for the defeat. Captain Stewart endured this as long as he thought practicable then he arose and gravely said; "Gentlemen there is only one way that I see to decide this question—to put you back on your ships again, give you back your crews, and try it over."

When peace was declared it was several days before Stewart heard the news, and when he did, he sailed for New York Harbor without delay having been absent about six months and captured property valued at $1,500,000. While the exploits of "Old Ironsides" compared to the battles of the present day seem infantile, yet considering the means used and the grit necessary to fight in the days of wooden ships, one would have to admit the valor and the management certainly showed a preponderence for the latter. While the Elks are about to raise the necessary funds to refit the old relic it is hoped we won't lose sight of the fact that she is washed with the blood of the best American citizenship—a shrine worthy of rehabilitation.

Be Careful What You Buy

Not so long ago we received from a brokerage firm in New York City a letter importuning the buying of Ford Motor (Canada) stock. We of course thought it good practice to look into the matter as we did not think any Ford stock was for sale in this neck of the woods, We took a few minutes to write to R. G. Dun & Co., concerning the soundness of Ford shares sold by this particular brokerage firm and found that the company had been enjoined by law not to sell these shares in either Ohio or Missouri and probably other states likewise. In addition to this Dun & Co., were of the opinion no brokerage firm had any right to sell this stock.

The above information did not seem quite complete so we wrote the manager of the Ford company at Dearborn and received the following from W. R. Campbell vice president of the company:

"Dear Sir:—Your letter of the 25th addressed to the Ford Motor Company, Detroit has been referred to me for attention.. We know nothing whatsoever of the integrity of the brokerage firm you mention in New York City. We might explain the so-called banker's shares of our stock that they seemed to have issued without our permission and are being offered the public at exorbitant prices. Our attorney investigated the condition thoroughly, but inasmuch as the lew permitted a practice of this kind, we were powerless to legally prevent it. We have authorized no broker to issue or offer for sale these fractional or bankers' shares. The state of New York has recently restrained brokers in that state from trading in these shares on the grounds that the literature they were putting out was calculated to deceive. Our stock is quoted on various exchanges at around $500 for the full share. Purchased on these fellows' basis it would cost $750. Fractional shares as far as we can see, have no market value as there is no provision for representation at the shareholder's meeting. We emphatically recommend against the purchase of these shares."

So, it will be seen that neither of the authorities can recommend buying anything of the brokers, and furthermore the parts of shares are absolutely worthless as they would bring no dividends, altho' they might be genuine Ford stock. We had heard considerable about the value of Ford stock, yet you must bear in mind its value depends upon the shape it is offered to you. When it is possible for a bunch of crooks to so manipulate good stock like the Ford, and put it out in clothed in silks to deceive the public, what could you expect of worthless oil and mining stocks which are not as valuable as the paper they are written on. It is a fact that up to two years ago bogus sharks were putting out oil stock on wells that had not been drilled and finding a large crop of suckers. A few years ago there was an offering of Durant motor stock on the market and we have heard it was snapped up pretty quick. Have you ever heard of this stock since?

You who have money to invest had much better leave the stock proposition alone; you don't want that kind of junk. Just adopt the one concise rule and you will find it serves for every bogus stock on the curb anywhere in existence.

It is this: There is no real legitimate worth-while stock in any enterprise whatever, be it mine, oil well, or factory, which is not taken at once and over-subscribed before it gets to the public, and often before the enterprise is started. But a thousand and one fake concerns spring up in Texas, Oklahoma, California or some other far-off section and they all have a plausible story to tell the public. Alas and Alack! They always find a crop of suckers even if they lie like pirates usually cleaning up a large bunch of coin from uninformed people all over the land. Don't touch it! It's rotten!

PICKING UP BROADCAST MUSIC

The human ear is a truly marvellous instrument. Few people recognize all the amazing feats which the ear and brain in combination can perform, and therefore how difficult is the task of the broadcast device which aims to hear and pick-up for the listening radio audience exactly what is happening in a concert hall or studio.

To begin with, the ear hears a tremendous range of differently pitched sounds from the lowest notes to the highest. The deep boom of an organ pipe lies at one end of the gamut of notes which the listener wishes to have reproduced. At the other end of the long range lie the overtones of the violin and piccolo in all their interesting and tart shrillness, and the high pitched overtones which alone make the spoken consonants "s" and "f" sound natural. Actually the necessary frequencies range all the way from the ponderous tone of about 30 vibrations in a second to the keen and piercing sound of 10,000 or more vibrations per second. If the lower frequencies are not correctly picked up, the piano sounds "tinny," the baritone voice becomes a tenor, and the speaking voice, while understandable, sounds thin and unnatural. On the other hand, if the high frequencies are left out or partly lost, the violin sounds like a flute, orchestras give a jumbled and incomplete impression, and the voice particularly of the feminine speaker, sounds muffled and indistinct.

DR. A. N. GOLDSMITH

The ear is also capable of hearing and appreciating a wide range of loudness in a sound. One can hear and understand a faint whisper and also an almost deafening shout. In broadcasting, so extreme a range of loudness is hardly required, yet it is necessary that the expression of a piece of music be preserved by subduing appropriately the softer parts, and accentuating fully the more forceful portions. It is not easy to find a suitable telephone transmitter and vacuum tube amplifier for the broadcasting station that will preserve the relative loudness of tones accurately. It becomes necessary to use vacuum tubes in somewhat extravagant fashion, most of the time working them far below the maximum output they will give in less critical service in order to avoid distortion when really loud notes are to be correctly reproduced. If this is not done, loud notes "crack" and one gets the unpleasant effect known as "blasting."

Ear and Mind Follow Melody

Another characteristic of the human ear, or it may be, of the brain, is the ability to concentrate on a strain of melody or a particular part of a musical composition. This is particularly noticeable in connection with orchestral compositions. It is well known that the ear and mind can pick up and follow the melody played by the violins of an orchestra, although the remainder of the orchestra is also contributing its full quota to the total of sound. To some extent this can be imitated in broadcasting by properly placing the pick-up transmitter so that the instrument carrying the melody is nearest to the transmitter and thus is accentuated in the resulting broadcast music. This, however, is always done at the risk of exaggerating this instrument unduly, or of suppressing other important instruments, and thus doing what is known as "throwing the orchestra out of balance." In fact, a good musical critic is a necessary element in every broadcasting station that has any pretensions of sending out really artistic productions.

Having mentioned the problems in picking up music for broadcasting, it may be desirable to give some of the various solutions for them which have been found. The telephone transmitter which is used must be a very different device from the ordinary transmitter used for the usual wire telephone system. While the ordinary transmitter suffices for speech under comparatively uncritical conditions, it would not do at all for broadcasting. In the first place, it would be far too noisy. That is, the average transmitter produces a certain amount of continuous hiss and crackle which would be intolerable in high-grade broadcasting. So that, when carbon grain transmitters are used, it is necessary to fill them with a special grade of carbon and to use very small currents through the carbon so that they—the transmitters—will produce a minimum of such objectionable noise. Otherwise the desired velvety silence when the artists are not singing will be missing and the audience will be distracted and annoyed by the hiss of the transmitter.

A second objection to ordinary telephone transmitters is that they exaggerate certain frequencies of the voice or music very markedly because the vibrating diaphragm or metal sheet of the telephone transmitter against which one speaks responds most vigorously or "resonates," at certain frequencies or pitches. This is not acceptable in sending out music. Particularly dangerous would be the effect of such partiality for certain notes if the transmitters were used for sending out an orchestral selection. Some instruments would be partly suppressed and others exaggerated, thus spoiling the effect. So that it becomes necessary to use a telephone transmitter which has a diaphragm which responds as evenly as possible to notes of all pitches. One way of doing this is to use a thin and powerfully stretched diaphragm of steel or some other strong material which will respond equally to all usual tones. Another way is to use the so-called "glow microphone" where the vibrating element is a small column of glowing gas through which a small electric current is passing. Yet other methods are available, but most of them not particularly simple.

Microphone Picks Up Sounds in Studio

The telephone transmitter used for pick-up in the studio has to be suitably mounted and wired up to the rest of the equipment.

The amount of power which it is possible to get from these high-grade telephone transmitters is nearly always very small, and it becomes necessary to amplify it by means of a powerful amplifier. This amplifier must also be free from noise-producing tendencies and must amplify notes of all pitches equally. Both these requirements are very difficult to meet. Either resistance-coupled amplifiers have to be used, or else the greatest care has to be taken in the design of the special transformers used in a transformer-coupled amplifier for this work. Ordinary amplifiers would not serve at all, as is sometimes evident when listening to the "music" emanating from a badly designed broadcasting station.

A suitably designed amplifier of elaborate construction is found in the control room of Broadcast Central, Stations WJY and WJZ of the Radio Corporation of America at Aeolian Hall, New York City. This amplifier is really two amplifiers, one at the top of the case, and the other at the bottom. Special relays permit either amplifier to be used at will so that there is always a spare amplifier available in case a tube burns out or some other defect develops in one of the amplifiers. The control room engineering attendant at these amplifiers is perforce chained to his post during the entire performance listening to every note that goes out through special "monitoring sets" and maintaining loudness and quality of the music by the suitable controls which are provided. He also has a number of special colored signaling lamps before him on the control room amplifier so that he knows just what is going on in the studio and whether the transmitter which he controls is actually "on the air" (that is, transmitting) or not.

Clearly carelessness and simplicity have no place in either the design or the supervision of the pick-up transmitter and control room amplifier of a satisfactory broadcasting station. The broadcast listener would do well when he is especially pleased by the clarity and excellence of an evening's performance to remember something of what has been done by "brain and brawn" in reproducing in his home the intricate and yet delightful melodies and sounds which make up the broadcast program.

INCREASE IN FIVE YEARS

While still in its infancy, the radio industry has taken on tremendous proportions since the first public broadcast service was inaugurated less than five years ago. The rate of growth of the industry is illustrated in the following annual sales figures for the past five years:

Sales of Sets and Parts

Sales in 1920............	$ 2,000,000
Sales in 1921............	5,000,000
Sales in 1922............	60,000,000
Sales in 1923..	120,000,000
Sales in 1924 (estimated).	250,000,000

Annual Meeting of Jerome Schools

Minutes of Annual Meeting of Jerome Public Schools July 13, 1925.

Meeting called to order by President Mrs. Fred Randolph. Minutes of last annual meeting read and approved. Secretary's report for past year made and accepted.

Treasurer's report for the past year made and accepted.

Next in order was the election of two trustees for the full term of three years President Mrs. Chandler appointed as tellers Mrs. Leon Walworth and Grant Sawdey who were sworn in by Notary L. D. Walworth. The first ballot taken was to elect tcustee to fill the vacsncy of H. Voorhees whose term expired. Total votes cast were 38 of which Mrs. J. Chandler received 32; Stan Murrey 4 and Marion Hart 2; Mrs. Chandler was elected Next ballot was 39 votes cast: of whicu Mr. Hart received 22; R. J. Moreland 7; W. W. Ostrom 7; Stan Murrey 3. Mr. Hart was declared elected. There being no other business to come before the meeting a motion was made and supported to adjourn.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 19th day of October, 1910, executed by Eri B. Sabin and Ida M. Sabin, his wife, as parties of the first part, mortgagors, to Boies State Savings Bank, a banking corporation organized, then existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, of Hudson, Michigan as party of the second part, mortgagee, which said mortgage was on the 20th day of October 1910 recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, in Liber 141 of mortgages on page 224, which said mortgage was duly assigned by the said Boies State Savings Bank to the Hudson State Savings Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, which, said assignment of said mortgage has been duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale aforesaid, the said default consisting in the failure of the mortgagors to pay the principal and interest in manner and time provided by said mortgage, and in the payment of taxes levied against the premises described in said mortgage for the year 1924, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at this date the sum of Twelve Hundred Thirty-Eight and Fifteen Hundredths ($1238.15) Dollars, for principal, interest and taxes paid by the mortgagee, and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and by the terms of said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned, will on the 27th day of July, 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, Central Standard Time, at the front door of courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, (said courthouse being the place for holding the circuit court in said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the taxes paid by mortgagee, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute, and by said mortgage; the property described in said mortgage, which is to be sold by virtue of this notice, is as follows, to-wit; all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan described as the west one-half of the north-west one quarter of Sec. No. 26, in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, excepting two acres of land out of the southwest corner and one acre out of the north west corner thereof, containing in all seventy seven acres of land more or less.

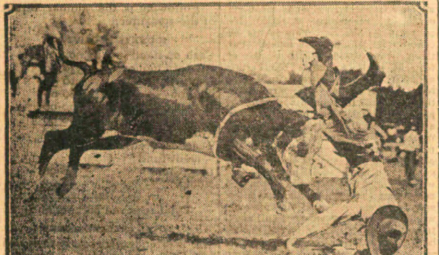
DYNAMITE ON THE HOOF



(Copyright by R. R. Doubleday.)

Riding a wild steer is anything but a "pink tea" sport and if you don't believe it, ask any of the many cowboys who will try to stay on these chunks of living dynamite during the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo, beginning August 15. The Brahma steer, a cross between the Mexican longhorn and the Brahma, or sacred cattle of India, is a fighter from the word "go," according to the boys who have tackled them, and after throwing a rider they'll frequently try to muss him up.

Steer riding, calling for an excess of skill and daring, is one of the features of the Chicago Roundup, which will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce for nine days. The competitions are under the direction of Tex Austin, who has managed the largest and most successful of rodeos. More than $30,000 in cash prizes will go to the winners of the events, together with the world's championship titles.

(Copyright by R. R. Doubleday.)

An animated tornado on four legs, 1,200 pounds of living dynamite—such is the "outlaw" bronk, scores of which will provide the chief thrills of the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo, to be held for nine days, beginning August 15. Wiry and daring, coolest when facing almost certain injury—such is the buckaroo, standard type of the men who will fight it out with the "bad" horses in the Chicago contests.

Broncho busting calls forth all the courage that is traditional on the western ranges and a great part of the $30,000 in prizes appropriated by the Chicago Association of Commerce, under whose auspices the rodeo will be presented, will go to the men who will fight to stay for a few seconds on the hurricane decks of the "sunfishing," "skyscraping," squealing, fighting cayuses. When the courage of the buckaroo clashes with the lawless spirit of the broncho, the ride is always to a sensational finish. Tex Austin, famous through his many successful rodeos and who will manage the Chicago spectacle, already has contracted for the top bronks from the three greatest strings of bucking horses in the West.

Committee Of Fifty

Never was there a time when we needed to stir the community as we do now. Have you read about the "Committee of Fifty?" It is an organization of the "wets'—the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. They are sending out a circular carrying a picture of each member urging those who receive it "in the name of patriotism" to become members of this association. Among these names we find four United States Senators and seventeen members of the Lower House of Congress. Their object is to induce Congress to nullify the Eighteenth Amendment by modifying the Volstead law. The circular says "No such important committee to deal with so grave a crisis has been formed since the declaration of Independence was signed by a similar committee of representative citizens and statesmen in 1775." They say that the prohibitionists have created an illicit liquor business "which knows no restraint and pays no tax to the Government" but which is "directly responsible for poisonous liquor fatalities, debauchery of youth, corruption of politics and governmental machinery and much lawlessness and contempt for law in our national life." Their United States Senators who have signed this statement are Bayare, of Delaware; Bruce, of Maryland; Edge of New Jersey, and Wadsworth of New York, all from the east, you see. We find that one half of the seventeen members of the Lower House who have signed the circular come from New York and New Jersey. The Cleveland Plain Dealer, in speaking of this situation, says editorally that "The United States is to remain dry, we have no shadow of doubt." Many eminent, upright citizens seem to be enlisted in the movement to undermine the 18th amendment and their sincerity is not to be questioned. They dwell largely in certain wet centers and their vision is clouded by the evidences of law enforcement. "It would be folly to belittle their capacity for mischief; the situation is serious enough, indeed, to demand a united resistance on the part of all the friends of prohibition everywhere. The latter cannot afford now to relax effort."

When we can read such a "call to arms" as that from a paper like the Cleveland Plain Dealer we ought to redouble our diligence F. L. Dustman, editor of the "American Issue", says in referring to this Committee of Fifty:

"They are not manly and womanly enough to go straight to the point and declare for the repeal of the 18th Amendment, but content themselves with working for its nullification. To compare these members of this wet committee to the patriots who signed the Declaration of Independence would be like comparing Benedict Arnold to George Washington."

Prohibition was won over —not "put over"—and is in the Constitution to stay. The Volstead Act will not be amended by its foes. Prohibition is the will of America today.—Ohio Messenger.

Liberty Enlightening the World

This colossal work, the masterpiece of Bartholdi the French Sculptor, is the largest statue in the world. Forty persons can stand erect in the head, and fifteen can sit around the flame of the torch in the uplifted hand which is reached by a spiral staircase running up the outstretched arm. A six foot man standing on the level of the lips only reaches to the eyebrows. The weight of this giant statue is 440,000 pounds of which 176,000 pounds is copper sheets and the remaining is wrought iron. The statue was designed by Bartholdi for the French government as a gift to the United States of America in honor of the establishment of a Republic in France and stands on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor. When the statue was bro't here to be put up, the people of America were asked to raise a fund to build a suitable pedestal. The figure is over 500 feet from the ground to highest point and serves as a lighthouse to guide boats into the harbor at night, being brightly illuminated by electricity and also having spot lights concealed in the surrounding walls which are constantly focussed on the statue itself. This great figure being built entirely of metal is indestructible, and it is figured will stand for centuries. The copper which went into its sides if sold by the pound right now would produce a tidy sum and as we understand it there is no paint on the figure but it is bronze and supposed to be kept reasonably bright altho the salt breezes from the ocean are probably working chemical changes.

The writer had the privilege, Sunday, of driving over newly finished sections of M-23 and we will say that it is indeed a pleasure to see the construction work on this great highway. The country right now is beautiful and rolling along over hills and dales past lakes and scenery that is not surpassed in any other section of Michigan is sure to make this highway one of the most popular roadways for the tourist. The road is open for several miles east of the Walker tavern and from two miles west of Clinton clear to Saline. Several construction gangs are rapidly pushing the remainder of the road to completion.—Hudson Gazette.

Farmers' Day Is Big Success

Although a heavy rain fell all day, the eighth annual Farmers' Day held at the M. S. C. on Friday, July 31st, was acclaimed a huge success. Eight thousand Michigan farmers and their families attended the program which was carried out as scheduled.

While the visitation to college experimental fields and plots was curtailed when the heavy downpour came, inspection of the new college buildings and their equipment furnished a way of keeping the campus visitors out of the rain, at the same time, utilizing their time to advantage. The dynamometer horse pulling contest was held indoors directed by Wayne Dinsmore, Secretary of the Horse Association of America.

In the over 3,000 pound class, the team owned by J. C. Poskins, Lansing, won the $85 leather harness. The team had a tractional pull of 2750 pounds which was drawn the required 27 and one half feet. Second prize in this class was won by the team owned by S. Miller, Lansing; third, M. T. Davis, who came 70 miles from near Mount Pleasant; and fourth, George R. Petter, Lansing.

In the lighter class of under 3000 pound class, the second $85 harness was won by W. O'Conner, Lansing. Owners of other prize winners in order were M. Foster of East Lansing; Ed Drumheller, Bath; and Albert Hodge, Lansing $100 in cash prizes were divided among the second to fourth prize winners in each class.

Woodland Methodist church choir won the first prize of $100 in the Town and Country Church choir singing contest. Mason Baptist choir placed second, winning the $60 prize; Urbandale Methodist won the third prize of $30 and Orleans Methodist, the fourth prize of $20.

President Butterfield of the college made his first address before a summer farm gathering. He welcomed the many visitors and then briefly outlined the work the college experimental station is doing in the field of crop marketing and economics.

A farm is worth just what it produces, but what is it worth as a home? asked Samuel R. McKelvie former governor of Nebraska, who spoke in the college gymnasium. In his work for the material things in life the farmer often overlooks the value of his home, which compared with city standards, the former governor said, is worth $200 a month. He pointed out three primary essentials of modern efficient farming, the maintaining of money reserve, diversity in farming, and good marketing.

Call Meeting For Market Gardeners

Michigan market gardeners will gather at M. S. C. on Wednesday July 26 for the second annual gardeners day, according to announcement made this week by George Starr, specialist in charge of vegetable work at the college.

After inspection of the extensive experimental work being carried on in the college horticultural plats the visiting gardeners will meet in round table conference in the afternoon. Problems of the market gardener will be taken up, with members of the horticultural staff at M. S. C. leading discussion.

Varietal work to develop better strains of vegetables for the market gardener is expected to prove of particular interest. The commercial growers themselves join in the planning of these test programs, in order that the most practical phases of experimental work may be included.

Marl Digging Itinerary Dates Are Announced

With "white gold" digging demonstrations now completed in seven counties, the two teams of M. S. C. marl digging demonstrators will continue their work in counties listed below.

The demonstrations, according to Larry Livingston, extension specialist with the college agricultural engineering department are being well attended.

Crew Number 1 will carry out the following schedule in counties listed: Cass, Aug. 3, 4, 6; Berrien, Aug. 7, 8, 10; Allegan, Aug. 12, 13, 14; 17, 18, 19; 21, 22, 24; 26, 27, 28. Newago, Aug. 31, Sept, 1, 2; Sept. 4, 5, 7; 9, 10, 11. Oceana, Sept. 14, 15, 16; 18, 19, 21; 23, 24, 25. Crew Number 2 has the following schedule: Hillsdale county, Aug. 5, 6. 7; Kent, Aug. 10, 11, 12; 14, 15, 17; 18, 20 21. Montcalm Aug. 24, 25, 26; 28, 29, 31. Mecosta, Sept. 2, 3, 4; 7, 8, 9. Wexford, Sept. 11, 12, 14; 16, 17, 18; 21, 22, 23; Grand Traverse, Sept. 25, 26, 28.

Hooper Is Optimistic

Having won the republican congressional nomination at the special primary on July 21, by a plurality of more than 2,800 over his nearest competitor, Joseph L. Hooper of Battle Creek, is now actively campaigning for the election which occurrs on August 18.

"Although this is the 'off year' election and also a special election Mr. Hooper says, "I think it may be looked upon as being of extraordinary interest and importance, not only to our district but throughout the country. There have been many signs already that the whole country will be watching what the third district does, since this is one of the very few congressional elections held this year, and the result here will be judged as an evidence of whether or not the public opinion is supporting the administration and President Coolidge.

"And that is, in fact, the issue since the district makes its choice in election, between a republican and a democrat as its representative in congress. "I believe there should be a full realization of the importance of this election and that every citizen should go to the polls."

LEAPS OFF FAST TRAIN TO CATCH ESCAPING MAN

Michigan State Detective Risks Life To Capture and Bring Back Giant Negro.

This true story is just as good as fiction. It hinges around a policeman, jumping off a fast moving train right on the heels of a prisoner who had gotten away, how he chased him down the track, caught him and safely put him in irons for the remainder of the journey

Arthur Trease, a detective of the Michigan State Police, whose duty is to transfer prisoners, i. the hero, and Clarence Hicks, a parole violator from Jackson prison is the villain, as it were.

Hicks was arrested by the police at Reno, Nev., being identified as the Michigan parole violator from photographs and fingerprints mailed to all police departments by the bureau of identification of the Michigan State Police Trease was sent after him.

Hicks is a big negro, much larger than Trease Trease took the Southern Pacific route from Reno to Chicago. He had handcuffs on Hicks at all times except when they were in the dining car. when he took them off so that his prisoner could eat. After a meal just before the train reached Chicago, Trease was just in the business of replacing the cuffs on his prisoner's wrists when in one jump Hicks left the train through a door that had been left open.

Train Was Held

The train was going 40 miles an hour, but tha did not stop Trease who jumped right after his man. He took a spill upon hitting the ground, but suffered no more injury than to tear a heel from his shoe. He chased Hicks down the track for a mile before he was close enough to grab hold of his shirt and stop him. A fight followed but the negro received much the worst of it. The conductor stopped the train for 30 minutes until Trease returned with his man, who is now safely behind the bars in Jackson prison Most of the passengers on the train knew what was going on and were witnesses to the escape, the chase and capture.

Hicks was the first man to ever even nearly get away from Trease who has had a lot of police experience, serving with the Pennsylvania State Police before coming to Michigan.

Janet Church was watching about the central hall looking out for some one in whose business she could interfere, helpfully of course. Janet always wants to be helpful. When she saw Tommy at the desk of the reception office she walked over and joined him. She agreed with the head clerk that an Ausweis was necessary, and showed the one which the Berlin police had granted to her. Then she offered to take a look at Tommy's passport just to see that it was in order. It was. Tommy's mouth, nose, eyes and hair were described in the usual official style. His photograph, not in the least like him, was stuck in the proper place and duly stamped by the Foreign office. All the visas were there, as illegible as usual. But Janet raised her eyebrows in surprise. Taking Tommy by the arm she led him away from the desk.

"You'd better be careful with that passport," she said. "The German police know more than you'd think."

"But it's all right, isn't it?"

"And that's who I am."

"I don't see what good you expect to do by keeping up that pretense with me," said Janet.

"I assure you—"

"And I assure you," said Janet, "that no ordinary Irish clergyman—that's what you profess to be, isn't it?—"

"Quite ordinary," said Tommy, "not even an archdeacon."

"No ordinary clergyman, English, Scotch or Irish, would have Count Casimir calling on him the moment he arrived in Berlin. Everybody knows that Casimir is up to his neck in international plots. What would he want with an ordinary clergyman? And if you're nothing but a curate, how do you account for the way you were received at the Mascotte last night? I was there when you arrived. The whole staff simply bowed down to you and you were given the best table in the room. Everybody turned round and stared at you when you came in. The head waiter, who was drunk later on, served you himself. And that's a thing head waiters don't do in the case of ordinary curates."

"I know it looks odd," said Tommy, "but, all the same, I really am—"

"I hope for your sake," said Janet, "that the police will believe you. I don't know who you really are, and it isn't my business to find out; but if the police believe that curate story I shall be surprised. Don't you be under any mistake about the Berlin police. They'll know exactly what happened last night at the Mascotte, and in all probability they know, what I don't, exactly who you are and what you're doing in Berlin."

This made Tommy a little uneasy, but he was not seriously anxious. His passport was in perfect order. He had papers in his pocket, a check book and some letters, which ought to be enough to establish his identity. He took a cab to the police office.

He found his way after some trouble, into a small, grimy, badly overheated room. It was filled with shabby looking people, men and women of various nationalities who stood in an irregular ill-formed queue. Tommy took his place behind a smelly Polish Jew and waited. After about half an hour he found himself standing opposite a desk at which a young man in plain clothes was writing. This man was smoking a bedraggled cigarette, which looked as if he had licked it all over before lighting it. He was very badly shaved and nearly as grimy as his office. His temper, like the atmosphere of his room, was overheated.

He asked Tommy a number of questions rapidly. Tommy did not understand a word that was said to him and shook his head amiably. The young man asked his questions over again more loudly. Tommy did not understand any better than before, but he tried the experiment of saying "ja" in an agreeable tone to each question. This merely irritated the young man, so Tommy, who was beginning to learn a little German, said, "Ja, bitte schoen." Even this appeared to be unsatisfactory, and the young man was getting seriously annoyed. Tommy tried "nein," and then, aiming at politeness, "nein, danke." The young man repeated his questions in a very loud and threatening tone.

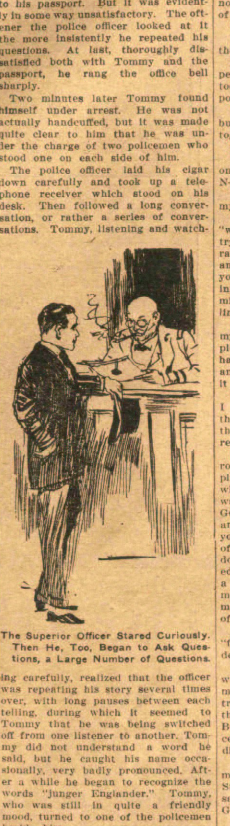
Tommy, still confident that everything must go well in the end, got out his passport and handed it across the table. It contained all the information which even the most inquisitive policeman could desire, his name, his profession, the date and place of his birth were all there. His height was stated, and the color of his eyes and the shape of his mouth and a large number of other things. It certainly seemed as if every possible question was answered.

The police officer opened the passport with a jerk of his hand and allowed the ash of his cigarette to fall on the paper in order to show his disdain of everything English. There was really very little of it he could read or understand, nor he knew no English; but he pretended to study it with a sort of contemptuous attention. Suddenly he became really alert. His eye had lit on Tommy's name, which happened to be written very legibly. He stared at it, looked at Tommy, and then began searching through a pile of documents at the side of his desk. He came on the one he wanted, opened it out beside Tommy's passport and compared the two. He took the cigarette out of his mouth and looked at Tommy with a smile of malicious triumph. He made a remark in a tone which was evidently meant to be insulting. Then he gave an order to a couple of men in uniform who stood at the door of the room. The men stepped forward, touched Tommy on the arm and motioned him to follow.

Tommy, puzzled and rather suspicious, followed the constable into an inner office. There he found himself in the presence of another police officer, evidently a man of superior rank, for he was smoking a cigar. The constable made a short report and handed over Tommy's passport. The superior officer stared curiously, then he, too, began to ask questions, a large number of questions. Tommy could neither understand nor answer. All he could do was to point to his passport. But it was evidently in some way unsatisfactory. The oftener the police officer looked at it the more insistently he repeated his questions. At last, thoroughly dissatisfied both with Tommy and the passport, he rang the office bell sharply.

Two minutes later Tommy found himself under arrest. He was not actually handcuffed, but it was made quite clear to him that he was under the charge of two policemen who stood one on each side of him.

The police officer laid his cigar down carefully and took up a telephone receiver which stood on his desk. Then followed a long conversation, or rather a series of conversations. Tommy, listening and watching carefully, realized that the officer was repeating his story several times over, with long pauses between each telling, during which it seemed to Tommy that he was being switched off from one listener to another. Tommy did not understand a word he said, but he caught his name occasionally, very badly pronounced. After a while he began to recognize the words "junger Englander." Tommy, who was still in quite a friendly mood, turned to one of the policemen beside him.



The Superior Officer Stared Curiously. Then He, Too, Began to Ask Questions, a Large Number of Questions.

"It's a pity," he said, "that he doesn't try broadcasting. That must be the fifth time he's told his story."

After the police officer had talked into his telephone for half an hour, he gave an order to his two men and Tommy was led off. They shut him up in a small inner room and left him there. Tommy began to feel slightly annoyed, but was not in the least frightened. It was evident that the hotel clerk had been wrong in saying that the police proceedings are merely formal, and Janet Church right when she warned him that he was likely to have a great deal of trouble before he got permission to stay in Berlin.

When Tommy had been incarcerated for about an hour he was taken out and put in a taxi. His two guards went with him. They were perfectly civil, but they never took their eyes off him for an instant.

The cab stopped opposite an immense, floridly decorated doorway. Tommy was led through it, into what seemed to be a public office. He was conducted along a corridor, taken up an elevator, led along two other corridors and finally with immense ceremony, ushered into a very handsomely furnished office.

A tall, fierce-looking man, elderly, grizzled and most imperfectly shaved, sat at a large table covered with papers. He was evidently a person of great importance and Tommy took a good look at him. His short gray hair stood upright on his head like the bristles of a brush. There were large rolls of fat on his neck. Tommy did not know it till afterward, but he was in the presence of the Prince von Steinveldt, head of the German ministry for the control of aliens.

"You speak not German good," said Von Steinveldt stiffly.

"I don't speak it at all," said Tommy, "except 'ja,' 'nein,' 'heisz wasser' and 'bitte schoen,' I don't believe I know a single word. It's a great relief to me to hear you talk English. You can't imagine how I've been worried all the morning by people asking me questions which I couldn't understand. If there's anything you really want to know, I'll be delighted to tell you provided you ask in English."

"Your name?"

"Norreys," said Tommy, "Rev. Thomas A. Norreys, M. A. T. C. D."

"Ach, so?"

"Yes," said Tommy pleasantly, "just so. I see you've got my passport there. If you look at it you'll see my photograph. My nose is of normal size, my face oval, my eyes of a bluish color—"

"So?"

"Exactly so," said Tommy, and then waited.

The German referred to some papers which lay before him and then took another look at Tommy's passport.

"Your name," he said, "is Norreys, but it is here in the passport not altogether rightly spelled."

"Here," said the German, tapping one of his own papers, "I your name N-o-r-h-e-y-s spelled find. Not true?"

"Not in the least true," said Tommy.

"Herr Marquis," said the German, "we are of your coming to this country and of your plan for the restoration of the monarchy of Lystria and of the so-deep-gripping plots of your minister of Balkan affairs good informed. The police Ausweis permitting you longer to remain in Berlin will not ge-granted be."

"I suppose you know," said Tommy, "that all that rigmarole about plots and monarchies and marquises has nothing whatever to do with me, and my name is spelled exactly as it is on my passport."

"The in English so-called bluff do I most perfectly understand," said the German. "Within the borders of the German state may you no longer remain."

"That," said Tommy, "is a bit rough on me. I came over here simply to get rid of a lot of your money which I happened to have. I don't want to say anything insulting to Germany or to hurt your feelings in any way, but you must know that your money isn't very highly thought of anywhere else in the world. I don't suppose the most unsophisticated South Sea islander would give you a coconut for a whole sackful of marks. If you turn me out of Germany I don't see how I am to get rid of that money at all."

"In Germany," said Von Steinveldt, "for you to remain is strongly forbidden."

Tommy had begun to feel irritated with the ridiculously pompous old man who sat before him. He had tried to annoy him by speaking of the worthlessness of German marks. But the attempt had not been a success. He tried again. This time a different taunt.

"Very well," he said, "if you expel me from Germany, I shall go to Strasburg and make a tour of Alsace and Lorraine. They're not in Germany any longer, you know."

"To cross the frontier," said Von Steinveldt, "is without the police Ausweis entirely impossible."

Tommy thought this over carefully for a minute and then realized the absurdity of the position.

"You say I can't stay in Berlin?" he said.

"Anywhere in Germany," said Von Steinveldt, "is for you strongly forbidden."

"To cross the frontier without the police Ausweis impossible is."

"So far as I can see," said Tommy, "the only thing left for me to do is to fade away gradually like the Cheshire cat in "Alice in Wonderland," and I can't do that. The only kind of man I ever heard of who could do that is a Mahatma, with an astral body, and I'm not one. But I dare say you're simply making what you believe to be a joke. I always heard that German jokes are a bit difficult to see."

Made Lonely Journey

A woman farmer in a lonely part of South Africa, Mrs. Ida Francis, has just shown that in luck and endurance British women settlers are not behind the men.

About two months ago a cyclone devastated her farm, which lies beyond the western fringe of the desolate Kalahari desert; and then came floods which destroyed the food and shelter for her cattle. The only way to save her animals was to drive them 400 miles across the desert to her son's farm, and this she did, unaided.

She found that many of the water holes in the desert had dried up, and sometimes she had to ward off attacks by lions with her rifle; but she kept steadily on, and in the end brought nearly all her charges through safely.—Family Herald.

The kindly old squire was giving a little treat to the village school children. After tea he stepped onto the platform and announced with a beaming smile:

"Now, I am going to perform certain actions, and you must guess what proverb they represent. The boy or girl who succeeds first will receive a shilling."

That did it. Instantly every eye was fixed on him. First of all, the old gentleman lay down on the platform. Then one man came forward and tried to lift him. Two others came to his aid and between them they raised the squire, who was rather portly.

The actions were meant to represent the motto, "Union is strength."

When they had finished the squire stepped forward and asked if any child had solved the puzzle.

At once a grubby hand shot up and an eager voice squeaked: "Let sleeping dogs lie."—Pearson's Weekly.

Not a Bad Ambition

A minor ambition of mine is to pass a whole day without thinking an unkind thought about anybody.—Arnold Bennett.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Cadillac—The gift of 2,000 acres near the city for development and use as a municipal forest preserve, recently offered by the Cummer Diggins Lumber Company, has been accepted by the city commission.

Lansing—Plans are under way for the construction of a 10-foot fence, topped with overhanging barbed wire, on the walls of the state's branch penitentiary at Marquette as a precaution against prison breaks.

Muskegon—The Muskegon Traction & Lighting Co. has purchased the property of the Muskegon Heights Gas Co. The price is understood to have been $100,000. The one plant will serve both Muskegon and Muskegon Heights in the future.

Jackson—W. A. Castle, a farmer living near Horton, is a virtual millionaire following the discovery of a bed of marl testing 96 per cent, covering an area of 35 acres on his farm. The value of the deposit which is 15 feet deep, is estimated at over a $1,000,000.

Kalamazoo—Two well-dressed boy bandits held up the Dixie oil station on East Main street and escaped with cash amounting to $48.62. William Sturn, the attendant, was alone at the time. The youth covered him with their revolvers, grabbed all cash in sight and disappeared in the darkness.

Clawson—A new bank, to serve the communities of Clawson, Big Beaver, and other places along the Rochester road, is being organized in Clawson with $25,000 capital stock subscribed and a $2,500 surplus. It is to be called the Clawson State Savings bank and will be located in a new building in the heart of Clawson.

Pontiac—Pontiac's school census, just completed, reveals 9,651 persons of school age in the city, an increase of 941 over last year. Although a junior high school, new grade school and additions on two other grade schools have been completed this year, a congestion is anticipated in September and temporary school buildings will be used.

Lansing—Laxity of methods used by the Detroit Police Traffic school, in issuing automobile drivers' licenses, was scored by Charles J. DeLand, secretary of state, who said it was too easy to obtain licenses in Detroit. Secretary DeLand urged uniform traffic laws throughout the state and vigorous prosecution of drunken and reckless drivers.

Mt. Clemens—H. Stevens, a visitor here from Chicago, was killed by a bolt of lightning on the golf links of the Clinton Valley Golf club, seven miles south of the city. He was playing the game with several friends when a sudden downpour of rain caused him to seek shelter under a tree and the lightning struck the tree, killing Stevens instantly.

Monroe—Orva Jackson, sergeant of the state police, who since March has been stationed at the South Rockwood barracks, will take charge of the Clinton river district, to be located near Mt. Clemens. Corporal William Katka, now at Dundee, together with two troopers, will be transferred to South Rockwood. The Dundee post is to be abandoned, though two men will be detailed daily to that place.

Albion—The Albion Bolt Company, which recently paid the maximum fine of $100 for polluting the Kalamazoo River, will not be permitted to continue its alleged practice of dumping acid into the river, according to the state department of conservation. John Baird, director, stated that an injunction would be sought, not only against the Albion Bolt Company but other concerns in similar practices if the offense was repeated.

Lansing—Convinced after reading a transcript of the testimony taken at the trial of James Allen, a lifer at the State Branch prison at Marquette, convicted in the Recorders' Court, June, 1919, of first degree murder, that his conviction was not justified by the evidence, Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck has decided to give him an unconditional release. Allen will leave the prison a free man as soon as papers for his discharge reach Warden Corgan.

Lansing—Receipts from the two cent gasoline tax enacted by the 1925 legislature set a new high mark for the month of June when they reached $934,347, according to figures made public by the department of state. Of the $934,347, some $55,769 represents tax which will be rebated, leaving a net revenue for the month of $868,578. The previous high figure was reached in June, when $779,000 was the net total. The income from the tax has gained steadily since its enactment early in February.

Clare—One man was instantly killed, another probably fatally injured, and about 12 others were shaken up and bruised when a northbound Ann Arbor Railroad passenger train ran into a south-bound freight train at the Lake George station, 18 miles northwest of here. The passenger train was derailed and both locomotives were demolished. Martin M. Ensfield, 65 years old, of Cadillac, roadmaster, who was riding in the engine of the passenger train, was crushed in the wreckage and died instantly.

Pontiac—Gasoline car service on the Grand Trunk railroad between Pontiac and Richmond will be started as an experiment August 17, it was announced here.

Lansing—Arthur Rogers, a restaurant keeper, was shot and killed by one of two bandits, who escaped in a large motor car. Report of the tragedy was received at police headquarters from a patrolman on his beat.

Hastings—Aiming a pistol at a turtle he saw beside the road, Eric Finstrom pulled the trigger and fired, but the bullet struck his companion, Edward Benedict, 48 years old, barber, of this city. Benedict is in a serious condition.

Manistee—Arnold T. Graves, 29 year old, the missing treasurer of Manistee County, in whose office a shortage was found, has returned to Manistee. He is expected to turn in his resignation. No warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Monroe—Between 4,500 and 5,000 persons, many from Detroit, attended the festival given for the benefit of the Old Folks Home Association, connected with the Misouri Lutheran Synod, held on the grounds of the institution in Monroetown.

Detroit—While making an inspection tour of his mining properties in Mexico, John A. Broad, Detroit civil and mining engineer, was killed near Guadalajara in an accident, according to word received by his family here. He was 40 years old.

Sturgis—Pending settlement as to which one of them is city attorney, J. Paul Wait and Roy H. Hagerman are preparing to take care of the city interests in a suit filed by an engineering company for money due them on a storm sewer they laid here this summer.

Lansing—Presentation of a regimental flag to the 119th field artillery was made by the Lansing Kiwanis club. The presentation speech was made by Charles H. Hayden and the flag was received by Colonel Joseph Lewis, commander of of the organization.

Muskegon—The Muskegon Chamber of Commerce and the Muskegon Employers' Association announced that a joint meeting of Muskegon manufacturers and merchants would be held in the near future to discuss plans for providing further safeguards against bandits. The action follows the $32,900 payroll robbery at the Lakey Foundry Co. plant here recently.

Detroit—A bride, a child and an aviator burned to death when the airplane in which they were flying crashed to earth a mile east of Mt. Clemens road, near Town Hall road, just outside Packard flying field. They were Mrs. Violet Fleming, 20 years old, married just seven months ago to John Fleming, real estate operator and former army aviator; Evelyn Herzog, 10 years old, and Milton Stein, 24 years old, pilot of the plane.

Port Huron—"Collie," a big collie dog, owned by Bruce Harris, who keeps a general store in Lakeport, 10 miles north of Port Huron, has joined the ranks of the dog heroes. When two men entered the store and held up Mrs. Harris at the point of a pistol, they failed to notice Collie. They were about to help themselves to the contents of the cash drawer when Collie made an assault. The men escaped, minus a portion of their clothing.

Centerville—Arrested on a charge of impersonating an officer, Gordon Pierce, of Jones, was fined $35 after being allowed to plead guilty to misconduct. Pierce arrested a number of motorists at White Pigeon pending negotiations with the village council for his appointment as a traffic officer. Sheriff Guy Clipfel refused to appoint him as a deputy. Pierce told the court members of the White Pigeon council said it would be all right for him to act pending the appoinmtent.

Lansing — Criminal investigation may be started in a number of instances as a result of the investigation by the Attorney-General's office of the alleged high-handed methods of a number of petty officials throughout the state in dealing with motorists. The work and money being expended by state and tourist bureaus to exploit Michigan as a "summer playground" is a losing race against the tactics of many minor law officers, E. C. Converse, of the state's legal department, said.

Marshall—Brown hospital here has been opened after 19 years of tedious litigation and work on the part of 15 women constituting the Ella M. Brown Charitable Circle, organized after the death of Charles P. Brown as a memorial to his wife. Brown left an estate of $42,000 and specified the income was to be used in maintaining the hospital. Charles L. Dibble, an attorney, donated the mansion of his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William J. Dibble, an old landmark of historical nature, for the hospital.

Port Huron—Sanilac county people, residing along the line of the Detroit, Sandusky & Caro railroad, are jubilant over the prospect of mail service on this railroad as the result of a visit which E. C. Jeffries, chief clerk of the railway mail service, Detroit division, has promised to make over this line. Service has been refused on the grounds that the railroad provides no express or passenger service, but the officials of the railroad have promised to put on that service if mail contracts can be obtained also.

Sault Ste. Marie—Sending $3,000 in $20 bills to his mother in this city, A. Kingsley Harris, absconding teller of the Central Savings bank at Sault Ste. Marie, declared in a letter that "I now realize what a fool I was," and vowed to repay to the last cent the $4,100 which he took from his cage at the bank July 21 and walked out, escaping in the automobile of an innocent friend who was making a trip to Milwaukee. Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Harris, parents of the young man left by motor for Boston in an effort to locate him and bring him back.

Delve Into Secrets of Mound Builders

Secrets of the prehistoric race of mound builders, whose culture is declared to be distinct from that of any other type hitherto investigated in Oklahoma, will be plumbed by an archeological expedition to Grove, Delaware county.

The contents of the mound can only be conjectured, but an indication of what might be found in the cave was given in the discovery of remnants of prehistoric life in an outer chamber that has been explored. The mouth of the cave apparently was sealed after its abandonment many centuries ago. It was reopened and a large deposit of wood ashes, charcoal, bones of game animals, mussel shells and other kitchen refuse was found on the floor near the entrance. An extensive collection of bone and flint implements also was discovered, together with many fragments of pottery.—Detroit News.

Copy American Methods

In Mandalay the first agricultural college of Burma was opened last December. It has a farm of 600 acres. There will be instruction for 84 students in a four-year course. Practical work will include the selecting of seed, especially rice, beans, cotton and sugar cane, the study of plant diseases, the improvement of silk culture and the building up of a pure pedigreed herd of Burmese cattle. At the opening the minister of agriculture said: "We cannot in Burma aspire to the gigantic farm activities of America, but we can in a humble way imitate their methods and endeavor to achieve in some measure their results."

Great Temperance Apostle

Father Mathew was Theobald Mathew, apostle of temperance, born in Tipperary, Ireland, studied for the Catholic priesthood, but joined the Capuchin Minorites; was in 1814 ordained a priest and located in Cork, where at sight of the cruel effects of drunkenness on the mass of the people he resolved on a crusade to stamp it out; he started on this enterprise in 1827, but it took a year and a half before his mission bore any fruit, and then it was accompanied with marvelous success wherever he went. He lived from 1790 to 1856.

His Probable Fate

"The mules run away yiste'dy and throwed my baby, Rowdy, out, and the wheel run smack over his head," in the crossroads store announced Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge.

"Hurt him much?" asked an acquaintance.

"Only just tollable, but it widened his mouth out right sharply and like to have squanched his head plumb out of shape. I swear, I believe he's dead shore to go to the legislature when he grows up."—Kansas City Times.

Census of Insects

A census of insects resident in and visiting the United States has been undertaken by the Department of Agriculture. It is to include the careers, habits, and conditions of life of foreign-born, naturalized, and indigenous species in the hope that accurate forecasts may be made of what experts term "entomological cycles."

Dear Dick—
Just arrived home and the trip thru the mountains was wonderful. I found the rough country entirely different than rolling over boulevards.
The first day of hard going I used double the oil and at the advice of a garage man changed to a heavy duty oil called Mona Motor.
We didnt have to worry about oil and the motor worked fine. From now on nothing goes into the old boat but Mona Motor.
Hope you can go with us next time as Mabel is anxious to show you the sights.

LOCAL OFFICERS USE FINGERPRINT EXPERTS

Sheriffs and other local officials are using the services of the state's fingerprint experts from the Department of Public Safety at Lansing more and more. In June there were 25 requests for men to be sent out to assist criminal investigations.

An unusual case was one where burglars had entered a clergyman's residence, stolen the communion wine and drank it in the yard. Their finger prints were found on the bottles.

An average of more than 300 identifications a month is made by the identification bureau at Lansing. Under a new law all local officials making requests are required to send fingerprints to the state bureau. It often develops that persons arrested in one county are wanted for crime in another.

PRESIDENT GIVES PRAISE

President Coolidge has expressed his commendation of the work of the Maryland State Police who have formed his escort on several occasions while traversing that state. It will be recalled that President Roosevelt was also an active friend of the State Police idea.

"The aid received from the Michigan Department of Public Safety saved Iron county thousands of dollars, which would have been required to bring this prosecution to a successful termination," said Prosecutor A. J. Waffen following the conviction of Axel Nygard for the murder of Z[illegible]und Zyskowski, Iron River pool room proprietor.

The Michigan State Police, under the direction of Lieut. Fred Bedard, took an active part in the investigation which resulted in Nygard's arrest and subsequent confession.

The murder case was one of the most eventful and spectacular in the annals of Iron county circuit court. It was 13 months after the pool room was entered, five men held up, and the proprietor shot, before the slayer was caught.

Proof of the old saying that a guilty conscience will betray itself was present in the trial, for Nygard contributed heavily to his own conviction. When cross-examined over crucial matters by the prosecution he collapsed and was assisted from the stand, a development, that in the minds of the jurors, was translated into the result of the burden of guilt.

The schools must teach our young people so to manage their own personal affairs as to insure that they will lead lives that have an economic worth to society and to themselves. Business must provide plans for its workers to enable them not only to earn but also to save so that the teaching of the schools will not prove an illusion in practice. Do these things and we will have no pauperism in America. Neglect to do them and we will ultimately develop pauperism,—a nation's worst social crime.

Lost—A Ladies' Grey Wool Coat for spring and fall somewhere between North Adams and four miles north of Moscow toward Jackson. Finder return to Wyman Stott. North Adams. 11t1

Remember the annual Home-Coming of the Knowles district in Moscow which occurs Thursday, August 20th and an invitation is extended to every patron, teacher or pupil past or present, to be present.

Mr. Patrick an old man living west of Churches corners, fell from the hay mow in the barn on Monday August 10 and broke his shoulder blade and some ribs. Dr. McFarland was called and made the sufferer as comfortable as possible. He is doing as well as could be expected.

Keith Williams who went to Kentucky to work for Contractor Hoffman on road construction, met with a painful accident the first of the week. The gang was unloading a tractor when Mr. Williams foot was caught and crushed under the heavy machine. He was obliged to return home and is being treated by Dr. McFarland.

The New Jackson Electric Line

The new electric line being projected by the Consumers Power Company of Jackson by the way of Cement City, North Adams and Hillsdale, is well on its way, the line being surveyed clear through and the work of setting poles is rapidly nearing North Adams on the line of the New York Central tracks The railroad will be followed to the B. I. Lynch property north of the village, thence across the lands of George Walworth just east of the corporate limits of this village, thence south to the end of the road, and west by south into Hillsdale.

Poles, cable and insulators are at present on the ground in this village, and judging from all appearances this will be a first-class line. The poles are heavy, the terra cotta vitreous insulators remind one of spittoons, and the cable is half inch braided copper.

The voltage will run into the thousands and Avis & Son report that no stepping down will be done except on long term contracts. At last Hillsdale county is to be electrified!

SPECIAL ELECTION

Notice is hereby given that a special election will be held in the Township of Adams at the Town Hall in the village of North Adams in said township, county of Hillsdale, state of Michigan on Tuesday, August 18th, A. D. 1925, for the purpose of electing a Representative in Congress from the Third Congressional District of Michigan to fill vacancy caused by the death of Arthur B. Williams whose term of office expired on the 4th day of March, A. D., 1927. The polls of said election will be open at 7 o'clock a. m. and shall remain open until 5 o'clock p. m. of said day of election unless the Board of Election Inspectors shall, in their discretion, adjourn the polls at 12 o'clock noon, for one hour.

WELL ONE DAY IN BED THREE

That Was the Life of Mrs. Hollister Until she Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wyandotte, Michigan. — "After my baby was born I did not do my own work for six months and could hardly take care of my own baby. I always had a pain in my right side and it was so bad I was getting round shoulders. I would feel well one day and then feel so bad for three or four days that I would be in bed. One Sunday my mother came to see how I was, and she said a friend told her to tell me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So the next day I got a bottle and before it was half taken I got relief. After I was well again I went to the doctor and he asked me how I was getting along. I told him I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and he said it did not hurt any one to take it. I am always recommending the Vegetable Compound to others and I always have a bottle of it on hand."—Mrs. HENRY HOLLISTER, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 7, Wyandotte, Mich.

Tip for Campers

It is useful to campers to know that pails in which greasy water is thrown may be kept clean by rinsing them with a cupful of gasoline, which can be drawn from the automobile.

WHY SHOULD ANYONE SUFFER WITH INDIGESTION OR ANY STOMACH MISERY?

If you want to fix up your dyspeptic, out of order stomach so that you can relish what you eat with not the least bit of after distress, do what tens of thousands of people have already done.

Getting rid of gas, bloating, belching, heaviness and that feeling of near suffocation isn't such a hard matter as you may think—You've been getting hold of the wrong medicine—that's all.

But better late than never—ask your druggist for a bottle of Dare's Mentha Pepsin—a real stomach medicine and a very pleasant one. For acute indigestion one or two doses is enough, but when the trouble is chronic, two or three bottles may be needed to put your disordered stomach in good healthy condition and make life worth living.

Making a start is the main thing, so why not get one bottle today with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't help you the purchase price will be returned.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Flint—Although she drank a pint of gasoline 20-months-old Helen Parthra will recover, it was predicted. A stomach pump was used to save her life.

Grand Rapids—Dr. P. M. Olin, state health commissioner, has notified city officials he will object to any delay in completion of the municipal sewage disposal project now under way.

Cadillac—A woman's auxiliary to the Michigan Rural Carriers' Association, with Mrs. Fannie Coons, of Lowell, as president, was formed here during the carriers' annual convention.

Houghton—The village of Hubbell, with its principal street almost on the banks of Portage Lake, has an acute water shortage. The village gets its drinking water from wells which were discovered to be almost dry.

Kalamazoo—It took nearly five years for the Postoffice Department to deliver to William Tisdale, now county clerk of Allegan county, a letter that was mailed from this city to his home in Saugatuck, Dec. 21, 1921.

Jackson—Aug. 13, 14 and 15 will mark the passing of the teachers' examinations in Michigan, as the last examinations will be held on these dates, under a law passed some time ago, which does away with such examinations Sept. 1 of this year and requires a year of professional training instead.

Port Huron—J. A. MacTaggart and Newton company, accountants and auditors, who just have completed the audit of the city accounts, report that there would have been a deficit in the city's general fund at the close of the fiscal year if current bills and temporary loans amounting to more than $60,000 had been paid.

Grand Rapids—Reports of 21 automobile accidents in Grand Rapids in one day, together with the fact that there have been 18 fatalities in automobile accidents since Jan. 1, and more than 3,000 accidents recorded during that time, caused City Manager Fred H. Locke, to issue orders to Superintendent of Police A. A. Carroll to strictly enforce the speed laws in the loop district.

Jackson—Police have arrested 18 boys ranging in age from 11 to 15 years, alleging that in the last several months the boys have caused damage amounting to hundreds of dollars to the property of the New York Central Railway and the Cincinnati Northern. It is alleged that the boys have been shooting insulators from telegraph and telephone poles, breaking lights, and attempting to wreck trains by placing ties, chains and iron bars on the tracks.

Jackson—J. N. Hemphill, of Kansas City, Mo., who had been driving continuously for 60 hours on his way to attend a convention in Detroit, accompanied by his wife and baby, went to sleep at the wheel of his car on M-17, east of Jackson, and the car plunged through a guard rail and into a six-foot ditch. Mrs. Hemphill and the baby were hurled through the windshield and were cut and bruised, but were not seriously injured and the driver escaped injury entirely.

Grand Rapids—Department of Justice investigations in the district of Western Michigan now are being handled entirely out of Chicago, it was disclosed by District Attorney Edward J. Bowman. So far as local government authorities are aware this means the abolition of the bureau of the Department of Justice maintained in this city for years. Under the new arrangements Bowman is obliged to appeal to the Chicago office each time he desires an investigation in connection with a Federal case.

Jackson—Affidavits said to contain damaging evidence against several local city officials were in possession of James Frank, former newspaper publisher, for presentation to the the grand jury. Prosecuting Attorney John Simpson demanded the affidavits from Frank. He says he is the proper person to present them but Frank refused to surrender them. Malfeasance and misconduct in office and several other serious charges are to be brought against officials and private individuals, it was reported.

Jackson—The purchase by the Jackson county board of supervisors of five parcels of land as lake sites for parks, adds to the chain of county parks planned, a total area of 31 1-2 acres with a shore line of more than 2,000 feet. A site at Clark lake, purchased several weeks ago, was the first step made in the plan for a chain of lake parks. A 12-acre tract on Vineyard lake, six acres at Clear lake, eight acres at Pleasant lake, two and one-half acres on Big Wolf lake, and three acres on Gillett's lake will be the new park sites.

Detroit—The purchase of the Stout Metal Airplane company by the Ford Motor company has been officially announced. The action is in harmony with the company's policy of playing a lone hand. The way is now opened for the Fords to push their aeronautical research as they see fit, without being retarded by a variety of opinions on the necessity of explaining their point of view to committees or stockholders. The financial consideration was not made known, but it is estimated that the amount involved will reach $1,000,000.

Lansing—Fred B. Perry, secretary of the State Administrative Board, has been sent to Washington to negotiate with the United States Shipping Board for the purchase of a Government steamer of a type suitable for reconstruction into an automobile ferry like the two vessels which the state is now operating between Mackinaw City and St. Ignace. Traffic across the Straits has grown so fast during the past month, it was reported that the two units of the State's ferry squadron have been unable to meet the demands.

Iron Mountain—Deer are so plentiful in this section of the state this year that farmers of the upper peninsula have complained of damage to crops.

L'Anse—The village treasury is richer by $36,000 following payment of that amount in taxes by the Ford Motor Company. A portion of the amount was for a sewer tax levy. Ford pays two-thirds of the taxes here.

Bay City—Theodore VanWert, 18, was killed instantly, his brother Arthur, 15, was paralyzed and sister, Loretta, 17, was temporarily blinded by a bolt of lightning that struck them while they were working in a potato field.

Kalamazoo—A robber who held a revolver against her side while he attempted to take her purse was routed by the screams of Miss Terva Hope. The police were unable to find a trace of the young man, apparently about 20 years old and fashionably dressed.

Lawton—Grape prices will be higher this year than at any time since 1920, it is announced at the local plant of the Welch Grape Juice Co. With the crop estimated at only about 25 per cent of normal, growers expect the quotation will rise to $100 a ton, almost double the price paid last fall.

Benton Harbor—Clarence Darrow, Chicago criminal lawyer and counsel for the defense in the recent Scopes evolution case at Dayton, Tenn., was elected president of the Michicago Field Club at a meeting of the directors here. The Michicago Field Club is a golf club organized by Benton Harbor and Chicago men.

Jackson—Circuit Judge James A. Parkinson has announced he would call a grand jury of 24 persons, at a later date to inquire into alleged criminal acts and mis-carriages of justice within the county. The decision of Judge Parkinson followed several weeks of study of allegations contained in numerous affidavits.

Lansing—Arrests in Lansing for the month of July showed a large increase over the same month last year, the monthly report revealed. During the month just closed 567 arrests were made, as against only 382 last year. More than 200 of the arrests were for traffic violations, and of these 159 were made in one night, when a surprise drive was launched.

Muskegon — The Grand Rapids, Grand Haven & Muskegon Railway Co., the one interurban line in Michigan not in the hands of a receiver, is carrying the fight to the bus lines. In an effort to compete with the bus lines, which the company officials say is driving the interurban out of business, rates have been slashed and special inducements made to obtain patrons.

Port Huron—The city of Port Huron has protested officially to the federal sanitary authorities at Chicago against the government dredges, at work in the channel near the lighthouse, of dumping earth into the river channel above the intake pipe of the city water works. The practice has roiled the city water and has made it necessary to use an unusual amount of chlorine, it is claimed.

Jackson—Having discovered some of the property of her late husband, as well as $1,500 which he had deposited in a Pittsburgh, Pa., bank, Mrs. Christian Neilson of this city awaited information from Iowa, where she believes her husband had vast estates. According to stories that her husband told her, he had property valued at from $300,000 to $500,000 in Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota.

Flint — Immediately after having been informed that a Port Huron relative had bequeathed him a gasoline station as a legacy, Earl Brooks, a Flint traffic policeman, drove his machine to police headquarters and there left a note to Inspector John MacDonald, head of the traffic bureau, informing the latter he had resigned. The ex-officer then hurried from the station to go to Port Huron to take charge of his new business.

Otisville—The Otisville State Bank which was closed by the State Banking Commission following a discovery of a shortage of $52,000 in the accounts of Arthur Prosser, cashier, has re-opened its doors for business again. G. Knickerbocker, state bank examiner, and W. W. Lyons, of Armada, a stockholder, were in charge when the bank re-opened. No successor has yet been named to succeed Prosser, who is now serving a term in Jackson prison.

Ann Arbor—Michigan's new university hospital will be opened officially August 10, when the "out patient" service will be moved from the old buildings into the new structures, according to an announcement by Dr. Harley A. Haynes, director. Patients also will be admitted from the "out patient" service to the wards beginning on that date, Dr. Haynes said, and other patients will be moved within the following few days, at which time operating room service will be established.

Battle Creek—Intimation that Battle Creek college has in mind an expansion program that will make the school "second only to the University of Michigan," was given the community by Dr. Paul F. Voelker, president of the college, in a talk to the Rotary club. At present the school is a combination of the Kellogg School of Physical Education, the Sanitarium School for Nurses and the School of Home Economics. Dr. Voelker suggested that it would become one of the finest schools of liberal arts in the country.

Port Huron—The first radio fog-signal station to be installed on the Great Lakes has been placed on the Lake Huron Lightship, at a point immediately north of Port Huron. This radio beacon, a measure of safety for navigation, is the fore-runner of five other like installations that are to be made on the Great Lakes by the lighthouse service of the United States Department of Commerce. The station, second of its kind to use a vacuum-tube transmitter, has been assigned the signal characteristic of a group of three telegraphic dashes.

BELGIANS IN U. S. TO DISCUSS DEBT

New York.—Former Premier Theunis of Belgium, and three other delegates, appointed by the Belgian government to settle the problem of the debt consolidation with the World war foreign debt commission, arrived here on the Olympic.

They declined to be interviewed until they had communicated with the debt-funding commission at Washington, with whom they will negotiate for a settlement of Belgium's war debt to the United States. They were accompanied by four financial experts and a secretary general.

In addition to former Premier Theunis, the delegates were Baron de Cartier, Belgian ambassador to the United States; Emile Francqui and Felicien Cattier. The accompanying experts are Messrs. Vincent, Warland, Boet and Baron Terlinden; also Robert Silvercruys, who served at the Belgian embassy at Washington for several years and is the secretary general of the delegation.

The commission left for Washington. It was accompanied by William Phillips, American ambassador to Belgium, and Garrard Winston, assistant secretary of the Treasury, whose special province is war debts.

Tokyo.—Hundreds of Japanese and American friends of the late Ambassador Edgar A. Bancroft viewed the body here as it lay in the procathedral, after having arrived by special train from Karuizawa, where the ambassador died on July 28.

The body was brought here on a special train provided by the Japanese government and was escorted by military and naval attaches from the United States embassy.

The body, which will sail for the United States on the Japanese cruiser Tama, will be accompanied by Lieutenant-Commander H. R. Hein, naval attache at the embassy.

"United States Highways" Will Span the Nation

Washington.—Fifty thousand miles of roads, honeycombing the United States from the Canadian border to the Gulf coast and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, were selected by the joint board of interstate highways as "United States highways" to be designated with uniform road markers.

Actual grouping of these roads into main arterial highways was abandoned by the full committee and turned over to a subcommitte, which, after making tentative designations, will submit recommendations to the various states for approval.

Rhode Island's Richest Girl Calls Off Wedding

Providence, R. I.—Announcement was made by Mrs. Frank A. Sayles of Pawtucket, mother of Miss Nancy Sayles, Rhode Island's richest girl, that the marriage of her daughter to Lieut. Ernesto Ladinelli Becci of Rome, Italy's assistant secretary of the interior, has been postponed indefinitely.

Gotham's Population Cut

New York.—New York city's population on July 1 was less than 6,000,000, according to unofficial estimates. The borough of Manhattan since the last census lost 250,000, the loss being attributed mainly to restriction on immigration.

Chinese Raid Hospital

Peking. — The Church Missionary hospital at Hangchow was raided by a Chinese mob, according to dispatches reaching here.

IN CHARGE AT TOKYO

Underwood

Edward L. Neville, first secretary of the American embassy in Tokyo, is now the United States charge d'affaires in Japan, carrying on in place of Edgar Addison Bancroft, the American ambassador who died suddenly July 28. Mr. Neville, formerly in the State department in Washington, went to Tokyo only last fall.

FRENCH FIND FOE IN ANCIENT FORT

Fez, French Morocco.—A gigantic fortress from which the minions of Abd-el-Krim, rebel chieftain, issue forth to murder and lay waste hostile villages has been discovered by French troops.

This stronghold is midway between Fez and Ouezzan. It is approximately 300 feet high and the walls are extremely thick and in a wonderful state of preservation. The interior is about 300x600 feet. The fortification has sheltered as many as 800 Riffian warriors, who organize there for raids.

It was built in the Seventeenth century by the Portuguese when that nation was a power in North Africa. Small artillery would be useless against it and to take it by assault would prove a costly operation.

The French army threw a squadron of tanks into the battle area in the north and northwest sections and in the Asejen range completely routed the Riffian enemy from a strongly fortified position.

At Asejen the enemy were completely taken aback by the sight of the tanks and after a brief resistance fled, leaving sixty of their dead upon the ground.

Several planes are reported to be operating from the Riffian bases, which makes good the threat of Abd-el-Krim that he would soon be in possession of aircraft.

Spanish Dictator Offers Peace Terms to Riffians

Madrid. — The Spanish dictator, Primo de Rivera, has offered peace terms to Abd-el Krim, it became known here. The dictator is acting for both the Spanish and French governments. Krim sent two envoys from Tangier to the Spanish headquarters to receive the peace terms, and thes terms were sent from Tangier to Krim's capital, Adjir.

Biggest Still in Gotham Raided by Federal Agents

New York.—Police and federal authorities raided the largest illicit whisky-making plant discovered here since prohibition. In a subterranean cave many feet beneath a garage in Mulberry street, the raiders found a plant having a daily capacity of 12,000 gallons. Four alcohol stills, five costly delivery cars and other accessories taken in the raid are valued at more than $100,000.

U. S. Accepts Ford Bid of $1,706,000 for 200 Ships

Washington.—Formal announcement was made by the shipping board of the acceptance of the cash bid of $1,706,000 submitted by Henry Ford for 200 steel vessels to be dismantled and scrapped. The scrapping will include all engines, boilers and auxiliaries.

France Pays $10,000,000 to U. S. for War Goods

Washington.—The French government has paid to the United States another $10,000,000 interest on the $400,000,000 owed for war supplies, it was announced here.

The payment has no connection with the war debt owed to the United States by France.

U. S. Has Fewer Employees

Washington.—There are now 63,756 government employees in Washington, the smallest number since the war, it was announced. In June the total was reduced 855.

Fire Causes $100,000 Loss

Sioux City, Iowa.—Ten locomotives were virtually ruined in a fire which destroyed a section of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad roundhouse at North Riverside. The fire was started by the explosion of a "fire-up" gun.

Secretary Jardine in Hospital

Washington.—Secretary Jardine entered a hospital here. He is ill with a stomach disorder, but his condition is said not to be serious.

MINERS PREPARE TO STRIKE SEPT. 1

Operators Refuse to Concede Wage Raise—Workers Won't Arbitrate.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Authority to call out 158,000 anthracite miners if no agreement with the operators is reached by midnight, August 31, was vested in the subcommittee which failed to negotiate an agreement with the operators at sessions terminating here.

The action was taken by the full scale committee, composed of 40 members.

This action was taken in advance of the operators' submission of their formal reply to the demands of the miners, who had not quite finished presenting their case.

With federal intervention, as reported from Swampscott, out of the question until after the present agreement expires on September 1, and with a reluctance on both sides to submit their case to Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, a strike of 158,000 anthracite mine workers appears certain.

Persistent rumors here link a walkout in the bituminous fields to be timed simultaneously with the expected anthracite strike on September 1

Basis of the break in negotiations over the anthracite scale, which began on July 9, was the demand by President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, on July 31, that Samuel D. Warriner, president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, and W. B. Richards, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal company, take part in the conferences. Lewis alleged that the operators' subcommittee is composed of minor heads and that it was without power.

The operators asked two questions, the first was whether, in view of the operators' opposition to a wage increase and the check-off, the miners refused to continue negotiations. This evoked an affirmative reply.

The second question was a request to submit matters in dispute to arbitration. In reply the miners pointed to Mr. Lewis' letter, alleging that in a previous arbitration the mine workers lost $60,000,000 in the two years to acquire the knowledge that they now possess concerning the anthracite operators' well-known policy of "keeping close to an arbitrator."

Daughter of Immigrant Adopted by Millionaire

New York.—Before the dazzled eyes of sixteen-year-old Mary Louise Spas, only daughter of illiterate Bohemian parents, was unveiled a vision of a modern fairyland.

The Aladdin who rubbed the occult lamp for Mary was Edward A. Browning, millionaire realtor, who saw in her the ideal girl he sought for adoption into his palatial home at Kew Gardens, L. I., as sister-companion for his other adopted daughter, Dorothy Sunshine Browning.

His three weeks' quest ended when he filed adoption papers in the Queens Surrogate court. Her new name is Mary Louise Browning.

St. Paul, Minn.—The James J. Hill home here, one of the "show places" of St. Paul, and a major contention in the division of the $11,250,000 Hill estate among nine contesting heirs, was sold at public auction for $90,300. The brownstone residence, which cost more than $200,000 in 1889, was appraised at $189,000. Almon A. Greenman, Minneapolis banker, bought the home, but declined to say whom he represented.

U. S. Finds Bumper Crops Will Cut Vegetable Prices

Chicago.—Fruit and vegetables, due to large crops, will be much lower in price in August than in July, according to a federal bureau of agriculture economics report issued here. In some cases the drop will be 50 per cent. Cantaloupes in particular will be cheap. Indiana, New Mexico and Maryland shipping twice as many as last year, and Rocky Ford, Colo., giving promise of a bumper crop.

Virginia Puts Byrd in Lead for Governor

Richmond, Va.—Harry Flood Byrd of Winchester led G. Walter Mapp of Accomac by almost 20,000 votes for the gubernatorial nomination in the Democratic primary in 727 of the 846 precincts in the state.

The Latest Science in Warfare

If you read the signs of the times you will not be particularly pleased to note some of the changes that are taking place in modes of warfare which the next struggle will be staged with. It means death, death by wholesale and entirely in the most savage form. Large numbers of devices are at this minute being tried out by the military authorities of this and other counties which are bound to prove more or less practical and which there is no report of. The whole business is kept under strict censorship and the few matters which do leak out are merely secondary,

Most in the lime light to-day is the much talked-of "death ray" upon which inventors have been busy for three years or more. The first man who tried to demonstrate this ray was in England. Not much was gained however, at the time, in fact the experiment was reported as a failure.

Now American scientists are coming forward with claims of startling nature which it is up to the government to investigate. Assistance of the navy department will be asked by Dr. Edwin Scott of San Francisco in testing what he calls the "death stroke" in the form of "canned lightning" which the doctor contends will revolutionize war tactics.

Dr. Scott said he wishes to convince Government officials of the efficiency of his invention as a death dealing agency. He plans to make the test off the coast of California some time in September with an old battleship and a pilotless aeroplane which he wants the government to donate. A few of the possibilities attributed to the invention by Dr. Scott may be realized. This is what he claims:

Destruction of all life on land or sea or in the air, within a radius of 20 miles; disabling of all radio apparatus within the same area, destruction of the superstructures of battleships ten miles or more away bringing down aeroplanes from any heighth possible for the machine to attain and disabling of fortifications at long distances. The doctor claims that he has already burned holes fn 2-inch steel plates at a distance of one mile, dead trees have been fired at a distance of one mile and animals killed at a distance of 5 to 7 miles. Dummy aeroplanes have been destroyed in actual tests. The inventor has the parts of his machine ready for assembling, packed away in the fire proof vault, and he is jealously secreting the same.

It is hoped these inventions will serve to make such havoc among nations that they will refuse to engage in war, for God only knows what the awful results would be if these things all come to pass. Aeroplanes and aerial bombs have attained such precision that attacks from the air will be the coming method, and as far as known there is nothing, not even concrete "pill boxes" which will resist such onslaughts. Poison gases are sure to be the key note in the next war and with the wide use of such destructive agencies a war could only exist a few days. It is possible to cross the Atlantic Ocean and spread a poison gas blanket over New York, Boston and Philadelphia in three days, so what manner of use could be made of the ponderous battleships upon which untold millions of the tax-payers' dollars have been squandered?

The magazine called "Science and Invention" published in New York City, recently came out with the statement that there was nothing in the "death ray" theory and it simply could not be done. They claimed that to date no ray hot enough to burn anything more than a few feet away was now known, so the claims of Dr. Scott will be investigated with eagerness by the Government. It is presumed Scott is just one more nut who wants to gain notoriety at Government expense, and if so, he should be dumped on the scrap heap.

Politics in the Third District

Up to date politics in the third congressional district of Michigan do no promise any great thrills. The two candidates nominated at the primaries Mr. Carney, Democrat and Mr. Hooper, Republican, are democratic and republican in name only—the real struggle is between principles and not party. There is constant anxiety among party whips lest a lot of Republicans may desert the standard and vote for an opposing candidate and likewise a raft of Democrats are likely to lose their loyalty at the last minute at the polls and do the traitorous act. The old axiom of "Democrat or Republican or Bust" don't go any longer in political circles. In other words the tail no longer wags the dog and party managers have been so confounded flabbergasted trying to locate the wheel horses they are well nigh demented They question the moon, the sun and the stars, and at times swear by the beard of the Prophet, but its all in vain. Good red blood patriotic voters or all parties have been reading about this and that stunt which has been pulled off at Washington under different administrations and they have come to logical conclusions—they arise to inquire "Why Is?" and well they may.

The people's money has been lavishly used by the law-makers up at the Nation's capitol for purposes which at times looked shady in fact from a novice's standpoint it looked considerable like boy's play—building air castles only to tear them down like small boys playing in the sand,

We don't presume to know why these representatives and senators dip so deeply into the national exchequer for uses which they seem to think are necessary, but they do

Just to give an illustration. Representative Arthur B. Williams splendid man that he was—said right from the beginning he was going to help the farming contingent of this country. He was elected and went about framing a bill at once in company with Senator Capper which would put a sort of guardianship on the produce market. A number of fat seekers would be given jobs at Washington at good salaries to look after something which did not exist. But it all went into the wash just the same. As time wore on it occurred to the farmers that Representative Williams' bill was a wonderful up lift in salaries—but not much of an uplifter of prices—in fact the experts on farming concluded Mr. Williams was a wonderfully benevolent salary raiser and job creator

When the day comes that we can send men to Congress who are four square to the world, (and right here let us say we never expect to find any such men) then we shall be happy. Until an award of rom $250 to $1,000 daintily extended upon the end of a beautiful stick of candy for just one vote can be reckoned as salt of the earth, we shall be fixed politically same as now, only a little more so. Now that isn't saying a Representative would accept emoluments for his opinions—far from it. So we want to say to every voter. "Vote early and often," and we wouldn't be surprised if somebody would be elected, but as to how to pick them well, you may toss a coin and if it heads or tails, vote accordingly.

Hooper For Congress

That there is a strong sentiment throughout the third Congressional district to send President Coolidge a supporter at the coming special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Arthur B. Williams has been made manifest to the committee in charge of the campaign of Joseph L. Hooper, the republican nominee.

Reports to the committee from all parts of the district indicate that this sentiment is substantial and will be expressed at the polls on Tuesday next. While the election occurs at a busy season for the farmer, it is anticipated the vote from the agricultural sections is to be heavy.

Attention is called to the fact that the republican majority in the lower house is very small, and the re-placing of a republican member from this district by a Democrat would be a distinct loss. In view of the announced policy of the present administration for economy and tax-reduction, it is hoped the President will be helped and not hindered by the result of the special election in this district next Tuesday.—Advertisement.

George B. Smith on Federal Loans

George Burr Smith has done as much as any other man in Southern Michigan to help the farmers who were asked to borrow and give until it hurt to help win the war and were later betrayed by the Congress elected in 1918 by methods well illustrated by the Newberry campaign in Michigan that year

This congress not only succeeded in thwarting President Wilson's greatest achievement for humanity but also repudiated the promises made the farmers when they bought Liberty Bonds that under the Federal Reserve System their needs for credit would be taken care of.

The despicable resolution passed by that Congress which compelled the Federal Reserve Board to call loans to the member banks in the face of figures presented by the Comptroller of the Currency (appointed by President Wilson) that the currency could still be expended to the extent of $2,500,000,000.00 under the Federal Reserve Act, brought ruin and bankruptcy to the farmers from one end of the land to the other. Mr. Smith has been called upon to assist in the bond sales in three counties, and had organized the Tri-County National Farm Loan Association under the recently passed Farm Loan Act.

This Congress was not satisfied however, with the resolution which crippled the Federal Reserve Act, but restricted the operation of the Farm Loan Act as well. Mr. Smith did not give up the fight, however, and succeeded in having Hillsdale County approved for loans by several large life insurance companies which he is now representing as agent,

The work in connection with abstracts in preparation for mortgage loans, has made it necessary for him to spend much of his time at the county seat. The good roads enable him to make the trip thru North Adams every day. Since the war when he started the work he has loaned more than half a million dollars to farmers in Hillsdale county alone.—Advertisement.

Cosmopolitan Host With 101

When the big Miller Brothers 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East comes to Jackson Friday, August 21st you'll see the most cosmopolitan and picturesque host of people in all the wide world A tour among the 1,400 folks with the show is an education in itself, and that's why the world's largest street parade (Miller Brothers scorn to adopt the retrenchment policy of the circuses, so they retain the greatest of all free shows—the parade) is so enthralling. Famous Indian chiefs, cowboys, cowgirls, Indian warriors, Mexican rurales, South American vaqueros, Chinese irregular horse, Manchu pony soldiers, French Zouaves from Indo-China, hard riding Cossacks, Turkestan cavalry—these and many others, to the number of six hundred, ride in the parade and performances. European nationalities are represented, of course, in native garb, and there are six bands all sorts of historical and allegorical floats, elephants, camels, buffalo and longhorns in a street pageant. Then too, Ezra Meeker, only living person who crossed the continent as an adult, on the old Oregon trail of covered wagon fame, will drive a prairie schooner and oxen just as he did seventy-four years ago.—Advertisement.

Radio—The New Champion For a Universal Language

By GENERAL J. G. HARBORD
President, Radio Corporation of America.

Gen. J. G. Harbord

Broadcasting is still in its radiant youth, but its effects on American life may already be seen in several directions. There is a well-marked trend toward a universal language, a considerable broadening of the horizon at home, and this year promises innovations that may almost revolutionize our old political methods.

In the last few years but little interest has been shown in a Universal Language. The subject has merited more attention than it has received, for its potential influence on international culture and commerce and above all on international peace might easily change the course of human history. There now appears, however, a new champion for a Universal Language, a huge powerful giant whose influence envelops the earth and pervades the surrounding ether—Radio.

The United States, because of its geographical situation, has not yet felt the need for a common medium of international broadcasting, though in all forms of telegraphic communication a universal language would be exceedingly useful. Such broadcasting as may be carried on by our restless neighbor to the south has no place in our radio picture. Canadian broadcasting offers no stimulus to a study of the subject because that country speaks our own tongue.

International Broadcast

Some day international broadcast communication will be an every-day occurrence with Europe, South America and the Asiatic shores of the Pacific. It will not be for entertainment only, but for the more important considerations of our commercial and political life. Will Radio, peculiarly the instantaneous method of communication, wait while messages are being translated in the same way that dots and dashes are now deciphered into language and then interpreted into native tongue?

Esperanto and Ido have already received an impetus through the air. Associations for their promotion exist. But it is doubtful if any synthetic language can ever overtake in the race for universality our own English. It will probably never displace existing languages, but with radio as a carrier it promises to become a common means of international expression.

English Speaking People Lead in Radio

America, an English-speaking land, leads the world today in broadcasting. Several of its nearly six hundred broadcasting stations reach out to Europe and South America and at no distant day will cross the Pacific. The British Isles, Australia, New Zealand and the remainder of the British dominions, speaking the same tongue, stand next to us in broadcast development. The stations of these widely flung states are heard by adjacent nations, who will be listening constantly to English programs. It is inevitable that such listeners will seek to understand the more frequently recurring expressions of the broadcaster. Curiosity and a desire for knowledge, spurred by the fascination which Radio exerts over all of us, its disciples, will bring the wish to learn the language most frequently heard over the ether.

The commerce of English-speaking nations touches in a hundred ways every worth while country in the world. English is the best language today for foreign nations who need to borrow money. Improved communications break down language barriers. The differences in speech that still linger—for example, between New England and Virginia—are evidences of a day when they were a month apart. Today in China, Japan, India and the Near East and in the major countries of Europe, English instruction is being eagerly sought. The World War spread English. Two millions of Americans and other millions from the British Isles and the imperial dominions for several years taught English and English customs in French, German, Belgian and Italian territory. There is hardly an individual in those countries who cannot boast of at least a few words of English. With the added force of radio broadcasting crossing the seas, with programs and announcers in English, our language will reach understanding ears whether they belong to Germans, French, Italians, Dutch, Spanish or the ancient races of Asia. Some day the Siamese coolie and the Malay rajah may enjoy entertainment broadcasted from our Pacific coast; the student in Constantinople may receive instruction by radio from Columbia University; the Burmese maiden, "looking eastward to the sea" may listen to a station on the old Moulmein Pagoda broadcasting "On the Road to Mandalay" in the tongue of the Bard of Avon.

Power Must Help Seller and Buyer

In a careful study of the economic side of electrifying the farms of America. J. C. Martin, western editor of the Electrical World, finds two general facts which must be recognized The first of these is that the seller must make a profit, if he is to continue in business. The other is that the buyer must make a profit from the use of the things he buys.

In the case of farm electrification the seller would be the power company, if power is to be obtained in that manner, and the buyer, of course, would be the farmer. The product, electric power, must bring a profit to the seller, the electric power company, and must give the buyer, (the farmer) a profit from its use.

"In the case of the buyer," says Mr. Martin, who coincides with what General Electric specialists also contend, "the profit does not always come in the form of a money balance. It may come in the form of better living conditions or better health, or in numerous other ways. However, if he is using the things he buys in a producing business from which he derives an income, then he must be able to turn those things into more cash than he pays for them, including the labor and process costs through which he must put his raw materials."

FARM EFFICIENCY

Addressing a conference at Ames, Ia., called to consider what electricity can do for agriculture, President R. A. Pearson, of Iowa State College, said that agriculture is now passing through its third period of development, typified by the desire for efficiency.

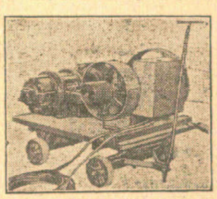
In the first two periods, he pointed out, direct delivery from farmer to consumer and quantity production for big crops were the characteristics, respectively.

"The new era," he said, "must be one of permanent industry and characterized by business methods, low cost of production, highly intelligent methods of marketing and maintenance of soil fertility. In this period the highest efficiency will be necessary to compete with foreign agriculture."

He then introduced representatives of electrical farm investigations from several states, who briefly sketched what they hope to find out regarding the contribution which electricity may make to efficiency in agriculture.

New Farm Motor On a Hand Truck

Looking forward to the time when electric farms will be more or less general in this country, the General Electric Company has developed a farm chore motor in four different horsepower sizes. Wherever electric service is already available on farms, either through power company's lines or independent farm power plants, this motor can serve as a hired man of tireless energy, unlimited capacity for work and utmost reliability.



New Farm Motor

The motor outfit consists of the motor itself, with its control equipment, and a countershaft which carries four driven pulleys of different sizes. The complete set-up is mounted on a four-wheel truck. The countershaft and pulleys provide four possible speeds for every driven machine, according to requirements.

This motor operates at 110 or 220 volts, single phase or three phase. It is manufactured in 1½, 3, 5 and 7½ horsepower sizes. A control cable of sufficient length to reach the driven machine is provided, and a start-and stop push button is located at the end of this cable. A belt-tightener is mounted on the motor.

Europe Well Along in Farm Electrification

Experimental work in farm electrification has been going on in Europe for a somewhat longer period than in this country. The four European countries which, from available reports, appear to have done the most in this work are Sweden, Germany, France and Italy, in about the order named. Government financial assistance has been given to some extent.

In Sweden about one-third of the farms are electrified thus far, owing to the abundant hydro-electric resources, and even threshing and plowing are done electrically. Electric plowing has been the subject of experiments in France and Germany since as long ago as 1908.

Expect Large Attendance At Gardeners' Field Day

Commercial garden truck growers from the Detroit, Grand Rapids and Bay City sections as well as gardeners from smaller sections have already sent word to Prof. George E. Starr, of the M. S. C. horticultural department, that they will attend the second annual Gardeners' Field Day to be held here, Wednesday, August 26.

From a successful experiment of last year, the field day plans this year will take in much the same inspection of experimental plats and discussion, but greater attention will be devoted to greenhouse exhibits, according to Professor Starr, who is in charge of the program.

At 10 o'clock, the gardeners will begin their tour of the station grounds. Numerous examples of the better as well as the poorer varieties of vegetables will be shown, forming the basis for discussion upon vegetables varieties. The college greenhouses have been completed since last year's meeting, and a visit to these is included in the morning tour.

One of the most extensive experiments ever undertaken in the culture of the early tomato is certain to interest the gardeners. Another experiment, among the many conducted, is that with cucumber pickles. The object in this experiment is to produce a better and more uniform type of cucumber pickle.

The short afternoon program of speaking has been planned to discuss subject of vital interest, and also to permit the gardeners from widely separated sections to get together, and exchange ideas.

M. S. C. Soils Train Ends Unique Tour

The movable soils laboratory from the M. S. C. said to be one of the most unusual demonstration trains ever assembled in Michigan has just completed an extended tour through the southern part of the State covering a total of 500 miles and reaching 4,641 people.

Outstanding feature of the train according to Dr. M. M. McCool head of the college soils department, was that in this way the individual problems of the farmers could be reached through personal contact.

During the trip, which lasted two weeks, 1,809 samples of soil were tested, and each farmer was advised as to the lime or fertilizer necessary to bring this soil to the best efficiency. In addition, 76 samples of marl were analyzed.

Consisting of a laboratory, personnel and demonstration car, the train made stops at intervals of from 15 to 20 miles along the itinerary, this giving the farmers from each locality a chance to visit the demonstration train. Members of the soils department gave each farmer a separate interview.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit; the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

DESTROY LIQUOR TO SAVE STORAGE COSTS

State Rids Itself of Stock Accumulated in Raids.

The finest collection of liquor in the central part of the United States was destroyed recently at East Lansing. It was the accumulation of confiscated beverages taken by the State Police since the Michigan prohibition constitutional amendment went into effect and amounted to thousands of quarts of whiskies, wines and other liquors. The work of breaking it up required several days and was supervised by Commissioner Alan G. Straight in person and by a representative of the attorney-general's office.

This hoard of liquor was kept for a time in a basement downtown in Lansing but for the past two years had been stored in a building at State Police headquarters where it was a source of considerable worry as well as some expense since it had to be guarded. Withdrawals from it were made for the use of hospitals and public institutions, under proper inspection.

There had been no additions to the stock in a long time as it has been the practice of the department to break up liquor as seized and condemned. Just how much of a task this is may be deduced from the fact that the routine work for June included the destruction of 21,228 quarts of whisky,

BANKERS HELP

Mason County, Mich., bankers are backing the county move to replace scrub stock with purebred cattle. The plan as outlined by the county agent is to purchase young purebred sires and place them wherever a farmer is found who is willing to undertake the proposition. The bankers will advance the purchase price and take a note for one year without interest. The idea is to make it as easy as possible for the farmers to procure thoroughbreds.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Concerning General Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in Charge of Prohibition Enforcement

Many inquiries have come to the Washington Headquarters as to General Andrews, who is directing the United States Government drive for enforcement of the prohibition law. I have in a previous article referred to the military record of General Andrews and in this will give excerpts from his first public address and some comments by the Methodist Board of Temperance and Public Morals.

General Andrews made his first public address since going into office in a campus speech to Trinity College students on June 14. He told the students what he regarded as their obligations as citizens, deplored what he described as boring from within by wilful violators, and denounced hypocrites in whatever cause they may be found. He urged the students to heed the fundamental duties of law and Government, consideration for others, team work in life, and general obedience to law, and spoke particularly of the prohibition law, He said "The Government recently took a daring and determined step in the matter of regulating community life for the benefit of the economic interest of individuals, and made it a crime against the state to furnish intoxicating beverages to those individuals who were determined to drink them." "For one reason or another thousands of citizens are opposed to this law. Hundreds of thousands are willfully violating it. With the latter I take serious issue. They are perhaps quite unconsciously doing a dangerous thing to the community. Their demand for liquor has necessarily built up the business of supplying it.

"Every unlawful drink taken today means an enormous percent of profit for the use of this pernicious industry. The consumers of bootleg liquors, and there is none other to be bought, are feeding fat on what has become a monster business in spreading its operations over the nation, into communities and homes, into business and society and Government—an outlaw business that exists and can only exist through bribery and corruption, a business that must sneak into many phases of industry and into many phases of Government, and by bribery corrupt the honest souls of their agents."

The clipsheet of the Methodist Board of Temperance has the following to say of Mr. Andrews: "The opportunity and the man were brought together when General Lincoln Andrews was made Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of Prohibition, Customs and Coast Guard. Such a job demands ability and devotion: ability to organize, ability to judge men, ability to use them; devotion to the country, to truth and honesty and efficiency. General Andrews has the ability. His career proves that. Ninety nine times out of a hundred it would be highly important because he is a gentleman in the old sense of absolute loyalty to his duty And as this man is new, so the opportunity is new. No other person connected with prohibition enforcement has ever had a real opportunity to enforce the law satisfactorily. As General Andrews took office, more than three hundred new Coast Guard vessels of a highly effective type were added to the Coast Guard. Measures advocated by the Cramton bill, killed by filibuster during the last session of Congress, were put into effect by executive action. Andrews was given freedom and responsibiiity."

We believe that Mr. Andrews should have the support and cooperation of the prohibition groups His work should be judged only by the results, after a reasonable time of experiment.

DRY STRAW

In more than one state are to be seen dry straws indicating growth of sentiment for prohibition enforcement. The victory of the drys in New Jersey, the state Senator Edwards once boasted he would "make as wet as the Atlantic Ocean" is not without its significance. Senator Arthur Whitney, backed by the drys in the primaries, recently defeated the liberal candidate backed by Senator Edge for the Republican nomination for Governor. The drys have a special cause for rejoicing in view of the frank declaration of Senator Edge on the eve of the primaries, that the campaign had developed into the old fight between the wets and drys. The big test for the state will come in the election, when Senator Whitney, the avowed dry, will contest with the Democratic nominee, who is reported wet.

FEDERAL LEGISLATION TO AID DRUG ADDICTS PROPOSED

Steps looking to the introduction in the next Congress of a bill providing for Federal aid to any state which will meet the Government halfway in establishing treatments for drug addicts are being considered. State Senator Sanborn Young, of California, recently conferred with Government authorities regarding the establishment of a farm for addicts in his home state, where drug users would be given some hard labor and furnished wholesome food instead of being treated with gradually reduced quantities of drugs. It is believed that this method would be proper for rehabilitating some classes of drug users.

Washingtonia

It is said we are about to engage in a foolish propaganda to repair the old birthplace of the father of his country George Washington, at Wakefield Westmoreland county Virginia. All these years the citizens of this nation have felt satisfied to let well enough alone and not expend too much for recapitulation of ancient shrines connected with our early forefathers such as Washington, Franklin, Jefferson and Patrick Henry. It is proposed to expend $12,600 in fixing up the ancient birthplace of Washington which has evidently been neglected (so some seem to think.)

It is proposed to enlist the aid of archaeologists and architects in an effort to determine the exact location of the Washington homes Study has revealed that John Washington, great grand father of George Washington built two homes there One is believed to have stood on a little knoll overlooking the Potomac. It was not as elaborate a mansion as Stratford, seven miles south on the Potomac, the home of the Lee family.

Here John Washington, who was a Colonel and member of the House of Burgesses, lived for some years until his first wife died. Shortly afterward he married Ann daughter of Thomas Pope, who gave name to Popes Creek, which is a mile south of wakefield,

The Second house was on Popes Creek, where John's children grew up. In the years that followed the place came into the hands of Augustine Washington.

Augustine first married Jane Butler by whom he had three sons and a daughter. His second wife was Mary Ball, to whom he was married in 1730. By her he had six children. The first born was George.

According to the old style calendars George Washington was born February 11, 1732. In 1815 the first monumental stone to the memory of Washington was laid at Wakefield to mark the birthplace. The stone bore the words, "Here, the 11th of February, '1732, George Washington was born." Little care was taken of it and it cracked from the effects of the elements. The place was desolate amid the ruins of the old house.

Wakefield was, during the Revolution, known as "The Athens of America," because the great number of distinguished men that it gave to the country. Congress in 1881 appropriated money to erect a monument to mark the birthplace of George Washington. The monument was completed in 1896 and it still stands.

Cow Testing Associaton Records Are Accurate

Yearly milk and butterfat production as determined in cow testing associations by weighing and testing one day's production each month is accurate within a small percent, says the United States Department of Agriculture. To determine the accuracy of the cow testing association method of calculating yearly production, the department made a study of the actual yearly production records of 70 cows of the Minnesota Experiment Station. These Minnesota records gave the production of milk and butterfat for each milking throughout the year.

By systematically picking out the weights and tests for one day each month as they would have been obtained by cow testing association methods and thus calculating the yearly production it was found that the association method was accurate within 2 percent on milk production and within 3 percent on production of butterfat.

A tabulation was also made of 100 yearly individual cow records from the department farm at Beltsville, Md. These records gave only the milk production night and morning of each day in the year. A yearly total, calculated from one day's record each month, when compared with the actual milk production showed an accuracy within 1.99 percent. These comparisons indicate that method used in cow testing association work gives a very accurate record of production.

He Is Optimistic

W. D. Jamieson, a Democratic lawyer in Washington, D. C., is authority for the following statement which for a Democrat we should calculate was going some. If he means it he can't be a real inside politician of the party, or else Democracy has somehow get metamorpuosed in the last two years. This is how he hits it up;

"Speaking about prohibition—it's about the liveliest thing in politics to-day, so far as the general interest is concerned—no matter whether you are for prohibition or the Volstead Act or not, you can just make up your mind it is here to stay. Aside from the women, and the moral forces with them, Business is for prohibition, and Business is following its habit of running things. Coolidge, who minds big business is going after the enforcement of prohibition because Bnsiness says so. Business gets a better class of work done in its shops because of prohibition, and Business makes more money than without prohibition, Ergo. Was asking one of the prominent lawyers of the country the other day who financed the Anti-Saloon League and he said Judge Gary, of U. S. Steel, young Rockafeller and other big business men—they need it in their business."

Every one knows that money alone cannot make good dishes, however good the raw material may be.

SOMETHING GOOD

A choice chicken salad which will be cherished in any family is the following:

Radio Chicken Salad.—Take four pounds of chicken, reserving one pound of the white meat for a garnish. Dice the three pounds with two pounds of diced cooked veal, one small head of cabbage chopped, two bunches of celery, one can of pimentoes, two large green peppers, six small sweet pickles, all chopped; one teaspoonful of salt and onion juice, and a pint of mayonnaise. Add the finely cut white meat (with a few roses of mayonnaise to decorate) to top of the salad.

Dutch Dish.—Add to one pound of veal or fish leftovers a quarter of a pound of bread soaked in beef extract and water or beef tea, one slice of onion chopped fine, one-fourth of a teaspoonful each of salt and cloves, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, peel, grated from half a lemon and the well beaten yolks of three eggs. Mix well then cut and fold in the well-beaten whites and bake three-quarters of an hour.

Spinach Masked With Eggs.—Steam two quarts of well-washed spinach until tender, then drain and chop fine. Season with one-half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter and one cupful of medium-thick white sauce. Place the spinach in a buttered glass baking dish, cover with three hard-cooked eggs, sliced or quartered, and pour over one cupful of medium-thick white sauce. Sprinkle the top with half a cupful of grated cheese and bake in a hot oven for twelve minutes.

Beef a la Mode.—Take a thick piece from the under part of the round, let stand a day in a marinade, using half vinegar and half olive oil, a chopped onion, eight peppercorns, a bay leaf and a little chopped parsley. Baste often, turning occasionally so that every part of the meat is seasoned. When ready to cook, drain and sear on all sides in a hot kettle, then half cover with boiling water and simmer for four to seven hours. Some may like a sauce made from the marinade, thickening with flour.

PITFALLS FOR THE UNWARY

American investors in securities of foreign companies and foreign governments should take care to purchase them only through reliable bankers or brokers, says Commerce Reports issued by the Department of Commerce. It adds:

"There have recently been several flagrant cases of securities being advertised in American journals at prices from 10 to 100 times the price quoted on the same date in the markets of the countries where the concerns are located. Some of these cases have even attracted the attention of foreign newspapers. This is not a safe kind of speculation for uninformed Americans, but the would-be investor can easily protect himself by asking the advice of his regular banker."

"For entering Germany with a false passport," said Von Steinveldt, "you shall in prison forthwith enclosed be."

"Do try not to be quite so cocksure that you're always right," said Tommy. "As a matter of fact, my passport isn't false, as you call it, in any single particular. My face is oval, my nose is of normal shape, and my mouth is more or less round when open, which is just what the passport says. If you don't believe me and can't bear to look me in the face—which I can understand you don't care to do after sticking me with your marks in the way you did—just take a glance at the photo on the passport."

This apparently struck Von Steinveldt as a thing which he ought to do. He took a long look at the photograph, which indeed bore very little resemblance to Tommy. Then, instead of comparing it with Tommy's face, he rapidly turned over the pile of papers on the desk in front of him. From among them he drew out another photograph and looked carefully at it. He placed both photographs side by side and stared at them. Then, suddenly, he looked up at Tommy.

"Of what height are you?" he asked.

"Five foot, ten and a half inches, see passport," said Tommy, "forehead broad, eyes blue, nose normal, face oval. Mouth round when opened. It's all there."

For the first time during the interview Von Steinveldt smiled. It was a grim smile, with more than a suggestion of malice in it; but Tommy was glad to see a smile of any kind.

"I think," said Von Steinveldt, "that there has a mistake been."

"I've thought so all along," said Tommy.

"That d—d fool Count Casimir has this time himself a mistake made."

"I don't know that Casimir is more of a fool than any one else," said Tommy. "You made the same mistake yourself. I don't even now profess to understand what it is. But you made it. So did two of your police officers."

"But I," said Von Steinveldt, "the mistake discovered have."

"You can't take much credit for that," said Tommy. "You'd have discovered it long ago, in fact, you'd never have made it if you'd listened to me and believed what I said."

"Soon," said Von Steinveldt, "the d—d Casimir will the mistake also discover. Then you can say to him and your Lord Troyte, and to Herr Cable that another bridegroom for the fair Calypso arranged has been."

He sat up straight in his chair, pulled his bristly white mustache and looked so pleased that Tommy began to think that he must himself be the "arranged" bridegroom. The thought of Calypso being married against her will—Tommy felt certain it would be against her will—to this bristly-headed German made Tommy seriously angry.

"Do you mean to tell me," he said, "that you have the nerve to think of marrying her yourself?"

"So," said Von Steinveldt. "Her equal in birth I certainly am."

"Well, just listen to me for a minute," said Tommy. "You've swindled me with these beastly marks of yours in a way that a third-rate money-lender would have been ashamed of. You've set on nasty, slimy police officers to arrest me. You've dragged me about Berlin in a taxicab. You've kept me standing here for half an hour with nothing but your face to look at. Very well. I'm not going to ask for compensation, though I ought to get it. I'm not even going to demand an apology, though if you had as much decent feeling as a Hottentot you'd apologize without being asked. But I'll just tell you one thing before I go. I mean to marry Calypso myself."

Von Steinveldt was genuinely astonished. He had been brought up to regard royal persons of all kinds and members of aristocracies as sacred. A pastor—he now quite believed that Tommy was a curate—belongs to the rank of the bourgeoisie, is burgerlich. For such a one to marry—

"But she is a princess," he said.

"I don't know anything about that," said Tommy, "but whether she is or not, I mean to marry her if she will have me. And I may say that if it's a choice between you and me, I expect to have the better chance."

"So, Herr Pastor," said Von Steinveldt.

He had sufficiently recovered from his first surprise to realize that Tommy's threat was absurd. No princess could possibly marry a curate. Such a thing would be worse than a wave of Bolshevism. Central European society would be shaken to its foundations. Wladislaws, as Von Steinveldt knew, was a disreputable wreck of a king. Calypso was highly unconventional in her manner of life. But even they could not contemplate an alliance with a curate. The sneer on Von Steinveldt's face became quite unmistakable.

"Ach so, Herr English pastor," he said.

"And even if she won't marry me," said Tommy, "and I mean to have a pretty good try at persuading her, I feel pretty certain she won't marry you. No girl would. Good-by. Or perhaps I ought to say, 'Ach so, Herr Bridegroom arranged.'"

CHAPTER XI

It was at half past ten that Casimir entered the Adlon hotel the morning after the party at the Mascotte. He did not find Tommy, who by that time had gone off to the police office. He did find Janet Church, whom he rather wished to avoid. She at once attached herself to Casimir and reminded him of his promise to arrange for her visit to Lystria.

Casimir was quite civil to her. He is the kind of man who is civil to any woman anywhere and at any time. He had a reason for treating Janet with special politeness. He believed her to be Tommy's or rather Norrey's, aunt.

"Certainly," he said. "Everything will be settled about your journey. There will be no difficulty at all. I shall get you a passport."

In talking to Janet he spoke German and was therefore able to express himself without quoting Shakespeare.

"I don't see how you can get me a passport," said Janet. "The consul here, and the passport officer, and the people at the embassy refuse to allow me to have one. If I travel at all, it must be without a passport. That's what I expect you to manage for me."

"You shall have an excellent passport," said Casimir, "a British passport, which no one will question."

"You can't get me that," said Janet. "It's impossible."

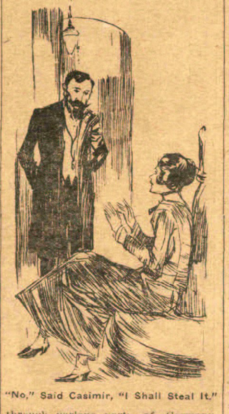
They were sitting together near the door of the hall. A lady, middle-aged, very neatly dressed, unmistakably English, passed them, going toward the swinging door.

"That," said Casimir, "is Miss Gisborne. Miss May Gisborne. She is the secretary of Colonel Heard, who is the head of the British Graves Registration commission."

Janet looked without particular interest at Miss May Gisborne.

"In seeking for British graves," said Casimir, "Colonel Heard, who is sometimes accompanied by his wife, goes through various parts of Germany, and beyond Germany into all the countries of eastern Europe. Miss Gisborne often goes with him, in order, I suppose, to register the graves which are found. Colonel Heard has a diplomatic passport. So has Miss Gisborne. I propose that you should use Miss Gisborne's passport."



"No," Said Casimir, "I Shall Steal It."

I do not suppose that Janet Church has any particular scruples about traveling with a false passport. For the sake of a noble excuse—and what could be nobler than world peace?—she would willingly do far worse things than that. But she was startled at the cool way in which Casimir assumed that Miss Gisborne's passport would be at her disposal.

"But she isn't in the least likely to lend it to me," said Janet.

"No," said Casimir. "I shall steal it."

Even Janet shied a little at that. The word "steal" used in that way has a very nasty sound, and I suppose, as a worker in the cause of Christian unity, Janet felt herself more or less committed to the Ten Commandments.

"Steal!" said Janet. "But I couldn't agree—"

"Even Shakespeare," said Casimir, "is occasionally wrong. You recollect—?" He gave his quotation in English. "'who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; 'twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands, but he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him and makes me poor indeed.' There Shakespeare was mistaken. If I took the purse of Miss Gisborne I should make her poorer. But if I take her name, that is to say, the passport of the gracious fraulein, I do her no harm, for she gets another one at once—another passport, you understand, not another name. Whereas I make you rich in what you want. With the passport of Miss Gisborne you can travel anywhere."

I do not know whether that line of reasoning quieted Janet's scruples, or whether the joy of being able to go to Lystria smothered the cries of her conscience. She ceased to object to the stealing of the passport, and became exceedingly curious to know how it was to be done.

"That," said Casimir, "is easy. The English seldom lock up anything. In England, I suppose, it is not necessary to lock things up. No doubt all the English are so rich that they do not want to take what is not theirs. Why should they when they have all they want? So here in Berlin Colonel Heard does not lock up his own passport or Miss Gisborne's. If sometimes, by chance, he does lock them up, he always leaves the key in the pocket of the trousers he wore the day before, for the English are a truly great nation, and the English gentleman is so noble he suspects no one. He would not himself steal anything, ever. Therefore he leaves his keys in the pockets of his yesterday's trousers.

"All the same," said Janet, "he'll lock the door of his bedroom. We all do that."

"That," said Casimir, "is nothing."

Then he went on to explain to Janet how the theft was to be effected, and the explanation left her gasping.

The Countess Olga, Casimir's only sister, was at that time a housemaid in the Adlon hotel. As a housemaid she had, of course, a master key which opened all the doors on the floor on which she served. The room occupied by Colonel and Mrs. Heard and that of Miss Gisborne were under her care. She could enter them at any time she chose, stay in them as long as she chose and not excite the smallest suspicion. She was familiar with Colonel Heard's habit of leaving his keys in his trousers pockets.

The first feeling which this frank confession aroused in Janet's mind was pity for the countess. It must be a dreadful thing for a highborn lady, no doubt a delicately nurtured lady, to be reduced to earning her living as a housemaid in a hotel. Casimir explained that her pity was wasted.

"It is not for the sake of wages that Olga is a housemaid," he said. "She has money enough to live otherwise, and if she had not, I would give it to her. We Lystrian nobles are not rich, but we would not allow our sisters to earn wages as servants. No. Olga is a patriot. She is a housemaid just as I was a soldier in the war for the sake of our beloved land, ours for fifteen hundred years, now taken from us. I fought, but it was no use. Olga collects information, letters, documents, telegrams—"

"From people who leave their keys about," said Janet.

"And, if necessary, passports," said Casimir, smiling.

Janet is not, I suppose, an entirely unscrupulous woman. There are things she would not do, though very few, for the sake of a cause she had at heart. She made no further protest against the theft of Miss Gisborne's passport; but she did not want to go on talking about it. She changed the subject.

"By the way," she said, "talking of passports. That young friend of yours who was with you last night in the Mascotte—"

"Your nephew," said Casimir.

Janet recollected herself.

"My nephew, yes. I am afraid he is likely to get into trouble with his passport."

"But how?" said Casimir. "Surely in London they gave him a correct passport."

"On his passport he is described as the Reverend Thomas A. Norreys. Now, he's not that."

"He is certainly not that," said Casimir.

"I thought not."

"It was foolish," said Casimir, "to put that on his passport, and quite unnecessary."

"If the police suspect anything wrong—"

"The police will not see that passport."

Early Adding Machines

That the ancient Inca civilization in Peru possessed an adding and calculating machine has been revealed in the recent discovery by excavators of a knotted cord, or "quipl," in the ruins of a prehistoric tomb. The cord is sixteen yards long and contains 100 knots. Divided into ten unequal sections these knots represent the odd numbers from one to nineteen. The sections are of different colors, including red, brown, yellow, blue and green, and are separated by silver beads, which represent the even numbers from two to twenty. By using this simple way of counting, based on the decimal system, rapid calculations can be made.—Montreal Star.

Saved From Death by Knowledge of Morse

Two employees of a telegraph company sent to repair a burglar alarm in a financial institution at Boston were accidentally locked in the vault. Bank employees in vain tried to open the massive door. It was equipped with a time lock which was set to open the following morning. The police, fire department and safe experts could do nothing. There was a safety device inside the vault which, if the prisoners knew about, would have released them but there seemed to be no way to make them acquainted with the fact.

Finally someone thought of the Morse telegraph code. With huge sledges the words were sounded to the imprisoned men. Then the anxious throng waited. There was no answer. Suddenly the door swung open and the two men tottered out. They had heard the message and found the lock. They were on the point of collapse after being in the air-tight compartment for an hour.

People of Great Britain are eating more raisins and the reported shortage of Smyrna and Greek crops is expected to cause the British to consume the fruit from America.

STYLES FOR LATE SUMMER; SHEER, COLORFUL LINGERIE

WHEN August comes leading in the burning sun of late summer, women demand clothes that are cool and comfortable—and that look all of that. In fact, they insist more upon a cool appearance than upon actual cool quality in their apparel, as witness those small, white felt or white kid hats that are popular. Felt hats are not cool, but they are soft and comfortable and light ones look cool—which combination of good points has spelled success for them.

Plain linen is a time-honored fabric that has maintained its place because it looks cool in summer frocks, and because it launders perfectly. But openwork linen looks cool and is cool and a frock of it is presented herewith, as an ideal garment for the hottest weather. The picture shows it to be simple in design, bordered with scalloped pieces of plain linen down the front, each scallop serving to carry a pearl button and simulated buttonhole. A front panel of crepe de chine has a neck-to-hem plaiting at each side of a strip of plain linen down the front, adorned also with small pearl buttons. Plain and openwork linen in any light color, with white linen in bindings and accessories, will develop this frock successfully.

From the Fall Line of Lingerie.

The small hat of silk with sectional crown and narrow turned-up brim, is of the collapsible kind that can be folded or flattened, to put in a suitcase. The last chapter in millinery's summer story deals with the career of this bit of practical and beautiful headwear, which is so accommodating and becoming. It is as light and cool as it is pretty. As to the footwear that supports this hot weather costume, it plays its important role perfectly—white silk stockings, light brown or gray kid pumps—nothing could be more cool and comfortable.

Designers and makers of lingerie are presenting their new fall lines and it is evident that in their summery minds there is no connection whatever between cold weather and underthings. The responsibility of keeping the feminine world warm in cold weather is blithely switched over to outer garments—let sweaters, frocks, coats and heating apparatus do it, appears to be their motto. The several types of undergarments, except for athletics, concern themselves with beauty of color, daintiness of fabric, easy adjustment to the figure and a general prettiness—which last item seems to be most important of all.

For making this irresponsible but fascinating underwear, light or sheer silk and cotton fabrics are demanded and the call for colored voiles has increased. The limit of delicacy is reached in georgette crepe or chiffon and new garments made of it are shown with one color posed over another—that is, they are double. Voile is not so nearly transparent, and two colors are managed in it by using one for yokes and borders hemstitched to the body of the garment in another color; pastel shades are used and a tailored finish. But crepe de chine and ninon crepe take precedence in the minds of most women over other fabrics and new rivals of these old favorites find it hard to dislodge them. The laces most used for trimming are filet, alencon and val, with embroidered net and net footing in their company.

The picture given here shows a pajama set made of flesh-colored crepe de chine and trimmed with frills of cream-colored val lace. A narrow ribbon girdle and little chiffon rosebuds at the neck finish it. It has the popular slip-on jacket and is a model that may be developed in radium silk, soisette, wash satin, checked nainsook or cotton crepes.

Formal Riding Hat

The derby is still the formal riding hat and usually is made in hatter's plush, felt or velvet. The tricorn type, which is less formal, enjoys widest popularity among the devotees of the cross-saddle.

New Versions of the Choker

The newest choker is a two-strand affair, each strand composed of smoke and flesh-colored pearls arranged in half-and-half effect.

Little Velvet Hats

Descat, Agnes and Reboux, it is said, will introduce little hats of velvet in vivid colors ornamented by intricate stitching, and hats of similar type are shown by Cora Marson.

Mining Men in Alaska Make Use of Airplane

It is becoming a common occurrence for mining men to use the airplane for trips between mining camps in the interior of Alaska and also in northwestern Canada. Norman L. Wimmler, placer mining engineer of the United States bureau of mines, recently flew from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Eagle, an airline distance of about two hundred miles, in less than three hours, says Compressed Air Magazine.

Two modern airships now make regular trips out of Fairbanks—thus bringing that center within a few hours' travel of Tolovana, Kantishna, Salaha, Circle City and other mining districts on the Yukon.

Shoes for Bird Dogs

As part of the equipment of bird hunters using dogs, an eastern sportsman recommends wool-lined, sole-leather boots be laced upon the four feet of the dog. "This saves many nasty briar cuts, stubble bruises and sheds sand burrs. The dog soon becomes quite willing that they should be placed upon his feet, for he realizes after his first hunt that his feet are not tender and cut up as is usual when hunting rough and weed-ladened country," says this gunner.

The Way of Authors

George Doran, the publisher, cracked a joke about authors at a farewell dinner that was given him in New York on the occasion of his departure for Europe.

"Authors," he said, "never think about money, and, every blessed book they write, they expect a royalty big enough to keep them from thinking about money for the rest of their born days."

He Does And He Don't

Editor Dwight Blackmer of the Memphis Bee arises to remark as follows:

"Yes, we expected we would be accused of owning the thing and such is the case. No, that ancient Ford that is parked daily on the front porch of the Bee Office is not our property but we find it there every morning when we come to work. We are certainly not guilty. Now if it were a Buick, Lincoln or Packard but,—oh well, what's the use?"

Evidently Editor Blackmer has done something he shouldn't, or he has contracted the dangerous malady automobilitis which is sure death to any man unless he happens to be a millionaire. Now what else would you make from his remarks? Has he or has he not? We'll bet Bro. Blackmer has fell for it—and it's too bad since never before has he strayed from the straight and narrow path of propriety.

That's just the way it takes a man—all at once and he becomes raving within a few hours. Seeing he has waited so long Brother Blackmer could just as well put it off a few short years more and then invested in a "flivver aeroplane" and enjoyed himself. Now he has gone and did it—and of course as everybody knows, it is impossible to wear out a Henry so what's he going to do when he follows the styles?

Death of Rev. Churchill

Rev. Churchill of Pontiac, formerly pastor of the Baptist church in this village, passed away at the home of his daughter Mrs. Hampton, Sunday, August 9, at the ripe age of 80 years. He had been in poor health for some time but his last illness was of short duration. He served the Baptist church here about 20 years ago. Rev. Ketcham of the First Baptist church officiated at the funeral at Pontiac.

Rev. Churchill was born at Moose River, Maine, Feb. 2, 1845. He married Lydia E. Pratt of Emden Maine Jan. 13, 1870, She died in 1915. In the fall of 1872 he came to Michigan where for several years he taught in the public schools. In 1878 he entered the ministry and had several pastorates, the last one being at Carson City 7 years ago. He has held pastorates in Ohio, Illinois; and in Michigan at Rochester Clinton and Cedar Springs, North Adams and other points. He was a veteran of the Civil War, a member of the G. A. R. and the Maccabees, and a keen bible student.

He is survived by five daughters, Mrs. M. H. Huntwork; Miss Lula Churchill; Mrs. L. P. Hampton; Mrs Geo. Higdon and Mrs. W. Pittman of California and 18 grand-children

In Memoriam

The remains of William Jackson of Brookline, Massachusetts arrived in North Adams on Saturday last, Short services were conducted at Young's undertaking parlors at 2:00 p. m. by Rev. E. O. Mather of Lyons Michigan.

William Wallace Jackson youngest son of Cyrus and Marietta Jackson, was born May 19, 1870, on the Jackson farm east of North Adams Mich., and passed on at the Christian Science Sanitorium at Boston, Mass., August 4, 1925. He was united in marriage to Miss Cressie Worth at Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1910.

His early life was spent near and in North Adams, attended school at North Adams high and in business life became a locomotive engineer until associated with insurance and became superintendent of the Railroad Department with The Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. of California with offices at Cincinnati, and later at Richmond, Va., and Boston Mass.

He was always of a cheerful mind with the ability to make and keep friends, always kind and very generous to those about him, who will remember him in kindness and love. He became a member of the Christian Science church and was a devoted follower, and always an inspiration to those around him, even to the very last day—always hopeful and never complaining.

Science services were held at the Chapel at Boston, many friends being present. Remains were brought panied to North Adams for burial, accompanied by his wife and C. M. Bross of Washington, D. C.

The interment took place in the family lot in North Adams cemetery with beautiful services under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge of which he was a member; he was also a member of Cincinnati Shrine and Elks Lodge 5.

He is survived by his wife Mrs. Cressie M. Jackson, a nephew, Carrel A. Bross of Seattle, Washington and a half sister, Mrs. Edna Collins of Jackson, Michigan, a number of relatives and a multitude of friends to mourn his death.

Coolidge Plans Another Big Tax Reduction. Do You Want to Help or Hinder?

There is a geueral feeling that Coolidge and the administration are doing mighty well—that things are RIGHT with the country.

Do you want Coolidge to go ahead and do you want to KEEP things right with the country?

Answer with your vote for Congressman August 18th

A Republican Cong;essman will help Coolidge. A Democratic Congressman will hinder him. In this Republican district your FAILURE TO VOTE may be half a vote for the Democrat.

The margin of Coolidge support in Congress is close, Democrat2c national leaders are in this district now, saying that with a light vote they have a chance to elect their man—and that they have a chance to set up a majority against Coolidge in the lower house of Congress.

What do YOU say?

Joseph L. Hooper, Republican nominee for Congress, is a brilliant, experienced, clear thinking Republican who stands with Coolidge and for Congress,

The election is Tuesday, August 18th. SAY IT AT THE POLLS.

Mr. Driscoll reports to us that it has been indeed a long time since he has had as pleasant a day as on Tuesday visiting with old friends and acquaintances. He notes with regret many changes among faces and places but says it does the heart good to get back occasionally. He is at present a resident of Ypsilanti where he is the whole works of a firm known as Maxwell M. Hite and son Auctioneers and is engaged in selling small fruit farms in the suburbs. A large tract has already been disposed of to speculators which the company guarantees to furnish all set out with apples, pears cherries, and other small fruit. Mr. Driscoll reports a prosperous business.

Class of 1912 Picnic

The class of 1912 of the North Adams High School held their annual reunion at Farewell Lake on Sunday, August 9th. Members of the class and their families present were: Howard Williams: Rena Knowles; Gurn Baker, Hazel Dryer Baker; Inez Sears Alpaugh of North Adams; Gila Baker of Addison; Emmet Denning of Toledo: Leland Foster of Lansing and Julia Barker Moore of Detroit. A pot-luck dinner was served at noon.

Guests were Ross Scrivens and family, Wilbur Blackmer, Ervie Raymond and family of Jackson, Percy Owens and family, Mrs. Minnie Barker of Detroit, Glen Baker and family.

Distressing Auto Accident

On Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock an accident took place on the gravel road east of North Addams corporation when a Star car driven by Sam Colif, representing the Bertsch Shoe Company of Grand Rapids, collided with the rear of the heavy road grader, The car suffered several contusions of its front had the left hand side frame piece bent almost double, the spring ruined, radiator torn loose and hood damaged. Miss Edith Westcott who was riding with Colif had her head rammed through the windshield and she was quite badly cut by flying glass. Sam was not injured beyond a severe shaking up.

Mr. Bob Trumbull who was driving the grader was thrown into the top by the impact and would have landed in the road but for the same and the grader's heavy rear bumper was considerably bent. Sam's car is covered by insurance but whether Sam himself is covered we did not learn. Miss Westcott was covered —with blood, and was taken to Dr. McFarland's office and had her wounds dressed. No serious results are anticipated. Excessive road dust and considerable speed is given as the cause.

Marriage of Miss Vera Crapser

Friends are in receipt of announcements stating that Miss Vera Crapser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orson Crapser of Moscow township was united in marriage to DeWitt B. Sawyer of Addison at the Methodist church in Addison on Saturday afternoon. August 15th by Revs. James and Gordon, the beautiful ring ceremony being used.

The ceremony was solemnized in the presence of a few immediate relatives. The bride has always resided in Moscow township and graduated from the North Adams High School in 1921, and for the past two years has been the efficient teacher in the Knowles district, the home school.

The groom is also a teacher, having graduated from the Addison High School with the class of 1922 and later he became a student at the State Normal at Ypsilanti and the Ferris Institute at Big Rapids. They have a host of friends in the community who wish them a long prosperous voyage through life.

Directly after the ceremony the couple left for Niagara Falls and Rochester, New York, to visit relatives, and a trip up the Great Lakes to Northern Michigan. Upon returning they will be at home for the present in West Moscow where the groom will teach the coming season.

Mud Lake School Reunion

The Reunion of the Mud Lake school was a rousing success.

About 180 people gathered on the shady lawn of Mud Lake school on Tuesday to help make the day a success.

There were nine old time pupils present, who attended school there during the year of 1860-61, viz: Mrs. Julia Gregory Straw of Adrian Eliza Post Williams and Hattie Bagley Kempton of North Adams, Willard Wyman and Albert Edwards of Hillsdale and Israel Post, Will Sabin, and Melise Welper of Center Adams.

The oldest teacher present was Mrs. Alzina Lane Foote of Jerome who taught here fifty five years ago and she had the pleasure of meeting eight of her pupils at this time.

A bountiful potluck dinner was served at noon, and an interesting program was given.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected for 1926. President, J. I. Post, Secretary Mrs. Alice Williams, Ass't, Secretary, Mrs. Sadie Gray, Treasurer, C. N. Williams. People were present from Toledo, Adrian, Milan, Battle Creek, Ypsilanti, Clayton, Hillsdale Bankers, Allen, Jerome, North Adams.

Rev. M. D. Carrel received the sad news Sunday of the death of his brother Frank G. Carrel of Chicago which occurred at the Coldwater Hospital early Sunday morning. Mr. Carrel with his daughter and family have been camping at Mattison Lake near Bronson this summer and but a few days ago were guests for a time of his brother Rev. and Mrs. Carrel here. On Tuesday last the family started for Fayette Ohio, Mr. Carrel's old home. Near Allen their car struck loose gravel, darted across a ditch and hit a tree. The force of the impact threw Mr. Carrel who was riding in the back seat, backward with great force. He was rushed to the Coldwater Hospital where an X ray examination showed two vertebraes of the neck dislocated and three ribs broken. The other occupants of the car escaped with minor bruises. The car in which they were riding, a Willis St. Clair sedan was badly damaged. Mr. Carrel is survived by three sons, Morton D. of New York City; Gray of Ferguson Missouri; Guy of Western Springs Illinois, and two daughters, Mrs. Olney Dean of Western Springs and Miss Carrie Carrel of Chicago and two brothers, Morton D. of this village and Moses O. of Cleveland Ohio. The body was taken to Fayette Ohio on Tuesday, where funeral services were held at the M. E. church of which Mr. Carrel was formerly a member and burial took place in the beautiful Fayette cemetery beside his wife who passed away several years ago. Deceased was 74 years of age and was born in Hillsdale.

Winterproof Roofs
It takes a roof of real quality to live through many winters of the sort enjoyed along our northern border. From December to March these roofs are subjected to high winds, snow, sleet, hail, with an occasional thaw to make matters worse.
It is for this reason that so many homes in this section are covered with Ruberoid Shingles and Roofing. The illustrations above—taken from actual photographs—especially the close-up of the dormer, show what these roofs have to put up with. Yet Ruberoid Shingles and Roofing thrive under just such punishment.
On many a building there are Ruberoid Roofs, 20, 25, and 30 years old with the limit of their endurance still to be determined. They have withstood the wear and tear of the elements in all parts of the world—in the Tropics and beyond the Arctic Circle.
Among the Ruberoid Products there is one which will fully meet your requirements, whether it be for a twenty-room residence or a three-room bungalow, a schoolhouse or a factory, a church or a theatre.
Come in or phone us today for samples and descriptive folders.
There is but one Ruberoid. Look for the Man on the Label.

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Trouble Caused by Getting Up Too Soon. Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Talcville, New York.—"I thought it would interest you to know what benefit I have derived from taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in a Liverpool (England) paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel rundown I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it."—Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Talcville, New York.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from ills peculiar to their sex. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Country's Manufactures

The last biennial census of manufacturers shows that in 1923 the value of the output of the United States establishments making canned products their primary or secondary business, amounted to $522,763,008. Peas, corn, tomatoes and baked beans are canned in about equal proportion, between 14,000,000 and 15,000,000 cases of each. Peaches head the canned fruits with 7,089,334 cases and raisins, the dried fruits, with 380,068,441 pounds.

Police Arrest Rooster

After a vicious rooster had attacked Miss Lela Hanthorn of Lansing, Mich., as she was walking on the street, the police were called and impounded it on the grounds that its size and disposition made it a public menace as well as a nuisance.

Bones discovered in sediments of volcanic ash in Townsend valley, Montana, show that tapirs and rhinoceroses once inhabited that region.

Why Risk Neglect?

Are you lame and achy; weak and nervous? Do you suffer backache, sharp pains, disturbing bladder irregularities? This condition is often due to a slowing up of the kidneys. The kidneys, you know, are constantly filtering the blood. Once they fall behind in their work, poisons accumulate and undermine one's health. Serious troubles may follow. If you have reason to suspect faulty kidney elimination, try Doan's Pills. Doan's are a tested diuretic, recommended by thousands. Ask your neighbor!

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Marquette—Vance Hardy, escaped Marquette Branch Prison lifer, is back in a cell. In company with two members of the State Police, Hardy was returned here and immediately was placed in a detention cell after being outfitted with prison clothes.

Monroe—That Henry Ford intends to complete a double track spur connecting the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad, three miles south of Maybee this year, was shown when 150 men arrived and are now quartered on a farm east of the village of Petersburg, 20 miles west of Monroe. Many of these will be engaged in erecting culverts, bridges, and laying rails.

Owosso—A delegation of Corunna avenue residents has notified the city commission that they would tear up the tracks of the Michigan Electric Railway company, on Corunna avenue, if something was not done to abate the nuisance created by dust from between the tracks. The street is paved, but not between the tracks. The commission could promise no relief.

Muskegon—The State Administrative Board has approved plans for a double highway project over Muskegon River, it became known here. Local civic bodies have been working on the plan for several months. The estimated cost is $249,527.65. The present highway, a portion of the West Michigan Pike, is too narrow to carry the increasing traffic. The new highways will be 40 feet in width.

Grand Rapids—An allowance of 2 or 3 per cent for collection of the gasoline tax is said to be desired by the Independent Oil Men's association to provide for shrinkage, and this proposal will be placed before Secretary of State Charles J. Deland. The oil men, it is stated, desire to establish definitely the plan of collecting taxes on receipts, that the checking of invoices by auditors may be facilitated.

Flint—A report charging that Glen Williams, sheriff of Genesee County, since Jan. 1, has been guilty of immoral and improper conduct in office by his associations with prisoners in his charge and by padding his expense accounts, has been signed by Circuit Judge James S. Parker, who for the last month has been sitting as a grand jury to hear charges against Williams. The report was sent to Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck.

Manistee—The Federal Government is investigating the practicability of establishing a national forest of 40,000 to 150,000 acres between the Big and Little Manistee Rivers in southeast Manistee and southwest Wexford counties, according to Charles J. Dovel, secretary of the Isaak Walton League here. An inspector recently visited this region with a view to acquiring the cut-over lands for re-forestation, it is said.

Lansing—Notice of a hearing before the interstate commerce commission to untangle the rate mix-up on freight between Toledo and Detroit has been filed before the public utilities commission. The Hanna Furnace company, a Detroit concern operating on Zug island, is the complainant. State freight traffic men believe the suit is an attempt to block rate decreases recently put into effect by Henry Ford on his Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad.

Negaunee—Following the recent strike of employes of the Mary Charlotte mine, workmen at the Rolling Mill Mine, south of here, walked out asking for a return of the wage scale which was in effect when the mine was shut down late last year. At the resumption of operations on May 1, a 15 per cent reduction in wages was put into effect, but the property was worked six instead of five days, a schedule now in effect at the other mines in the district.

Mt. Clemens—A proposal to increase the local tax rate from $7.50 a thousand to a sum adequate to discontinue the necessity for small bond issues to take care of public improvements, is being considered by the local business men's association, which plans to have the project submitted to the voters at a special election. A resolution was adopted by the association urging the Grand Trunk railroad to put on a sleeping car service between Mt. Clemens and New York and Chicago.

Port Huron—Officials of the Detroit United Railway, which owns the City Electric Railway Co., has requested permission of the city commission to increase street car fares here to meet the existing deficit. The railway officials said that they would improve the service and repair streets between the rails if granted a temporary fare increase of seven cents for straight fares, four tickets for 25 cents and 17 tickets for $1, and 10-cent straight fares on buses. The city commission took the request under advisement.

Manistique—Mrs. Mary Labrasseur, of this city, was picking berries on the plains north of the city when she became tired and looked about for a stump on which to sit and rest. A short distance away she saw what appeared to be a good sized stump. Looking at it more closely she found that she had almost sat down on a live bear, just awakening from its slumbers. With a shriek she leaped from her seat. The bear raised itself, blinked its eyes, stretched out its paws, and then lumbered rapidly away in the opposite direction.

Ann Arbor—Jesse Lynch Williams, graduate of Princeton and a journalist and novelist of note, will hold the Michigan Fellowship in Creative Art, it is announced by University of Michigan officials. He will spend most of the coming college year in Ann Arbor, occupying the place formerly held by Robert Frost and later by Robert Bridges, poet laureate of England. Mr. Williams is the author of the first version of "Why Marry," which won the Pulitzer prize for the best American play of the year. He was president of the Author's League.

Caro—William Ward, 65 years old, a pioneer of Tuscola county, is dead at his farm home near Millington from injuries suffered when he was gored by a bull which he was leading. He leaves his widow and five children.

Port Huron—Many farmers in the Thumb district, warned by recent hail storms, which have done thousands of dollars of damage in a limited area, are hastening to take out hail insurance on their crops, especially beans.

Allegan—The Allegan Postoffice was robbed and approximately $800 was taken from one of the safes. Entrance was effected through a basement window and two other doors were jimmied before the main floor was reached.

Albion—The Calhoun County Highway Commission at its regular weekly meeting decided to purchase gasoline in the wholesale market. It is estimated that a saving of 3 1-2 cents a gallon will be the result, with a saving of about $210 a month.

Grand Rapids—At a recent election the village of East Grand Rapids annexed 485 acres of Paris Township lying south of the present village limits. Although the township voted 36 to 18 against the annexation, the favorable majority in the village overcame the township vote.

Marcellus—The life of James Stevens, a farmer of Violina township, Cass county, was saved by his dog, which gave battle to a bull that had attacked Stevens, hurled him to the ground and was goring him. Stevens was injured severely. Neighbors, who owned the bull, shot the animal.

Grand Rapids—County jail prisoners will be employed by City Manager Fred H. Locke to remove shrubs and weeds growing luxuriously in the bed of Grand River, north of the Bridge street bridge. The low water period a month ago permitted the weeds to virtually cover the river bed.

Mt. Pleasant—A log cabin will soon be placed on the campus of the Central Michigan Normal college as a memorial to the early settlers of central Michigan. Funds for the project have been raised by student entertainments and faculty. A cabin near Mt. Pleasant will be torn down and rebuilt on the campus in a cluster of trees.

Grayling—The state of Michigan is to receive a gift valued at more than $500,000 in the form of World War trophies to be distributed to the various legion posts, military and patriotic organizations throughout the state, Lieutenant Colonel Leroy Pearson, United States property officer and quartermaster general for the state, announced here.

Ann Arbor—The Mack Trucks, Inc., of New York City, has established a fellowship in highway transport to be devoted to investigations during 1925-1926 under the direction of the division of highway engineering and highway transport at the University of Michigan, covering an approved subject relative to highway transport.

Jackson—The raid made by State Police on the home of Henry Hayden, "gentleman farmer," seven miles northeast of Jackson, has created a sensation in Jackson County. Hayden is a former mayor of Jackson, a former police commission and at one time a deputy United States marshal. He is one of the wealthiest men in central Michigan and 20 years ago had one of the finest racing stables of trotters and pacers in the country.

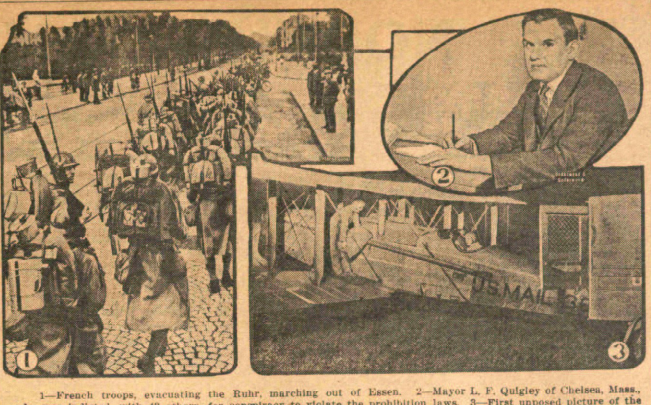
Battle Creek—While Mrs. Minnie Jones, 57 years old, watched the casket of her husband being lowered into a grave in the Marengo Township cemetery, Sheriff George Colby stepped forward and informed her that she was under arrest for the murder of the man she was mourning. William Jones, former wealthy Marengo farmer, died under suspicious circumstances. An analysis of his stomach showed traces of arsenic.

Detroit—Leo Sauerman, recently pardoned by Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck after serving two years of a life sentence for the murder of Alex Dombrowski in a highjacking raid, is in the toils again. He is accused with "Whitey" Hayes of robbing the near-beer saloon of "Buck" Porter at 2012 West Fort street. At police headquarters Sauerman gave the name of Albert Gordon, but he afterwards was recognized by a detective. He abused the officer for revealing his identity.

Ann Arbor—Gains in liberal arts, pharmacy, education and the graduate school of the summer session of the University of Michigan offset losses in the engineering, medical and law schools to allow the present school to record the highest attendance of any summer session, a total of 3,205. Liberal arts had a gain of 83 and the graduate school 72 to offset losses of 71 and 73 in the engineering and medical schools. The previous high record, set at year ago, was 3,147.

Muskegon—William R. Rumler, member of the Chicago Yacht club, his wife, three sons and two daughters were rescued here when their 38-foot yawl, Seacall, went ashore in heavy seas on Lake Michigan beach, 7 miles south of here. Hugo Kanitz, Jr., star Muskegon High school football player for the last three years, aided the Coast Guards by swimming from the stranded ship and retrieving a line when the Coast Guards, due to the heavy seas, were unable to get it aboard.

Flint—An attempt on the part of an inmate of the Michigan Home and Training school at Lapeer to wreck one or more passenger trains on the Grand Trunk Railway near Davison, was unsuccessful, when the International Flier, westbound from Port Huron to Chicago, cut in two a telephone pole that had been placed across the tracks. The train was not derailed. Henry Bush, 42 years old, an inmate of the home, found on the tracks some distance away, was arrested and confessed that he placed the poles, according to officers.



1—French troops, evacuating the Ruhr, marching out of Essen. 2—Mayor L. F. Quigley of Chelsea, Mass., who was indicted, with 43 others, for conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws. 3—First unposed picture of the night air mail, showing a plane being loaded at Hadley field, New Brunswick, N. J.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

France and Britain Agree on Reply to Germany —Crop Report of Government.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FRANCE and Great Britain, in the persons of Foreign Minister Briand and Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain, have reached complete agreement as to the reply which the allies are to make to Germany's latest note on a security pact for Europe. The text will not be made public until it has been submitted to Italy, Belgium and Japan, and then delivered to Berlin. However, enough of its nature has leaked out to show that it is cordial in tone and calculated to persuade Germany of the friendly intentions of the other nations. Dealing with only a few points specifically, it suggests that the time is ripe for getting down to business, which presumably will take the form first of conversations among the ambassadors and foreign offices. It is hoped the foreign ministers can get together for the final arrangements in September, when the League of Nations is in session.

France still insists on preserving her leadership over central Europe and therefore still demands that the eastern boundaries of Germany, as well as the western, be guaranteed. This is not acceptable to Great Britain, any more than it is to Germany. France also clings to her claim to the right to send troops through Germany to help Poland in case the Poles are attacked by Russia. Germany doesn't concede this and the British are loath to insist on it.

The allies probably will insist that Germany first of all enter the League of Nations. This Berlin is willing to do only with special treatment in respect to Article 16 of the covenant. Also, the Germans will demand that they be given mandates over at least some of their former African colonies. In the reichstag last week the government was attacked for "making concessions to the whole world that fail to take into account Germany's national honor." In replying, Foreign Minister Stresemann said:

"As to our right to have colonies I can only state that the first time the question of our entering the League of Nations was debated Germany took the stand that as long as the league distributes colonies and accepts the principle that fully civilized nations have the right to control the less progressive nations, the Germans have the right to be counted among the civilized nations. On this point, too, Germany demands full equality and rights."

BARON VON MALTZAN, German ambassador to Washington, has handed to Secretary of State Kellogg the formal request of his government that the United States return the German properties seized during the war and now in the custody of the alien property custodian. The State department's reply must be that it is necessary to await the action of congress on the matter. The properties were seized by act of congress and that body stipulated that they could be disposed of only under congressional authority. Those yet retained are valued at about $300,000,000.

That Germany would make this claim was expected, but it is probable that it will reopen the whole matter of the collection of American claims on Germany for payment for damages sustained by American citizens during the war, including the Lusitania claims, and for the expenses of maintaining the American army of occupation in the Rhine country. There are many advocates of the proposition that the seized properties should be kept to liquidate these debts, in part. The entire matter is up to congress.

NEGOTIATIONS for the funding of the Belgian debt, now in progress in Washington, were not especially satisfactory last week. Each side put forward a proposition which the other side rejected, so it was necessary to seek new ground. Evidently, the two commissions were rather far apart in their views on Belgium's capacity to pay, which is the crucial point. There was still no doubt expressed that they would finally come come to an agreement. It has been decided that Belgium shall be granted a brief moratorium, but the problems of the interest rate, the annual payments on account of principal and the number of years in which the whole debt is to be retired are yet unsettled.

According to the government press of Rome, Italy hopes the total of her American debt will be made a variable sum, somewhat like the German reparations under the Dawes plan. Ambassador de Martino will soon return to Washington with the proposition that Italy is ready to pay to the limit of her capacity, but that the matter should be considered in the light of possible participation of American capital in Italian private and public industrial enterprises.

UNCLE SAM made public last week his guess at the total of crops that the American farmer will raise this year. At current prices the wheat and corn crops, as forecast, will be worth close to $4,000,000,000. The Department of Agriculture places the wheat crop at 679,000,000 bushels and that of corn at 2,956,000,000.

The 1,387,000,000 bushels of oats, at farm prices, is estimated at $416,000,000, the 214,000,000 bushels of barley at $128,000,000, and the 52,000,000 bushels of rye at $47,000,000. This would make the five grain crops at close to $4,500,000,000.

Total for the five grains—wheat, corn, rye, oats and barley—was 5,285,000,000 bushels, or 183,000,000 more than harvested last year and 67,000,000 less than suggested by the report August 1 last year.

The most striking feature in the winter wheat report is the smallness of the Kansas crop, 66,000,000 bushels, the poorest showing with three exceptions in the last 20 years. Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma combined have 121,735,000 bushels, a drop of more than 10,000,000 bushels last month and of 141,000,000 bushels from last year.

A spring wheat crop of 268,000,000 bushels decreased 13,000,000 from July and 20,000,000 from last year. Minnesota, the Dakotas, and Montana have 187,000,000 bushels, a loss of 12,000,000 from last month and 56,000,000 from last year.

A corn crop estimate of 2,956,000,000 bushels represented a loss of 139,000,000 as a result of heat and drought last month, yet the promise is 22,000,000 above the average and a gain of 519,000,000 bushels over last year. The nine big states where the surplus corn is raised have 1,995,000,000 bushels, a loss of 85,000,000 from last month and a gain of 454,000,000 compared with a year ago.

One of the big surprises of the report was the showing in oats, 1,387,000,000 bushels, or 95,000,000 bushels more than last month and compared with 1,542,000,000 bushels last year. The five-year average is 1,328,000,000 bushels.

CHICAGO and the region round about was much stirred last week by the arrest of Col. Will Gray Beach, chief narcotic agent there, and three of his aids, on charges of trafficking in drugs. This action followed close upon a raid in which Kitty Gilhooley, "queen of the dope peddlers," was arrested and a great quantity of dope seized. Later many opium joints in Chicago were raided, and there were fears that a new tong war would break out because members of one tong accused those of another tong of being informers. In the apartment of Colonel Beach were found many Oriental treasures, some radio sets and other articles of value which it was suspected he had obtained in trade for seized narcotics. He asserts they were legitimately purchased by him from addicts. It is alleged that the activities of the government agents in Chicago have smashed a dope ring that operated throughout the country, and that the subsequent revelations will involve politicians, lawyers and policemen in various cities.

ON THE northwest part of the fighting line in Morocco the French, moving northward from the Ouezzan sector, and the Spanish, moving down from the El Arish region, have effected a junction and started a joint offensive with the purpose of rolling up the right wing of Abd-el-Krim's army and pushing it toward Chechouan. This movement, according to dispatches from Fez, is going far toward destroying the power of the Riff leader, for some of the tribes have told him they will fight no longer outside of their own territory, and others have opened negotiations for peace with the French. It is announced in Paris that Marshal Petain, the defender of Verdun, is being sent to Morocco to take the supreme command there and to direct a great offensive planned for September. The army of 200,000 has been reorganized by General Naulin, commander in the field, and most of the infantry are being supplied with the new Chattellerault automatic rifles.

The revolting Druses in Syria, after killing or capturing 817 French soldiers, are now on the defensive, having been driven out of Suediah.

OFFICIALS of the United Mine Workers announce that if the government interferes with the proposed anthracite strike, the union will ask that the authorities first consider alleged wage-cutting in the soft coal fields. In the background is the implied threat to call out the bituminous coal miners.

W. W. Inglis of Scranton, chairman of the scale committee of the anthracite operators, said: "We have feared that, as in the past, the anthracite industry would become the victim of soft coal necessities. Our industry is relatively a small part of the coal industry as a whole. The mine workers' union is dominant in both hard and soft coal fields, and however it may affect the feelings of hard coal producers and consumers, they have always come in for secondary consideration whenever there has been a conflict of interests between hard and soft coal."

PARDON for Warren T. McCray, former governor of Indiana, is urged on Attorney General Sargent in a petition signed by 14 governors of states, seven of the jurors who convicted him and 30 bankers who were victims of his fraudulent transactions. Many other persons also signed the petition. McCray was sentenced to ten years in prison and has served but a year and three months. His long career of service to his state is cited in his favor.

THERE is now little doubt that John W. Weeks will soon resign his post as secretary of war because of his continued ill health. He visited President Coolidge at the White House last week, and while it was denied that he already had resigned, administration officials said there were small chance for his ever resuming his duties in the cabinet. Indeed, Mr. Weeks himself said that because of the condition of his health following his operation last spring he was doubtful whether he would be able to return to Washington this fall, and that it was possible he might not take up his cabinet work again.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is said to be considering several men for the place of ambassador to Japan, made vacant by the death of Edgar A. Bancroft. Among those mentioned as possibilities are Frank W. Mondell, William C. Boyden, a Chicago attorney, and William M. Bullitt, who was solicitor general for a time under President Taft.

NEW YORK'S mayoralty campaign is interesting the whole country. Mayor Hylan, backed by Hearst, is out after re-election and Tammany has selected State Senator James J. Walker to oppose Hylan in the Democratic primaries. A Republican-Fusion ticket has been made up, headed by Frank D. Waterman, but W. M. Bennett, a frequent Republican candidate in the primaries, announces that he will again try to get the nomination.

MUSTAPHA KEMAL PASHA, president of Turkey, has divorced his wife, Latife Hanoum, who was one of the foremost feminists of Turkey. At the same time Kemal issued another presidential decree abolishing all the old regulations governing the dress of Turkish women.

Religious Groups Will Discuss Secular Issues

Stockholm.—Leaders in religious work from all parts of the world will attend the Universal Christian conference on life and work, which will begin August 19, and continue through August 30. The conference is unique in that, although most of the conferees are clergymen, it will discuss practical problems of everyday life.

The American delegates, numbering about 150, expect to take home information which will be distributed to churches throughout the United States, bearing upon leading questions of the day.

The program of the conference has been so arranged that certain periods will be devoted to the discussion of these topics. These discussions will be opened by the presentation of reports prepared by special commissions in the United States, Great Britain and continental Europe. The American commissions started work on their reports more than a year ago under the leadership of some of the country's most distinguished clergymen, representing all denominations.

One of the most interesting reports will be presented by the commission on "The Church and Christian Education," of which the Rev. William Adams Brown of Union Theological seminary, New York, is chairman. This topic has aroused unusual interest on account of the present movement in the United States to bring about religious education through the public school system.

Visit Detroit This Summer
And Enjoy a Real Vacation

Put-In-Bay in Lake Erie

The most picturesque and delightful Summer pleasure Island near Detroit. Every sport that pleases: Bathing, dancing, sailing; explore the mysterious caves; see Perry's battle monument, picnic groves, athletic fields. Numerous fine hotels and cottages cater to Summer visitors and at reasonable prices. Stay a day or a week and enjoy yourself, forget your troubles and renew your health.

This beautiful island playground is reached only by the palatial and speedy day excursion steamer PUT-IN-BAY. One great deck devoted to dancing and music; restful cabins and breeze-swept open decks.

Steamer PUT-IN-BAY gives excursions daily from Detroit to Put-In-Bay Island at 9 a. m. from the wharf at the foot of First Street. Four hours crowded with pleasure at the island, and arrive back in Detroit at 8 p. m. Fare for the round trip 80 cents week days; Sundays and Holidays, $1.25.

Cedar Point and Sandusky, Ohio

After leaving Put-In-Bay Island the steamer sails on through the narrow channels among the delightful Lake Erie Islands to Sandusky and Cedar Point, Ohio. Cedar Point, just across the bay from Sandusky, is known as the Atlantic City of the West. With its huge hotels, electric park, magnificent bathing beach and board walk it is easily the Queen of the Great Lakes Summer resorts.

On Fridays, after July 4, steamer Put-In-Bay gives a special excursion to Cedar Point, allowing four hours at the wonderful resort, and reaching Detroit at 10:30 p. m.

The Final Result Shows For Itself

At the late election held on Tuesday it is evident the various elements got busy and cut up seriously with the Republican program as Mr. Carney carried Hillsdale county by a substantial majority. We imagine that conditions here were governed largely by the fact that reports have been spread concerning Mr. Hooper's stand on the temperance question. Some of the female voters became panic struck at the last moment and flew the coop, at least it looks as if they had did something of the sort.

We fail to understand why anyone who had announced their intention previously of voting for Mr Hooper should so suddenly change their mind. The condition between Primary and general election have not changed one iota no matter what is said. Mr. Hooper stands for law enforcement and always will. The results in this county do not justify the efforts of political or church workers. While Mr. Carney is no doubt sincere in his claims yet for a mere bagatelle. Mr. Hooper has been thrown down in a republican county. We sincerely believe that never before have party lines in this county been so thoroughly obliterated as in the recent election. Genuine honest-to goodness Republicans have no doubt gone to the polls and deliberately voted for Mr. Carney and a number of old-line Democrats likewise supported Mr. Hooper, so that to-day it is very hard to estimate the real Republican or Democratic strength. Perhaps the old-line parties will cease to exist and we shall have in their places a couple of pros and cons (name unknown.) If it should come to pass then the country will be better off than it was. When thinking men and women awake to the fact that there is an issue more vital than party lines, and take advantage of such conditions to rid the country of certain conditions, then we'll say the country is saved. Hoop'er for Hooper!

Put In Bay

The steamer Put In Bay, which operates daily between Detroit, Put In Bay and Sandusky, Ohio, will close the season with an excursion to these Lake Erie ports on Labor Day. Practically only two weeks remain to enjoy an all day lake and river trip on this wonderful day excursion steamer.

Put In Bay island is one of the most attractive summer resorts in the vicinity of Detroit, and is visited daily by hundreds of excursionists not only from Detroit, but from Toledo, Cleveland and Sandusky. The island offers every opportunity for a delightful day in the open. The bass fishing is especially fine at the present time; the bathing beach is one of the most attractive in the lake region, and the Pike is a source of unfailing interest. Considerable time is needed to explore the caves on the island, and of course the outstanding feature of a visit to Put In Bay is the Perry battle monument 350 feet high. A magnificent view of Lake Erie and the islands is obtained from the top of the monument.

Cedar Point, Ohio, which is reached by the steamer Put In Bay after a delightful run among the islands in Lake Erie. Huge hotels famous for their accommodations, and every entertainment feature immaginable including the seven mile bathing beach and board walk make this resort a rival of Atlantic City, and a delightful spot to spend a vacation.

The steamer Put In Bay sails from the dock at the foot of First street, Detroit every morning at 9 a. m. and returns at 8 p. m. except Friday when a longer stay is permitted at Put In Bay and Cedar Point, and the boat returns to Detroit at 10:30 p. m.

The Proposed Detroit River Bridge

It begins to look as if there were a chance for the building of a highway bridge across the Detroit river between Detroit and Windsor or some adjacent border city. For the first time since such a project has been suggested, it appears to have excited the interest of real money, although the McClintic Marshall Company has been nibbling at it as a big construction job for several years, first through Pittsburgh financial backing, and now through a New York trust company.

There are not so many international bridges where the boundary between this country and Canada is a waterway that there may not be a good deal of interest in this project, or even in the picture that is being offered at this time. The railroads have made a pretty useful highway across Canada from the Niagara frontier to the Detroit river frontier, and with the development of good roadways the motorists have become pretty well used to it as a route. The highway over the Niagara river is a well used one but even it does not lie so near a large center of population as the proposed Detroit river bridge is proposed to serve. With a million and a half people in Southeastern Michigan and another million with in easy travel distance thereof, it would seem that a highway bridge across the Detroit river would create a tremendous lane of motorist travel, which cannot fail to do two things. One of these would be a substantial increase of motor car use, which means more motor cars The other would seem to be a great sight seeing and tourist trade of much value to Southeastern Michigan, now quite off direct routes.

The engineering proposition relating to this bridge was developed a few years ago by Charles E. Fowler, an eminent bridge engineer, to be a very simple one, in connection with the project of the unlucky and ill fated Russell Scott whose recent appearances in the public eye have not been creditable It involves only enough money—in the present instance an amount stated to be 12 millions. This will have to produce at least a million and a quarter dollars a year gross to pay interest on the investment and provide operation and maintenance for the structure. At the present ferrying price across the Detroit river two and a half million crossings by individual cars will earn the income. This number is only a daily average of 7,000 crossings one way. There are that many cars passing given points in Detroit in an hour.

Ford And Flying

Be it Henry Ford or Edsel Ford who has become the "daddy" of aviation in these parts, it makes little difference. The father has given the credit to the son as the representative of an on coming rather than a going generation. But the fact that the Ford interests have taken over the Stout aviation program means that for the first time in America aviation has ample capital behind it; and capital is what it has needed all the time. Those who take an interest in the subject will recall that heretofore the resources of governments have been required to promote experiments in aviation; and so far as the resources of some governments are concerned nowadays the Fords could buy and sell half a dozen of them.

The climax of the Ford interest in aviation has been reached by patient and painful stages in Michigan; but the stages show how patriotic and pushing men can put an idea on the map of fact. First of all was Mr. Stout, with what has been proved to be his very good engineering. Next was the bunch of sporty fellows who put their money behind him, not a whole lot for any, but a lot for all. None of them foresaw profit, but modest profit has come. Meantime they nursed their baby, and the baby has been adopted by a competent and amiable foster father.

The Ford investment in aviation means much to Michigan, in prestige, profit and manufacturing advance. Mr. Ford will not be permitted to be the only beneficiary. If there is money in it he will have competitors. He takes that chance and can afford it. Meantime the world gains.—The Manufacturer.

Agricultural Exhibits in The United States

In 1810, one fair; in 1925, two thousand fairs. In 1810, an attendance of about five thousand; in 1925 an estimated attendance of approximately twenty five million.

These figures, in a nutshell, tell the story of the marvelous growth of the American fair from the humblest beginning to its present day status as an important factor in agricultural education. They are of especial interest here in view of the approaching Hillsdale fair which will be held September 28 to October 3.

While the fair idea has been taken hold of tremendously in the United States, it is not native to this country. Fairs run back to ancient days, but in the olden times they were more after the manner of a bazaar on market, only held with less frequency, very much like the fairs in vogue in Germany and other European countries today. The American fair traces its ancestry back only to about the middle of the eighteenth century, when a group of progressive farmers in the Tees River valley in northeastern Britian joined to bring their livestock together for comparison. It has been termed the first agricultural fair and was the model after which were patterned the hundreds of county fairs both here and in England.

Great Leaders Passing

The sudden and untimely passing of William Jennings Bryan, idol and leader for over thirty years of the Democratic party, recalls the fact that during recent years many great leaders in politics, industry and finance have passed to their final accounting. Death has been no respector to either of the two great national parties, both having lost in Wilson, Bryan and Roosevelt their foremost national characters, while the so-called 3rd party was practically stripped of every vestige of leadership in the death of LaFollette. Labor suffered a great and unsurmountable loss in the demise of Gompers, who for years had reigned supreme in the world of labor. Living, we may have differed with these men, but dead we have only respect for their integrity, their patriotism and their high purpose of perpetuating in America our great ideals of representative government. We can only hope that the leaders who arise to take their places will measure up to the same high standards of citizenship that the dead leaders possessed.

DEATH TAXES AS BUSINESS KILLERS

Assistant Treasury Secretary Tells Fable of Fate of Two Successful Men.

Men cannot be expected to continue to work, day after day, increasing the productiveness of this country and benefiting others, if they know that on death the major portion of their earnings will be dissipated in Federal estate and state inheritance taxes, declares Charles S. Dewey, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in the American Bankers Association Journal. He says:

"I am going to relate a fable in terms of modern business conditions. John Henry and Walter Brown were aggressive, hard-working men, and each had started business for himself.

"At the time this history opens, John Henry had just died, leaving his entire estate to his son, John Henry, Jr., and had appointed his old friend, Walter Brown, as executor. Prior to his death John Henry had moved to California, leaving his business in the hands of his son under whom it had continued to make excellent headway. The father had been doing a little speculating in oil. This venture had not proved successful and he was indebted in the sum of $500,000.

Capital stock of Henry & Co., Inc., a Michigan Corpn.	$5,000,000
Personal debts due banks	500,000

"Walter Brown soon made the unpleasant discovery that in addition to the personal indebtedness of $500,000; and administration expenses of $250,000, the following death duties must be paid:

Federal estate tax	$497,500
California inheritance tax	585,700
Michigan inheritance tax	122,000
Total	$1,205,200

"Added to the personal debt and administration expenses, this made a grand total liability of $1,955,200. The year was 1920. Money was tight. Other manufacturing companies in the same line which might have been interested in a purchase had no money for extensions nor were the banks in a position to handle a loan of this type. Here was a most successful business, built up from small beginnings by one man and carried on to further successes by his son, about to be placed under the hammer.

"Is there any justice in taxation that may force a man and his family to lose the fruits of his entire life's labor, and permit others to benefit? As a last resort, Henry, Jr., was forced into a bond issue. A loan, to settle the debts, administration expenses and death duties, of $2,250,000 was negotiated, upon the following basis:

"The capital stock of the company was left at $5,000,000 represented by 50,000 shares. First mortgage 8 per cent bonds were offered the public with a bonus of two shares of stock with each $1,000 bond. The banker, to protect his bond customers, kept 30,000 shares to assure control of management, and John Henry, Jr., received the balance of 15,500 shares. John now has a good job as general manager of his father's old company, but they do not pay him very much.

"Now we must return to Walter Brown, executor of John Henry, Sr. Walter had always kept close to his own manufacturing business. The more he considered his own situation, the more closely it seemed to him to resemble that of his old friend.

"He therefore called a lawyer and made a complete schedule of his assets, requesting that an estimate of administration expenses and death duties be made. The schedule of assets was as follows:

Capital stock, Walter Brown Co., Mich. Corp.	$4,000,000
California real estate	1,000,000
Tax-exempt bonds, Minn., Mont. and Colo.	500,000
Total	$5,500,000

"Within a few days Mr. Brown's lawyer made the following report:

Debts and admin. expenses		$500,000
Fed. estate tax	$710,625
Cal. inheritance tax	443,194
Mich. inheritance tax	260,409
Minn. inheritance tax	4,289
Mont. inheritance tax	4,486
Colo. inheritance tax	2,700
Total death duties		1,425,703
Total expenses		$1,925,703

"On this basis the estate suffered a reduction from $5,500,000 to approximately $3,574,000, thus wiping out all assets except the corporate stock and placing a heavy loan on that. Mr. Brown had one son and, as he thought of John Henry, Jr., toiling away with little hope of opportunity he determined that he would not subject his own son to the same tribulations.

"Boom times having come, there was no difficulty obtaining a purchaser for Walter Brown & Co., and the California real estate was sold at a good price. The whole was invested in tax-exempt bonds which yielded a very safe return of about 4½ per cent. Walter Brown then moved his legal residence to the more friendly climate of Florida, where state inheritance and income taxes are forbidden.

"The country suffers by the loss of effort which Walter Brown might have continued to expend under a more intelligent system of taxation. We must reform the tax system in such a way that business and industry shall not be hampered. We must make sure that American citizens shall not be deprived of the incentive to work and accumulate and that this country shall not cease to be a land of opportunity. A tax system which discourages initiative cannot be the right system for America."

G MONEY rIT BUSINESS

When Times Are Active the Supply Increases—Contraction Follows Seasonal and Periodic Slackening.

New York. — Demonstration that complete elasticity has been imparted to the currency in the United States by the Federal Reserve System despite assertions to the contrary is given in the American Bankers Association Journal by W. Randolph Burgess, assistant agent at the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

"Of all the money in circulation in the United States, Federal Reserve notes now make up almost one-half," he says in part. "In 1920 they were 70 per cent. The increase in currency which the war and high world prices made necessary was provided almost wholly by Federal Reserve notes. Just as the increase was wholly through Federal Reserve notes, so again the decrease was altogether in Federal Reserve notes. Reserve notes in circulation decreased from $3,300,000,000 in November, 1920, to $1,700,000,000 in March, 1925. Between the same dates other currency increased from $1,500,000,000 to $2,300,000,000, due to an increase in gold certificates.

"There are still some few who produce theoretical arguments to show that for some reason the Federal Reserve note is not elastic. These various arguments raise interesting questions, but they make little headway against the facts, for the facts show that the Federal Reserve note has been elastic.

How Currency Changes Volume

"The amount of currency the country requires reflects changing prices, wage levels, employment and volume of trade. As an example, retail trade at Christmas time is always larger than at other times. This results in a considerable increase in the need for hand to hand currency. Currency withdrawals and receipts at the Federal Reserve Banks illustrate the way this special demand was met. Prior to Christmas there was paid out about $300,000,000 of currency, all of which was returned to the bank within the two or three weeks following Christmas.

"The mechanism is that when Federal Reserve member banks need currency for their customers they draw it from the Reserve Bank. Member banks can secure additional currency by borrowing at the Reserve Bank. Conversely, whenever currency in circulation becomes larger than is required by business it begins to return to the banks and they immediately utilize it to pay off indebtedness at the Reserve Banks, on which they are paying interest.

"The Federal Reserve System has made all types of currency, except national bank notes, elastic because all except those notes can be issued in amounts required and they all tend to flow back to the Reserve Bank when they are not required. There is another phase of currency elasticity. A $100 Federal Reserve note may represent only $40 in gold, because a gold reserve of only 40 per cent is required against Federal Reserve notes. On the other hand, a $100 gold certificate must represent $100 in gold. Thus the Federal Reserve Banks can issue, in response to commercial demand, two and one-half times as many Federal Reserve notes as gold certificates before the reserve ratio reaches the legal minimum.

Secondary Stretch

"This secondary elasticity was illustrated during the war, when in response to war demands Federal Reserve notes were issued to the amount of $3,405,000,000. The Federal Reserve System could have issued more than $800,000,000 additional without lowering the reserve against notes below 40 per cent, or the reserve against deposits below 35 per cent. In any emergency the power to issue these notes increases by 150 per cent the amount of cash which might be supplied to the country.

"Federal Reserve currency has proved itself flexible in war expansion and in post-war reductions. Since the establishment of the System the currency has been responsive to the seasonal and emergency needs of business. The Federal Reserve Act obtained currency elasticity by placing the country's reserve cash in institutions not organized for profit, from which currency might be withdrawn or to which it might be returned in response to the country's needs. While the existence of the Reserve System gives flexibility to almost all forms of currency, the Federal Reserve notes, secured in part by commercial paper, provides a possible secondary expansion in readiness for an emergency."

SUPPLYING THE NATION'S CHANGE

Supplying the wealthiest nation in the world with change is a job of tremendous proportions. During 1924 the United States mints struck off 89,394,000 one cent pieces and 28,315,000 nickels. The small change of the nation was enlarged by 37,940,000 dimes and 16,892,000 quarters. While a drive was started to popularize the silver dollar, only 13,539,000 of the "silver cartwheels" were coined. Singularly, the half-dollar is the most unpopular coin that the United States makes. During 1925 there were just 142,080 half-dollars struck off, and all of these were the commemorative Huguenot-Walloon coins. The mints coined [illegible] double eagles.

Bill Jones of Marshall went out and remarked to a neighbor the other day "Well, the cat and dog have been poisoned, I'm next." And just because Bill made these reckless breaks, officers are investigating his sudden demise on Tuesday of two weeks ago. Looks wormy from the outside. When Mrs. Jones returned from her husband's funeral obsequies they nabbed her and incarcerated her in the county jail. The boys took Bill's tummy and analyzed it only to find large quantities of arsenic. Mrs. Bill says its all a mistake and she will be found entirely innocent of anything wrong She is reported as a very nervy woman and ate an exceptionally hearty supper in jail and topped off with ice cream furnished by her neighbors who seem to also think she is a poor insulted woman. The world is living fast. The other day a lady in Chicago gave a man $400 to put her husband out of her way and he did, but the authorities got next. It does beat the Dutch how some women are "off with the old and on with the new."

President Coolidge took Arthur Brisbane in the little party for the Sunday boat ride down the river on the Mayflower last Sunday. (Remember it costs five hundred thousand a year to keep the Mayflower in trim for these boat rides and five thousand special for each trip in these days of paper economy.) Everybody knows, I reckon who Arthur Brisbane is—the special writer for the Hearst papers and the highest paid newspaper writer in the world, probably. He reaches more people every day than any other living mortal, and a little kindness to him goes a long ways, as it does with everybody else. I am going to watch the "To day" column with just a little more interest to see if Arthur "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb."

Work On M-23 and M-14 Going Ahead

Cement pouring by the state road makers on M-23 south of Brooklyn is now completed from the Irish Hills towers west to a point past Cambridge Junction and the Nixon farms west of the Smith Briggs place. The road makers have lately ayeraged about 600 feet a day with 716 feet as the highest amount of the 20 ft. pavement poured one day last week. Nearing the source of material supply only five instead of seven supply trains are now run to Cement City for gravel and cement.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Grading on M-14 is nearly completed from M-23 at Egbert Every's corner south to the Addison village limits north, and from the south limits to Hudson. The large 30 foot concrete bridge over Bean Creek south of town is progressing rapidly in construction and as soon as this is complete grading will probably be started through the village.—Addison Courier

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit; the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

Dated, August 7, 1925.

MRS. GRACE V. GRAY (SITTING)
MRS. ELLEN R. DICKEY (IN OVAL)

Mrs. Grace Viall Gray, widely-known club woman, lecturer and home economics expert, is the new director of "Homemakers' Hour" of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation radio station, WLS. This feature, broadcast every afternoon between 3:45 and 4:45, deals with every topic of interest to farm women.

Another woman who aids the farm home by radio is Mrs. Ellen Rose Dickey, who is Home Adviser of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, rendering personal service to thousands of inquiries. Home management, home economics, children, correct dress, beauty hints, recipes and home decoration are among the subjects Mrs. Dickey includes on her programs.

ARSONIST CONFESSES, DRAWS STIFF SENTENCE

Russell Boyer, pool room owner, confessed to firing his place to secure insurance after evidence had been obtained against him by Lieutenant Joseph Kearney and Trooper Aldrich of the Michigan State Police. He was sentenced to Ionia reformatory. It was three months after the fire, and after other officers had failed to solve it, that the troopers secured the evidence. Boyer also confessed firing two other buildings in the vicinity.

CO-OPS

There are many small co-operatives throughout the United States, handling wool, peanuts, watermelons, strawberries, beans, syrup, and other products. The government reports that there are at least 10,000 local co-operative organizations in the United States. The Iowa Fleece and Wool Growers' Association does an annual business of $2,836,259; the Ohio Sheep and Wool Growers, $1,500,000; the Oregon wool growers, $500,000; while the New York, Texas and South Dakota Associations are said to be handling about a quarter of a million dollars' business each.

A Memorial To The Women Of Every Land

Recognizing that the world is but a larger home and that women in a large sense are conservators of home and family, the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union with affiliated societies in fifty one nations, hereby memorializes the women of every land:

1. To study the effects of alcohol which science finds to be a racial poison. 2. To unite with us in voluntary abstinence from all alcoholic beverages and in all well considered efforts to limit and prohibit their manufacture and sale. 3. To unite our efforts for the protection of the home, the promotion of purity and the end of all war. We confidently believe that united womanhood can win a world campaign for peace, purity and prohibition.

The World's W. C. T. U. whose object is to unify the efforts of the women of all nations for temperance and social welfare, announces the following program of activies:

1. To promote total abstinence through pledge signing and through the teaching in schools and elsewhere of the fact, based on science that alcohol is a racial poison.

2. To work in every country for the passage of laws seeking the annihilation of the trade in beverage alcohol.

3. To work for the establishment of world peace.

4. To advocate personal purity as equally binding for men and women, and to promote a constructive educational program for the young.

5. To promote programs of education for citizenship and to work for political equality in all countries where women do not yet have the ballot.

6. To carry on Membership Campaigns in every country with the definite goal of a doubled membership, and for the purpose of strengthening the forces against the liquor traffic through the enlistment of teachers, educators and leaders in church, social and civic life.

7. To co-operate with missionary and other welfare and temperance organizations.

M. S. C. Will Exhibit Work At State Fair

M. S. C. exhibits at the annual State Fair to be held in Detroit Sept. 4 to 13 include over a score of prize horses and cattle, over 50 heads of prize sheep, and special exhibits arranged by the college farm crops department, the soils, dairy, poultry, forestry, home economics and veterinary department.

Each departmental exhibit will demonstrate the effective work that has been carried on in its particular field. The farm crops exhibits is said to be exceptionally fine, having made use of the best crop results in constructing and interesting and constructive exhibit.

Work of the Soils section in manner of analysis and testing, Forestry nursery and other projects discoveries and best practices in Veterinary science, as well as method employed in modern dairying will be vividly portrayed. The Home Economics exhibit is planned particularly for the housewife.

Boys' and Girls' club champions will take part in dairy and beef judging. There will also be a health contest in which the healthiest boy and girl in Michigan will be chosen for national honors at the International show held in Chicago in December.

Honor Michigan Hort Men In New Building

When the M. S. C. horticultural department occupies its new building at the beginning of Fall term next September, ten bronze tablets will be placed in the corridors commemorating ten men who have done most for the development of horticulture in the state.

The men who have been elected to this honor by 75 prominent horticulturalists are the following: Charles W. Garfield, Grand Rapids former president of the horticultural society; Robert D. Graham, Grand Rapids, founder of the Graham experimental station; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids, originator of the Grand Rapids lettuce; D. Smith, Adrian, noted florist; F. A. Farrand, Eaton Rapids, state horticultural leader; Charles J. Monroe South Haven, noted fruit grower; T. T. Lyon, Allegan, authority on fruit varieties; Judge J. G. Ramsdell, Traverse City, who stimulated the great fruit industry in Northern Michigan.

The $400,000 horticultural building said to be the best equipped in the country has a frontage of 132 feet and a depth of 104. It is of Gothic architectural design conforming with the type of other new buildings on the campus.

M. S. C. Dynamometer Contests Conducted at County Fair

Dynamometer contests which created such a great amount of interest at the college Farmers' Day will be staged at four Michigan fairs, according to H. J. Gallagher who is in charge.

The first county contest was at the Ionia Free Fair. Others on the list are West Michigan Fair, Sept. 4-7; Saginaw, Sept. 14 to 19; Mt. Pleasant, Sept. 18 to 22. $200 in prizes is being offered at each fair.

Panel campus views showing the work in the various college departments as well as methods of recreation are being shown at many other fairs. There are 50 large pictures in all. One complete panel will be taken to the county fairs at Ithaca, Bay City, West Branch, Saginaw; another to Holland, Allegan, Hastings, Kalamazoo and Centerville.

Contest Hens Begin Egg Production Again

After a drop for the previous three weeks, the trend of production showed some increase during the week ending July 31 in the International Egg Laying Contest which is being conducted by the Poultry department at M. S. C.

The 1,000 birds during the last seven days produced a total of 4,099 eggs. White Leghorns continued to lead other groups with an average production of 60.4 percent. Rhode Island Reds and Barred Rocks hit 53 percent each, which is an improvement for both groups over the previous week. The miscellaneous group moved from 43.3 to 48.5 percent.

Due to the cooler weather and too frequent showers, there has been considerably less broodiness during the week of this test, consequently greatly assisting in maintaining the production.

Five high pens of the week consisting of ten hens each were the Gravel Ridge Poultry Farm, Mears with 58 eggs, E. G. Stephenson. Erlanger, Ken,, 56; L. W. Aseltine, Grand Rapids, 55; Lakeview Poultry Farm, Holland, Michigan 54; and Bangor High school, 54. West Neck Poultry Farm, Hungtington, L. I., is leading the contest with a total of 1,935 eggs. Next in line is the Royal Hatchery, Zeeland, Michigan, with 1,928 eggs.

Why Is Hay Fever?

An eastern newspaper suggests that men of medicine turn their attention to hay fever. There is no doubt that a remedy for this disease would prove a great blessing to a large number of persons throughout the world. We call it mysterious because it is so. What is its cause and why must its victims suffer annually in spite of all they do to prevent its recurrence? Those upon whom it has laid its hold know almost to a day when they will be called upon to again endnre the agonies.

Because hay fever is more prevalent in August than in any other month, it is popularly supposed that pollen from flowers is the cause. Buy why pollen from August's flowers and not from those blooming in other months of the year? To answer that the adherants of the pollen theory pick on the golden rod. But hay fever claims its victims in places where there is no golden rod and residents of large cities who are never within miles of this popular flower at any time, often suffer the most severely. And if pollen is the cause of the disease why are not all who live in the country afflicted and all who live in the city immune

The writer who suggested that physicians turn their attention to hay fever may or may not be a sufferer from hay fever, but in any eveut he puts up to them a puzzle worthy of their fullest consideration.

Travis Reunion

The fifty third reunion of the Travis family was held Saturday August 8th at the home of Charles Travis, West street, Hillsdale. In spite of the threatening weather eighty people were present for the excellent chicken dinner.

After dinner, a business meeting was held. Jeptha Travis of Hudson was re-elected as president, and Leonora Blackmer as secretary and treasurer.

Other matters of business being attended to, the remainder of the day was devoted to quoits, visiting and a program of readings and music.

Relatives were present from Lakeland, Florida, Chicago, Elkhart, Jackson, Hudson and all parts of the county

One day an inspector of a New York tenement house found four families living in one room, chalk lines drawn in such a manner as to mark out a quarter for each family

"How do you get along here?" inquired the inspector.

"Very well," was the reply; only the man in the farthest corner keeps boarders."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HAVING MONEY ON HAND

"Aunty, why is it such a good thing to have cash in the bank?" asked Jane of Aunt Emmy. "Mr. Wilkins was talking to father yesterday and he said that every one ought to have a certain amount of cash on hand."

"He meant that if you keep some of your money in the bank where it can be had any time you might be able to use it to excellent advantage," said Aunt Emmy. "Every now and then a good opportunity presents itself to make a nice profit in some business deal if you only have the cash on hand so you can act quickly. Don't you remember about that quarrel the Brown brothers had over their inheritance and to settle it sold that house in Center Street? Old Peter Haskins bought it in for $3,000 and the next week sold it for $4,200. If he hadn't had the cash on hand he never could have made that handsome profit."

"Yes, Aunty, that's all right for Mr. Haskins, but I'm never likely to have $3,000 or $4,000 on hand."

"Well there are other little ways to make a profit," said Aunt Emmy. "For instance, you can always benefit by cash discounts. That is, if some one asks you to pay, say $100 for a thing, you can usually get it for less, sometimes ten per cent less, if you pay at once in cash. You always should have some of your money in cash so that you can take advantage of golden opportunities and cash discounts."—A. B. Aymes.

American investors in securities of foreign companies and foreign governments should take care to purchase them only through reliable bankers or brokers, says Commerce Reports issued by the Department of Commerce. It adds:

"There have recently been several flagrant cases of securities being advertised in American journals at prices from 10 to 100 times the price quoted on the same date in the markets of the countries where the concerns are located. Some of these cases have even attracted the attention of foreign newspapers. This is not a safe kind of speculation for uninformed Americans, but the would-be investor can easily protect himself by asking the advice of his regular banker."

"They will," said Janet. "By this time I expect they have. He went off to the police office this morning to obtain his Ausweis, taking the passport with him."

"What?" said Casimir. "He has gone to the police office!"

"That's what I'm trying to tell you," said Janet, "and I'm very much afraid there'll be trouble."

"Trouble! They will imprison him. They will deport him. They will— But not even Von Steinveldt would dare shoot him. But— Excuse me. I must act at once or all is lost. The princess! My beloved country! But I have friends and I have money. The king has friends. Perhaps it is not yet too late."

He hurried across the hall toward the door. Janet hurried after him. Tommy was in serious trouble. Casimir was excited and frightened. She could not bear the thought of not being helpful in a crisis as desperate as this. She caught Casimir by the arm just as he reached the door.

"Shall I ring up the embassy?" she said. "The third secretary is a friend of mine. At least, I've often talked to him over the telephone. After all, your friend—I mean my nephew—is a British subject. The ambassador must do something. I shall insist on his moving in the matter."

Casimir turned on her. He must have felt extremely irritated, but his politeness did not fail him.

"Gracious lady," he said, "I can think of only one thing in the world which would make this affair worse than it is, and that is the interference of the British ambassador."

Janet says that his face was white, drawn and tragic when he spoke, and that beads of perspiration had gathered on his forehead. But Janet is inclined to exaggerate in the interests of the picturesque. I do not suppose that Casimir was in the state she described. He was upset about what had happened and foresaw a great deal of trouble. But he had no doubt that he could straighten things out even if the police had arrested Tommy.

When he left the hotel Casimir went straight to his bank and cashed a check for ten thousand marks. In Germany it takes a long time to cash a check and it was half an hour before Casimir actually got the money. Then he drove to the police office and walked into the room into which Tommy had gone that morning. There was still a long queue of Poles, Russians, Slavs, Ukrainians and other foreigners waiting to approach the police officer's desk. But Casimir did not take his place at the end of the line. He handed twenty marks to the policeman who kept watch at the door and was immediately placed at the head of the queue. In return for another twenty marks the policeman ordered all the other waiting people out of the room. They were allowed to draw a breath of fresh air in the passage until Casimir finished his business. This was good for them, but they did not like it.

For some months the German mark had been falling rapidly. Official salaries, from those of cabinet minister to those of simple policeman, had in March only about one-tenth of their supposed value and a large class of more or less deserving people found themselves starving. This, though disagreeable for them, was a great advantage to any one who controlled money in a stable currency. Casimir had Procopius Cable's English pounds to draw on. He felt confident of being able to persuade any official to do what he wanted done.

He began his interview with the police officer by laying a thousand marks on the table in front of him. Then he said he wanted an Ausweis, duly signed and in proper form, for an Englishman called Norheys. The police officer stood up and bowed respectfully to Casimir. Then he fixed his eyes, hopefully at first, sadly afterward, on the thousand marks. He began to apologize.

If he had known a little earlier that the highborn gentleman wished for an Ausweis— The young Englishman had been there, in that very office— There had been a trifling irregularity in his passport, very trifling, nothing that mattered. If he had known— Now, unfortunately, he could do nothing. The young Englishman had been passed on to his superior officer.

The poor man eyed the thousand marks hungrily. He had a wife and two children at home. They had very little food and no firing. A thousand marks would have made life a much pleasanter affair to him.

"Ach, most highborn sir," he said, "I cannot now issue the Ausweis, though how willingly I would do so if I could."

Casimir is not a man who pays for what he does not get. He picked up the thousand marks again.

Then he laid down a note for a hundred marks, and asked to see the superior officer who had taken charge of Tommy.

This time the young man, standing behind his desk, bowed gratefully. Certainly the highborn gentleman should see the superior officer at once. Casimir was shown into the inner room. The young man at the desk pocketed the hundred-mark note. Perhaps he spent half of it on a piece of soap. His face looked as if he had none at home.

Casimir dealt with the superior officer in much the same way, except that this time he laid down two thousand marks. He was received with almost groveling civility. This officer looked at money not so much hungrily as greedily. He had neither wife nor children and was not actually hungry. But he was a man who liked enjoying himself, and in the good old days before the mark fell he was accustomed to spend his evening in pleasure resorts less sumptuous and much less respectable than the Mascotte. From these delights he had been cut off for some months. With two thousand marks a man can buy a great deal of pleasure in Berlin. For two thousand marks most government officials would have done a great deal.

Casimir said what he wanted, an Ausweis for Tommy.

The officer, his eyes fixed on the money, cursed himself, his bad luck, his government, the late war, the French nation, the English nation, the Reparations commission and the International Military control. He cursed fluently, blasphemously and obscenely. At last he told Casimir that Tommy had been sent on to the Prince von Steinveldt. He himself could do nothing in the matter of the Ausweis.

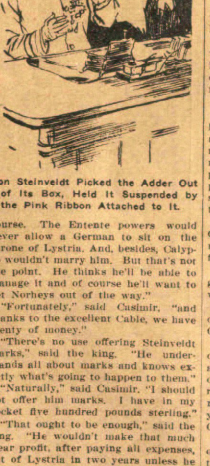
The information was worth something and Casimir paid for it.

Then he went back to his bank and drew out, not marks this time, but five hundred pounds sterling.

Even with that sum in his pocket he did not feel quite sure of being able to deal with Prince Von Steinveldt. He drove to the flat which King Wladislaws occupied and took counsel with him.

The king listened to the story.

"The difficulty is," said the king, "that Von Steinveldt wants to step into my shoes himself. He can't, of course. The Entente powers would never allow a German to sit on the throne of Lystria. And, besides, Calypso wouldn't marry him. But that's not the point. He thinks he'll be able to manage it and of course he'll want to get Norheys out of the way."



Von Steinveldt Picked the Adder Out of Its Box, Held It Suspended by the Pink Ribbon Attached to It.

"Fortunately," said Casimir, "and thanks to the excellent Cable, we have plenty of money."

"There's no use offering Steinveldt marks," said the king. "He understands all about marks and knows exactly what's going to happen to them."

"Naturally," said Casimir. "I should not offer him marks. I have in my pocket five hundred pounds sterling."

"That ought to be enough," said the king. "He wouldn't make that much clear profit, after paying all expenses, out of Lystria in two years unless he is a great deal cleverer than I am. But you'll have to be careful, Casimir. He'll take the money all right. But he's a prince. You must allow him to keep up his self-respect."

"I had thought," said Casimir, "of laying the money on his desk without saying anything about it."

"I should be rather inclined," said the king, "to hand it over to him openly, saying that I sent it as a donation to whatever charity in Berlin he thinks most worthy of support. Tell him at the same time that I want to remain anonymous and desire no receipt for the money."

The king, who had been lounging in a chair, got up, went over to his writing table and unlocked a drawer. He took from it a small case made of real morocco leather.

"You may as well offer him this at the same time," said the king.

He opened the box and displayed a small golden snake. It was curled up so that its tail was in its mouth. Its eyes, which had a fierce expression, were garnets. Casimir looked at it with reverence. It was the sign of "The Most Noble Order of the Golden Adder of Lystria," an order granted to very few people and worn by no Lystrian except the king himself.

"He may like to have it," said the king, "though I don't know why he should. It's only nine carat gold, and the creature's eyes aren't rubies. Still, he may like it. Try him, and you might say if at any time he wants a good table at the Mascotte, he has nothing to do but ring me up and I'll arrange it. What's more, I'll take fifty per cent off his bill, and he won't be expected to tip the waiters. Tell him all that, will you?"

Casimir went off to Von Steinveldt's office in good spirits and full of confidence. He did not expect that his interview would be pleasant, but he had no doubt that he would be successful in obtaining Tommy's release. Von Steinveldt would probably try to bully him. He usually did try to bully any one he met. He would certainly bargain and the haggling might be prolonged. Casimir expected bullying and bargaining; but he felt that no living German would resist the offer of five hundred pounds in English bank notes, a decoration to pin on his coat and the chance of supper at the Mascotte whenever he liked at half the usual price.

Never was any diplomatist, engaged in a demarche of an important kind, more surprised than Casimir was.

Von Steinveldt made no attempt to bully him. He received him with extreme politeness and showed every kind of courtesy and consideration. This made Casimir suspicious. He knew Von Steinveldt fairly well and had never seen him behave like a gentleman before.

"Ah, poor King Wladislaws," said Von Steinveldt. "My heart bleeds for him. Such a position for one who has been a king. Tell me, how is he getting on?"

Casimir did not believe that Von Steinveldt's heart ever bled for anyone. He felt sure that he did not care whether King Wladislaws starved or not. His suspicions, already awakened by Von Steinveldt's politeness, became acute.

"His majesty," he said, "sent me to place a small sum of money in your excellency's hands. He knows little of the needs of the poor in Berlin and he hopes that your excellency will be kind enough to spend this money in the way that you think wisest."

He drew from his pocket his packet of English bank notes and laid it on the table. Von Steinveldt picked it up. There were fifty Bank of England notes for ten pounds each. Von Steinveldt hated and despised almost everything English. But he had a deep respect and a genuine liking for English bank notes. He became almost genial, certainly facetious, while counting the notes. The feel of the paper between his finger and thumb gave him a sense of physical pleasure.

"King Wladsilaws," he said, "seems to have been doing pretty well at the Mascotte."

"His majesty," said Casimir stiffly, "wishes his gift to be anonymous, and hopes that you will make no acknowledgment of the receipt of the money."

Von Steinveldt pocketed the notes.

"Among the German aristocracy," he said "there are many who have suffered severely by the fall of the mark. Their pride forbids them to make any public complaint of their poverty. I think, if your king approves, that this money would be well spent, perhaps best spent, in relieving their distress."

Casimir had little doubt that the German aristocracy—at all events one member of it—would benefit by the five hundred pounds.

"It is," said Von Steinveldt, "a most generous gift. I beg of you to convey to your king my warmest thanks."

"His majesty," he said, "is deeply conscious of your kindness in acting as his almoner, and is not unmindful of the many services which you have rendered in the past to the unfortunate kingdom of Lystria. He begs your acceptance of the Order of the Golden Adder of Lystria."

Von Steinveldt picked the adder out of its box and held it suspended by the pink ribbon attached to it. Then, standing up and bowing deeply to Casimir, he pinned the decoration to the breast of his tunic. It hung there, the last in the second row of decorations which Von Steinveldt wore. There were twenty-nine of them and the Golden Adder made the thirtieth.

Might in the Jungle

The lion, noted as being the noblest of the jungle's beasts, is, of course, a mighty hunter. His ferocity is proverbial. All animals as well as man become its victims. The African buffalo, however, is often its master, and elephants sometimes are able to overpower both lions and all members of the tiger family.

Water Is Literally Their Staff of Life

The most amazing race of human beings is undoubtedly the El Molo, a tribe of "fishmen," who inhabit the desert wastes bordering Lake Rudolf, in Kenya colony, Africa. This tribe represents the only known specimens of semiamphibious people and it is a curious fact that any tribesman dies if he is kept without water for about three hours. As a rule they drink every hour during the day, for even an hour and a half without water causes cracking and bleeding of the lips, the Boston Transcript says.

The El Moro tribesmen spend their days swimming in the waters of Lake Rudolf and fishing from frail rafts constructed with palm branches. Fish is almost their only diet and they have no opportunity of varying their menu, unless they are fortunate enough to spear a hippopotamus. The water of Lake Rudolf is undrinkable to anyone but the El Moro, for it contains a large quantity of soda and has an objectionable taste. The proportion of soda in that lake increases yearly, and it is believed to be this fact that has caused the "fishermen" to become a deformed race.

It has been discovered that long continued working with radium tends to cause a form of anemia.

FULLER skirts, higher necklines and long sleeves, are themes that have been under discussion for some weeks in the centers that originate styles. These new departures in the modes were well advertised before they were presented—the way paved for their success by making everyone familiar with them; for not every style becomes a fashion and stylists have to leave the success or failure of their best efforts mainly "in the lap of the gods."

All three of the new style features mentioned are shown in the pretty frock pictured and they have been managed faultlessly, even from the viewpoint of the most ardent standpatter for simple, straight lines. The long bodice, and neckline high at the back and "V" shaped in front are good on either slim or plump figures and that much disputed point—fulness in the skirt—has been adroitly managed by means of the obliging box plait, which effaces itself so far as interference with long lines is concerned. The narrow girdle, tied at the back, is of the material in the frock and little, round buttons, matching the dress in color, serve for its finishing touch. The picture shows clearly how trim, stylish and school-girlish this model is and it is recommended as a good example to follow in assembling clothes for the college or high school miss. No one will recognize more quickly than this competent and sometimes opinionated young person, that this dress is up-to-date. It may be made of any of the good wool fabrics for fall, flannels, plain, bordered or figured, twills, kasha and novelty weaves. Figured flannel is very effective and one can imagine it in red and black in this material, with either red or black buttons, or in two shades of brown or blue. Do not overlook the small convenient and boyish pockets which have to be discovered at each side. For afternoon wear, the dress pictured was made of olive crepe-backed satin and ornamented with pearl buttons, probably of the same color.

In matters pertaining to clothes, the eternal feminine may be counted on to change its mind as heretofore. Just when it seemed that all blouses, for whatever purpose, were to be made of silk, along came the soft flannel affair, in the loveliest shades of fashionable colors and immediately won its plea (for a place in the sun) before the tribunal of fashion. Nothing has proved a better medium than flannel for the mellow shades that distinguish this season and no fabric is better suited to smart, informal or sports blouses.

In the pretty late-summer blouse shown here, buff colored flannel is entirely sufficient unto itself for the blouse and its accessories. Flannel covered buttons and a flannel strap or half girdle across the front finish off a model that owes its distinction to cleverness in cut and beauty in color. It is a slip-on model but has almost invisible shoulder seams that give it a trim adjustment. With sleeves extended to the elbow or a little below, it is a good model for fall. But sleeves grow in importance, both in dresses and blouses, and the new fall models emphasize a variety of long-sleeved styles. The new figured flannels will lend themselves to long-sleeved tailored types in overblouses to be worn with plain or plaited skirts.

In dressier types for afternoon panne velvet and crepe satin are sponsored by the French usually in black or dark colors with embroidery and braidings in contrasting colors, but rich effects. Collars are often high, or a scarf is worn if the neckline is round. Overblouses and short tunic blouses make up the displays and much attention is given to plaitings as a trimming.

Finds Long Legs Are a Handicap

"If there is anything at all to this evolution business," remarked a tall, angular gentleman who was emerging from the baseball park, according to the Detroit News, "I think nature ought to make a few improvements on the human race to meet our changing conditions. A few years ago men had to walk about all the time, what with circus and lodge parades and things like that. Long legs were necessary, and I was the envy of all the neighborhood, for I could see over most people's heads. But now all that has changed. The world has stopped standing up and is sitting down. My long legs are an inconvenience at ball games, shows, in my flivver, and on street cars. They always have to be doubled up to keep them out of the way; then they become cramped and sore. Nature should help future generations by developing them downward—as far as legs are concerned, at least."

Rattlers Annoy Golfers

Rattlesnakes, basking in the sunlight on the Riverside university golf course, have made it advisable for golfers to carry permanganate of potash along with clubs and balls, says the Los Angeles Times. Mashies are being put to new use by professors at the citrus experiment station of the University of California—they make effective weapons against the reptiles.

Within recent days four rattlesnakes have been killed on the university course, which is at the base of Box Springs mountain.

Runs and Flies Both

Capable of flying in the air or running on the ground, an airplane-automobile recently was demonstrated in France. It differs from ordinary planes because it has folding wings and four wheels. A propeller shaft runs from the fuselage to a transmission which turns the rubber-tired front wheels with their brakes and steering mechanism. The power to drive the plane on land is furnished by a small auxiliary engine. Its conversion into an "auto" takes less than half an hour.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Why He Worried

Sir Bertram Hayes, skipper of the Majestic, who has retired from the sea after 44 years of seafaring, said on his last visit to New York:

"I hope I am not going to be like the retired business man whose wife said to him on the first day of his retirement:

"'Father, what's the matter? You look worried.'

"'Well, no wonder I'm worried.' said he. 'I've never before had nothing to worry about.'"

Comet With Two Tails

It is reported from Germany that photographs taken of the comet Orkisz show that it has now developed a second tail. This tail cannot be seen with a telescope. The primary tail also is, to all intents and purposes, merely a photographic object, only the vaguest indications of it being perceptible in a telescope.

A duplicity, or even a multiplicity, of tails is by no means an uncommon occurrence, although it is not often seen in objects so faint as the present comet.

Three carloads of poles to be used by the Consumers Power Co. arrived here from the Northwest several days ago. There were about 110 poles in the lot and the freight bill alone was eleven hundred dollars or about ten dollars per pole. Much of the high freight bill is due to the notorious Esch Cummins law passed in 1920 by Congress with only a small number led by "Fighting Bob" opposing the bill. The annual increase in rates amounts to about fifteen hundreds millions or seventy five dollars increase for each family in the country. W. D. Hines former Director of the Roads of the nation estimates that the increase is multiplied three times by wholesalers and middlemen before it reaches the public. In other words the Esch Cummins law costs the average family $225 per year and helps roads like the Michigan Central to earn $75 per share. Mr. Coolidge believes in the Esch Cummins law and has used his influence to prevent its repeal, which shows that the President is more interested in helping to increase railroad profits than he is in helping the people who voted him into office.

Third District Election

The election on Tuesdayfor representative to fill out the unexpired term of Arthur B. Williams resulted in a victory for Mr. Hooper by a majority of over 6,000. The affair in this township was extremely tame as only 135 ballots were cast of which Mr. Hooper received 63 and Mr. Carney 72, a majority of 9 which is very insignificant considering this is a Klan precinct. Mr. Carney carried Hillsdale county.

Death of Mrs. Edward Carter

Mrs. Edward Carter of Moscow township, who has been indisposed for some time, passed away at the home of Mrs. Frank Brown in Moscow on Wednesday about 10:00 a. m. the direct cause of her death being paralysis. She was past 74 years of age and had been a resident of the township for many years. She is survived by one brother, Augustus Borden of near Jonesville, also a number of more distant relatives.

Funeral services were conducted to-day at 2:00 p. m. from the Plains Methodist church, Rev. Virgil Hunt officiating, and interment in the Plains Cemetery. We expect to publish a more complete obituary next week.

Farewell Party

Miss Donna Lynch pleasantly entertained fifteen young ladies at her home Wednesday afternoon honoring Miss Elda Rock who is moving to Chicago soon. Miss Rock was given a beautiful boudoir lamp by her friends. Ethel Brewer presented the lamp. The afternoon was spent in playing games after which ice cream and cake were served to the guests. The color scheme of pink and yellow was carried out both in floral decorations and refreshments. Miss Rock received the best wishes of her many friends.

Hillsdale County Jersey Activities

For several years a bunch of enterprising farmers in this section have been endeavoring to build up the stock pedigrees of Hillsdale County by the introduction of only pure bred high grade stock. Among their number might be mentioned Jay North who is an official of the Hillsdale County Jersey Club and a hard worker for better breeding.

Jay went down to Montgomery recently and bought one of the best pedigreed bulls in this part of the state, and he considers himself indeed fortunate in getting such an animal. Throop's King Rioter (171827) was bred by W. S. Prickett of Saginaw: dropped August 28, 1918, and is a grandson of a cow at one time champion of the world in Jerseys with 18,783 pounds of milk, 962.8 pounds of butter fat in one year. Rioter's sire was the famous "King of Cloverland" owned by the great Roycroft Farms of Northern Michigan, and when the herd was sold at auction, King of Cloverland was purchased by Ex-Secretary of Agriculture, E. T. Meredith of Des Moines, Iowa, publisher of Successful Farming.

In procuring this excellent sire Mr. North has we trust, paved the way for a big up-lift in the Jersey pedigrees of the vicinity, and in fact the whole of Hillsdale county. It is a matter of general comment that the condensories in this country have gone into a different system of buying milk now and insist upon paying as per butter fat test, since which the big milk yielding breeds are not eagerly sought for. In fact there is an increasing demand right now for richer milk, even in smaller quantities, and the Jerseys are bound to have their good qualities fully appreciated.

It takes a roof of real quality to live through many winters of the sort enjoyed along our northern border. From December to March these roofs are subjected to high winds, snow, sleet, hail, with an occasional thaw to make matters worse.

It is for this reason that so many homes in this section are covered with Ruberoid Shingles and Roofing. The illustrations above—taken from actual photographs—especially the close-up of the dormer, show what these roofs have to put up with. Yet Ruberoid Shingles and Roofing thrive under just such punishment.

On many a building there are Ruberoid Roofs, 20, 25, and 30 years old with the limit of their endurance still to be determined. They have withstood the wear and tear of the elements in all parts of the world—in the Tropics and beyond the Arctic Circle.

Among the Ruberoid Products there is one which will fully meet your requirements, whether it be for a twenty-room residence or a three-room bungalow, a schoolhouse or a factory, a church or a theatre.

Come in or phone us today for samples and descriptive folders.

There is but one Ruberoid. Look for the Man on the Label.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROVIDED congress is satisfied—and there is no reason to believe it will not be—the funding of Belgium's debt to the United States has been arranged. The agreement was signed by the members of the two commissions last week at a dinner given at the Belgian embassy by Ambassador Baron de Cartier de Marchienne. It is in accord with the advice given by President Coolidge when Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot conferred with him, and the Brussels government authorized its representatives to accept it.

Belgium is highly pleased with the arrangement, and should be. In the first place, a distinction is made between the obligations incurred during the war and the sums borrowed after the armistice for purposes of relief work and reconstruction. The principal is all to be paid in a period of 62 years, but on the war debt of $171,780,000 Belgium is not required to pay any interest, either accrued or in the future. The interest rate on the post war debt is to be 3½ per cent after the first ten years. During the first decade arbitrary amounts have been fixed on the interest payments, graduated on an easy scale.

On the war debt account the first payment of capital, which will be due June 15, 1926, will be only $1,000,000, increasing gradually until it reaches $2,900,000 in 1932, the same amount to be paid each succeeding year until 1987. Then a final payment of $2,280,000 will be made.

For the first year on the post war debt the principal and interest payment will be $2,840,000, increasing somewhat each year to the eleventh year, when it will be $9,772,000. The annual payment each year thereafter for 51 years, or until 1987, will be approximately this amount—a little under 10,000,000 a year.

The Belgian debt has hitherto been regarded as totaling about $480,000,000, including accrued interest at a rate of 4¼ per cent. The settlement, however, fixes the actual amount at $417,780,000, as of June 15, 1925.

The American commission refused to accept Belgium's claim that the war debt should be shifted in any way to Germany, but explained the easy terms granted by saying that "while no legal obligation rests upon the United States in the matter, there does continue a weighty moral obligation as a result of assurances given which entirely differentiates this sum from all other debts due the United States from foreign countries." The allusion, of course, is to President Wilson's assurance that the German government would be substituted for Belgium as the debtor for the pre-armistice debts.

FRANCE naturally was immensely interested in the Belgian debt settlement and regarded it as a happy augury and as proof that America was ready to make generous concessions in the matter of the French obligations. Finance Minister Caillaux, declaring: "The future of European civilization depends on an immediate solution of the war debts," announced that the French mission headed by Senator Berenger would come to Washington in September and that he would follow it and hoped a funding agreement might be reached early in October. Meanwhile he went on Saturday to London for another conference with the English, expecting to bring about a rapid agreement regarding France's obligations to Great Britain.

Italy, too, was cheered by the Belgian settlement, hoping for similar and perhaps better terms when Ambassador de Martino returns to Washington and the parleys are resumed. The newspapers in Rome are presenting figures to show that Italy is receiving $80 per capita on her reparations account and the national wealth is only $586 per capita, while Belgium receives from Germany $324 per capita and the national wealth of Belgium is $1,377 per capita. The conclusion is drawn that Italy should receive proportionately better terms.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE spent nearly a week at Plymouth, Vt., visiting his father and enjoying the only real rest he has had since his vacation began. On Thursday he reluctantly started back to Swampscott by motor, stopping overnight at Northampton, Mass., with Mrs. Elmira Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Coolidge. Friday afternoon the President received Senator Edge of New Jersey and State Senator Whitney, the Republican gubernatorial nominee.

BESIDES the matter of the Belgian debt agreement, the President had one important conference while at Plymouth. It was about the proposed reduction of federal taxes, and those who talked it over with Mr. Coolidge were Secretary Mellon, Senator Smoot, chairman of the finance committee, and Representative Tillson of Connecticut, Republican floor leader of the house. They assured him that before payments for this year are due on March 15 next, congress will have made substantial reductions in federal income taxes. No definite figure could be proposed yet, because the treasury surplus and amount of the government budget are yet unknown, but the belief was expressed that a cut of at least $300,000,000 could be made.

Both Senator Smoot and Representative Tilson favor cutting the maximum surtax on incomes of $12,000 and more from 40 per cent to 20 per cent, or to 15 per cent if conditions warrant. They also favor making the normal tax on incomes of $4,000 or less 1 per cent instead of 2; 3 per cent instead of 4 for incomes between $4,000 and $8,000, and 5 instead of 6 per cent on incomes over $8,000.

Mr. Mellon feels that the financial condition of the government will permit of a reduction of the surtaxes to 25 per cent, and the cutting down of the normal taxes proportionately, with the lowest normal reduction from 2 to 1 per cent. He favors the federal government abandoning the inheritance taxes, but remarked that he could not attempt to say how far the general tax reduction program could go.

WITH two of its three navy planes out of commission and unusually severe weather prevailing, the MacMillan expedition has abandoned for this year any exploration of the polar sea by air. Instead the party will devote its efforts to the exploring of Norse ruins in Greenland and Labrador and to a survey of Baffin island. In sending word of his change of plans to Washington by radio, Commander MacMillan gave high praise to the navy flyers with him for their efforts to overcome insurmountable obstacles. In flying over Ellesmere island these aviators traversed a vast stretch of uncharted country and high mountain ranges never before seen by man.

PRESUMABLY with the aid and support of the Turks and the Egptian nationalities, the Senussi tribesmen in North Africa have risen against the Italian rule in Tripoli and Cyrenaica. Led by Sheik Ahmed, they waylaid and massacred a column of Italian troops south of Benghazi and occupied the main caravan route between Tripoli and Egypt. The Senussi, a great body of austerely religious Mohammedans, are good fighters and are well armed.

Marshal Petain has been sent to Morocco as supreme commander of the French forces and is directing the vigorous offensive which is driving the troops of Abd-el-Krim back northward to the Atlas mountains. In the Ouezzan region, where the French and Spanish armies are co-operating, wholesale submission of rebels is announced. Spain and France have called off all peace negotiations with the Riff chieftain as he failed to send any representative to Melilla.

MAX MASON, professor of mathematical physics in the University of Wisconsin, has been elected president of the University of Chicago to succeed the late Dr. Ernest De Witt Burton. The board of trustees has followed the recent example of other similar boards in selecting a comparatively young man, for Doctor Mason is only forty-eight years of age. He has accepted the appointment with enthusiasm for he has a vision of Chicago as the cultural and intellectual center of the world. Doctor Mason was born in Madison, Wis., and graduated from the state university, afterward getting his Ph. D. degree from the University of Gottingen, Germany. He taught at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and in Yale before returning in 1908 to the University of Wisconsin as professor of mathematical physics. During the war he was called to Washington to consider the matter of protection from submarines, and he invented the hydrophone by which the undersea vessels were detected and located. According to his associates, he has executive ability of a high order in addition to his academic training.

VICTOR F. LAWSON, editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News and for many years one of the leading newspaper men of America, died on Wednesday of heart disease after an illness of three days. He was born in Chicago 75 years ago, the son of Norwegian immigrants. After working with his father on a Scandinavian paper there, he bought an interest in the newly established Daily News. Later he acquired Melville E. Stone's share and built the News up into one of the most valuable newspaper properties in the country. He was one of the founders of the Associated Press and always was prominent in its management.

ONE of the most distressing disasters on the Atlantic coast in recent years occurred in Narragansett bay off Newport Tuesday night when a boiler on the excursion steamer Mackinac exploded and more than two score men, women and children were scalded to death by steam. Many others were so badly injured that it was probable the death list would be extended. The boat was on its way from Newport to Pawtucket when the blast came. It was run aground and distress signals quickly brought many navy vessels and other boats to the rescue, but most of the damage already had been done. Federal and state inquiries into the disaster were begun at once. It was said the exploded boiler was an old one deteriorated by wear and thinned down in certain places.

ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS and his expedition, after having made many valuable and interesting discoveries in Mongolia, have now been ordered to leave that country by the government at Urga. The Mongolian officials allege that Mr. Chapman has violated the terms of his agreement with Mongolian scientific organizations; that besides carrying on his investigations in paleontology, geology and zoology, he has engaged in topographical observation work and has employed a number of persons whom they consider suspicious in a military sense. Mr. Andrews is also accused of carrying on political propaganda against the Bolsheviki.

THE fourteenth Zionist congress opened in Vienna last week and the anti-Semites of the city promptly started a series of riotous demonstrations that kept the police busy for several days. Several members of the mobs were killed and scores were wounded. The rioters, who call themselves Fascists, finally were persuaded by the government to let the Jews meet in peace. The sessions of the congress were not at all harmonious, the delegates being split up into political groups.

IN STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN, another world congress opened, the Universal Christian conference, the fundamental idea of which, according to its originators, is the formation of a united front among the Christian churches to face the great world problems that have arisen since the war. Questions of doctrine and faith are not being considered. The American delegates sought to have the conference go on record in favor of total abstinence from alcoholic liquors, but the Europeans told them plainly that this would not be permitted. King Gustave and Queen Victoria gave a state luncheon for the delegates and choice wines were served, but the Americans drank only water.

Unique Trail Found in Northern Alaska

The trail is marked for its entire length by posts made of willow trees, sunk deep into the ground. Nearly every post has sprouted out and grown into a large tree. Every now and then along the route native characters and English words denote distances from various camps and villages. The important cannery towns of Togiak and Nushagak are situated along this marked trail.

That other isolated regions in Alaska and other far northern sections did not think of this method is strange. Northwest Indians had a method of marking paths through timber by bending twigs or scarring tree trunks. Pioneers erected stone piles in the prairie and tacked up markers.

The willow guide highway was built somewhat after the poll tax system. Each summer any native traveling along the route was expected to set as many willow posts as possible. Often for small offenses natives were fined to set willow posts.

When the snow lies deep the dog sledges are always certain of the location by the silver-coated willow branches and the leader dogs instinctively know that to follow the tree lined trail means a sure and swift end of the journey.

"I accept it," he said, "in recognition, not of the services I have rendered, but of those I hope to render to your native land. I think you understand me, Count Casimir."

Casimir did, or thought he did. No doubt Von Steinveldt was of opinion that he would render valuable services to Lystria by marrying the princess and ascending the throne.

"I am also charged by his majesty," he said, "to inform your excellenz that if at any time you should wish to visit the Mascotte a table will be reserved for you and a proper deduction, fifty per cent in fact, will be made to your bill."

"I shall certainly accept the invitation," said Von Steinveldt. "I have long wished to see the Princess Calypso dance. She is still dancing there, I hope."

"She danced last night."

"And tonight? No, tonight I am engaged, and the night after. Will the Princess Calypso be dancing next Monday night?"

Casimir sincerely hoped not. If his plans worked out as he wished, the princess would be well on her way to Lystria on Monday night. But he did not want to say that to Von Steinveldt. He made an effort to get away from the subject of the Princess Calypso.

"His majesty," he said, "hopes to engage an English dancer for the Mascotte. She is, I am told, well known and greatly appreciated in London. If your excellenz will come and see her when she arrives you will no doubt be pleased. Her name is Temple, Viola Temple."

"Ach," said Von Steinveldt. "I think I know the name. Let me see. I hear a little of the gossip of the London clubs, though I should no longer be admitted as a member of one of them. Is not that the lady to whom young Lord Norheys is so deeply attached?"

Casimir felt that the time had come for getting at the real object of his mission. This chance mention of Norheys' name gave him his opportunity.

"Speaking of Lord Norheys," he said, "reminds me that his majesty asked me to say to you—"

Von Steinveldt interrupted him.

"That Lord Norheys is in Berlin. But I know it already. I had a visit from him this morning. A very charming young man. Perhaps he is over here to take care of Miss Temple."

Casimir, who had been uneasy all through the interview, became actually uncomfortable. He did not understand what Von Steinveldt meant.

"Miss Temple," he said, "has not yet arrived in Berlin."

"Indeed. Then perhaps there is no truth in the rumor that he intends to marry Miss Temple. Indeed, I have heard it whispered that another and much more desirable marriage has been planned for that fortunate young man. The Princess Calypso is, I understand, a very beautiful young lady."

Casimir was not surprised to find that Von Steinveldt knew all about the scheme for the marriage of Calypso and Norheys, but he was startled, puzzled and frightened to hear the matter spoken of in this way.

"Lord Norheys is a rich man, I believe," Von Steinveldt went on. "He will no doubt make an excellent king of Lystria, a post which could hardly be accepted by a man without private means. And if your oil fields are developed, he will see to it that England obtains control of them. Well, England gets everything nowadays. To the victors the spoils. It is enough for us poor Germans that we are allowed to live. Pleas. tell the king that I do not grudge Lord Norheys his good fortune. I found him a most attractive young man. I have seldom enjoyed a chat more than the one I had with him this morning."

Casimir felt perfectly certain that Von Steinveldt would grudge the princess and the throne of Lystria to Lord Norheys or any one else except himself. He was equally sure that no German would be content to see England in control of the Lystrian oil. He felt that he was being played with, laughed at, and that some very disagreeable surprise awaited him. He began to be angry and to lose confidence in himself.

"What brought Lord Norheys here?" he asked abruptly.

"There was some trifling irregularity about his passport," said Von Steinveldt, "and he very properly brought it straight to me."

Casimir knew, or thought he knew, all about Tommy's passport and that the irregularity was anything but trifling. He also knew that Tommy had not gone to Von Steinveldt's office of his own free will. He had been arrested and taken there. He jumped to the conclusion that Von Steinveldt had already sent Lord Norheys back to England and was now enjoying his triumph in a disagreeble and spiteful manner.

"I was so glad to be able to set the matter right for him at once," said Von Steinveldt.

"I suppose," said Casimir, "that you have deported him."

"My dear Count Casimir," he said. "Why should I deport Lord Norheys? That excellent young man is at present enjoying the sights of Berlin, in company, perhaps, with Miss Temple. Or did you say that she had not yet arrived? I suppose in any case he does not mean actually to marry her. It would be very awkward for you and King Wladislaws if any formal promise of marriage existed. It might be difficult to buy off Miss Temple. I imagine that you would have to pay her more than five hundred pounds. Perhaps the king might offer her the Gold Adder of Lystria."

He fingered the pink ribbon on his breast as he spoke.

"Or a table at the Mascotte and fifty per cent off her bill. But I forgot. She has already been engaged to dance there."

Casimir was by this time nervous as well as angry. Von Steinveldt would scarcely venture to laugh at him so openly unless he were very sure that he had the best of the game.

"I suppose," he said, "that you have imprisoned Lord Norheys if you haven't deported him."

"Even if I wished to imprison him," said Von Steinveldt, I daren't. We poor Germans lost the war, you know. The hand of the conqueror lies heavy on us. If I arrested an English nobleman in the streets of Berlin, I should probably be tried for my life by the League of Nations. My property would certainly be confiscated. But I need not talk of such things. Even if I could do so with impunity, I should not want to interfere with Lord Norheys or to curtail his liberty in any way."

Casimir has the temper of a healthy and therefore amiable child. But like most children and simple minded people, he is liable to sudden gusts of passion which he cannot control.

"You've just taken five hundred pounds of our money—" he said.

"For the impoverished German aristocracy," said Von Steinveldt, "and I assure it will be well spent."

"You have accepted the Order of the Golden Adder—"

"In return for services which you hoped I would render to your country. Is not that so, Count Casimir? Well, I have rendered them before you asked me. Three hours ago your friend Lord Norheys left this room entirely free to go where he chose and do what he liked."

"I don't believe you," said Casimir.

"If you will inquire at his hotel," said Von Steinveldt, "or Miss Temple's hotel— But I keep forgetting. You said she was not in Berlin. Or perhaps he has taken the princess out to luncheon somewhere. Or he may be making arrangements for his journey to Lystria. You will find him somewhere no doubt if you look for him. He is certainly at liberty."

"I don't know what you expect to gain," he said angrily, "by treating the king and myself as you have; but if you think that after this the Lystrians will ever accept you as a king, you are very badly mistaken."

He opened the door as he spoke. When he had finished speaking he passed through it and slammed it violently behind him.

I have no doubt that Von Steinveldt smiled. He probably chuckled when Casimir left him. The mistake about Tommy's identity was sure to be discovered sooner or later. When it was discovered every one concerned would feel so foolish that there would be no further talk about an English candidate for the throne of Lystria. Once Lord Norheys was out of the way, Von Steinveldt's own chances would be greatly improved.

CHAPTER XII

He was convinced, and the king agreed with him, that Von Steinveldt meant to play a trick of some kind.

It was conceivable—indeed, likely enough—that the German would have accepted a bribe. That he had allowed Lord Norheys to go free before he was bribed was a thing which neither the king nor Casimir could believe. But they did not know and could not guess what kind of a trick Von Steinveldt meant to play, or what trick he could play. The simplest thing to do was to send the princess and Tommy off to Lystria at once.

Unfortunately, this was not possible.

The arrangements for crossing the frontier and their reception in the Schloss Ambray were not yet complete. The plan which Casimir had made was that the patriarch and the leading notables of Lystria should be waiting at the schloss to celebrate the wedding and the coronation immediately after the princess and Lord Norheys arrived. But the patriarch was not there, and nothing could be done without him. Only a few of the nobility were actually in the schloss. Casimir required three days to have everything ready.

But if Von Steinveldt had any card in his hand and meant to play it, it was plainly unwise to keep the princess and Lord Norheys in Berlin. He and the king decided to send them to Breslau. There they would be within easy reach of the frontier, and when they crossed it would, at once be among the mountains of Lystria. If they stayed there quietly, Von Steinveldt might not guess where they were, and they would, at worst, be farther out of his reach than if they stayed in Berlin.

Casimir's original plan had been that his sister, the Countess Olga, should accompany the princess as lady-in-waiting. Neither he nor the king could go with her. They would be closely watched and stopped at the frontier. But he had every hope that, with the passports he meant to provide, the princess, Lord Norheys and the Countess Olga would be able to get into Lystria.

That part of the plan was spoiled by the unexpected appearance of Janet Church. She insisted on going to Lystria, and, when he came to think it over, Casimir was not altogether sorry. The Countess Olga might be suspected. Janet Church, a wandering English spinster of a type perfectly well known all over Europe, was as safe a traveling companion as could be found for a pair of political conspirators.

Casimir and the king agreed that the party should start for Breslau next morning. Then Casimir's work began. He engaged seats in the train. He telegraphed for rooms at the best hotel in Breslau. He sent long telegrams in code to the patriarch, to his cousin Count Albert Casimir and to several other people in Lystria. He warned his sister that Colonel Heard's passports must be secured during the day. If by some unfortunate chance the Colonel had not left his keys lying about, the Countess Olga would have to cut open a suitcase or a dispatch box. If necessary she could go to prison for a while as a dishonest housemaid, but the passports must be got.

Then he tried to find Tommy in order to warn him to be ready. He came on Janet Church having her afternoon tea in the hall of the Adlon hotel, but she knew nothing about Tommy. She had not seen him since he left the hotel in the morning to go to the police office. She very willingly agreed to help Casimir to find him. They went out and searched Berlin. Janet made a round of all the picture galleries, museums and churches, a long business, and entirely futile. All public buildings in Berlin are shut in the afternoon and by six o'clock it is not possible to enter even a church. Casimir, who knew Berlin better than Janet did, rushed round the chief picture palaces and a number of likely restaurants. He failed to find Tommy.

I asked Tommy afterward how he spent that afternoon. He told me that after lunching comfortably in a restaurant, he determined to see the city in a simple and inexpensive way. He got into the first street car he saw, went in it till it stopped and came back again to the place from which he started. Then took another car and did the same thing. Altogether he seems to have worked over the course of fourteen different cars. I cannot imagine a better way of eluding a pursuer. I shall certainly try it if I ever want to keep out of the clutches of the police for a few hours. At nine o'clock Tommy went back to the hotel, changed his clothes and took a taxi to the Mascotte. He was determined to see Calypso again, and that was the only place he could think of where he was likely to meet her. He did not meet her there, for she was at home packing her clothes. He did not even meet the king, who had taken an evening's holiday, no doubt in order to give some final advice to his daughter. Tommy, seated by himself at a table in a corner of the great room, was glad to see Casimir when he came in. Casimir was tired after his long search through Berlin, and was so pleased at finding Tommy that he ordered two bottles of champagne.

I dare say he drank too much of it. Tommy did not. He remained perfectly clear-headed and he thoroughly understood what Casimir said to him. He agreed to go to Breslau and from there to Lystria. He would have promised quite as readily to go to Timbuctoo and thence to the Fiji islands in company with Calypso. But he insisted that he must explain to Calypso, to the king, and, at once, to Casimir, that he was not Lord Norheys. On that point he was absolutely determined. He refused to go adventuring under another man's name. If he was to marry Calypso, which he very much wanted to do, it must be as Rev. T. A. Norreys; not as a marquis or any one else.

We might use the glamorous words of childhood's fairy tales "Long ago and far away," to tell the tale of Elgin cathedral, whose seven hundredth birthday was celebrated last August 5 and 6. So long ago as the twilight time of the early Middle ages, so far away as Rome, must we go for the beginnings of the story of this hoary old pile, whose influence has been casting its spell upon the lives of the dwellers in the old province of Moray from that far-off time to the present. There is an old tradition that the Culdees founded the church to begin with just as they did that of Birnie. In any case, the site was already hallowed by many sacred associations when Bishop Andrew Moray, scion of the powerful house of De Moravia, moved the Cathedral of Spynie to the Church of Holy Trinity in Elgin.

The caves of Torbryan, near Newton Abbot, in England, are being searched in the hope of finding the skeletonized remains of a hippopotamus. In the middle of last century a Teignmouth draper named Wedger spent most of his leisure time for twenty years searching nine of the natural caves and found the remains of bears, wolves, lions and hyenas. His most startling find was that of the tooth and part of the forehead of a hippopotamus. Experts have argued for years over the latter discovery, and a systematic search of the caves is being made in the hope that the rest of the bones of the river monster will be found. It is common knowledge in scientific circles that, in the different eras through which Great Britain passed, bears, wolves, lions and other wild animals ranged the country, but, in regard to the situation of the caves it is contended that there would be too little water to attract a hippopotamus. Beneath the natural floor of one of the caves signs of human habitation have been discovered.

AN OPERATION RECOMMENDED

Avoided by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I cannot give too much praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me. My mother gave it to me when I was a girl 14 years old, and since then I have taken it when I feel run down or tired. I took it for three months before my two babies were born for I suffered with my back and had spells as if my heart was affected, and it helped me a lot. The doctors told me at one time that I would have to have an operation. I thought I would try 'Pinkham's,' as I call it, first. In two months I was all right and had no operation. I firmly believe 'Pinkham's' cured me. Everyone who saw me after that remarked that I looked so well. I only have to take medicine occasionally, not but I always keep a couple of bottles by me. I recommend it to women who speak to me about their health. I have also used your Sanative Wash and like it very much." — Mrs. E. GOULD, 4000 East Side Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised.

"Mechanical Brains"

Two different types of "mechanical brains"—machines that perform the most complicated mathematical problems automatically — recently have been perfected separately by two young inventors, Frank P. Gage of Boston, Mass., and Stuart C. Dodd, a graduate student of Princeton university. Both machines are expected to prove of great importance in psychological and educational research and in industrial statistical work. They are said to complete, within an hour or so, problems that usually require many hours or even days.—Popular Science Monthly.

World's Largest Boiler

The largest steam boiler in the world is being installed in Pittsburgh, Pa., by a heating company. There are six miles of four-inch steel tubing in the heating and condensing apparatus, with a heating surface of about three-fourths of an acre. The boiler is rated at 3,000-horsepower by the ordinary system of rating, but is capable of operating continuously at three times this capacity and for short periods at four times this rate. When at full load it evaporates 200 tons of water per hour.

ON EASY MONEY

"An awfully interesting man came to see me today, Aunt Emmy. He had a list of stocks and bonds that look very favorable to me. Take this," said Helen, handing an alluring looking folder to Aunt Emmy. "This stock is pretty good. The man said it would be quoted at 20 on the exchange a month after it is put out. I can buy shares now at two dollars so I would make eighteen dollars for every two dollars I invest and all inside of four weeks." Helen paused for breath while Aunt Emmy looked at the folder.

"If I were to buy those White Leghorn chickens of yours," remarked Aunt Emmy, "would you promise me their eggs will sell for one dollar and a half a dozen a month from now?"

"Of course not, Aunty," laughed Helen. "The price of eggs depends entirely on the supply and demand in the market."

"Well, how about stocks? Why can this man promise you this stock will be selling for twenty dollars a month from now?"

"Well, I don't know exactly, but the listings on the stock exchange are different, aren't they?"

"The prices of stocks quoted on the stock exchange are influenced by supply and demand like the prices of eggs. No one can honestly guarantee the future price of any stock. A promoter who urges you to buy stock on any such guarantee is misinforming you. A stock salesman you could trust would never make such a statement. If you are going to listen to such talk you'd better put your money in the savings bank."

"But I wouldn't make so much on it!" objected Helen.

"Big profits mean big risks, and you cannot afford to take risks," said Aunt Emmy. "The house that gets out this booklet is unknown to you. Why don't you find out who you are dealing with?"

"How can I find out about the thousands of stock houses in the United States?"

"Well," said Aunt Emmy, "if you insist on considering making investments, you ought to at least take the trouble to go to your bank and find out about the people you are dealing with."

"They are glad to," Aunt Emmy said. "The more people that save and invest money wisely the better it is for the banks."—A. B. Aymes.

RESTRICTING LOANS ON UNECONOMIC FARMING

Bankers in many of the rural sections of the country are realizing as never before that they cannot afford to loan money for the conduct of farming enterprises where the odds are against that enterprise ever becoming a success. The risk is too great, and what is more it is doing the borrower an injury to encourage him in an unwarranted venture.

Some farmers may resent the idea of being questioned in regard to the use they expect to make of borrowed money. A false idea of their independence may lead them to feel that they can do as they please and follow any system of farming they desire; that it is nobody else's business whether that system is economic or not.

Experiences in certain sections during the past few years demonstrate the folly of such a position. The banker is loaning other people's money and he is duty bound to safeguard what has been entrusted to him. Further, the law holds him responsible. With this obligation resting on his shoulders he has a right to select his customers. If he is convinced that a one-crop system or any other particular type of farming is unsound and is likely to be uneconomic, he is doing an injustice to the borrower as well as the depositor to loan the farmer the money.

Best results will accrue when both the lender and the borrower recognize that they are entering into a partnership and if the advantages and the dangers are frankly and carefully discussed the possibilities of success are greatly enhanced.—Banker-Farmer.

Helping "Bad" Children Go Right

Have you a child who plays truant or refuses to do his school work? Does one of your Sunday school pupils persist in kicking or fighting other members of the class? Are you troubled about a neighborhood boy who is caught in petty thefts from time to time?

One's acquaintance with children would be slight indeed if he did not know one or more children presenting some such behavior problem. Most of us have spent anxious hours struggling with such children and such problems. Sooner or later it must have become apparent that parental slipper effected no permanent cure; that stubborn cases were not corrected by sending them to a dark closet or a supperless sleep. Removal of adenoids and the services of a good dentist helped some children out of their anti-social behavior, but there remain countless cases to give anxiety to parents, teachers, welfare workers and police.

Students of behavior problems have found ways of getting at these so-called stubborn cases, and today in clinics all over the country these children and their parents and teachers are being helped to normal, happy lives. Juvenile court judges, social workers, and scientists met in Chicago recently to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the opening of the first of these clinics for child guidance. What started as an adjunct of the juvenile court of that great city has been adapted to the needs of all the children of the comunity, and has been copied in scores of cities over the land. Spread of this idea has saved countless children from lives of crime, has kept hundreds of children out of institutions for the feeble-minded, and has brought happiness to thousands of children harassed in body and mind.

No one claims to have gotten at the bottom of this question of behavior. Both children and adults still do things which the scientists can neither explain nor cure. But we do know the cause and the cure for many kinds of peculiar behavior, and some of the best minds of the country are grappling with the more puzzling manifestations of undesirable conduct. Childhood is coming into its own. It is being studied and treated sympathetically. The modern child is shown how to get rid of the fears that harass him, to overcome the shyness that makes him fail in his recitations, to adapt himself to short comings in his environment or his body. Equally important, his parents and teachers are being taught to understand his problems and to deal with them sympathetically in stead of in blind, repressive fashion which generally leads to worse misbehavior than ever before.

Child-guidance clinics are only incidentally concerned with helping a child to find what his lifework shall be. They originted with juvenile courts which wanted to help children get rid of the weaknesses which brought them into court time and again. Sponsors of the clinics were not long in discovering that children who never ran afoul of the juvenile court had quite as serious behavior problema and were quite as much in need of guidance as the wards of the court So the modern child guidance clinic is only incidentally interested in the juvenile court children of their age as well as of backward youngsters. The well-run clinic gives the child a thorough examination at the hands of a physician, a psychiatrist, and a psychologist. Then a trained social worker studies the home life of the child and the family history and characteristics to discover what part environment has in the creation of a peculiar behavior, and whether the child's heredity is responsible for misconduct.

Sugar pills have "cured" many a fancied illness, but the medical and criminal annals did not contain many cases of serious misconduct being cured by liberal helpings of sugar and jam until the child guidance clinics began treating children with behavior problems. The parents of Harry Scott, aged 11 will testify that that prescription, obtained at the Institute for Juvenile Research in Chicago, Chicago's name for its child-guidance clinic, worked a modern miracle with their boy.

Harry's father is a successful lawyer, his mother is active in civic enterprises, and his brothers and sisters do well at school, play normal games and lead wholesome lives. Yet for several years Harry repeatedly stole money, toys, fountain pens, watches and other articles from members of his family and neighbors. No punishment or lecturers or pleadings curbed his pilfering. No reward could prompt Harry to do his share of the chores around the house, such as raking the leaves, and no coaxing could enlist Harry in the games of the other children. He did fairly well in school when he attended, but he was a persistent truant. Had Harry been a slum child he would have been arrested and brought before the juvenile court, but his parents made good his depredations and struggled with him. In despair they brought him to the institute.

Fear Potato Blight Will Follow Rains

Possibility of a costly outbreak of late blight among Michigan potatoes is being pointed out by the crops department at the M. S. C., the wet weather of the last few weeks having provided ideal conditions for the appearance of the diseases.

The potato crop is already fairly short, says H. C. Moore, potato specialist with the college extension division, estimates by the United States Department of Agriculture placing the 1925 production at one hundred five million bushels less than last year. Loss from blight would be felt more seriously than usual, therefore, and added care should be taken in caring for the crop.

The best control measure is to spray with Bordeaux Mixture (4-4-50) every ten days or two weeks. When it is raining rather frequently it is even safer to spray every week. Use a good high pressure machine to get the spray on the under side of the leaves, where the usually starts.

The blight is one of the worst potato diseases in its effect upon the keeping quality of the tubers in storage. An outbreak would result in great damage. It has been twelve years since the last bad epidemic of blight in Michigan. Bordeaux Mixture is also said to be effective against the leaf hoppers, which seem to be present always.

Call Meeting To Start Poultry Certification

Final organization of poultry certification work in the state, under the auspices of the Michigan State Poultry Improvement Association and the M. S. C., will be effected at meetings to be held in Grand Rapids and Lansing early in September, according to officers of the association.

The new poultry organization will supervise certification of hatcheries, poultry flocks, and baby chicks, under college inspection, much after the plan of the state crop improvement association, being a purely cooperative venture The aim is a guaranteed supply of pure bred poultry products for the farmers and hatcherymen of the state.

All who raise poultry and are interested in the new plan for certification are invited to attend a meeting at Grand Rapids September 3 or one at Lansing September 4 according to J. A. Hannah, member of the M. S. C. poultry department and an officer of the association.

Boy and girl members of dairy clubs in Michigan will compete for a free trip to the 1925 National Dairy Exposition at Indianapolis, October 10 to 17, offered by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute as a part of that organization's farm development work. The trip with all expenses paid is awarded to the champion dairy calf club member of the state selected by Nevels Pearson, Assistant State Club Leader under arrangements made by the National Committee on Boys and Girls' Club Work. In addition the Blue Valley organization will award one gold watch to each boy or girl owner of the grand champion calf of the Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian and Jersey breeds at the Exposition.

What They Ask

A "walking encyclopedia" of home economics is what most people expect a home demonstration agent to be. An extension worker in Bear Lake County, Idaho, who found the questions coming in thicker and faster than those asked by the proverbial small boy, decided to keep track of what the farm women with whom she worked wanted to know. She reported to the United States Department of Agriculture that at the end of three days she had been asked, and had answered to the best of her ability, the following questions, which do not include those connected with the regular home demonstration work or meetings:

"Some pickles recipes." "Will dill pickles spoil? How do you detect the spoilage, and what do you do?" "The best method of mitering corners." "How to remodel old hats." "How to remodel some old dresses." "How to make over a fur coat." "How to make over a cloth coat." "Some ways to use sugar and flour sacks." "Ideals for Christmas presents." "How do you dye a dress, and what colors give the best results?" "How do you cook wild fowl?" "A good style for a maternity dress." "Some ideas for making children's clothes "Help in making my own clothes" "How do you paint weeds for decorative purposes?" "How can I best patch a man's clothing when torn?" "Canning directions for peas, beans, corn, and tomatoes." "How do you know when meat is spoiled?" "A menu for a family reunion, including a color scheme and decorations." "A week's menus for a diabetic." "What colors can I dye tan wool?" "Some salad recipes." "Egg recipes." "A color scheme for a centerpiece," "Some recipes for cooking common vegetables so the meals won't be so monotonous." "What sort of a dress should I buy?" "Who should wear earrings?" "How do you clean silk?" "How do you dye shoes?' "How much fat should I use in pastry?" Questions which might be asked a canning club team. "A good practical kitchen apron pattern," "A list of good standard novels." "My dress draws to the back after being cut by a pattern I bought. Can I prevent that, or have I spoiled my dress material?"

Don't buy mortgage notes on distant property.

Don't buy stock in new enterprises.

Don't try to work the stock market. If the public were to win, professional operators would soon shut up shop and quit.

Don't buy stock in new invention schemes.

Don't buy from one who says, "Invest now or it will be too late."

Don't buy anything on "tips."

Have nothing to do with the "bucket shop."

A splendid rule is, before you buy a security take it to a conservative and disinterested banker and ask him how much he will lend on it alone as security.—Banker-Farmer.

Navy Launches a Big Electric Ship

Even the queen ships of the United States Navy, the group of electrically driven fighting vessels that includes the U. S. S. Maryland and West Virginia, most powerful battleships in the world, will be excelled in propulsion power, speed and length by the U. S. S. Saratoga, the first of two airplane carriers just launched at Camden, N. J.

The other airplane carrier, the U. S. S. Lexington, will be launched this fall at Quincy, Mass. Originally, these two vessels were to have been battle cruisers and as such would have been classed the mightiest men-o'-war possessed by Uncle Sam.

The Navy at present has but one airplane carrier, the U. S. S Langley, named after the scientist who made the first practical investigation of aeronautics. This ship was rebuilt from the old collier, Jupiter, the first vessel of the Navy to be equipped with turbine electric drive.

The Saratoga and Lexington will be literally floating airplane fields. They will also be floating electric generating plants. As naval vessels they will be the longest in the world. Their power plants, installed by the General Electric Company, will be capable of developing the tremendous force of 180,000 horsepower.

BANKERS HELP

A bank in Monrovia, Ind., tests seed corn for farmers. A basement room was fitted out last season for the purpose and 25,000 ears were tested for fifty-six farmers. One-fourth of the seed tested last year was unfit for seed. This year the percentage will run even higher. The work is done under the supervision of the high school agricultural teacher. He reports that the community will have a surplus of seed corn this year.

The banks of Conway, Ark., have offered prizes for the most marketable sweet potatoes produced on one acre of land. A first prize of $150 is offered, along with three district prizes of $50 each. The county agent and the banks are working out the details.

The County Bankers Association will help to employ a full time county leader this year for boys' and girls club work in Calhoun, Cherokee and Buena Vista counties, Iowa.

Exploded Theories

Some of the modern scientists have claimed for some time back that they believed that any form of human or animal life could be frozen stiff instantly and so remain in a state of suspended animation for years and then be thawed out and come to life again, but of course they did not believe such a rejuvenated cadaver could last long after such an experiment.

This theory was generally exploited thirty years ago and amateur Izaak Waltons believed that fish became frozen in the ice of lakes in cold climates during winter months and in the spring came to life again when the ice thawed. We remember of reading a popular story founded on this principle. It was a sea tale written by the famous English author W. Clark Russell. Russell in his "The Frozen Pirate" cleverly led the reader through a long maze of occurrences of sailor life whereas a certain Englishman left his native port on a merchantman to round Cape Horn and when in southern latitudes the merchantman was wrecked by a terrific storm and dismasted, drifting southward into Anarctic regions One by one the crew died from exposure and hunger until the hero was the only man left alive. While gazing aloft he was struck on the head by a falling block and rendered insensible. When he revived the ship was afoul of an ice field, and in the dim distance he espied the outlines of another hulk similarly dismasted and helplessly fast. Provisions were plenty on the English merchantman and after refreshing himself he set out to explore the ice floe. He found in the distance the wreck of an ancient pirate privateer presumably of Spanish nationality, quite intact in hull and filled with treasures of loot. He gives a vivid description of his entering for the first time the pitchy dark cabin and being terribly scared by touching the frozen forms of the crew seated naturally about the table where they had been for centuries. The author goes on to say that the Englishman somehow managed to drag the pirates above and cast them overboard except one particularly villianous looking ruffain left near his newly built fire in the cook's galley. In the meantime the Englishman had returned to his own ship and secured lights with which he searched the pirate ship from end to end and on returning to the cabin was surprised to find the frozen body had actually come to life. The yarn further says the Spanish sailor gradually became weaker and weaker and inside a few days was a weazened mummified old cadaver dying as he slept.

Publishers of the magazine "Science and Invention" have recently made experiments with animals which proves conclusively that no living thing can be frozen stiff and again come to life. In the first place any method of freezing known to science today bursts every blood vessel in the body which in itself is sufficient to kill.

But the editor of this magazine goes on to say, "It is possible that future science and discoveries will enable some process to be used whereby the human form can be instantaneously frozen in solid ice and every vitality retained in suspended animation. Then with suitable respiratory apparatus to produce artificial breathing, the subject may be resusitated and live on indefinitely."

In view of what science has accomplished during the past 20 years, it would not be surprising if even stranger things came to pass. At present there are thousands of partially informed people in this country who take these stories as literal truth, and the publishers of "Science and Invention" receive large numbers of letters annually inquiring about matters which are discussed from a speculative standpoint. The creating and stopping of human life are still hid to science and Dame Nature seems to aay "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther."

A Few Hints For Autoists

Scores of smart people imagine that if they are careful to inflate their tires to the extent of 40 pounds or less in hot weather the tires will wear longer, when as a matter of a fact the opposite is the truth. Never drive with a soft tire unless you have balloons. Inflate your tires to the full capacity in ordinary weather and in extremely hot days with cool mornings and nights if you take air early in the morning allow about 10 pounds for expansion as the temperature rises. Bear in mind that your tires more often give out on the side walls from the constant flexing when it is soft as it travels along the road. If you own a concrete floor on which to stand your machine when not in use provide jacks for raising the tires off the floor when you drive in. You will find this adds many days to the life to your tires.

The matter of oiling is one of the worst bugbears of the modern motorist. You perhaps give your car a liberal dose of oil when you first get it then you carefully forget all about it for several months. Don't you think for a minute the job is done. Watch the springs, especially the shackles and give them a dose of machine oil occasionally clean out the grease cups and put in new hard oil and screw them down until the grease works out the cracks. Not until then are you absolutely sure your car is properly lubricated. Every 1,000 miles you should drain the crank case and re-fill with the very best oil you can buy. The best is none too good and if you know how thin and worthless the oil becomes after a short run you would pay better attention to it. As to your firing troubles poor spark plugs are often found to be the cause of two thirds of it. It is sometimes hard to test a plug by ordinary means and discover its weakness. As a rule any motorist will make money by renewing his plugs every two years if not oftener, and at the same time you often hear of spark plugs being used five years and often longer without being taken out, but there is a great saving of gas by using only A-No. 1 plugs. A cheap plug is a loss at any price. If your car is not worth a good plug, it should be junked.

Literally thousands of people run their "flivvers" and large cars with a wrong adjustment of carburetor, causing a terirfic loss of power and waste of gas. If you drive a Ford, see to it all the manifold joints between carburetor and cylinders are absolutely air tight, then set your carburetor as lean as it will run. The less gas and the more air you use with your Ford the better. All Ford cars are so constructed as to use greater quantities of air in the mixture than any other car with less provision for air intake. Some Fords will run excellently with an auxiliary air valve on the manifold which is gradually opened from the dash as the car warms up. This is a wonderful gas saver. Big cars require an expert adjustment at the garage and once adjusted should never be disturbed until overhauled.

Some carburetors are so sensitive (the Marvel for instance) that the least turn of the air valve or gas cock will throw them out of commission. If your car suddenly develops a knock, don't begin to cuss the carbon, because the knock might be from a dozen different causes, and nobody but an expert can locate these knocks and these fellows sometimes fall down. For instance you get a thump which seems to be in the fly wheel or the transmission and you swear by the beard of the Prophet you have stripped gears—but lo, upon investigation it proves to be a loose main bearing, and vice versa. Some times a motorist believes he has a loose main bearing, when to his amazement the trouble is at the extreme rear of his bus. So we say nothing can be learned from sounds We have known instances when it was supposed front timer gears were out of alignment when the squall came from the transmission and vice versa. Remember this above all else—your machine will always liven up like a resusitated rat if you give it fresh grease. If you don't believe it drain the transmission, the rear housing and the crank case, and rinse out with kerosene. Then re-fill with the best fibre grease in the differential and transmission and best Mobiloil in the crank case—then note the result. My! She runs just like new!

Last but most important of all, see to it that your springs are at all times full of fresh grease. If you drive a car that is heavy attach a tackle to the rear end and raise it off the wheels. This will allow you to get between the leaves of the springs to thoroughly oil. Any make of machine will ride one half easier with well lubricated springs, and also will show far less wear at the end of the season, because there is a tendency to glide and cushion over the bumps, whereas rusty springs cause hard bumps to passengers and engine.

My! My! What Next?

The truth is out and who is to blame? My! My! What'll the W. C. T. U.'s think and the church people of this broad land and every body else who has been prating about the abstemious habits of our excellent first citizen, President Calvin Coolidge? Have you heard the news? Well, it is a fact (whisper please) that President Coolidge smokes those nasty old cigarettes. It has been leaked out by a member of the Washington staff of the National Tribune. President Coolidge was seen strolling on the Swampscott, Massachusetts estate recently placidly smoking a coffin tack.

Whereat this fact occurs to us gleaned from statistics: Smokers are tending away from cigars and towards cigarettes; and this has been noticeable ever since the World War. The demand for cigar tobaccos has gone down and the demand for cigaret material has gone up. Whether the nation as a whole is getting more foolish tradition doth not tell, but it is a fact that 20,000 less acres of cigar tobaccos were raised in 1925 than in 1924. We have always been taught that coffin tacks were the smoke of the lowly and the penniless but recent developments make it plain that millionaires and paupers—princes and criminals indulge in them. If our memory is correct Warren Harding also indulged in cigarets much to many people's astonishment. While we deplore the example of the Nation's head we also question the claims put worth by some W. C. T. U.'s and church people that cigarettes in moderation produce insanity, of weak mindedness. We say this with a full knowledge of their evil effects, and we positively have no use for them and have no acquiescense with those who smoke them

ECONOMY RULE WORKS CHANGES FOR TROOPERS

COM. ALAN G STRAIGHT REORGANIZES SAFETY DEPARTMENT TO MEET BUDGET LIMIT

Alan G. Straight, recently appointed commissioner of the Department of Public Safety of Michigan has put into effect sweeping changes which amount to a reorganization. This has been made necessary because of the action of the legislature in allowing only about one-half of the appropriation requested to enable the department to function at full strength and perform all duties assigned to it. Since 1923 when other divisions of the state government were merged with the State Police, the department has been given many new duties but little additional funds.

It is estimated that 100 additional men would be required were the policing of the state trunk line highways to be carried out fully.

Uniformed men of the State Police have been divided into five troops with headquarters at Negaunee, Gaylord, St. Clair, Paw Paw and Flat Rock. Each of these troop commanders has responsibility for a district. All supplies and purchases for each district must be approved by the commander in that district. All matters of criminal investigation and highway patrol in the district are under supervision of the commanding officer.

Force Is Divided

Supervision of the uniformed force will be directed by Captain C. J. Scavarda from East Lansing. He is also in charge of the State Police school where recruits are trained Under a law passed by the 1925 legislature local police officers may also attend sessions of this police school in order to better fit them for their work. Lieutenant J. C. Cleghorn is assistant to Captain Scavarda.

The Negaunee headquarters, in command of Captain A. N. Downing, has the Upper Peninsula as its field, the Gaylord troop, under Captain John Fagan, operates in the northern section of the Lower Peninsula, the St. Clair troop, under Lieutenant Frank Walker has the Bay City-Saginaw-Flint-Port Huron district, the Flat Rock troop under Lieutenant Joseph Kearney has the southeastern corner of the state and the Paw Paw troop, under Lieutenant Ora E. Demoray, the southwestern section.

The state detective bureau and the state identification bureau will work in conjunction with the uniformed State Police as well as with local officers. Men displaying a special aptitude for crime detection have been assigned to the detective bureau. The need of such a bureau lies in the fact that many counties of the state have no trained detective force to deal with serious crimes. This bureau also conducts investigations for the governor, attorney-general and other state officials.

Free Lance Squad Formed

Captain I. H. Marmon has been placed at the head of a free lance squad to deal with problems arising from gambling places, disorderly roadhouses and the like. A number of places where the laws were violated have been closed.

A special squad has been detailed to deal with prohibition law cases. The uniformed men are utilized to conduct raids upon evidence secured by the members of this squad.

The duties of the State Police go far beyond routine police duty. The force is charged with the destruction of seized alcoholic liquors and a number of men are kept busy at this disagreeable task practically all of the time. Transfer of prisoners from one institution to another and from prisons to road camps is also under the State Police. Several men are engaged most of the time in bringing back prisoners who have escaped from Michigan to other states.

Other Divisions

Use of convicts to build state highways has been made possible through the employment of State Police to guard these prisoners. This has resulted in a large saving to the state in construction costs.

Some of the burden of prohibition law enforcement has been taken away by the consent of federal officers to assume charge of a part of the border patrol against smugglers. Owing to the small number of men in the State Police, enforcement of the prohibition laws in the cities is also left almost entirely to local officers.

One of the divisions of the Department of Public Safety which has had to be restricted in expenditures owing to the cutting of the budget is the state fire marshal's office. This has the general task of fire prevention in the state and the more specific work of investigating all suspicious fires and inspecting theaters, public buildings, rural schools, public institutions and the like.

Oil inspection is a division which takes all of the time of some inspectors and part time of many officers.

Supervision of paroled prisoners also is a work of the Department of Public Safety.

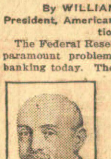
THE FEDERAL RESERVE A NATIONAL PROBLEM

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President, American Bankers Association

The Federal Reserve situation is the paramount problem before American banking today. The time is approaching when it will be necessary for the nation to consider the question of rechartering the Federal Reserve Banks.



William E. Knox

The Federal Reserve System must be preserved. It is one of the most scientific banking systems in the world. During the last ten years, through all the stress of war, inflation, depression and revival, it served this country as no country was ever served by a banking system. We know that without it our nation would have had a financial disaster far more devastating than any that ever assailed it.

While we have this great loyalty and obligation to the System, we must recognize that among its friends there has risen serious controversy over many matters of detail. There are many demands for change in the methods of its management and in details of its operation. Where these demands represent broadly the greatest good of the greatest number we should support them. Where they represent merely narrow, diverse interests of one part of the country or one type of business or finance, they should be subordinated to the common good. We should meet on the great broad ground of the common welfare—first to preserve the system in general as it is now constructed, and secondly to bring about, carefully and soundly, such changes as are required to adjust it to circumstances of today.

The task of considering, sifting, weighing and co-ordinating discussion and suggestions regarding the Federal Reserve System has been confided to the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. It is hoped that thereby the Federal Reserve System will be given the best thought and the best support of banking. There is no greater service banking can render the nation than this. It goes right to the heart of good management of the public economy of America.

The Mint's Sidelines

The United States mints make other objects besides coins. All of the medals for the army and navy are turned out by the mints. Medals of all the Presidents, the Secretaries of the Treasury, the Directors of the Mints, have been designed and executed by the mints. Recently the mints inaugurated the practice of making medals of the Under Secretaries of the Treasury. Congress has authorized the mint to make up 40,000 medals to commemorate the arrival of the first shipload of Norse immigrants on board the sloop Restaur Ationen, which is to be celebrated at the Norse-American Centennial in Minnesota next summer.

At the last session of Congress there was a flood of bills seeking to have commemorative half dollars minted. The prior session authorized the minting of the Huguenot half dollars and of 5,000,000 half dollars to signalize the start of work on the Stone Mountain carving, which will serve as a monument to the valor of the soldiers of the South. On the Federal coins appear Generals Lee and Jackson, the two leaders of the Confederate forces in the Civil War.

With the 150th anniversary of the great battles of the American revolution approaching, bills were passed last winter to issue coins commemorating the stand of the minutemen at Lexington and Concord and the battle of the Green Mountain patriots at Bennington in Vermont. Proposals were made to pay tribute in a similar way to the battle of Bunker Hill, the victory at Yorktown and other events American history, such as the 200th anniversary of the founding of Stoughton, Mass., and the 50th anniversary of the admission of California to the Union.

Fearing that the growth of this practice would open the way to counterfeiting and make the protection of the integrity of the coins more difficult, Secretary Mellon openly opposed the creation of these special coins, but was not entirely successful in his efforts. He insisted that the practice introduced confusion into our system of coinage, brought about an unnecessary expense and satisfied a very limited demand because the public generally has never shown a special liking to the commemorative coins.

However, Congress felt that these great events were worthy of commemoration and authorized the coins—all of which are to be sold at a premium so that the promoters of these events may raise funds by this extra charge to defray part of the expense attached. The records of the Treasury show that the special coins, as a general rule, are seldom absorbed in circulation. The Monroe coin issue was a dismal failure—217,000 of the 274,000 struck off were turned back to the Treasury for melting up. — Journal American Bankers Association.

He Told It To Em' Straight

It was in the hazy days of long ago we used to read the famous Detroit Free Press when women wore bangs and men wore whiskers, and the Free Press was known and read as the most shintng example of good journalism in the state. Among the most interesting contents were the "Lime Kiln Club" and the "Arizona Kicker" the former by M. Quad and the latter by the versatile humorist, Bill Nye. As editor of a wild and woolly western periodical Nye was wont to expresshis feelings similar to the following:

"A lot of people in this town fall out with the editor and brand him as a liar when the ordinary human mistakes of life show up in the newspaper. You have a little charity and fellow feeling for every man in town but your editor. You claim that you want the facts and drat me—if I don't give them to you. Read the next issue and you'll see some facts with the bark off. I'll admit I have been a liar—an editorial liar ever since I have been editing this sheet, but I have never printed a lie in these columns except to save somebody's feelings from being hurt. I'm not afraid of any of you. I'll be dad blamed if I don't print the plain truth from now on. Now watch my smoke!

James Coyle, our groceryman who voted with the Republicans in 1916, and consumes more mail order whisky than any other member of the Baptist church in the county, is doing a poor business. His store is somewhat dilapidated and it is a wonder he has any business at all.

Tenous Lunker, cashier of the State Bank at Willow Grove died Wednesday evening, and was burien Friday by the Odd Fellows in Pleasant Mound cemetery. He has been taking the paper for several years and never paid us a cent, and we thinking he was a banker, would pay some time. We will sell the account for a mess of fresh greens.

Married—Miss Susie Shruggs to Horace Griffin last Saturday. It's what brought Horace over from the Peck neighborhood every Sunday for the past six months. The bride is an ordinary town girl who flirts with most of the traveling men she meets and has never helped her mother to exceed three days alltogether in her whole life. She is anything but a beauty and resembles a gravel pit in the face. The groom is a natural born bum. He went to the county seat to accept a job as chambermaid in a garage but fell down on the job the third day. When Susie found out how it was she went over and rescued him. He is now rusticating at the home of his father-in-law and so far as we know has no plans for the future—in fact his stock of plans has run out. Susie has a hard row to hoe."

Dave Jenks died at his late doci mile north of this place Thursday night. Doc Peterman of Honberg who attended him about five minutes before he expired, (and Doc is an old friend of the family) gave out that Dave died of heart failure but its a lie. Dave died from drinking too much of a very poor quality of mail order liqour. This paper prints the truth.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said morgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land (situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit; the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

A Problem

A citizen of the Rumpus Ridge neighborhood, going homeward from town, beheld sitting on the ground by the side of the road and marking in the dirt with sticks, a couple of well-known residents of the region.

"Howdy, gents!" he saluted. "If it's a fair question, what 'pears to be coming off?"

"Me and Newt, yur, swapped hosses this afternoon," replied one, "and ever since then we've been trying to figger out how both of us could be stuck at the same time."—Kansas City Star.

Tunnel Under Cascades

In an effort to wipe out the Cascade mountains in Washington as a trade barrier between the east and western portions of that state, a plan is on foot to build a low-level tunnel under this widely known mountain range. It is estimated the tunnel would have to be 30 miles long and would cost about $63,000,000.

WHY SUFFER ANOTHER DAY WITH INDIGESTION?

The big seller today for acute and chronic stomach misery is Dare's Mentha Pepsin and it is such a fine, pleasant and supremely good medicine that if the first bottle you buy doesn't help you—your druggist will return the purchase price.

One man writes, "I Cannot understand why any person will continue to suffer from gastritis or indigestion when Dare's Mentha Pepsin is available."

And tens of thousands of people—many of whom almost died with stomach agony—think the same way.

It's the right medicine for any person who suffers from bad digestion, gas, heaviness and that feeling of suffocation which is always dangerous.

For gastritis, indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach agony—acute or chronic, keep Dare's Mentha Pepsin in mind.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Flint—Three persons were injured, one seriously when a D. U. R. interurban jumped an open switch at Sunnyside, two miles south of Goodrich and crashed into a work train. The injured, all residents of Rochester, were taken to Goodrich hospital.

Lansing—Bus lines will be in operation Oct. 1 over virtually all routes now covered by electric lines, officials of the Michigan Electric Railway Co. announced. The bus service will include routes between Lansing and Jackson, Flint and Bay City, Jackson and Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids.

Port Huron—The sand and gravel barge Penobscot was destroyed by fire in St. Clair River a few miles south of Marine City. The fire started in a forward compartment near the hoisting machinery and spread rapidly. The crew had no difficulty in reaching shore. The charred hull sank sank in 25 feet of water.

Lansing—John C. Kendel, of Denver, Colo., has been appointed state supervisor of music to succeed John W. Beattie, resigned. Kendel will take over the duties of his office about September 1. He assumes directorship of music instruction of the state schools after several years as director of music in the Denver city schools.

Jackson—Fire practically destroyed the finishing building at the Michigan State Prison cement plant at Chelsea with a loss estimated at $35,000 by Warden Harry H. Jackson. The blaze is believed to have started from hot journals in the sacking department and to have spread to the oil bunkers, enveloping the roof of the structure in a mass of flames.

Jackson—Work of constructing the new 32-foot wall around Jackson prison is nearly finished with exception of removing concrete forms, and work on a new cell block will start soon. The new cell block will accommodate 2,500 prisoners. A temporary structure which will eventually be built into another cell block, is to be constructed as a dining room and kitchen unit.

Manistee — The entire board of supervisors was censured for laxity in the financial affairs of the county and a recommendation was made for a thorough audit of the accounts of Justice August Greve, Sr., during the last 10 years and the shortage of Arnold T. Graves, former county treasurer, was placed at $4,590 by State auditors who investigated the county offices.

Lansing—Chemists working under the supervision of the State Department of Health have obtained 210 samples of the water in wells, streams and springs of the state in their efforts to protect tourists from impure drinking water. Signs have been posted in conspicuous places advising the tourist that the water to be found is pure or unwholesome as the case my be.

Monroe—Members of the Monroe County Farm Bureau association and county grange held their annual outing at Dewy's beach along Lake Erie, five miles north of here. C. L. Burton, county agent, was the general overseer. Various athletic games were enjoyed. Louise Campbell, director of home economics of the M. S. C., addressed the women on nutrition to children.

Pontiac—Likelihood of annexation of Sylvan Lake village to Pontiac has practically disappeared with the development of opposition among citizens of the village to any such attempt on the ground that no immediate benefits would result. In a mass meeting held in the village to discuss it, only one citizen spoke in favor of annexation. City Manager Ham and Mayor Rockwell discussed the matter from the city's viewpoint.

Kalamazoo—By a majority of 5,032 Joseph L. Hopper, of Battle Creek, the Republican candidate, was elected to Congress from the Third District over Claude S. Carney, of Kalamazoo, his democratic opponent, in the recent special election. Hopper will serve out the unexpired term of the late Rep. Arthur B. Williams, of Battle Creek, who died in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, last April. Hopper received 14,884 votes to Carney's 9,852.

Jackson—The city of Jackson kept within its 1925 budget by $43,943.72 for the first six months of the year, according to figures made public. The budget charges for the six months amounted to $563,243.93, or $25,881.25 less than one-half the year's appropriations of $589,128.18. Taxes collected during July, 1925, totaled $663,689.82, while in July, 1924, $447,888.46 in taxes were collected. However, the total amount of the city tax in 1924 was $527,760, while this year it is $779,326.37.

Lansing—Attempts to evade paying the full auto license tax on the part of motorists, who are trying to benefit by the 50 per cent reduction in the tax Sept. 1, will be thwarted according to a bulletin issued to branch office managers by the Department of State. Affidavits signed by a sheriff or a chief of police to the effect that the vehicle for which a license is applied has not been driven before Sept. 1, will be required if the title to the machine was issued previous to that date, the bulletin says.

Grand Rapids—Superior Judge Leonard D. Verdier, in a communication directed to Governor Groesbeck, asked that definite machinery be established in order that a fine, imposed upon a prisoner in addition to a state's prison sentence, may be collected or the prisoner be required to serve the additional period specified for its non-payment. Judge Verdier, pointed out that Kent county, and possibly other counties have been losing money because prisoners sentenced to state penal institutions have been paroled without paying fines additional to their terms.

Marine City—A garage and three dwellings were destroyed by fire here causing damage estimated at $25,000. The fire, origin unknown, started in the garage. Eight automobiles were destroyed by the flames.

Marshall—The case against Mrs. Minnie Jones, charged with giving poison to her husband William, was dealt another severe blow when C. L. Bliss, State chemist, reported no trace of poison in a box of cookies sent him for examination.

St. Ignace—State Police have taken over the direction of traffic at the State ferry dock here. The situation had been beyond control for several days because of the desired to ferry across the Straits. The automobiles now are being moved in an orderly manner.

Grand Rapids—At a recent election the village of East Grand Rapids annexed 485 acres of Paris Township lying south of the present village limits. Although the township voted 36 to 18 against the annexation, the favorable majority in the village overcame the township vote.

Muskegon—Herbert Hammond, 17 years old, star Muskegon high school athlete, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and was sent back to jail to await sentence. Hammond, with seven other boys, was alleged to have taken part in 31 robberies in various western Michigan cities.

Mt. Clemens—"Two suspicious looking characters," who proved to be Deputy Sheriffs Percy Moore and Arthur Lazaraus, of Macomb county, were held for investigation at Sault Ste. Marie, where they were awaiting a boat to return here after transporting two prisoners to the Marquette Branch prison.

Escanaba—Declaring that the Bell Telephone Co. is earning a return of 21 per cent on the cost of its property here after all proper charges have been paid, the Escanaba city council petitioned the State Public Utilities Commission for a rate reduction. The petition is intended to offset the company's request for an increase.

Flint—Investigation of the theft of garbage was the peculiar request received by the police from Nahum Long, Flint garbage commissioner. He said that the garbage was taken from the rear of the Elk's Club and other downtown eating places. Garbage collected by the city is used to fatten hogs on a city-operated farm.

Jackson—Prison authorities announced that two prisoners paroled to work with the road building gang at Ypsilanti, escaped from the prison camp Sunday. The men are Albert Burns, serving from two to five years for larceny, sent up from Detroit, and Joseph Romero, Detroit, serving from one to five years for larceny.

Flint—The Rev. Dr. John Dysart, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal church here, has announced that the church, in which no services have been held for the past two weeks, will be entirely renovated and re-decorated early in September. As soon as the alterations are complete the Episcopal church will again hold its regular services.

Kalamazoo—A futile effort to save 80 cents cost Joseph Vanderreost, a celery grower, a fine of $7.50 in Municipal Court here. Vanderreost was driving 35 miles an hour, the officer reported, on his way to the city treasurer's office. As it was the last day for the payment of summer taxes, he sought to escape the 80 cents delinquency penalty fee.

Saginaw—Joseph Fordney, 13 years old, grandson of former Rep. Joseph W. Fordney, rescued Helen Gates, maid at the Fordney summer home at Tawas Beach, when she went beyond her depth in Saginaw Bay, according to word received here. He swam from shore when Miss Gates screamed for help, towed her more than 200 feet to the beach and used his Boy Scout knowledge of life saving methods to resuscitate her.

Kalamazoo—Prosecuting Attorney Leroy Bibby and Sheriff Jerome S. Borden investigated charges on the part of Colburn Munger and Guy Funk, members of the State Police, that a mob had taken four prisoners from them at Ramona Park, a Long Lake resort. The officers say that they arrested the four men on charges of intoxication. As they were taking the four out of the park they met the mob, which resented the arrest of the men and threatened violence.

Mt. Clemens—Mt. Clemens business men and city officials are planning a last offensive to prevent the War Department from abandoning proposed dredging operations in the Clinton River. A hearing, which the Government indicated will be the last, is to be held in Detroit, Sept. 1. An attempt will be made to show that the maintenance of the Clinton River as a navigable stream is necessary to industrial enterprises maintained here. Also the necessity for safeguarding the 100 or more pleasure boats owned here.

Battle Creek—Eight sleeping children imprisoned behind locked doors were carried through flames and smoke in a daring and spectacular rescue from Labelle Resort Hotel at Gull Lake, 14 miles west of Battle Creek, which was totally destroyed by fire with an estimated loss of $85,000. The children had been locked in rooms by their parents and were sleeping when the fire broke out. After breaking down doors firemen carried all of them to safety. The fire was caused, it was believed, by a leaking gas heating plant.

Lansing—Because the 1925 Legislature failed to specify how and when the University of Michigan should receive its portion of the mill tax, the university will have to rely on the interpretation of the law by Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck, the State Administrative Board or the State Treasurer if it is to meet its financial obligations between now and July, 1926. This fact was disclosed by Victor Spiker, acting deputy attorney-general and incidentally helped to dispel the mystery surrounding "the university's missing 3 million."

THE procession of new fall coats is beginning to pass in review; important looking and gracious garments, that immediately inspire respect and interest, are in the vanguard and we are meeting them for the first time. There is nothing easy-going and casual in their style points—they are original, beautiful, assertive and increasingly emphasized when coats for formal wear or semidress come into view.

The most important style note is the changed silhouette—the new coats are fuller and the flaring skirtline has gone a long way toward replacing the straight line. This greater fulness is very adroitly managed with a view to preserving the impression of slenderness in the figure and is usually introduced below the swell of the hips or in front. With it there is a tailored trimness in the body of the garment—very long sleeves and high collars adding length of line, and there is much dignity in design.

Fur maintains its place as a border for the bottom of many coats and has captured other positions. Besides collars and cuffs in great variety fur supplies trimming touches in other ways and is much used in patches and emplacements on dressy coats. A handsome coat of the sports type that will make a strong appeal to younger women is shown in the picture. It is made of natural kasha, lined with red crepe which appears in the turned back cuff and revers. It is bordered with American opossum fur and has a decoration of buttons down the sides. In this model the fullness is developed in front and the fur border emphasizes the flare in the skirt, but the coat hangs straight at the back.

New style points in fall dresses are coming in like a flock of debutantes, for presentation at the court of fashion. One style show follows another in the large cities and here the new arrivals make their bow. There has been some doubts as to whether some of them would be well received or not; for certain of them have little lineage and few can point back to any particular period for their origin. They are modernists and original, but well behaved and rarely bizarre.

First and most important is the tailored note in street and afternoon frocks and in coats. There is no doubt about its success for American women have long admired tailored styles. In this connection the return of wool to favor must be noted, especially in smooth-faced cloths of high luster—broadcloth or "satin broadcloth," as it is called, and fine flannels. Next in order of importance is increased fulness, by means of plaits or flares. But this increased fulness in tailored dresses does not always mean a wider silhouette. Plaits are the favored medium for introducing fulness. There is almost no exception to the rule of long sleeves, but in these and in necklines there is a pleasing variety.

Cubist Furs

Printed silks and printed cottons have run the gamut of popularity and now we have approaching us printed furs. Such skins as mole, colt, mouse, gazelle and antelope are being block-printed in elaborate designs. Frequently this is done in squares or lozenges with skins of opposed colors placed next each other.

Belts Are Featured.

For some time there has been a growing tendency to feature belts on frocks. In evening frocks it takes the form of a sash, but for daytime wear there is apt to be a suggestion of a sash rather than the actual belt itself. In some instances, however, if the frock is of the simple morning type, there is a belt of leather in a wide or narrow width.

Curled Coq for Hats

Curled coq is very much the vogue in Paris for hat trimming, particularly for the small turbans that seem to be molded on the head.

Citizens Just Had to "Get Up and Git"

"There seems to be an amazing lack of life and activity in this town," said a hypercritical young motorist. "Many of the residences are closed up. Boards are nailed over the store windows. I have seen no children playing in the public square. The whole place looks like the deserted village in the poems. What's the matter?"

"Well, I'll tell you," replied the landlord of the Periwinkle tavern. "City kinfolks got to coming in such herds and staying so long to visit our people that the latter finally clumb into their Hootin' Nannys and lit out for the summer."

"But you didn't go?"

"Nope! I ain't got any kinfolks."—Kansas City Star.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

One Horse Town, Good-Bye!

Any community whose streets are not durably paved is going to be known as a "one horse town."

When that time arrives, Prosperity says, "Good-bye, old friend. Good-bye!"

People start moving away. Bank deposits fall off. Business in general begins to take a slump, and the place is no longer "on the map."

Contrast all this with the city that is well paved.

It steadily forges ahead over its hard, even streets. Automobiles, busses and delivery trucks, operate efficiently and economically, regardless of season or weather.

Business is good, and keeps getting better. Modern, fire-safe buildings spring up. New industries are attracted to town. Plants and factories are working full time. Trade at the stores is brisk, and everybody's busy.

In short, permanently paved streets and roads are one of the very best investments any community can make. You can enjoy the tonic effect of well paved streets by helping your local authorities to find ways and means to build more of them.

Nethaway School Reunion

The second annual reunion of the Nethaway school was held on Thursday, August 20th at the farm home of Miss Ida French. Sixty-eight were present and enjoyed an excellent pot-luck dinner and a good program consisting of readings, solos, duets, etc. A short history of the school was read by the secretary.

The records show that District No. 8 Adams township, was organized in February 1843, and the first year held school at the home of Abraham Smith. The school was financed by a rate bill of 3 schillings per year for each scholar. Amount raised $15.37, and each parent or guardian furnished ¼ cord of wood for each pupil attending school, and $5.00 was raised to pay for the ground also $70.00 to build the school house. Each tax payer was privileged to work out his assessment at 5 shillings per day.

Miss Ida French claims the honor of being the oldest living person in the district in point of continuous residence, having lived on the same farm since she was three weeks old. There were teachers and pupils present from Adrian, Chicago, Tulsa, Oklahoma, Ludington, Hillsdale, Coldwater, and North Adams. In the records appear such names as Abraham Smith. Joel French, Franklin French. Horace Hitchcock, W. C. Whitney, A. C. Edwards, Gilbert Travis. Officers re-elected were: President, Mrs. May Sears; sec., Alice Darrow. The next reunion will be held at the same place in August 1926, date to be determined later.

The pastor will give a Labor Day discourse at the morning worship hour. The theme for this discussion will be "Where Labor and Capitol Meet" Labor Day represents the time when all classes of people get together, rich and poor alike. Let us forget class prejudice and have a Church Labor Day this Sunday morning. The Sunday school hour is of special interest to everyone and U are cordially invited to be Peesent at this after church service.

Then Don't forget the evening service this week. "The Passion play" is probably the biggest and best picture sermon which we have given you. Be there to get the best there is for you! Tell your friends about it. Use your 'phone and help this service to be a great success. Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

"God blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it—making no exceptions for rainy Sundays." Go to church Sunday.

There is a large possibility for Henry Ford's aeroplane business to far surpass even his automobile business inside of a few years. Tha foundations of the Aeroplane Company have been laid deeply and as the machines are improved capacity will be amply sufficient to take care of increased outputs. Mr. Ford's engineers are already planning on establishing routes to different cities like Indianapolis, St. Louis, etc., and will be the principal promoters of this transportation throughout the United States.

It is reported that State Road M-23 is the most dangerous in the state to travel on and we believe it. The excessive crooks and angles of this line make it extremely hard to motor on, and in addition there is a constant stream of foreign traffic and strangers who have never driven there previously and do not understand that loose gravel and speed cause trouble. Between Somerset and Allen almost across the entire county this condition is the Waterloo of many an unfortunate driver. More accidents this season are reported from this stretch than any other in the state. Next season the pike will be torn up and paved to the concrete west of Quincy

Caillaux Scores Heavily in His War Debt Agreement With Great Britain.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JOSEPH CAILLAUX, finance minister of France, and Winston Churchill, British chancellor of the exchequer, appear to have "put one over" on the United States. The Frenchman went to London to fix up the Franco-British war debt affair, and after various conferences and a stormy cabinet session, Mr. Churchill suddenly offered to accept from France $60,625,000 annually for 62 years from her own resources irrespective of the German payments under the Dawes plan, with a partial moratorium for France until 1930. Put in others words, France is to pay Great Britain a total of $3,758,750,000, representing payments of 2 per cent interest on the total debt, but no payments on the principal, which will be canceled at the end of 62 years. Caillaux naturally accepted the offer at once and it was believed it would be approved by his government.

This all sounded nice and generous on the part of Churchill, but the joker came in his reservation that the offer was conditional on similar terms being granted France by the United States. In his official statement he said: "His majesty's government made it perfectly clear that any arrangements between America and France must be governed by the principle that Great Britain must receive from France proportionate and pari-passu payments to any she may eventually make to America. It would be no service to Europe, already so grievously stricken, if the sacrifices of one creditor of France were merely conduced to the advantages of another. Therefore any present Anglo-French agreement should be considered as merely provisional pending the Washington outcome."

To understand the situation, it must be remembered that the United states funded the British and Belgian debts on a basis of principal and 3½ per cent interest. If now we grant the easier terms to France, it is assumed Great Britain will ask a revision of the agreement made with us by Prime Minister Baldwin on the ground that she is entitled to the same terms as are granted to France. If we demand more proportionately from the French than Churchill asks, America will be pictured as a Shylock and France will have an excuse to break off the negotiations in Washington.

Caillaux, it is believed in London, will come to Washington in advance of the French debt commission for the purpose of arguing that the United States be no less generous than Great Britain. He undoubtedly has scored a great triumph and is in a strong position. Churchill's status is less certain. His offer to Caillaux was opposed vigorously by some of his colleagues in the government and is being bitterly attacked in the press. There are predictions that he has wrecked his career.

President Coolidge has let it be known that in his opinion the debt settlements with Britain and Belgium should not necessarily be copied in dealing with France and Italy. The arrangements with those countries, he thinks, should be entirely in accordance with their ability to pay; and he adds that they should be afforded every opportunity to present to the American debt commission any reason they may have for asking more liberal terms than those granted to Great Britain.

FRANCE won another diplomatic victory last week when the German government decided to participate in a conference of legal experts the purpose of which is to find a basis on which conversations may be held for the formulating of a security pact for Europe. Doctor Gouss of the foreign office was selected as the German representative. French Ambassador De Margerie, in submitting to the Berlin government the allies' reply to the original German proposals, included two invitations, the first for this conference of experts and the second for a subsequent definite parley of the German, French, British and Belgian foreign ministers for the purpose of drawing up treaties. It appears likely that the German cabinet's opposition to acceptance of the French demands concerning the security pact have been largely overcome, though the Berlin semi-official communique declares acceptance of the invitations does not mean that the proposed conditions have been swallowed whole.

The German comment regarding the French conditions on which Germany must enter the League of Nations is not clear. Chancellor Luther and other German statesmen have so committed themselves to reservations of Article 16 that it will be difficult for any German statesman to find a formula permitting unconditional entrance. But the comment indicates that Foreign Minister Stresemann and Doctor Luther are already seeking some way in which to meet the French demands and at the same time pacify the opposition within Germany.

Dusseldorff, Duisburg and Ruhrort, the "sanctions cities" which the French and Belgians occupied in 1921, were evacuated last week by the troops of those nations. Only a small waterway commission was left in Dusseldorff. The Belgians will continue to guard the Rhineland end of the bridge over the Rhine. The way is now open for evacuation of the Cologne area by the British and this probably will follow soon. All of which helps toward a better understanding between the allies and Germany.

BEFORE quitting the subject of war debts it must be recorded that Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee, has declared his dissatisfaction with the terms of the settlement with Belgium, which he says are "almost universally criticized." Senator Smoot is trying to pacify him. It is believed the senate will ratify the agreement, notwithstanding the opposition of the influential Borah.

The Rumanian government has decided to send a debt mission to Washington. However, Finance Minister Bratiano recently told the powers that Rumania would not be able to pay and explained why.

UP TO the time of writing all efforts to avert the strike of anthracite miners have failed and probably the men will quit work on September 1. The latest offer of the mine owners was to renew negotiations for a new agreement, provided it was understood they had not agreed to abandon their oppostion to the check-off and the wage increase, "both of which we are willing to consider fully, but both of which we now believe to be unsound and unwarranted."

The federal government, it is reiterated, will not interfere in any way except to see that coal supplies are properly distributed. President Coolidge has been assured repeatedly that the public will not suffer nearly so much from a strike at this time as will the mine owners and the workers. Stocks of anthracite on hand are sufficient to meet the demand until December. Massachusetts is leading the way among Eastern states in making arrangements to abandon the use of hard coal to a great extent.

FEDERAL and state bureaus made public reports last week that show great agricultural prosperity in the four Middle Western states of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. In Illinois the corn is in fine condition and the crop promises to be the best since 1920. The cotton crop in the southern portion of the state is in excellent condition. Small grains are reported to be slightly below average, but the quality is favorable and the money returns from increases in the price of wheat are said to have made up losses suffered otherwise.

The corn yield in Iowa is expected to average 40 bushels an acre with a total crop of about 450,000,000, an increase of 145,000,000 over that of last year. The expected corn crop in Nebraska is more than 203,000,000, and in Kansas about 100,000,000.

Conditions in the Dakotas are reported about average with the outlook generally optimistic. The success of corn in these states depends largely on how soon frosts will set in. Michigan reports are cheerful, with corn being estimated at about 85 per cent of normal. Potatoes are reported normal; beans, 88 per cent; sugar beets, 82 per cent; and the peach crop as short. The apple crop has been estimated at 8,356,000 bushels. Crops in Indiana are expected to bring about the liquidation of many frozen credits in the rural banks, and in Ohio the agricultural condition is looked at as being the best since 1915.

BEFORE leaving Washington for his home in Kansas, Senator Curtis, Republican floor leader, said the tax hearings before the finance committee in October would be brief and that the bill would be reported quickly to the senate, and that there would be special effort to have it passed before March, when the tax returns for the next year must be filed. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, another Republican member of the finance committee, said he would oppose inclusion in the new tax law of any provision with regard to capital gains and losses, holding that the government was losing revenue under the provisions of the present law taxing capital gains and would profit by repeal of the levy.

VICTOR F. LAWSON, the late publisher and editor of the Chicago Daily News, makes in his will what might be termed an experiment in journalism. He gave to the Illinois Merchants' Trust company full power to control the Daily News or to sell it and reinvest the proceeds. In other words, the banking company stands precisely in the position Mr. Lawson himself occupied in control of the newspaper property, except that the earnings are to be paid over to the residuary legatees. President J. J. Mitchell of the bank assures the public that there need be no apprehensions concerning a "capital controlled press" and that the newspaper management now in control, trained by Mr. Lawson in his methods and policies, will be designated by the bank to continue the publication.

Many religious, educational and other semi-public institutions benefit under Mr. Lawson's will, and his relatives, business associates and employees received generous bequests. His estate has not yet been valued but it amounts to several millions.

SOMETHING new was sprung last week by President Saavedra of Bolivia, who has been virtual dictator of the country for several years. President-elect Villanueva was to have been inaugurated Tuesday, but he had refused to form a cabinet composed exclusively of members of Saavedra's party, so the dictator postponed the inaugural ceremony and caused a motion to be introduced in the chamber of deputies declaring the election of Villaneuva null and void on the grounds of fraud and of Villaneuva's ineligibility. Saavedra was backed by the army, assembled in La Paz for the purpose, and it was taken for granted the motion would carry and that a new election within six months would be called.

IF YOU wish to call on President and Mrs. Coolidge in the summer White House at Swampscott, now is your chance. Mr. Coolidge has decided that during the brief remainder of his vacation he will devote part of each day to receiving unofficial callers, most of whom heretofore have not been admitted. At the week-end the Presidential party took a trip to Plymouth, Mass., on the Mayflower.

THE body of Ambassador Edgar A. Bancroft was brought from Japan to Chicago, where simple funeral services were held in the presence of a large number of the nation's most prominent men. The casket, escorted by military guard of honor, was then taken to Galesburg, Ill., for interment.

GEN. L. C. ANDREWS, czar of prohibition enforcement, is getting his campaign against rum going, having appointed the district administrators and made all plans for the strategic disposition of his army of 10,000 men. Many of the appointments of administrators are temporary, for General Andrews hopes to persuade prominent citizens—dollar a year men—to accept the posts. So far he has not had much success in that line.

Division in Norway Over Taking Islands

Oslo, Norway.—The new Svalbard (Spitzbergen) law by which the archipelago is incorporated in the kingdom of Norway has been placed on the statute book after having been passed in the two chambers by narrow majorities.

Norwegians are divided regarding the benefits to them by the acquisition of these islands, which were assigned to Norway by the Spitzbergen treaty concluded in Paris between the great powers on February 9, 1920.

On one hand, popular feelings of national prestige have impelled acceptance of responsibility for the sole remnant of what, according to perfervid nationalists, ought to be a Norse empire embracing also Iceland and Greenland.

The possibility of Spitzbergen becoming at some future time an important station for transarctic air traffic is also not lost sight of.

On the other hand, the islands, which are inaccessible during the long winter season, hitherto have been satisfactorily administered by private interests, and they will now require an administrative body headed by a provincial governor, with a host of civil service officials.

Estimates for 1925-26, recently published, cover an initial expenditure for the new administration estimated at 240,000 crowns. An income tax will be levied estimated to produce 160,000 crowns and an export duty on coal is calculated to yield 80,000 crowns.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Mt. Clemens—Sidney Linde, 18 years old, arrested on the complaint of his mother that he had forged her name to several checks, was sentenced to 90 days in jail here by William F. Sawn, in justice court.

Marshall—Sheriff George W. Colby has placed a ban on Sunday dancing at Calhoun County lake resorts, following reports of conditions at some of the dance halls. The order does not affect dance halls in cities or towns.

Flint—Three oil station owners, pleading guilty in police court to having defective pump measuring apparatus, paid fines of $25 each rather than go to jail for five days. Another oil man received a suspended sentence.

Mt. Clemens—A city drain project involving an expenditure of about $200,000 has been awarded to Macomb County and Detroit contractors by Edward B. Millar, county drain commissioner. It is understood that the work will be started this fall.

Lansing—The first authorization to a railroad to operate bus lines was issued by the Michigan Public Utilities Commission when the Detroit & Mackinac obtained a permit to establish a freight line from Alpena to Rogers City and Onaway.

Grand Rapids—Following an operation to relieve pressure against the spinal cord, surgeons at Blodgett Hospital here were almost certain they could save the life of Philip Berns, 16, a musician, whose neck was broken in a diving accident at Petoskey.

Sault Ste. Marie—After being lost for two days and two nights in the treacherous Gogemain swamp, 40 miles south of here, while hundreds of his friends and the entire force of soldiers at Fort Brady here hunted for him, James McKenna, Jr., 29 years old was found alive and brought to the Soo. McKenna became lost from a fishing party and was at first thought to have drowned in Prentice Creek.

Jackson—Lured into the automobile of a stranger here by the promise of 50 cents, 11-year-old Clarence Updyke thwarted the plans of his kidnapper when he jumped from the machine into the road after the driver had speeded to the country. Bleeding from cuts and bruises sustained when he struck the road, the lad was picked up by Mrs. Footman, of Akron, Ohio, who took him to a farmhouse and called the sheriff's office.

Detroit—The first definite step toward establishment of a municipal aviation field was made when Charles P. O'Neil, corporation counsel, filed suit for the condemnation of 161 acres of land for this purpose. The project was approved 10 days ago by City Council. Mayor John W. Smith has been the chief champion of the project and it was after many months of campaigning by the mayor and the plan finally was approved.

Dr. Samuel Renshaw, of Kalamazoo, for nine years a member of the faculty of the Western State Normal school, has been appointed assistant professor of eperimental psychology at Ohio State University, Columbus, O. He was one of the organizers of Western Normal Science club and the psychology section of the Michigan Academy of Science, and has been a frequent contributor to various psychology magazines.

Lansing—The Michigan securities Commission has ordered the Detroit Piggly Wiggly company, now operating 13 stores in and about Detroit, to stop the sale of its stock until a full investigation of the company's solvency may be made by the commission. C. V. McGuire, manager of the company, has been asked to appear before the commission September 9. There are approximately 1,600 stockholders in the company.

Ionia—Ionia county's share of the primary fund has been received here and is larger than last year, despite the decrease per capita from $14 to $13.70. The county was apportioned for 8,766 pupils last year and for 9,027 this year, an increase of 261. The check for Ionia county this year is $123,513.11, as against $122,724 last year, an increase of $789.11. Practically every township has a small gain, but the city of Ionia has a decrease of $179.

Jackson—Jackson's zoning law was held constitutional in a decision by Judge McPeak, of Eaton County, when he enjoined the Standard Oil from constructing a service station on a lot in the downtown residential district. The injunction was sought by persons whose homes adjoin the property on each side. The case is said to be the first of its kind in the state and it is expected that the Standard Oil Co. will appeal the decision as $300,000 is said to be involved.

Battle Creek—Wilmot Jones, 24 years old, a member of one of Battle Creek's oldest families, was held for investigation by Sheriff Colby in connection with the murder of John Vielikoff, Bulgarian cook for a Grand Trunk construction crew whose bullet-pierced body was found on Lane's lake road, four miles south of Bellevue. Jones, the sheriff said, admitted having handled Vielikoff's gun, the instrument evidently used in the killing, but said that he was merely "fooling with it" and returned the weapon.

Wakefield—In the largest vote ever cast here, Levin L. Rummel, incumbent, was defeated in the race for mayor by Arthur M. Gilbert, while three other candidates trailed far behind. The campaign waxed hot a few days ago when Rummel answered charges at a public pavilion and was pulled from the railing and kicked in the stomach. Rummel has been one of the leading political figures in Gogebic county for a number of years. He served as chairman of the Board of Supervisors until last spring.

Flint—Roy Brown, 49 years old, who fell two stories while cleaning windows at the Dort school, died in Hurley Hospital of a fractured skull.

Ste. Marie—There was no opposition at the public utilities hearing against the request of the local traction company for a 10-cent single fare and four tickets for 30 cents.

Marshall—Mrs. Minnie Jones is to stand trial during the September term of the Calhoun County Circuit Court for the murder of her husband, William Jones, who died from arsenic poisoning on August 3.

Port Huron—Edward Miller, 19 years old, was sentenced to serve from 1 to 15 years in the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia for stealing a tractor and a quantity of scrap iron from Fred Simpson, a farmer.

Pontiac—Frank Crandall, Pontiac dog catcher, was badly hurt when he started to electrocute a dog. One clip was attached to the dog and Crandall was holding the other when the current was turned on. The dog was killed.

Benton Harbor—A merger effected here will give this city direct bus service direct to Chicago, with a link to Muskegon, Ludington, and Grand Rapids. The merger is made possible by the sale of the Alden buses to the Safety Motor Coach Co.

Saginaw—Saginaw voters approved an initiatory ordinance granting the street railway lines here an increase in fares from four to three tickets for a quarter. The vote was less than 6,000 and the proposition carried by a margin of 113 votes over the required 60 per cent majority.

Muskegon—Five high school youths who participated in 30 robberies here and surrounding cities, pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge John Vanderwerp. Linifred Standley, 17 years old, who organized the ring after reading Robin Hood fiction, admittde responsibility for the enterprise.

Traverse City—Alberta Davis, 11 years old, was taken into custody by officers on the street here and taken to the county detention home pending an investigation of circumstances that led her to leave her home at Grawn, 12 miles south of here. She said that her mother and stepfather had quarreled with her.

Owosso—A bull that objected to a ride to the slaughter house put Bernard Clark, a driver for a local packing company, in the hospital. The bull strated to thrash around in the truck and diverted Clark's attention. The truck went into a ditch and Clark went through the windshield. Two cords in his right arm were severed.

Detroit—Mrs. Thelma Halman, 37 years old, wife of George A. Halman, a plant manager for the Fisher Body Corporation lost her life while swimming in Lake St. Clair off Belle River, near the Halman summer home, when she dived from the rail of her 26-foot motor boat, the Thelma II, and was drawn beneath the craft into the whirling blades of the propellor. Her body was taken from the water by her husband, who was swimming with her.

Grand Rapids—W. E. Warner, 45 years old, is reported to be in a serious condition at Blodgett Memorial hospital, where he was taken after swallowing a quantity of gasoline. According to H. W. Shields, of Ann Arbor, who was with him, Warner and his wife and daughter were riding when the automobile stalled. Warner, discovering that the gasoline feed-line was plugged, attempted to suck out the obstacle and swallowed some gasoline.

Menominee—David E. Crawford, 49 years old, chief owner of the abandoned lumber town of Cedar River and joint owner with his brothers of 34,000 acres of timber and farm land, is under arrest on a charge of arson, Menomine County authorities revealed. He is accused of causing the fire June 6 which wiped out most of the abandoned village buildings "with intent to defraud" the insurance companies.

Houghton — Recommendation that the state of Michigan proceed with its plan of leasing certain suitable lands in the state for the purpose of establishing game preserves was made at a meeting of Houghton county sportsmen. The meeting was sponsored by the Houghton Rod and Gun club, following receipt of a request from Director of Conservation John Baird that a local opinion of several conservation proposals be submitted to his department.

Monroe—Monroe County road commissioners plan to ask the State Commissioner of Public Safety to issue an order designating the old Dixie Highway as the only road to be used by northbound motorists between Toledo and Monroe and the new Dixie Highway as the route for southbound traffic between the two cities. The commissioners believe such a step would prevent many automobile accidents, especially on Saturdays and Sundays, when traffic is extremely heavy.

Lansing—An average of 700 certificates of title for new motor cars are being issued at the Secretary of State's Department daily. This means at the rate of approximately 4,000 a week, and 200,000 annually. In addition thousands of motor title certificates are being issued monthly where ownership of used cars changes. The daily average of new certificates issued daily is materially higher than earlier in the year. Secretary DeLand estimates that 150,000 new certificates will be issued this year.

Cross Village—John Petoskey, 40 years old, only son of the famous Chief Petoskey, after whom the city of Petoskey was named, is being held in the jail at Petoskey, on a charge of slaying as the result of a dispute which arose at the annual Indian picnic here. Petoskey is alleged to have killed his cousin, Tom Kegebetang, died of knife wounds in the neck. The officers took statements from a number of persons who attended the picnic, but say they were unable to learn what the men quarrelled about.

The Coal Situation

Promptly as scheduled the hard coal strike is about to begin in practically all the mines of this country, and those who have not yet procured their winter's supply of black diamonds had best be hopping to it. These foolish strikes begin to give themselves away since they develop so regularly. It is indeed stange that our executive government can't do a single thing to avert such a situation. Here is Coolidge (wonderful tax reducer) and somehow he orders investigations but that is as far as it gets. Investigations and quizzes and then dissolution and nothingness. If you will note it is generally a dispute about wages which stops work at the mines. Just why the miners and operators always choose this particular time of year to fall out has never been explained. Promptly as usual the dealers all over God's footstool put it out that you should buy your supply of coal at once as it appeared to them a strike was pending. Calvin Coolidge don't look so good to us as he did when he was on probation during his first term. We are not saying this because he smokes cigarettes—far from it. When a president gets in office who is not afraid of ¡"Big Business" we are going to throw up our hats and let out a yowl that can be heard way down in "ol Virginny" but we are not expecting the opportunity to strain our throats will come for many years. Politics and Big Business have been bedfellows for lo! these many years, and they ought to be jugged for co-habitation. As we were saying we note the strikes are most generally started when the poor suffering public is about to need coal the very worst. Looks shiny don't it? You bet it does. Did you ever stop to think that operators, miners and shippers might be a sort of a union to do us up—well, that is about what we make of it, it seems the coal belongs to them—and before we can get it to put into our stoves and furnaces to burn up we must quiddle with them for a while. They are so sorry for us too—it seems, but they claim real good coal is getting scarcer every day and while they are telling it Alaska is one board plain covered with the best bituminous coal that was ever dug out and just under the surface at that and coal costs just as much on the Pacific Coast as it does here. Again they tell us that miners are hard to hire and only the most objectionable foreigners can be obtained—while right now there are literal thousands of the best American born citizens who make a business of mining. The whole bunch are without doubt spoofing us to a frazzle, and the United States Government don't care a rap. To a man up a tree it appears the miners and operators are fully in league and the operators will take care of the miners all the same if not a pound of coal is mined. The more you study the situation the more certain it seems there is a real black nigger in the fence.

Great Lakes Waterway Survey Ready In April

United States and Canadian engineers, making up the engineering board which is engaged in a final study and survey of the St. Lawrence waterway project, are making steady progress in their work, according to information received by the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association.

The board of engineers is backed by appropriations from the United States and Canada and its studies include those phases of the proposed waterway project on which it is necessary for the two governments to have full information before they attempt to reach any agreement.

The engineers are supposed to be ready to make a complete report by next April, and the information here is that they will be ready to do so. Once the report of the engineers is made, it is generally expected the next step will be negotiations between the two governments looking toward a treaty for the construction of the water way.

While it will be practically impossible for the two governments to arrive at an understanding in time for action at the next session of congress, the advocates of the St. Lawrence channel expect to be active at the next session in promoting it any way practicable.

Strong opposition from the eastern part of the United States, especially from New York, is anticipated. In fact, it has already manifested itself in congress. With the St. Lawrence advocates active, the supporters of the deeper Hudson are expected to exert every energy next session to further this project.

Twenty states, including Michigan, have now joined the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association. It was announced today that West Virginia has just joined the movement. This has been done by action of Governor Gore, subject to ratification by the legislature. Nineteen other states have through their legislatures made appropriations to further the work of the association.

They Can't Wed So Quick

We note that marriage laws in the state of Michigan have been slightly amended and now no one can take out a license and get married the same day. They must wait until the county clerk or some other buttinski can fully investigate both parties (if he wants to) and give his acquiescence. Well the reformers of this country are having a fling at patching up society's laws but we are afraid they won't make much at it. In the first place we claim if a couple desires to get married at once, they should be allowed to do so; in fact there is too much delay oftentimes in this matter. Indiana tried this rule and you bet they are sick of it down there. Couples who wanted to get doubled left their native state and came to Michigan in droves to get married, but now they must go somewhere else. Annually thousands of lovelorn swains and damsels have journeyed to Hillsdale from Indiana to get married and we claim the solons at Lansing have over-reached their authority considerably in taking away the means of livelihood of a score of parsons, justices and judges in Hillsdale in so underhanded a manner. The solons have a weakness for making laws. When it gets so bad up Lansing way they make laws for the fun of it—those boys ought to be church-mauled. Now five days must elapse before two yearning souls can be acetylene welded, and in the meantime the dear things must stand in naked publicity of a heartles and unsympathetic world waiting for some quiddler to dig up a reason why they should not.

Away with it! You can't beat the young folks out of anything and the law-makers ought to know it by this time.

Not far from Orlando, Florida, lies Haines City, a burg of 3,100 souls, located in the midst of the citrus fruit belt and enjoying all the prosperity that comes to southern cities built up by northern capital. This town enjoys the unique distinction of being the only city so far as known of this size with paved streets throughout. A home building campaign is now on to furnish houses for all who have heretofore been obliged to live in tents and camp in the streets. This runs into the millions of dollars and a big factory for the manufacture of fruit packing machinery has been located at Haines City. The Chamber of Commerce is constantly angling for enterprises and it occurs to the novice this might be a good place to spend the winter.

There Is No Lost Motion In Persistent Advertising

A big part of the cost of living today may be charged to lost motion—to slow, slipshod distribution of goods and to old-style, wasteful selling methods.

For example—every year tons of fruit and vegetables rot on the ground because it does not pay to pick them up. Discouraged growers plant less the next season and the supply of food is reduced. Meanwhile consumers in the cities grumble over high prices. Demand and supply are not brought together.

Contrast this with the handling of oranges. The California Fruit Growers' Exchange experience is a good example of bringing supply and demand together through advertising. It has likewise kept down the cost of fruit handled through the exchange and the consumer is the one benefited. Advertising has reduced the cost of selling. The cherry growers of the state of Michigan are organized for a similar campaign of advertising and in a few years there will be a greater demand for Michigan cherries.

Advertising, properly done, saves money for the consumer and makes money for the producer by driving out wasteful methods, increasing volume and cutting down the costs of distribution and selling.

Owing to a raise in the price of McCall's excellent magazine we are unable to longer offer it for $2.00 with the Advocate. So hereafter the price of McCall's and the Advocate will have to be $2.25. Please bear in mind this is final and cancel all other announcements. To those who subscribe for McCall's let us say don't be alarmed if it takes a couple of weeks to get the magazine coming. Of late the publishers assure us the volume of business coming in requires time to straighten out, so if you fail to receive McCall's the next day don't get nervous. It'll come in due time.

An Electric Age

Within a decade electric stoves washing machines, ironing machines, water heaters, mixing devices, refrigerators and similar appliances will be as much a part of the house as the modern bath room is the prediction of electrical experts. While the modern office is filled with labor saving devices, only 18 per cent of the homes are so provided. The old-style housewives who are now doing most of their work without the current will have it in use in a couple of years.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON "GOLD BONDS"

"Before I go to the bank to ask advice about investing the money mother left me, I wish you would tell me something more about bonds," said Helen to Aunt Emmy. "Am I right in thinking that gold bonds are absolutely safe? Are gold bonds what people mean by gilt edge securities?"

"What a child it is!" laughed Aunt Emmy. "I can see that you do need to learn something about bonds. The term 'gold bond' does not have anything to do with the term 'gilt edged security.' The latter is nothing more than a commonly used phrase that means a safe security. Companies that issue gold bonds usually agree to redeem them in United States gold coin of the weight and fineness of the gold coin issued by the United States Treasury at the time the bonds are put on the market. This is done in order to protect the bondholders from the very remote possibility of a radical change in the value of United States currency, such as, for example, the changes in the values of German and other European currencies as a result of the war. While such a thing is unlikely to occur in this country, financiers always try to guard against every possible trouble. Although a bond may be payable in gold it is unnecessary to demand payment in actual gold coin since our American money is on a gold basis anyhow and our good old paper dollars have exactly the same value as golden dollars.

"But you want to bear in mind one thing. Because you buy a so-called 'gold bond,' that does not mean that the bond is secured by gold in any way, or that it is stronger than any other bond. The strength of a bond lies simply and only in the ability of the company that issues it to pay its debts. And of course you should consider the value of the property pledged or mortgaged to secure the bond, if any property is given as security."

"Dear me, Aunt Emmy," exclaimed Helen. "I never realized how much one needs to know before investing one's money. In my case it's awfully important not to have a loss, because although I have only a tiny amount of money it is all I have in the world. How can I ever learn to tell what is good from what is bad?"

"I am not sure you ever can rely on your own judgment, my dear," smiled Aunt Emmy, "but if you will be guided by your bank, you needn't worry."—A. B. Aymes.

ON GUARD AGAINST FARM CROOKS

With every constructive movement for the improvement of agriculture, one is likely to find men who will attempt to capitalize it for their own personal benefit. This may take the form of shipping in poor and unprofitable livestock to palm off on unsuspecting farmers, or it may sometimes be selling fair to good livestock at exorbitant prices under promise of taking back some of the offspring at high figures.

There are several instances where the college of agriculture through its county agent system has co-operated in heading off the introduction of undesirable or extravagantly priced livestock. In other instances the state bankers association, through its agricultural committee or the secretary's office, has sent warnings to its member banks relative to individuals or firms operating on an unsound basis. It is as important to head off undesirable and unprofitable investments as it is to encourage constructive and porfitable ones.—Banker-Farmer.

BANKERS HELP

The banks of Bodford county, Tennessee, are furnishing pure bred eggs to all who will agree to return one pullet for each fifteen eggs in the fall

The Missouri Bankers Association issued the first number of the "Agricultural Information Service Quarterly" in April. This publication deals with timely agricultural subjects of interest to bankers. A discussion of the various projects proposed as a basis for the program of banker-farmer co-operation in Missouri appears in the first issue.

Clearing houses in Georgia have approved a proposal for the expenditure of $30,000 annually for the next three years for the purpose of carrying out a program of farm development and crop diversification in Georgia. The proposal was initiated by the Georgia Bankers Association. The plan calls for the creation of a state-wide development committee of thirty members which will function under the direction of the Agricultural Committee of the Georgia Bankers Association.

Nebraska bankers are going to school. The College of Agriculture is having a short course in agriculture for bankers. Registration is in charge of the Nebraska Bankers Association. The predominant thought is, "Every bank in Nebraska should be represented." Nine out of ten banks in one county have signed attendance cards. Scores of the cards have been received by Dan V. Stephens, chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Bankers Association, and he has received over a hundred letters on the short course.

THE PENCIL MAKES A FARM PAY BETTER

(From Banker-Farmer)

A farm cannot properly be called successful unless it pays a fair rate of interest on the investment and returns fair wages for the farmer's labor. Agriculture is considered by all odds the most important industry in the world, and yet in no other industry is the business end so neglected.

It is common to find a farmer with an investment of fifteen to twenty thousand dollars, yet does he keep books? Perhaps he may jot down a note now and then of an important deal, but this is of no value in an analysis of his business as a whole No other industry, however small, is carried on without books of some sort.

Farming is a business and to be successful must be conducted in a businesslike way. The business man's mind should have indelibly printed upon it two questions: What profit is my business making? How can that profit be increased? To know the latter, one must find out the former; and to find out about profits requires the keeping of books.

It is not necessary for a farmer to have a course in bookkeeping. Almost every agricultural college in the country has issued a simplified farm accounting book which it sells at cost, and only a few minutes are required each day to jot down the day's happenings.

Accounts Increase Profits

Instances number a thousandfold where farmers have profited by knowing their business. Accounts kept by nineteen farmers in Illinois led them to improve the organization and operation of their farms in ways that added approximately $650 to their average net income in 1922, the seventh year they had kept accounts.

An Iowa farmer found at the end of the first year he kept books that crops fed to livestock brought more money than when sold outright. His figures showed that his cows were poor; compared with other farms in the state, he found the number of acres cultivated per man on his farm, as well as the number of acres per horse, were below average. He rented more land and replanned his fields, so that the crop areas per man and horse were increased. He sold some of his scrubs and bought good cows. The second year his income from the farm, after paying all expenses and interest on the money invested, had been increased over $350.

Costs Can Be Regulated

"I have discovered," says one farm bookkeeper, "that the kind of man you have on a job, as well as the particular team, often makes quite a variation in the cost of performing certain tasks. I have learned from the pages of my book that if I could have increased the yield of my wheat field by two bushels and my corn by five bushels I would have realized a substantial profit from them."

While the farmers may not be able to fix prices on their products, they do have a voice in determining the costs of production. To reduce this cost they must first know what the costs are.

The number of farmers who are keeping books on their business has increased remarkably in recent years, but the number of businesslike farmers is woefully small when listed alongside the sum total of the farmers in the country.

Inventory Is Indispensable

The basis of any system of farm accounting is the annual property list or inventory. It is the starting point of the farm records. One must take into consideration decreases or increases in the value of all property owned to gauge the progress of the business. Lacking facts as to the value of his property, no business man can form an accurate estimate of how he stands financially. Increased cash may be due to property which was sold, or increased debts may be due to improvements made. If a farmer is falling behind, the inventory will emphasize this fact. Often when a man is discouraged and thinks he is making no progress, his inventories will tell him that he is better off than he thought.

At the end of each year a financial statement is drawn off. This is the farmer's rating and no farmer with a good financial statement need fear walking into a bank and asking for a loan.

Another New Amendment

"Another feature of the recent amendment to the California inheritance tax law is a section fixing the inheritance taxes on stock in California corporations owned by non-residents at a flat sum of 2 per cent on their actual value. When considered in conjunction with the ruling that no inheritance taxes can be levied upon any stock in foreign corporations, or upon bank accounts, bonds, notes, debentures, or similar securities belonging to a non-resident but located in the state at the time of such non-resident's decease, it will be observed that at present the inheritance tax situation in California is most favorable, both to non-residents who have property in this state and to married people who live here or who may subsequently move here from elsewhere."

Some Dry Humor From Oklahoma

The editor of the Atoka (Okla.) County Jeffersonian learned that a solicitor was getting up a program for church services which would contain, besides the program for the services, advertising of merchants similar to that used in theater programs. The stunt moved him to remark thusly:

"If the church is going in for that kind of thing, let us suggest that there are a lot of nice white plastered walls in the churches upon which signs could easily be painted. Also, a few ads could be inserted in the Bible. 'Take a little Wine of Cordui for the stomach's sake' is a possibility. A butcher's ad beside the story of the fatted calf would be appropriate. The purple and fine linen scripture could be worked up into a cracker jack dry goods ad. A few medicine songs scattered throughout the hymnals would jazz things up wonderfully. For a closing hymn they could sing to the tune of Dock's Ology: "Praise Williams' paints that smoothly flow; praise Dri Sox Shoes that keep out the snow; praise Fatimas—they taste like toast; try Bill's Cafe for prime pork roast! Ah! Men!' "

We are still giving the Advocate and McCall's Magazine both on year for the small sum of $2.25 and this is the most combination for the money on record. All the home news and a top-notch monthly containing all latest fashions, from Paris, the best works of Harolld Bell Wright, best illustrations, best all through.

SAVE REPUTATIONS OF TWO YOUNGSTERS

That it is better not to make arrests when results can be obtained by other methods is a part of the courtesy policy of the Michigan State Police. Here is an instance.

Captain I. H Marmon and two other members of the "free lance squad" which operates against disorderly roadhouses and gambling places, came upon a parked car near a roadhouse in which were a young man and a young woman, both unconscious from liquor.

Because of their youth, Captain Marmon decided not to arrest them. The young woman was taken to a respectable hotel while the young man was taken to the home of his father, a well known banker.

Next day both of the young people told their parents that it was the first time they had ever been under the influence of liquor and that they would not repeat the experience. They had been given a salutary lesson without being made the victims of scandal.

RUM SMUGGLERS USE TRAFFIC LIGHT CODE

State Police have discovered that the liquor smugglers along the Canadian border have copied the system of lights employed to direct traffic in city streets and made it a safeguard for their vessels. Red, green and yellow lights are shown on the boathouse or dock where the cargo is to be received at night.

A red light indicates that police are in the vicinity, a green light that the smuggling vessel may come to dock safely while a yellow light indicates that the smugglers had better stop on the Canadian side of the line for awhile.

Inasmuch the Detroit and St. Clair Rivers are in places less than a third of a mile wide, the traffic system works to aid the smugglers in making quick dashes

DISPOSES IN 282 WORDS OF THE BANK GUARANTEE LAW

"Understand bank deposit guaranty being proposed in your legislature," telegraphed R. B. Clark, president of the Bank of Tupelo, Miss., to Paul R. Brown, Secretary of the North Carolina Bankers Association. "Such a law in any form is a snare and a delusion. It is license and encouragement to irresponsible banks and banking and penalizes capital solvency and prudent banking. It creates a sense of security in the minds of the unthinking and uninformed that is false and impossible to be realized on ultimately. It tends to debauch one's right and duty to be thoughtful and discriminating. To compare it to legitimate insurance is without reason and absurd. It jeopardizes the solvency of all banks and the safety of all depositors for the theoretical safety of a few. We have had it ten years, and the fund is hopelessly in arrears. Have been fighting for repeal and have made progress. Only repeal can save our state system of banks. Many of the best are nationalizing even now. Guaranty schemes always have been, are and always will be impotent, futile and disastrous Consider Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska Mississippi and others. It is not new. Has been tried, failed and discarded at intervals for more than 100 years in this country. No well-informed, honest and intelligent mind can accept it in principle or practice. Well paid intelligently competent supervision, restriction of banks to territory that will warrant sufficient capital investment and encourage surplus accounts is the only sane and honest course and will afford all the guaranty the depositing public is entitled to as compared with all other human affairs. Arouse your people and crush the misguided effort for all time. To do so will be worth whatever it may cost, and the value will be to your people generally more than to the banks."

The bill was reported unfavorably.

CONSIDER HARRY FOR EXAMPLE

There were certain minor physical defects in Harry which the doctors discovered and corrected. They found that Harry had inherited some weaknesses that ran back in the family and had not made an appearance in the other brothers and sisters, but the main discovery was that Harry was not getting enough sugar! With all its wealth the family was not feeding Harry properly, and none of the family councils brought out the fact that the boy was misbehaving largely because he was undernourished. When the doctors consulted with the family it was revealed that everything that Harry stole was sold for a fraction of its value and the proceeds spent in the purchase of candy. The search for sweets was the primary cause of his misbehavior.

Wise doctors at the institute advised the parents to give Harry unrestricted access to the sugar bowl at meal time and prescribed supplementary feedings of bread and jam between meals and before retiring, and small amounts of candy from time to time. Then the doctors explained to the parents what it was in Harry's heredity that made it difficult for him to act like his brothers and sisters. The parents were counseled not to ask too much of Harry, and to be patient with him when he failed to accomplish his tasks.

Two years have passed since Harry came to the institute. His pilferings have long since ceased; he no longer plays truant and he does better at school. Harry will never be a genius, but he will take his place in the working world instead of drifting into a life of crime

LESSONS PARENTS MAY LEARN

This whole question of the treatment of behavior disorders is still in its infancy, and doctors themselves are studying such cases as Harry's to learn how to treat other children with other problems. No less important are the lessons for parents, teachers, and others who deal with children as to what are the wise and unwise methods of handling children. Attention is given to children showing no peculiar conduct as well as those behaving abnormally.

There is the case of George, a high school lad. George was brighter than most of the boys in his class, but he suddenly started playing truant. He would be found hanging about the football squad during practice time fighting furiously for a place on the squad, though his small stature made his candidacy hopeless. Often he got into fist fights with boys older and larger than himself. He swore like the proverbial trooper and behaved abominibly at home.

At the clinic the doctors soon discovered George's trouble. The boy was suffering from nothing but a determination to shine before his fellows, and the only way open to him seemed to be to show how tough he was. George's older brother had been a football hero and George wanted to make an equally good record at school. George had an insurmountable handicap in his small physique and he was infinitely miserable, and promised to get into serious difficulty. The prescription for George was simple but effective. No medicine, no operation, just a gratification of his not altogether unworthy ambitition.

"What can he do better than the rest of the fellows?" the doctors tried to discover. It developed that George was an excellent skater. There was a sport in which his stature was an asset. The boy was made to realize that skating champions were some "punkins", and he bent every energy to perfecting himself in that line.

In no time George was the champion skater in the school, and later of his class for the city. He shone and he was happy! Fighting and truancy diminished and then ceased. The teachers were taken into the confidence of the child guidance experts and attention was devoted to George's fondness for public speaking and debate. He soon became one of the leaders in school contests and debates and naturally his school work improved. Today there isn't a happier boy in the school or a happier family than George's. Coddling him? Yes if you like. But helping him find himself in a larger sense. And when "coddling" stops truancy, meanness and other bad habits mill divert juvenile energy into useful channels, isn't it better than the old-fashioned way of dealing with "orneriness"?

We are just beginning to learn that the peculiar conduct of a child may be due to suffering because of some discrepancy in his own life or in his environment. Every clinic for child guidance knows of cases where the only Jewish child in a school of Gentiles suffered terribly because of consciousness of his being "different" from other children The parents may be rich and they may provide every diversion for their child and not allay in the slightest the misery which needs the attention of a skilled expert in child guidance.

A girl delinquent in the juvenile court may have fallen into bad habits through unhappiness in her home environment. The clinic shows the parents that a little more fun and a little less repression at home and wiser treatment of an adolescent girl may mean the difference between a life of vice and normal conduct for their child. Orphans often cease their delinquencies when they are transferred from an uncongenial environment to a home radiating a sympathetic atmosphere, the clinic records show.

Forward looking juvenile court judges are largely guided by the advice of these clinics in dealing with cases of obviously defective children. There are boys who simply can't resist temptations in the large cities. The court, at the suggestion of the clinic, places such children in friendly rural homes and society gains a useful citizen instead of a criminal. The whole tendency is to keep children with behavior problems out of institutions if it is at all possible, and where institutional care is essential that treatment is directed to restoring the patient to normal life if there is the slightest ground for hope.

Two States, Illinois and Ohio, have clinics for child guidance. Forward looking communities are establishing their own clinics, The Commonwealth Fund of New York City is spending thousands of dollars to encourage extension of the clinic idea through practical demonstrations in interested communities.

State Muck Farmers To Meet At M. S. C.

Members of the American Peat Society and of the Michigan Muck Farmers Association will join in a big "muck soil" conference at the M. S. C. on September 8 and 9.

It will be the annual meeting for the national group, and the regular summer conference for the state muck farmers. The program is being planned jointly and will cover practically all phases of the muck farming business, as well as various special branches of peat utilization.

Many of the best known muck soils specialists in the country are listed for talks during the two day program. Among them will be: B. F. Haanel, Dept. of Mines, Ottawa, Can.; J. H, Beattie, president American Peat Society; J. H. Hoff, New York; Dr. E. V. Hardenburg, Cornell University; Dr. F. J. Alway, University of Minn.; Prof. F. L. Musbach, University of Wisconsin; E. L. Woodhams, president of the Michigan Muck Farmers Association; Dr. P. M. Harmer, M. S. C.; and a score of others, including many from the staff of the M. S. C.

Following the meeting at East Lansing, delegates to the conference will take a three day inspection trip through the leading muck farming areas of southwestern Michigan.

Detailed arrangements for the program of the conference are being handled by Dr. Harmer, Delegates from all sections of the country are expected to attend the Peat Society division of the meeting.

Standard Grades To Help State Potatoes

That Michigan's new standard grades for potatoes will result in a marked boost for the crop in the state, particularly in regard to the reputation of the wolverine tubers in out of state markets, is the general opinion of men who have studied the situation in recent weeks.

By act of the last state legislature, standard grades were adopted to regulate the sale of potatoes, with inspection and penalties provided for. This law became effective August 27, and is now in operation throughout the state.

Potato grading is not new for the state, Federal Grades having been adopted in 1923 by order of the state commissioner of agriculture. The new law, however, gives Michigan her own grading law and places the work upon a definite and permanent bases.

Potato grading has already done much for the Michigan crop, says J. W. Weston, specialist with the crops department at the M. S. C. Poorly graded stock before 1923 hurt the reputation of the Michigan tubers on markets such as Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Toledo, and Detroit. The result was apparent in sales and lower prices than those received by growers from other states.

The grading work during the last two years is estimated to have resulted in great financial gain to the state growers, and the definite Michigan grades now in effect should be of far reaching benefit in re-establishing Michigan's potato reputation on the country's markets.

The New Ford Cars Are Out

Promptly in August Henry Ford announced his changes in the styles of Ford products, prices remain the same as ever on all models of Fords but the body shapes are modified considerably, Bodies are lower and built entirely of steel Seats are lower and the whole appearance of the new model is decidedly chic. The bodies are longer giving more leg room. The touring car, coupe, runabout and Tudor have their gas tanks under the cowl but are filled from the outside. One piece wind-shields are used and larger brake drums so that altogether the new models are exceedingly classy. In all closed cars colors are used in enameling and several different combinations are used. The new cars are all equipped with standard cords.

WHERE MONEY IS A NUISANCE

Americans have reason to be thankful for their simple and reliable money. The complications of the Chinese currency are endless. China possesses 72 different money values. As to the money of account, the Kaikuan Tael, familiar in connection with the customs, the Hankow, Kuantung, Esaoping, Tookwai and others, each differ by varying percentages of weight from the "liang," or Chinese ounce of silver. If a traveler from Shanghai were to make an extended tour into the interior, passing through the districts where a manifold variety of coins circulate, the constant exchange from one weight or coin to another would dissipate a very large part of his capital.

An experienced traveler has been known to take scales with him, and still his weights and the purity of his silver were subjected to dispute in different provinces. At coast ports Mexican, Yuan, Dragon, Hong-Kong and Hankow dollars are all current each having its own defined exchange value in the native market, while in the interior the added intricacies of dealing with cents and copper cash are so great that it is astonishing how business can be carried on without endless disputes and a considerable handicap to trade.

—the same dependable remedy that over a period of more than fifty years has been found so reliable in the treatment of catarrh and diseases of catarrhal nature.

The outside of the package only has been altered. To facilitate packing and reduce breakage in shipping, the paper wrapper which has identified the Pe-ru-na bottle for many years has been displaced by a substantial pasteboard carton.

Pe-ru-na cannot be made any better. Three generations of users testify that Pe-ru-na is the best remedy in the world for catarrh and diseases of catarrhal origin.

The remedy our fathers and grandfathers used with so much satisfaction is still the standby for the ills of everyday in thousands of American homes.

Wonderful Memory

Representative La Gardia, whose memory is marvelous, said at a dinner in New York:

"A course in mnemonics never comes amiss. Most people think they have good memories, but a lesson or two in mnemonics would show them that they're as bad, almost, as the old lady.

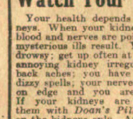
"The old lady said, you know:

"'My memory is excellent. There are only three things I can't remember. I can't remember names, I can't remember faces, and—and I forgot what the third thing is.'"

Watch Your Kidneys!

Your health depends upon your kidneys. When your kidneys are inactive, blood and nerves are poisoned and many mysterious ills result. You feel dull and drowsy; get up often at night and suffer annoying kidney irregularities. Your back aches; you have headaches and dizzy spells; your nerves are constantly on edge and you are always tired. If your kidneys are sluggish, help them with Doan's Pills. Doan's act on the kidneys only. Are recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case



Samuel J. Northey, stationary fireman, Gaylord, Mich., says: "I had a heavy, dull ache in the small of my back, and mornings, when I first got up, my back was stiff and lame. My kidneys were out of order and acted too frequently. After using Doan's Pills I was completely cured."

Evidently Had Not Absorbed "Business"

The male chorus in the show are mainly mounted police and frontiersmen, for the action of "Rose Marie" takes place in northwest Canada.

Out of the two hundred applicants for the position one was selected because of his excellent voice. He was duly brought before the "powers that be," and promptly turned down as looking "nothing like the part."

The producer was keen to have him and made inquiries as to his previous stage experience. Imagine his surprise when the man replied, "I haven't done much acting lately—I've spent my last five years in the Canadian Northwest Mounted police!"—Vancouver Province.

Famous Old Mansion

The Quincy mansion is at Quincy, Mass., formerly called Braintree. William Coddington built the original house, which consisted of a large kitchen, a living room and two chimneys. Coddington died shortly after the erection of the house. His successor, the first Quincy, to occupy it, was the first of three Edmund Quincys'. In 1706, the third Edmund added the present dining room, parlor and the chambers over these rooms. Later a study and bedroom were added. Among the many noted guests entertained there were Lafayette and Benjamin Franklin. The latter, after a visit, sent a "Franklin stove" as a return for hospitality offered him.

King Tommy

Casimir was tired, worried, overexcited and was drinking too much champagne. In his soberest senses he does not understand English very well. He certainly did not understand what was said to him then. But he readily promised that Tommy should have every opportunity of explaining himself to the king and Calypso. The king, so he said, meant to travel with the party as far as Breslau. Tommy could talk to him in the train. He would have several hours in which to say all he wanted. Afterward he could talk to the princess, all day long if he chose, for three whole days. It would be at least three days before they could leave Breslau.

Next morning Tommy and Janet Church went to the Friedrich Strasse station in good time for the train to Breslau. They found the king and Calypso waiting for them. Casimir arrived a few minutes later and saw them off.

The princess and Janet Church traveled together. The king and Tommy took their places in a smoking compartment. Fortunately they had it to themselves. As soon as the train started Tommy braced himself in an effort. He wanted to get an explanation of what was happening, and he was quite determined to make his own position clear.

It was the king who began the conversation.

"I'm glad," he said, "that we have this carriage to ourselves. I want to have a little talk with you."

"And I want to talk to you," said Tommy.

By way of showing that this talk was going to be of a very serious kind he stood up and set his back against the door of the compartment. The king settled down in a corner and lit a cigar.

"Are you, or are you not really a king?"

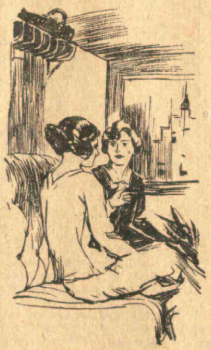
"That," he said, "is rather a hard question to answer. I certainly was a king once. If you asked Casimir he'd say I am king still, since I haven't abdicated. On the other hand, the statesmen of the Entente powers, if you ask them, would say that I am not a king, because they have definitely turned me out. However—" here he smiled pleasantly—"it doesn't really matter, does it? As I told you last night, I don't keep up any kind of state now. You needn't remain standing up. I'd much rather you sat down and were comfortable. Have a cigar."

Tommy sat down and took a cigar.

"Now," said the king, "let's talk about this unlucky Miss Temple business. I'm sorry to tell you that Calypso feels very strongly about it, absurdly strongly. In fact, I had the greatest difficulty in getting her to start this morning. If I hadn't come with her myself, which I didn't particularly want to do, I shouldn't have been able to get her into the train."

Tommy felt that his opportunity had come. He stood up again. He felt firmer and more determined when he was standing up.

"I want to make it perfectly clear to you," he said, "that I am not Lord Norheys. I know that you've somehow mixed me up with him, you and Count Casimir. But it's a mistake. It really is. I AM NOT LORD NORHEYS."



The Princess and Janet Church Traveled Together.

"That," said the king, "is exactly what I told Calypso. You said as much to me last night, and I've been repeating it to her all day. I told her that you knew nothing about Miss Temple, that you'd never seen the girl, that you'd never even heard of her, that, in fact, YOU ARE NOT LORD NORHEYS."

"I don't think you quite understand me even now. I really am not Lord Norheys."

The king waved his hand airily.

"That's a tremendous comfort to me," he said. "It gets us out of the Miss Temple difficulty, and, to tell the truth, that affair was becoming serious."

"Who on earth is Miss Temple?" asked Tommy, desperately.

"Oh, an actress, I believe," said the king, smiling. "Or a dancer. But it doesn't matter, does it? Lord Norheys, it seems, has foolishly promised to marry her. Even that wouldn't really have mattered. You could have kept her in the background—"

"Don't say 'you,'" said Tommy. "I've told you over and over again that I am not Lord Norheys."

"Of course you're not. I know that and I'm very glad of it. It simplifies things immensely, for though Lord Norheys might have married Calypso in spite of Miss Temple, I'm afraid Calypso wouldn't have married him. Miss Temple wrote a letter to my daughter, a most pathetic letter, begging her not to take Lord Norheys away from her. It affected Calypso greatly. There was something in it about a 'one ewe lamb,' and Calypso, having lots of flocks and herds, it seemed to me rather an odd description of a young man. The patriarch used to quote that parable to me, but then it always was—well, a 'ewe' lamb. That stuff never made much impression on me, but Calypso wept when she read it. She said that if you'd promised to marry Miss Temple—"

"But I haven't."

"So I told Calypso. I told her that she must not mix you up with Lord Norheys. She said that even if you hadn't actually promised to marry her, you had certainly stolen away her young affections."

"I haven't," said Tommy.

"Of course not. Their affections are seldom as young as all that. At least, that's my experience. Those ewe lambs are generally pretty well able to take care of themselves. But, of course, it would have been no good saying that to Calypso, or for the matter of that, to the patriarch. The patriarch is a very simple-minded old man. He believes in young affections and broken hearts and all that sort of thing. However, fortunately, we haven't got to argue with him and Calypso along those lines. All we've got to do is make them believe that you are not Lord Norheys. Once they believe that, all our difficulties vanish. The marriage can go on."

"Do you mean to say," said Tommy, "that you're still willing to allow me to marry your daughter?"

"Of course I am," said the king. "I always was. I never took that Miss Temple business in the least seriously. These things will happen. Everybody except Calypso and the patriarch knows that."

"But it hasn't happened," said Tommy. "At least, it hasn't happened to me. It may possibly have happened to Lord Norheys. I don't know anything about that."

"Just what I said to Calypso, and just what you will have to say to the patriarch. Then the only obstacle to the marriage vanishes."

"No, it doesn't," said Tommy. "At least, that one may. But there's another obstacle, a much worse one."

"If there's another," said the king, "for heaven's sake don't let her write to Calypso. Who is she? Don't say it's Miss Church. If it is, we're done."

"I never saw Miss Church in my life till yesterday," said Tommy.

"I thought it could hardly be her. She really is rather too old for that sort of thing. But if it had been her, it would have been awkward, very awkward indeed. She'd have gone in person to the patriarch, and nothing you could have said would have straightened things out. However, if it isn't her, it doesn't really matter, so long as the other one doesn't telegraph or write."

"There isn't another one."

"You've just told me there is," said the king. "You said, 'another and a much worse one.'"

"I said another obstacle," said Tommy, "not another girl. As a matter of fact, there's no girl at all and never was. The obstacle I mean is far worse than any girl."

"The obstacle is this," said Tommy. "I'm only a curate."

"I don't regard that as an obstacle at all," said the king. "Our patriarch doesn't believe in the celibacy of the clergy. He isn't married himself, but lots of our priests are, and the patriarch hasn't the slightest objection to it."

"That's not my point at all. As a matter of fact, I'm not a Roman Catholic curate and I'm perfectly free to marry if I like."

"That wouldn't have mattered, anyhow," said the king. "The patriarch would have absolved you from any vow you might have made. He's terrifically powerful in that sort of way and can give you absolution for practically anything. The trouble about him isn't that he can't give absolution; but that sometimes he won't."

"How can a curate marry a princess?" said Tommy. "That's my point. If she really is a princess—"

"She is," said the king. "From the point of view of any one who accepts legitimate theories, she's most certainly a royal princess. But I hope I needn't say that I don't attach any importance to the fact. We are living in a world that has been made safe for democracy and nobody cares a pin for those old-fashioned ideas. There's nothing to prevent any princess from marrying an English marquis."

"But I'm not an English marquis," said Tommy. "I keep on telling you that and you won't believe me."

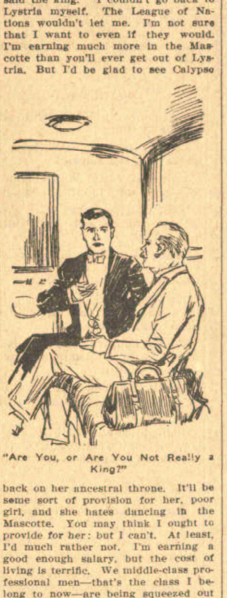
"It isn't that I don't believe you," said the king. "It's simply that I find it very hard to remember. However, the main thing is not to let any old-fashioned ideas about disparity of rank trouble you. The whole matter has been arranged."

"I wish I knew who arranged that I am to marry a princess."

"Well," said the king. "There were several people in it. I was one."

"Why?" said Tommy. "Why did you make such an extraordinary arrangement?"

"There were a good many reasons," said the king. "I couldn't go back to Lystria myself. The League of Nations wouldn't let me. I'm not sure that I want to even if they would. I'm earning much more in the Mascotte than you'll ever get out of Lystria. But I'd be glad to see Calypso back on her ancestral throne. It'll be some sort of provision for her, poor girl, and she hates dancing in the Mascotte. You may think I ought to provide for her: but I can't. At least, I'd much rather not. I'm earning a good enough salary, but the cost of living is terrific. We middle-class professional men—that's the class I belong to now—are being squeezed out of existence everywhere in Europe. That's the reason I want to see Calypso safely married and on a throne."



"Are You, or Are You Not Really a King?"

"But why did you choose me?"

"I didn't choose you. The fact is that the Lystrians knew very well that they couldn't get a king at all unless he was an Englishman. The Entente powers would have turned down any one else. And the Lystrians wanted a king, all of them. There's the patriarch, for instance. He hates playing second fiddle to a Megalian man who's merely an archimandrite, but has taken to wearing a gold chain round his neck much thicker than our patriarch's. Of course, as soon as Lystria gets back into the position of an independent kingdom, our patriarch will be top dog of the two. Then there are the Casimirs. There are eight or ten Casimirs, all counts, and there's the rest of the aristocracy. They're nobodies in a large republic like Megalia, but they're very important people in Lystria. Besides, they like having a court to hang about. You can't imagine how those fellows love dressing up in uniforms, putting on swords and attending state balls. And the way they eat! I assure you that a bullock roasted whole and a couple of pigs go no distance at a supper table in Lystria. It used to be a frightful expense to me. I needn't tell you the Megalian President doesn't do that kind of thing. He can't, poor fellow. His salary won't run to it. That's another example of the straitened circumstances of the middle classes."

"I still don't see why the Lystrians chose me," said Tommy, "if they did."

"Getting Into Scrape" Has Various Meanings

The phrase "get into a scrape" can be traced back as far as 1709. Richard Steele used it in "The Tatler" and it is said to have originated from the notion of having been scraped in going through a narrow passageway, but this is pure conjecture. Scrape in dialectical English designates a trap and is much older, and to this day the word is used for a lure for birds in cold weather, says the Family Herald.

According to Lowsley's "Glossary of Berkshire Words and Phrases," scrapes are of two kinds: the first is an old door supported by a stick under which corn is placed, and the stick being pulled by a long string the door falls on the birds. The second is made by placing corn where snow has been swept away, and birds, when congregated, are shot in numbers, being enfiladed along the scrape.

Worlidge in his dictionary, edited in 1681, describes a scrape as "a place baited with chaff or corn to entice birds." To get into a scrape is to get into an awkward, embarrassing or troublesome predicament.

Trials Have Their Value

Might Be Construed as "Gentle Hint"

Little Francis Irwin, film prodigy, is very partial to ice cream cones and discovered that the way to get them was to speak up on any and all occasions.

His parents often reproved him and finally, with the threat of a spanking hanging over his head, little Francis lapsed into silence.

A few days later the company went on location. Francis said not a word and when the car hesitated while the driver tried to ascertain which street to take, one of the party asked the child if he were getting sleepy.

"Oh, no," said Francis, "I was just wondering if you were looking for a drug store."

Knew All About Pajamas

Woman's right to dress like a man is not recognized in the Balkans. A Bulgarian girl, well known for her enthusiastic work on behalf of the Y. W. C. A., recently returned from a trip abroad carrying in her suitcase several suits of new pajamas. The customs officials at the Bulgarian frontier said that each suit was liable to a tax of $2. In vain the girl protested that the pajamas were wearing apparel and would be worn by her. The customs officials remained obdurate, saying: "Those are men's clothes and are not for women to wear!"

There are no gains without pains.

Mr. K. M. Collins of Woodhaven, N. Y., says, "Instead of plodding through my work wearily on account of sick headaches and sour stomach, I now enjoy good health and ambition, can do more and better work and life is worth living. I have never before given my name to advertise a medicine, but you cannot imagine how different I feel since I discovered Carter's Little Liver Pills."

Carter's Little Liver Pills tonic the whole system through the liver and bowels. They act as a mild and effective laxative, in a gentle manner without any bad after effects.

Recommended and for sale by all drug stores.

SOME MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN ARE AILING ALL THE TIME

Mrs. Ackerman and Mrs. Mayer Tell Women How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Them at This Trying Period

CONVOY, OHIO

Convoy, Ohio.—"During the Change of Life I was weak and run-down and could hardly do my work. By reading your advertisements I found out about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has straightened me right out and made me feel like a new woman. By the time I had taken eight bottles I was well and could do my housework on the farm without trouble. I recommended it to my daughter-in-law after her second baby was born and it did her a wonderful lot of good. I told her to try it and if it didn't help her I would pay for it, and before she had taken one bottle she said to me, 'You won't have to pay for it! It is helping me wonderfully!' And she took three bottles of it. You can use my testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. Elsie Ackerman, Convoy, Ohio.

Mrs. Mayer's Experience

Litchfield, Conn.—"I have given your medicine a fair trial (I am on my fifth bottle) and can truthfully say that it has helped me. I am at the Change of Life and was not able to sleep nights, had indigestion, palpitation of the heart, pains in my right and left sides (more so if I hurried), had a rapid beating in my left ear and dreaded to see night come. I felt smothered if I lay on my left side, I had gas dreadfully, at times felt as if some one had me by the throat, had hot waves through me and sometimes I would shake in spells of nervousness. I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot praise it enough. I can say it does all it claims to do and I can recommend it to my friends. I can sleep much better, the pains in my sides are gone, I am not so nervous, my digestion is much better, and I very seldom have the hot waves. I must say that the Vegetable Compound is the best medicine for women's ills and I will answer letters from women asking about it."—Mrs. Joseph Mayer, Sr., Box 86, Litchfield, Connecticut.

An exchange says in reference to the "blue sky" stock markets, "let them alone unless you have expert advice." It also says consult your banker before you buy stock that is being hawked about. which is jolly right, we calculate. It is a fact that any real business man will at once fire these stock offers into the waste basket without the courtesy of an examination, but it is also true that the banker is pretty sure to advise you to leave your money in his bank at the paltry 4 per cent because he wants to use it, and if he did not use your's and our's his own would not suffice to dip into this, that and the other fly-by-night, get rich-quick schemes; moreover, how in sixty could you expect your banker to cite you to the best investments, when he wants to be cited himself? No, boys, you can take it from us the banker's judgment errs quite as often and anyone's, and he has the bath room papered with stock certificates which are worth the price of the paper—that's all.

North Adams Creamery Prosperous

Greendale Dairy under the management of L. B. Eggleston, is one of the industries of which our village is justly proud. We feel that enterprises of this nature are the making of the town.

We dropped in the other day just as they were taking off a big churning of the farmers' gold nuggets. Not having called at the place for some time we naturally noticed the new machinery being installed and thorough electrification. Above are located motors that operate the churn and mixing vats, and below are motors for driving the ammonia pump, the water pump, etc. The old ammonia pump which has been in use since the establishment of the business, has recently been re-placed with a vertical two-cylinder en bloc pump which is about the slickest machine for the business we have ever seen. The cylinders are jacketed and a constant current of cold water circulates through, similar to an auto and a force oil feed lubricates the whole affair and is visible from a sight feed. Centrifugal pumps in all places of advantage quickly transfer the cream and buttermilk to and from the big tanks.

The refrigerator system is one of the best and represents a considerable outlay. We visited the cold room where the mercury stood at freezing and can be made still more frigid when necessary. The ammonia is forced through a system of 4-inch pipe coils immersed in brine and the result is a hoar frost that congeals on the pipes as it would on the well pump outside in January. Of course the refrigerating room must necessariy be well insulated and for this purpose is lined with mineral wool felt which is three inches thick and the joints are cemented air tight.

There is not much use for the steam engine at present although it is kept in readiness should the electric current fail. Live steam is used from the boiler for scalding the cans and cleansing the receptacles about the plant.

Our Dairy at this time is useing around 5,000 pounds of butter fat per week and last week the amount was over 5,700 pounds, and the business has been established eight years.

Mrs. C. E. Moorman and son Jack of Tecumseh have been visiting Mrs. Archie Bleech and other friends for a few days past. Dr. Moorman came for Sunday.

Miss Clara Corbett who was located at Evelith, Minnesota has gone to Bronxville, New York to teach this year. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. C. A. Corbett, who has been visiting relatives here and they order the Advocate sent to 5 Maple St., Bronxville. Miss Mildred Corbett who is engaged in National Y. W. C. A. work in New York City, will be with them occasionally.

An Honor Much Sought

It is a signal honor to be singled out as one of the hundreds physically and mentally fit to become a soldier—and better still a commanding general in the United States Armies. Congressman Joseph Hooper of Battle Creek desires to announce through our columns that the appointment for the Military Academy from the 3rd Congressional District will be settled by a competitive examination before a board for the purpose. All who wish to compete are welcome, and must be between the ages of 17 and 22. The examinations will be held at the city postoffices such as Battle Creek Kalamazoo, Coldwater. Hillsdale, etc. on Saturday, October 24. Candidate having the best standing will be the appointee and those standing second and third will be alternates.

Mr. Hooper says it costs the Government from $25.000 to $30.000 to educate a single candidate at West Point, therefore all applicants must have fully made up their minds to follow the military profession, otherwise the Government does not care to send them to school. The cadet at West Point is naturally a man of destiny and with such names before him as Grant, Sheridan, Sherman, and Pershing in review, the budding general has an inspiration right from the start.

Quite a number from North Adams attended the Poultry School at Wilson's Lake Wednesday. Hillsdale is one of the ten counties in which these schools are being conducted this summer. The forenoon session was in charge of Prof. Hannah who spoke on Poultry Diseases and the afternoon session was a demonstration on culling. The Hillsdale County Poultry Ass'n served lemonade and a picnic dinner was enjoyed. Our county agent and several from the State College assisted in the program.

Clark Lake Man Skidoos

Hank Woodward, who conducted the dance hall at Clark Lake, departed suddenly Sunday night without notice, leaving a lot of dues and bills with whiskers on. He leaves owes up into the thousands and nobody knows whence he cometh or whither he goeth.

Friends in this vicinity received announcements which are as follows: "Mrs. Fletcher McLellan announces the marriage of her daughter, Katherine Alice, to Rev. John Wesley Sheehan, Tuesday August 25th 1925 at the home of the brides mother at LaPorte, Indiana." The groom needs no introduction to North Adams people and the bride has been a teacher in the schools of Niles Michigan also was a teacher in the schools of South Bend for some time. North Adams people extend congratulations.

Next week, September 14th to 19th occurs the annual Jackson County Fair, and most of our citizens are making preparations to attend at least a couple of days. The management of the fair has been changed and a good exhibition is promised for this year. The famous champion of champions, in trotting horses, Peter Manning trained by "Pop" Geers, and a horse of great reputation, will be seen at the Fair on Wednesday September 16th. His record is 2:2¾ on a half mile track and 1:56¾ on a mile track. It will be your last chance to see him.

James Meeks and Lemual Rhodes are in Detroit this week at the State Fair doing demonstration work in grain judging for the clubs of the county of Hillsdale. There is also considerable interest shown in potato judging. The work has been carried on for a number of years and has been brought to a high degree of science.

The family of George Rock left North Adams on Sunday last for Chicago via automobile, arriving somewhat later than expected on account of some car trouble. They are nicely located at Cicero, a suburb of Chicago, but only ten minutes walk from Mr. Rock's place of employment. So far they are much pleased with their new home.

The picture "Passion Play" at the Congregational church on Sunday evening was greeted by a full house and Rev. and Mrs. Hunt certainly should be well pleased with the interest taken in these films. Music was furnished by Messrs. Pierce and Fay Stevens, besides songs rendered by the audience with Mrs. Hunt as leader.

Postmaster VanWert has found the postoffice quarters much too small for his needs; and accordingly re-modeling has been in progress this week. The gate in front has been removed and double door installed, the money order desk shifted to the south and the rear of the office cut off from public use. This arrangement gives more room for packages which was much needed since the increase of the parcel post business. Considerable new lumber has been used and Merritt Shaw is the carpenter.

A "Wandering Willie" dropped into the Advocate office on Wednesday and asked for a meal ticket. This is the first time in years this has happened here. We supposed the traveling compositor was a thing of the past but it seems not. The days of hand composition in small country offices have gone and it is almost impossible to find a shop without a linotype of some kind. These wanderers are usually down and out because of liquor but the last one had no traces of that failing about him. If he had come to us driving a Ford car we should not have been surprised, since driving and owning a car is no indication that a man knows where his next meal is coming from. You will find plenty of boys driving "flivvers" who have absolutely no money or disposition to pay their honest debts.

Low Cost Temporary Fences

Quickly Erected with "RED TOP" Steel Posts

A GOOD many farmers right around here have found it pays to use temporary fences to provide temporary pasturage and to hog down a part of their corn. This saves the expense of husking, cribbing, reloading and feeding. Rustling for himself does a hog a lot of good aside from this saving.

We recommend "RED TOP" Steel Post as the most economical post for temporary fences. We have sold a lot of them for this purpose. "RED TOPS" are so easily driven with the One Man Driver. The fence wire is quickly attached. Post can be pulled and the fence moved over when new areas are to be cut off. The amount of labor and time required is surprisingly small.

SAVE MONEY

Build New Fences—Repair Old Ones Now

Our advice is to build your new fences and repair your old ones now. Prices on the "RED TOP" Post and fence are unusually low. You can make a real saving if you buy at this time. And fall is the best time to do your fencing, rather than trying to crowd it into the busy season next spring. You have so much other work to do then.

"RED TOPS" are easily and quickly driven no matter how hard and dry the soil. They have made fencing a fall job around here. They have a mighty strong service record behind them in this community. You take no risk when you buy them. We stand behind every "RED TOP" we sell with a guarantee.

Come in right away and get our low prices. If you have never used the "RED TOP," we will show you why we are able to guarantee it. It's the biggest time and money saver we have to offer.

Two Letters

June 2, 1904, she writes:—

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucous into my throat causing frequent expectoration. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy god health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good done. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders.

Send 4 cents postage to the PE-RU-NA COMPANY, Columbus, Ohio, for book on catarrh.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Hesperia—Rodney Nagake, 77 years old, last of the Ottawa Indian chiefs, is dead at Pentwater lake. He had been camping there for the summer.

Petroskey—Low water in Bear River is giving officials of the City Light & Power Co. cause for alarm. Added to the serious situation is the fact that much more electricity is being used this season than ordinarily.

Albion—The city will build a new foot bridge across the Kalamazoo river at Albion street to supplement the vehicle vridge at that point. Perry Sharp local contractor, has been given the contract.

Muskegon — Two men stopped Glenn Tompkins, tank wagon driver for an oil company, on a road near here and told him they desired to buy some of the gasoline in his tank. Then they held him up and robbed him of $60.

Ironwood—Local and federal officers are without trace of the robbers who demolished the Chicago & Northwestern Railway passenger station at Quinnesec, Mich., with a charge of dynamite and escaped with $23 in cash and the contents of a mail pouch.

Jackson—With a majority of one vote, Mrs. Marian Knox was elected to the school board here to succeed Mrs. Luna Lewis, candidate for reelection. The vote stood a tie between the two with 226 votes each, following numerous recounts. There were five candidates for the office.

Jackson—Detective Charles E. Phelps is the new chief of the Jackson police department. Capt. Frank Vandebogart, acting head of the force since the death of Chief John Hudson last December, was retired from the force because of disability, on half the chief's salary.

Detroit—The Standard Oil Co., the Sinclair Refining Co., and the White Star Refining Co. have announced a further reduction of one cent a gallon in the price of gasoline. The service station price is now 18.8 cents, plus the 2-cent state tax, making the price to the customer 20.8 cents.

Pontiac—Glenn C. Gillespie is investigating the release from Jackson prison of Leeds and Richard Ludlow, prohibition law violators after serving less than two months of a sentence of from nine months to one year. Judge Gillespie has been informed by prison officials that the Ludlows were freed August 15. Commitment papers were issued July 2.

Jonesville—Voters of Jonesville will be asked to decide at the polls, September 14, whether or not a 20-year franchise shall be granted the Southern Michigan Light and Power company by terms of the contract the company agrees to purchase the electrical distributing system now owned by the village and to lease the power house and equipment for 20 years.

Muskegon—Mrs. Charlotte Smith, 80 years old, has filed suit in Circuit Court here against her daughter, Mrs. Rose Jackson, to recover property valued at $12,000. In her bill of complaint Mrs. Smith says that she deeded the property to her daughter with the understanding that she would be given a home, but now is obliged to live in a rooming house, although unable to care for herself.

Lansing—Increased operating costs of the University of Michigan, Michigan State College and the Normal School, additions to the soldier's bonus sinking fund, building operations at Jackson prison and a $500,000 increase in the cost of operating state hospitals are responsible for the $3,300,000 increase in the state tax levy this year, Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck explained in a formal statement.

Sault Ste. Marie—A tug and diver from the Great Lakes Towing and Wrecking Co. has left for Moon Island, 28 miles south of here, to salvage the training boat "By-Gar" which is on the bottom of St. Mary's river, keel upward, where is capsized with 28 Detroit Sea Scouts on board, after running aground on a bar. The 28 scouts and Capt. Dean L. Smith were saved by the Coast Guard at Moon Island station after the disaster to their ship.

Lansing—Grade separations are to be provided at all trunk line highway crossings with the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad on the new location of the railroad in Lenawee and Monroe counties it is indicated. Highway Commissioner Rogers submitted a report stating the railroad had offered to pay fifty per cent of the expense for two separations in Monroe and one in Lenawee counties. He was directed to seek federal aid on the projects before authorizing their construction.

Monroe—The city commission has adopted a resolution protesting against the proposed abandonment of the harbor here by the government. The city has been given until Sept. 20 to give its reasons why the port should not be discontinued. The resolution stated that the canal still is used by boats, is the only harbor along Lake Erie in Michigan and approximately $200,000 had been expended. It was stated that if the canal and River Raisin were properly dredged Monroe again would be one of the big lake ports.

Lansing—The State Administrative Board has authorized the purchase of three and one-half miles of the Grayling Branch of the Manistee and North Eastern Railroad by the State Military Department. The spur runs into the Hansen Military Reservation.

Grand Rapids—More apprentices must be trained at the tile setting trade, the Central District Tile and Mantel Contractors association announced at the closing session of its annual convention when it re-elected officers and chose Indianapolis as the 1926 convention city.

Iron Mountain—A cave-in of ground as he was attempting to put up a set of timber in a sub level of the Berkshire Mine caught John Nelson, a miner, and crushed him to death. His partner, Everett Kestine, narrowly escaped death, when he sprang for safety as the ground caved in.

Bay City—The American Legion and the Legion Auxiliarly of Michigan will meet in Bay City for their seventh anual reunion September 5, 6, 7 and 8. Committees have been busy here for three months preparing to show the World War veterans the time of their lives.

Port Huron—Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, of the United States District Court at Detroit, has issued an order requesting Mayor John B. McIlwain and members of the city commission to confer with Detroit United Railway officials relative to a proposed fare increase for the City Electric Railway Co., of this city.

Pontiac—Reports of progress on Wider Woodward avenue paving made available indicate that one of the two 40-foot roadways will be ready for use between Pontiac and Detroit by Oct. 1. Progress on the other 40-foot way is being held back by failure of the Grand Trunk Railway to provide new right-of-way and move its tracks.

Monroe—The recent wind and rain storm created havoc at Pointe Aux Peaux, a summer resort, eight miles north of here along Lake Erie. Several large signs were blown down, a wagon was turned over, automobiles were forced into ditches and electric wires were put out of commission. Small trees were uprooted at Brest, six miles north of here.

Port Huron—His attempt to save the life of a dog cost the life of James Wiseman, of Wyandotte, and may result in the death of his wife. Wiseman and his wife were riding in an automobile 12 miles east of Sarna, Ont., when Wiseman, who was driving, saw a dog run into the road in front of his car. Wiseman swerved the automobile in an effort to keep from striking the dog and ran into the ditch.

Grand Haven—Use of cherries for cider is increasing in this district. It has been found that roadside stands vending cherry cider have been highly profitable and many orchard owners have abandoned the regular cherry market for the cider press. To lengthen the cherry cider season many of the orchard owners keep their cherries in cold storage until they are needed for the press.

Albion—Herbert M. and Fred W. Kinney, Albion farmers, will give to the Michigan State college for purpose of germination 50 grains of wheat that are 50 years old. The kernels were brought by their father, Leonard Kinney, from the centennial exposition held in Philadelphia in 1876. The grain was secured at the Austrian building and was part of an exhibit of unusually large wheat from that country.

Grand Rapids—Harry Trackin, 20 years old, of Grand Rapids, who attempted to flee from Patrolman Charles Benham, was shot through both legs by the officer. Trackin had been arrested as a holdup suspect. An unidentified man had reported having been held up a few hours earlier by three men who lost their hats as they ran from him. Benham came upon three hatless men as he was traveling his beat and arrested Trackin. The others escaped.

Cheboygan—Fanned by stiff breezes, forest fires which have been raging in Cheboygan county for several days, grew in volume and the city of Cheboygan was entirely hemmed in by fire. In some places the fire was only two miles from the city limits and Cheboygan's 7,000 residents were in grave peril. The splendid brick school house in Beau Grand township, three miles from Cheboygan, caught fire despite the efforts of hundreds of volunteers to beat back the flames.

Lansing—Michigan farmers and tourists now enjoy 118 miles more of federal-aid highways than they did a year ago. This mileage, completed in the year ending June 30, cost $2,799,865, of which the federal government furnished $1,267,704. Highway construction under this plan now under way in the state totals 475 miles, while the total mileage completed previous to last year was 494 miles.

Caro—The forty-fourth annual Caro night and day fair has closed after a successful week.

Lansing—Petition to disbar Judge Albert Widdis, Tawas City, has been filed with the attorney general by Thomas Galbraith, justice of the peace. Galbraith charges Judge Widdis, who has held office for more than 10 years, is "subject to brain storms which make him unfit to hold office." Under state law, a circuit judge cannot be removed except by impeachment. It is also provided that only a licensed attorney can become a circuit judge. There is no ruling as to whether disbarment would mean automatic removal from office.

Lansing—The state gasoline tax passed the million dollar mark in July, it was announced by Secretary of State Charles J. DeLand. Gross receipts were $1,001,656, with refunds of $53,978. Net returns were $947,677. This brings the total for six months since the gasoline tax went into effect to $4,378,156, with refunds of $242,677, making a net return of a little more than $4,000,000 for six months of this year, which will be half of the total revenue. Receipts for August are expected to exceed the July figure by $100,000.

UNIFORM LAWS NATIONAL NEED

N. W. MacChesney Warns Against Enroachment on State's Rights.

Detroit, Mich.—Col. Nathan William MacChesney of Chicago, warned a convention of national commissioners on uniform state laws, holding their convention here, that unless the various states voluntarily make their own laws uniform along progressive lines there will be a constantly increasing and determined effort to have congress enact general laws on subjects of the country's general concern, thus perilling the nation's fundamental democracy.

Colonel MacChesney, who is president of the national conference of commissioners, warned against the growing encroachment of the federal government on state's rights and quoted President Coolidge to the effect that this encroachment is due to the fact that the states have not discharged their full duties. Mr. MacChesney declared that unless the states meet their responsibilities through uniform state laws they must lose still further their prestige and power.

Discussing the need for a philosophy of law, Mr. MacChesney said: "With age, growth of population and accumulation of wealth, a general government is sure to acquire immense power, and if with this is united the daily administration of affairs close to the people, the people themselves become habitually accustomed to government interference, and consequently not only in the matter of law to be enforced but in opinions on all subjects accept from the central power the line of conduct to be followed, desired acts to be achieved, and the methods by which they are to be accomplished."

Lawson, Publisher, Leaves $2,505,000 to Charities

Chicago.—Under the will of the late Victor F. Lawson, which was filed for probate Tuesday, the Chicago Daily News, principal asset of the Lawson estate, passes to the control of the Illinois Merchants' Trust company, which is given full power of management, including power to sell the newspaper.

Specific bequests of $4,775,000 are made under the terms of the will, and of this sum $2,505,000 is apportioned for benevolent purposes. The biggest bequests are left to the Chicago Congregational Mission and Extension society, the Theological Seminary and the Young Men's Christian association. These total practically three-quarters of the entire estate. The other one-quarter of the residuary estate is left to Iver N. Lawson, a brother of the late publisher, who also was left $200,000 and the income from a trust fund of $300,000. Relatives, friends, and employees also share in the estate.

Banker May Be Dry Chief of Chicago District

Chicago.—Albert W. Harris, president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank," is the "prominent Chicago banker" under consideration for appointment as federal prohibition administrator for the Chicago district.

His name was suggested to Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, dry generalissimo, in Washington, by Vice President Charles G. Dawes, an intimate friend of Mr Harris.

Mr. Harris is said to have stated that if there were any opposition he would be unwilling to undertake the responsibility of dry chief for the Illinois-Indiana-Wisconsin district.

Fargo, N. D., Deports 118 I. W. W. to Minnesota

Fargo, N. D.—Determined to rid this community of possible trouble makers, citizens sworn in as deputies by Sheriff John C. Ross of Cass county escorted 118 alleged members of the Industrial Workers of the World out of Fargo.

They were taken in two groups and sent across the Red river to Moorhead, Minn. The alleged "wobblies" come t. the section every fall as part of the harvest-hand rush. Those showing no inclination to go to work were taken into custody.

Two Men, Two Girls Die When Train Hits Auto

Rockford, Ill.—Two men and two girls were killed and two other men were injured when an interurban train on the Rockford and Interurban railroad struck an automobile near Freeport. The dead are Katherine Cohl, nineteen; Florence Klass, nineteen; Lou Hutton, nineteen, and an unidentified man found in a cornfield near the scene of the accident after ambulances had left.

BRITISH EXECUTE 7 FOR KILLING STACK

Egyptian Lawyer Battles With Guards on Scaffold.

Cairo, Egypt,—Execution of seven men convicted of the murder of Sir Lee Stack, governor general of the Sudan, took place here. They were hanged at intervals of 45 minutes.

The death sentence imposed upon Abdul Fattah Enayat was commuted to life imprisonment.

Shafik Mansour, prominent lawyer and member of the Egyptian chamber of deputies, whose role, as revealed at the trial, consisted in remaining in the background and instigating and remunerating the actual murderers, did not bear up with the fatalistic fortitude of his comrades, however. After the guards had pinioned his arms to lead him from his cell, Shafik renewed his wild struggles and actually burst his bonds in an effort to free himself.

Hopes that Mahmoud Ismael, believed to have been the organizer of several big political crimes, might break the silence which he maintained throughout the trial proved illusory. Ismael protested his innocence to the end and met his death with a smile, hurling jests at the warders as they led the men to the scaffold.

President Coolidge Back at Summer White House

Swampscott, Mass.—President and Mrs. Coolidge returned to the summer White House after an absence of a week. The 145-mile afternoon automobile ride from Northampton was without incident.

Still undecided as to when he will return to Washington, the President, on arrival at White Court found a mass of business had accumulated during his absence.

The departure from the home at Northampton of Mrs. Elmira Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Coolidge, was made in a drizzle.

Prize-Winning Cattle to Compete at Indianapolis

Indianapolis.—The closing date for making cattle entries for the 1925 national dairy exposition, to be held at Indianapolis, October 10 to 17, is September 19, is announced by W. E. Skinner, secretary and general manager. Indications are that over 1,500 prize-winning dairy cattle of the Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian and Jersey breeds from the best herds in the United States and Canada will compete for international honors at this year's exposition.

Newton D. Baker to Aid in Campaign on Crime

New York.—Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, is the first man named on the executive committee on the National Crime commission. Mark O. Prentiss, organizer of the commission, announced Mr. Baker's acceptance of membership after a long distance telephone call from Cleveland, where Mr. Baker lives.

Five men to be known as the committee to restrict the sale of firearms are to be named soon, Mr. Prentiss said.

Fiftieth Victim Dies of Scalds of Steamer Blast

Marines Face Charges

Swampscott, Mass.—Two marines stationed as guards at President Coolidge's summer residence, White Court, were charged with sleeping on duty and deserting their posts. A third marine is held for insubordination.

U. S. Minister to Haiti Dies

Montreal.—Arthur Bailly-Blanchard, minister of the United States to Haiti since 1914, was found dead in his hotel room here. He had been here since August 19.

8 KILLED, 11 INJURED WHEN GUN EXPLODES

Camp Graint, Ill.—Explosion of a Stokes trench mortar on the Camp Grant drill ground during firing practice killed eight negro soldiers of the Eighth Illinois infantry and injured eleven others.

The dead, all of Chicago, are Captain Osceola A. Browning, commanding the howitzer company, Corporal Henry Williams, and Privates Ben Anderson, Delmes Campbell, Herbert Durant, Charlie Wright, Todd Mosely, and Elmo Baynes.

Standing near were two small boys, visitors with the regiment, Oswald Harris, son of Lieutenant Harris, and Harold Williams, a guest of Captain Browning. From them it was learned that the first time an attempt was made to fire one of the two mortars the propelling charge failed.

On the next attempt, said the boys some of the men were told to remove the sand which filled the projectiles. In its place they inserted some of the cordite taken from the firing rings. It was this shell which was loaded into the mortar. Just what caused it to explode inside the barrel, throwing fragments of the gun in every direction, is not yet known.

When the smoke drifted away, the dead and injured lay in a shambles about their gun.

The explosion followed by just a few hours the injury of eleven civilians who were burned during a smoke bomb demonstration.

Spanish Warships Shell Riff Coast; Towns Razed

Melilla, Spanish Morocco. — The coast line of Alhucemas has been virtually leveled by the gunfire from Spanish warships which were rushed there after the long range bombardment of the island of Alhucemas by the rebels. The cruiser Alfonso XIII, firing broadsides, put the enemy's guns out of commission and destroyed several rebel villages. A squadron of giant airplanes bombed Abd-el Krim's headquarters at Adjir.

Fez, French Morocco.—The French Nineteenth army corps has started a big cleaning up operation against the Brane tribesmen north of Bab Morouj, which is north of Taza, to compel their submission.

Editor Kills Bystander in Fight With Ex-Judge

East Las Vegas, N. M.—Carl C. Magee, Albuquerque editor and storm center of New Mexico politics, shot and killed John B. Lassatter, a state employee, in a hotel here when, in a fight with former District Judge D. J. Leahy, his political enemy, he drew a revolver and fired. Lassatter was a bystander.

Magee fired two shots after he had been knocked to the floor by Leahy, the first shot striking Lassatter and the second wounding Leahy in the arm. Leahy was the district judge who tried Magee in two cases, both of which gained national publicity. Magee was taken into custody.

Gasoline Prices Cut in Eleven Western States

Chicago.—Tank wagon and service station prices of gasoline were cut two cents a gallon by the Standard Oil company of Indiana. The reductions apply to the company's entire marketing territory in eleven Middle Western states. The new Chicago prices are 17 to 19 cents a gallon, respectively. Competitive conditions were cited by the company in an official statement as the sole reason for the reductions. Price cutting has been rampant in numerous population centers in the territory for weeks. This is the largest price reduction made this year in gasoline prices.

Labor Day At Jonesville

It seems all roads led to Jonesville on Monday and most of the surrounding villages simply quit trying to do business, locked up and went over to help the Jonesvillians celebrate their annual event and you can take it from us they celebrated it right. Not since the days of the stage coach has staid old Jonesville on the Pike did herself so much glory. People of all denominations, all colors, all shapes and all sizes were there and from the man who sold "hot dawgs" to the chap who tickled little children with his transparent rubber balloons there was not a dull moment all day long. The Main thourough fare of the village was a real Midway with its Ferris wheel, Merry go round and umbrella swing, and many a country damsel and rural swain found great amusement in patronizing these concessions. In fact there was almost everything one's heart could desire except a place to sit, and it behooved all who went to use a portable camp chair or something similar. At this time of the year the bosom of Mother earth is not really a safe place to recline. The movies and dance in the evening drew the full attention of the younger class and taken all in all we should say the affair was a tremendous success. A large number of sports were carried out and the ball game between Hillsdale and Litchfield resulted in victory for Hillsdale. Some of our boys assisted in making the sports a success. From morning until night the public park was a mass of humanity and not the least important was the excellent melodies discoursed by Quincy band, a group of real talented musicians. Hillsdale county was quite well represented and we understand large numbers of people came from Jackson county and even further away. We feel to congratulate the business men of Jonesville for their skill in handling the celebration and results will bring ten-fold benefit to the commercial life of the village.

Shenanhoah Disaster A Lesson

For years the naval authorities have endeavored to demonstrate the value of Blimps in warfare, but as yet have succeeded only miserably. The disaster which overtook the Shenandoah in Ohio is as good a thermometer as we need to use in such cases. There is no doubt the ill-fated Blimp was the best machine it is possible to build at this time, and carried all the improvments known to man, yet her stability was no better than that of machines built ten years ago, and she collapsed like an egg shell the minute a storm struck her.

It was commonly talked among flying men that the Shenandoah should be sent to the Arctic on an exploring expedition, but public sentiment intervened and President Coolidge put the kibosh on the idea. His judgment said it was a fallacy, and the test has proved him perfectly correct. Notwithstanding many brave men were willing and anxious to make the trip, it was wisely abandoned. Since the disaster more people will realize how fragile and terribly unwieldy such a mammoth dirigible is in the grip of a high wind. The whole design and method of building these giants of the air will have to be changed before they can be considered at all safe. As the Government refuses to abandon the idea no doubt many more valuable lives will be snuffed out in the process of experimental work. From time to time the Government will spend millions of your's and our money to build and maintain these ponderous nuisances. We would like to ask the experts what sort of a chance the Blimp would have against a bunch of hornet aeroplanes? Would it be possible for a six hundred feet dirigible to sail over New York or any other civilized city in the world before it could be intercepted by bombing planes and destroyed forthwith? We believe not. The only use we could imagine for the Blimp would be as an observation point high in air over the home camp to watch the movements of the enemy, and even so would be a mighty poor risk since the enemy's planes would be constantly diving above and below and sending out high explosives. There were incidents in the World war when these German Blimps dropped powerful bombs on London but the damage was small compared to the loss of the dirigible which in practically every case was accomplished by fox-like aeroplanes directly after.

The United States or any other nation will never be able to win wars with the Blimp.

Jackson Progressive

The city of Jackson is now picking up momentum in the line of industries and it is a fact that for an inland city Jackson has the whole of southern Michigan pretty well beaten. Preparations are now on foot to establish one of the largest steel rolling mills in the state there, and this will call for the services of thousands of trained workers. The capital of this enterprise will be upwards of $17,000,000 and the finances will be furnished mostly by Jackson men. Consumers Power Company will be a large factor in the establishing of the business.

Banking and investmenf houses of Jackson, Detroit and other cities of the state where Consumers Power does business are expected to participate heavily in the financing of the new steel company.

The site for the proposed plant has already been acquired in Jackson, having been selected after two years of preliminary investigation as to the economical requirements. It will be served by the main line of the Michigan Central and the Michigan Northern, is adjacent to a river and is within 100 miles of all the larger steel consuming centers of Michigan's vast automotive industry. It has been fully established that the mill can lay down strip steel in the main consuming points of the state, as well as in Ohio and Indiana, as cheaply or cheaper than it can be had from the other large producing centers such as Pittsburgh, Mansfield, Gary and the like.

The first mill in the plant, which will be of the hot roll type, will be a 12 inch producer. Mills of other standard gauges will be installed as demand warrants, according to Mr. Caldwell. Adjacent to the plant has been uncovered a vast bed of limestone, essential for use in connection with the making of steel. Billets will be transported from adjacent blast furnace centers. Excellent sub-soil foundations have been found throughout the site of the plant.

Noted metallurgists, engineers and experienced steel manufacturers have co-operated with Mr. Caldwell in selection of the site and in surveying the probable field for business. A large number of steel mill workers will be brought to Jackson to operate the plant while executives will be men of long experience in the business.

Chanticleer in Bronze

For the first time in American history a national monument of granite and bronze is to be erected to a chicken The approved designis a bronze male Rhode island Red of great size on a large granite boulder. The monument will be placed in Adamsville, Rhode Island, a fitting tribute to a noble bird.

Seventy one years ago a sailor, returning from a voyage to the Orient, presented a friend in Rhode Island with a Chittagong cockerel which he had picked up for a pet while on shore leave on the northwestern part of the Indo-China peninsula in what was once a part of Burma and is now in the province of Bengal, India. This bird was a giant size gamecock with brilliant red plumage and black feathers on its breast. It was placed with what had originally been Cochin Chinas, but which had lost some of their original characteristics through crossbreeding with other fowl. The Cochin Chinas came from the southeastern extremity while the Chittagong came from a point in the interior, to the north and west. It is not known who first brought the Cochin Chinas to Rhode Island, but it is an established fact that they came long before the Chittagong arrived.

William Tripp, the man who was presented with the Chittagong cockerel, and John Macomber, a friend, of Westport, Massachusetts were both marketing eggs and trying to develop better egg layers which would also dress well for the table. They exchanged poultry from time to time. Mr. Macomber received a cockerel and a dozen pullets obtained from the cross breeding of the Chittagong and Cochin Chinas, in exchange for some of his birds. The new strain was called "Tripp" or "Macomber chickens and became very popular.

Dr. A. A. Brigham, then director of the Rhode Island agricultural experiment station, recognizing the worth and possibilities of the "Tripp hen," persuaded the owners to standardize the strain. It was then suggested that as they were a Rhode Island product, and were of a red plumage, they be-called "Rhode Island Reds."

When first exhibited at the Providence poultry show in 1895 the newcomers carried first prize in every event entered. When the Rhode Island Reds began to be better known many imitations of the stock sprang up. However, the would be Reds could not compare with the genuine article either in appearance or egg laying ability.

ON A NARROW ESCAPE

"Oh, Aunty, I just have to talk to you," said Maud, bursting in on Aunt Emmy. "Those bonds Tom's father gave us for a wedding present have matured and Tom has the money. A man is trying to get Tom to invest in a radio company. I want your opinion on it."

"Don't hurry; tell me everything you can remember," said Aunt Emmy.

"Well, Tom didn't seem enthusiastic. Then Mr. Brown, the salesman, said that if he bought stock in his company, and wanted his money at any time, the company would buy back his stock."

"Are you sure he said that?" interrupted Aunt Emmy. "That is a claim that is not made by people connected with dependable investment houses. Unless you have an agreement with the company clearly stating that it will repurchase its stock, signed by one of its officers, you would have great difficulty in getting the company to buy back your stock. A company cannot be compelled to repurchase its own stock. Do you know who Mr. Brown is?"

"No," replied Maud. "Neither does Tom, but he seems awfully nice and Tom liked him right from the start. He is good looking, well dressed, and has beautiful manners."

Aunt Emmy sniffed. "Did he offer to sell you preferred stock on which dividends are guaranteed?"

"Why, how did you know, Aunty?" exclaimed Maud. "That is exactly what he did."

"I thought so," said Aunt Emmy "Reliable stock salesmen don't promise that a company will repurchase its stock, nor do they promise guaranteed dividends. Unless a company operates profitably, it cannot pay honest dividends of any sort, guaranteed or otherwise. You can see how foolish it is to believe that you can get dividends just because some one says they are guaranteed. The only guarantee in the world for dividends is the successful operation of a company. Guaranteed dividends is a glib phrase used by unscrupulous persons to get money from unthinking ones. A while back the country was flooded with fake oil stock. Now dishonest promoters are trying radio stock."

"You just go to the phone and call Tom," said Aunt Emmy. "Ask him and Mr. Brown to meet you at the bank at ten o'clock. Tell him not to buy the stock until you talk with him again. Half the money is yours. Then call the bank and make an appointment with the vice president to discuss an investment."

About noon Aunt Emmy's telephone rang. It was Maud. "The queerest thing happened, Aunty," she said. "Mr. Brown agreed to meet us at the bank at ten o'clock. Tom and I waited until eleven and he never showed up. Then Tom told the vice president about it and he said we had a lucky escape. Only last week the bank looked up the company Mr. Brown represented and it is absolutely no good!"—A. B. Aymes.

TO MAKE FARMING YIELD BETTER RETURNS

The outstanding possibilities of co-operative marketing are more largely along the lines of standardizing and improving production, eliminating excess varieties, standardizing and improving grade and pack, stabilizing production, regulating flow to market, improving distribution as between markets, developing new markets, collective bargaining, betterment of financing, correcting trade abuses, and representing producers before legislative and administrative bodies, says H. E. Erdman, associate professor in California College of Agriculture. All of these should, of course, result in higher net returns, he says, adding:

"If I were to list the limitations I should put them about as follows:

"1. Co-operation cannot fix prices that are out of line with supply and demand conditions.

"2. Co-operation cannot eliminate the middleman. It can, and does, of course, establish the farmers' own agencies to take the places of private agencies and often puts one co-operative agency where several dealers formerly operated.

"3. Co-operation cannot reduce costs greatly except in so far as an increase in scale of operations makes for lower costs. Some of the gains of large scale operation, however, are dissipated because of tendencies toward extravagance.

"4. Co-operatives will not run alone. Constant attention is required on the part of the membership because 'what is everybody's business is nobody's business.'

"5. Co-operation does not permit the farmer to hold his products for a higher price without also compelling him to assume the risks of getting a lower price.

"6. The outsider often gets as much of the benefit of co-operative marketing as does the member, and in some cases gets more because he does not have to bear his share of certain development expenses. This is a decided handicap to co-operation."

FEDERAL RESERVE HELPS FARMERS

By M. A. TRAYLOR
Second Vice President American Bankers Association.

There has been no more important event for the American farmer and stock man since the Armistice than the recent return of Great Britain to a gold standard. It seems a long distance from the Montana farm to the gold vaults of the Bank of England, but the price the farmer gets for his wheat and cattle depends not a little on that gold.

M. A. Traylor

The farmer sells his wheat to the elevator man and yet the real buyer, in many cases, is an Englishman, a Frenchman, a German, or an Italian. About one-third of the wheat crop is usually sold abroad and this part is a large factor in fixing the price of the entire crop. Between the farmer and the foreign buyer there are many steps. In recent years the most important step has been that at which the foreign buyer has to pay the American exporter, for the international mechanism of payment has been badly out of order because Europe was off the gold standard. It was just as though an English buyer drove up to your farm house, bargained for your wheat and drew up the contract. But when you discussed payment, he said: "I'm sorry I haven't any good United States money to pay you with; I'll have to pay you in my English paper money, which isn't worth its face value in gold. I don't know what it may be worth next week, but that is your risk."

A Deadly Foe of Trade

How many would be willing to sign contracts on this basis? Yet that is the way most of the world's trade has had to be carried on since the Armistice. In practically all countries except the United States the currencies have had no fixed value in gold, but have changed in value from day to day. Whenever one country sold anything to another country, somebody had to take the risk of loss because the value of the money might change before payment was made. Such uncertainty of payment is a deadly foe of trade, and people were afraid to do any larger international business than they had to.

Exports of food stuffs from the United States fell from two and a half billion dollars in 1919 to eight hundred millions in 1923, and the difficulties of European buyers in making satisfactory payment for American farm products was one of the large factors in the drop in the prices of farm products. But now the recent action of Great Britain in declaring that it will again redeem its paper money in gold means that British buyers of American products can pay for them with money which is accepted the world over at its face value in gold. With the return of Great Britain to the gold standard, a majority of the countries of Europe have paper currencies equal to gold.

How Reserve Banks Helped

American bankers have assisted in the British return to the gold standard by giving a $100,000,000 credit to the British government. But more important than this was the action of the Federal Reserve Banks in granting the Bank of England material co-operation. They placed $200,000,000 gold at the disposal of the Bank of England for two years, to be used by it, if necessary, in maintaining the gold standard. The readiness of the Reserve Banks thus to co-operate was an important influence in the willingness of the British to take this all important step.

This action of the Reserve Banks was a most constructive step in aid of American farmers and producers who will benefit greatly by the removal of this element of uncertainty from their export transactions. If all the sins of omission and commission charged againts the Federal Reserve System by banker, business man, live stock man or political blatherskite in the last five years were true, and practically none of them are, the service rendered commerce and industry by the System in connection with the restoration of the gold standard in so large a part of the world would far outweigh any mistakes that those in charge of the System may have made. No banker, business man or farmer should permit any self serving declaration by favor seeking demagogue to swerve him from a determination to see that the System is maintained for the future welfare of the country.

Fundamentally conditions are very sound and we are doing a very large volume of business, no little part of which is due to the equalizing and stabilizing effect exercised by the Federal Reserve System on the credits of the country. Throughout all the stress of the last five years there have been no times of either stringency or plethora of bank credit. Rates have run along on a rather level keel and in my judgment have had much to do with the stable volume of business which we have enjoyed, and which is quite contrary to the old experience of the aftermath of panics. With a credit structure such as only the Federal Reserve System can guarantee, I feel we need have no apprehension but on the contrary sound optimism for the future.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March, A. D., 1919 executed by George B Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savinge Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty-four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amountingto two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610) and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy ths amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage providsd. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Dated September 3rd, 1925.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit; the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

BORN TAILORS GUILD

The Origins of Fashions

WHERE do the most pronounced changes in men's fashions originate? London or New York? Are they decided upon at some tailors' convention or are they the whim of some Fifth avenue dandy, as he strolls up and down the boulevard? None of these. The real despot on fashions in America today is the young fellow on the college campus. He demands color, variety, originality, and he usually finds them.

Perhaps it's the loud-checked flannel shirt, or the bright-yellow slicker which, covered with autographs and Greek letters, pervades the campus just as much on sunny as rainy days. It may be simply a fashion of wearing one's coat collar turned up or trouser cuff turned down; whatever it is the college youth claims it as his own only to find that in a few months or even weeks it has been adopted all over the country because it is "collegian."

The fad for bell-shaped, flapping trousers started at Oxford, as did the craze for flannel in pastel shades of rose, lemon and lavender.

Colored hat bands, Roman striped belts and emphatic four-in-hands all were born on the campus and later adopted throughout the country.

Sends an Envoy to Europe to Study Tailors' Guilds

EDGAR R. BORN, head of the Born Tailors' Guild, recently established in Chicago to lift the tailoring trade to a higher plane of perfection and place it in the class of a profession, announced today that he had sent a special commissioner to Europe to study the organization and accomplishments of the English Guilds, after which the Chicago association of master tailors is being modeled. Mr. Born's representative is traveling incognito. He expects to spend several months in gathering the data which will be used in furthering the purposes of the American Guild, the first of its kind in the United States. Among the places the commissioner will visit in quest of facts are Reading, Worcester, London, Exeter, Beverly in England and Edinborough, Scotland.

E. R. Born

"We want our master tailors to reassert their pride in perfection in workmanship and to study men's dress as a profession," said Mr. Born in announcing that he had dispatched a representative to Europe on a tour of investigation. "This should mean better dressed men and more economy throughout the industry."

The Bible's Place In The Schools

It is safe to say that at no time in the history of education in America has the subject of the use of the Bible in the schools aroused more attention or been more generally discussed than at present.

It was my privilege a few months ago to hold a series of church conferences in and around Pittsburgh Pa., in which representatives of all the Protestant denominations met to discuss a wide variety of church problems. In the general mass meetings held in connection with these conferences, there was a remarkable response to the suggeston that the Bible ought to be used as a text book in the public school. It seemed to make little difference whether the person who was talking on the subject had a clear cut definition of what he meant by the use of the Bible in the school. The mere statement of an opinion that the Bible ought to be in the schools met with an instant and enthusiastic response. I found the same popular interest in the subject of religious education in towns in Ohio and Illinois and other states.

But while it is true that the public is keenly interested in this topic and that it is a very significant indication of a coming change in our definition of education, it does not answer the questions that arise over the practical use of the Bible in the schools, or solve the problem of its teaching, if by that word we mean instruction in religious truth that the Bible contains in such a way that the pupil shall imbibe actual religious impulses that will lead to conduct that makes character. For, after all, if education does not result in better behavior, it is not true education. The accumulation of facts or knowledge is of little value to society compared with the accumulation of character. If the use of the Bible can produce character, we ought to have it in the school room.

But after we have said all this in general terms, there is a good deal to be said as to the use of the Bible in the schools besides the statement that its teaching ought to be there. And some of these questions are pertinent:

If the Bible is accepted as a text book in the regular public school program of instruction, how much of it shall be used? How much of the entire contents should be taught in the school room? If those parts of the Bible that are of great value for biography or history, or the formation of character, are selected for the class room, what selection of teachers shall be made to give the instruction? The whole thing comes back to the teacher behind the book. And at this point comes in some very interesting matter.

Take, for example, the State of Kansas. Its teaching force numbers 17,000 teachers, counting cities of the first, second and third class, county high schools and district schools. Of this entire, 95 percent. are Protestant teachers and 85 per cent. are members of churches, we are told. It would be safe to say more than half the Kansas teachers are teaching in some church or Bible school the very same children who attend their day school. And if they are competent to teach children in a well organized Bible school on Sunday, they ought to be as well equipped to teach the same boys and girls the same lessons out of the Bible on Monday in the public school.

If the Bible is going to be used as a text book in the school, what Bible texts shall be used? There are now numbers of texts accepted by scholars and authorities, and it should be said that, in substance, when it comes to the teaching of conduct—which is the basis of all true religion—there is no essential difference in the various texts. They all say the same thing and teach the same truth.

These questions and others do not really create any serious difficulties in the practical teaching of Bible truth in the public schools. A very simple course could be selected from the Old and New Testaments, as follows:

Start with biography—the story of Joseph, or of David. I am frank to say that there are passages in these life stories that require wise selection. But for very many years these selections have been made in all our churches, and I have yet to hear of any serious mental or moral harm befalling any of the great army of Sunday school pupils who have been brought up on these stories. All the unexpurgated Bible in the world have never done the boy or girl reader a particle of harm, compared with the harm done every day and night by some of the censored motion pictures that fathers and mothers complacently allow their youngsters to see. And the Bible biographies are dramatic, full of life adventure, packed full of the most needful moral and ethical and religious lessons which need almost no exhorting, or explaining, or commenting to drive the lesson home.

Selections can be made in like manner from the History and Poetry and Literature of the Old Testament, selections that have nothing to do with theology or disputed points in sectarianism. To say that such selections would be difficult to make, or would create trouble of any sort, is to throw discredit on the Bible teaching. And, after all, the discussions that have divided Christendom about the Bible are not found in the Book at all; they have grown out of mankind's own preverse and narrow minded misinterpretation of a teaching which was not intended to be a text book on science or philosophy or theology, but simply a Way of Life

From the New Testament there can not be any better selection than a combined Life of Jesus. What sectarian or theological discussion could possibly arise over the study of this Life? What sensible father or mother could fear the effect on a child's mind from the study of the Life of Jesus as the Gospel writers tell it? I have asked a great many people within the last year if they would be afraid to trust the average teacher in the public schools to teach their children the Life of Jesus, not from some book that made comments on His life, but from the Bible that tells it simply, and I have yet to meet any one who expressed any intelligent fear that the teaching might result in harm to the child's mind, or give him a wrong picture of the greatest Being who ever lived.

It is astonishing with what indifference the average parent will send his son or daughter off to college, to be taught all sorts of questionable philosophy or sociology that may warp or twist the moral fiber of the son or daughter for life! The average father and mother do not even ask what is the text book in history that is used in the college. They seem quite willing to run tne risk. To my mind, the risk is infinitely greater than any risk the American public would run in permitting the average teacher to instruct a class in the Life of Jesus. I am very sure I would far sooner let any Kansas school teacher teach my son the lessons that go with the life of Jesus Christ, than to risk his mental and moral welfare in the class room of some teachers of philosophy and economics whom I know in some of the so-called great universities.

Band Tournament, September 18, 1925 At Jackson County Fair

The Jackson County Fair Association is promoting a band contest on Friday evening of the Jackson County Fair, September 18th, at 8 o'clock. Several bands have already entered this contest and those who wish to enter are requested to get their entries in now. Bands which have already entered are Smith's band of Chelsea, Community band of Charlotte, and the Imperial band of Adrian, also the Hillsdale band. At this Tournament you will see the greatest array of bands ever staged in Jackson. This will be the outstanding feature of the day, giving the people the best available. There will be four judges who will judge the merits of the bands. They are Professor Clark, from the M. S. C., Lewis Boos, Frank Hoffman and Adam Geiger at Jackson.

Bands to be eligible must be from towns of 12,000 population or less. The number of pieces in the band is no bar. All the bands must play one overture of their own selection to be judged. The judges will mark on the point system in accordance with the following scale: Intonation, 25 percent; Precision 25 percent; Interpretation, 25 percent; and Tone Quality, 25 percent. At the close of the contest the enmasse bands will play "Onward Christian Soldiers". Prizes to be given will amount to $500. Seven prizes are offered: 1st, $200; 2nd, $100; 3rd, $75; 4th, $50; 5th, $30; 6th, $25; 7th, $20,

This is a great opportunity for the people of Jackson County to hear the best bands in this district and to see the greatest array of bands ever assembled in Southern Michigan.

World War Orphans

From reports from all over the state of Michigan it is evident the campaign to raise Michigan's quota of $250,000 for the American Legion Endowment Fund, the income of which will be used to care for the orphans of World war veterans, and take care of disabled ex service men who do not receive government compensation, and their children, is going to be successful.

Detroit has selected David A. Brown, a veteran of the Spanish American war, a prominent Detroit business man, and a well known charity worker who has won an enviable reputation all over the world as the chairman of the Wayne county committee. With Former Congressman Joseph W. Fordney as chairman of the state committee and Mr. Brown chairman of the Wayne county committee, those in charge of the endowment campaign feel jubilant.

Colonel Harold H. Emmens, a prominent Detroit attorney, who has just returned from a big game hunt in Africa, is the vice chairman of the Wayne county committee, and the Guardian Trust Co., Detroit's infant financial institution is the treasurer. Hon. John W. Smith, mayor of Detroit, is the honorary chairman, and the members of the county executive committee are: Dr. Angus McLean, Colonel Frederick M. Alger, Colonel Phelps Newberry, Harvey Campbell, secretary of the Detroit Board of Commerce; John A. Brown, of T. B. Rayl Co.; Judge Ernest Lajoie, Colonel Heinrich A. Pickert and Frank G. Mitzel.

Monsignor Patrick R. Dunigan, of Flint, Distinguished Service Medal man of the World war, who was chaplain of the 32nd., Division overseas, and is at present chaplain of the Michigan National Guard, with the rank of major, addressed a number of prominent business and professional men at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, last Monday noon in the interest of the endowment fund.

"There is no doubt in my mind but that Detroit and Michigan will oversubscribe their quota for this endowment fund," said Major Dunigan. "The drive is on for this American Legion Endowment fund for the orphans and the disabled service men, not now drawing compensation from some other source. This is a splendid proposition and Detroit and Michigan are going to do their share generously in the interest of these men who were killed and wounded, and their children.

"There are other reasons. We may need an army again. The thoughtful citizen, and the experienced soldier hopes not, but human nature has not changed, and we may need an army again, and the army that can acquit itself most nobly, in the noblest manner of their obligation to this, our wonderful country, is the volunteer army, and as business men we are not going to have the muddle in another great war that we went through recently. I believe we can capitalize a volunteer army of many millions of young men, because the spirit of adventure and romance and sportsmanship is a wonderful thing.

"And, if we may hope for the volunteer soldier in years to come, we must acquit ourselves of our obligation to the men who served in the last war. We owe that much to him. We owe it to him to prove that the gratitude of a republic is a real thing, and that his service has been appreciated, and that the orphan child of his, if he were one of the men who did not come back or the little family of the disabled soldier, is being cared for, that they may be comforted, and be trained as little children are now being trained at the American Legion Billet at Otter Lake, Mich. A group of little children they are enjoying all the comforts, sentiment sympathy and love that they might have enjoyed at home, had their daddy come back from war."

Neff of the National Electric Light Association declared, "we always came up against the same stone wall; that however efficient electrical generation and distribution might be, the small annual consumption of electricity on the farm, outside of irrigated regions, was the primary obstacle. This is an agricultural problem and must be solved by men who are familiar with agricultural practices and tendencies."

Out of this conviction, Dr. White explains, came the present Committee on the Relation of Electricity to Agriculture, the make-up of which includes representatives of agriculture, of the electrical industry and of Federal government departments.

Broad and deep is the purpose of the committee, yet simple to state. It is divided into two heads: First, how service can be supplied to the farmer and what is involved in its establishment. and, second, how services can be utilized by the farmer so that it will be profitable to him.

Fourteen states are investigating the broad question, under the leadership of the national committee of which Dr. White is the director. The experiments are in various stages of development in these different states. [illegible]

M[illegible]. Lee Suffered From All These Troubles, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well

Terre Haute, Indiana.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time and dizzy, had no appetite and could not sleep. I tried different medicines for a year but they did not help me. Then my husband saw the ad. for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and had me take it. I regained my strength and never felt better in my life. It completely restored me to health. I had practically no suffering when my baby boy was born and he is very strong and healthy. I know that the Vegetable Compound is the best medicine a woman can take before and after childbirth for health and strength. I would be willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. J. Lee, Route E, Box 648, Terre Haute, Indiana.

Wild Rose Makes Dainty Confection

Dog roses, sacred to Queen Alexandra, which are now furnishing the most glorious floral feature of the hedge rows in England, possess dietetic merits sadly neglected in these days. Most country housewives know that many dainty preparations can be obtained from the hips of the wild rose, but it is les widely known that a preserve of the blossoms is also employed in village confectionery, as well as among the north Germans.

These flowers are still considered a luxury by the Chinese, and Sir John Davis, describing a feast given to him at Shanghai, mentions a ragout of dog roses dressed whole. He disapproved of the celestial and ambrosial dish, and therein differs from old John Gerarde, who affirms that wild roses are greatly to be desired as a culinary vegetable, "as well as for their virtues and goodness in taste, as also for their beautiful color."—London Post.

Preserving Wild Game

Those who want to see our big game protected commend the state authorities of South Dakota for their conservation of several valuable species of fast-perishing fauna in the state park set apart in the Black hills. Here there are 110 buffalo, 1,000 elk, 2,000 deer, 300 beaver, 400 coons and thousands of game birds. The nominal value of the creatures is $105,000, but as teachers of natural history they are worth incalculably more.

Weak, Noble Creatures

In this world there are thousands of weak, noble creatures who fancy that sacrifice always must be the last word of duty; thousands of beautiful souls that know not what should be done and seek only to yield up their life, holding that to be virtue supreme. They are wrong; supreme virtue consists in the knowledge of what should be done, in the power to decide for ourselves whereto we should offer our life.—Maeterlinck.

"Strictly speaking," said the king, "they didn't choose you. Lord Edmund Troyte did that, he and Procopius Cable between them. There had to be a revolution, of course, and our aristocracy couldn't afford to pay for it. Nor could the patriarch. Revolutions are appallingly expensive things, far more expensive than you'd think. Cable had the money and I'm bound to say he spent it generously. He flooded Lystria with English money to such an extent that the Megalian rate of exchange went up, which of course enraged the Megalians, who had been making a very good thing out of the valuta by paying off their debts in depreciated currency. The Lystrians are becoming actually rich. But neither Cable nor the patriarch nor any of the rest of us could have managed without Lord Edmund Troyte. Without his help we couldn't have got any one to recognize the new king, and then of course we couldn't have had any monarchy."

"I suppose not," said Tommy. "But even yet I don't quite see—"

"That gave Lord Edmund Troyte a sort of right to nominate the king, and— But really they ought to have explained all this to you before you left London."

"Nobody explained anything to me," said Tommy.

"Well, I've explained it all now," said the king. "Lord Edmund Troyte nominated you."

"I'm perfectly certain he didn't. If he nominated any one, it must have been Lord Norheys, and I keep on telling you that I'm not Lord Norheys."

"And I keep on forgetting," said the king. "But that doesn't really matter when we're alone, does it?"

Tommy sat silent for a while. The king had at last made the position clear to him. He saw exactly what Casimir's original mistake had been. He realized that for some reason—very likely because of Miss Temple—the real marquis of Norheys had not arrived in Berlin. But even if he had arrived, he could not have married the princess. Miss Temple's letter had settled that point. Calypso was perfectly determined, and behind her was the terrifying figure of the puritan patriarch.

Why should he not step into Lord Norheys' empty position? Casimir was apparently quite ready to accept any one as king who would seat the princess on the throne beside him. The patriarch had no objection to a curate, so long as he was a respectable curate. And Tommy was perfectly respectable. The head waiter ex-king was delighted to accept him as a son-in-law. So long as he was perfectly straightforward and made his position plain to every one, Tommy did not see that he could be blamed afterward if he accepted a bride and a throne which were almost forced upon him. And, besides—in judging him we must always remember this—he had fallen in love with Calypso.

"The only person who doesn't seem to have been consulted," said Tommy, "is the princess herself."

"Calypso won't raise any objections," said the king, "once the Miss Temple difficulty is removed. She's a good girl, always was. Takes after her mother. You didn't know the late queen, did you?"

"No."

"A thoroughly good woman," said the king. "In fact, the only objection to her was that she was too good, certainly much too good for me. She brought up Calypso with very strict ideas, she and the patriarch between them."

"But I've no reason to suppose she'll marry me," said Tommy.

"Oh, she will," said the king. "The only down she ever had on you was that little muddle-up with Miss Temple. Until she heard of that she hadn't any objection to you at all."

"But that isn't an objection to me," said Tommy. "It's an objection to Lord Norheys."

"Exactly," said the king. "That's what I'm saying. And now that you've cleared up this Miss Temple scandal, there's nothing at all against you that I can see. And I must say that you've cleared it up thoroughly and completely. There's not the smallest vestige of a stain left on your character. I couldn't have believed beforehand that you could have cleared it up so well. I don't see how either Calypso or the patriarch can have a word left to say about it."

"All the same," said Tommy, "I'd like to ask her myself."

"So you shall," said the king. "And you needn't be a bit nervous. Once you've convinced her that you never had anything to do with Miss Temple, she'll be perfectly ready to marry you."

"But I should like to ask her before we get to Lystria. I suppose we're on our way there now."

"You are," said the king. "I'm not. I'm going to see you into your hotel at Breslau and then take the night mail back to Berlin. You will be there for two days at least. Casimir is doing his best, but he can't have arrangements at the schloss made any sooner. You can spend the whole time asking Calypso to marry you if necessary. But I don't expect you'll require more than half an hour."

"Of course, I must see her privately," said Tommy.

"Ah," said the king. "I see your difficulty. That aunt of yours."

"She's not my aunt."

"I meant to say that aunt of Lord Norheys?" said the king. "She looks as if she'd be a little difficult to get rid of. But I'll manage that for you. I'll manage it at once. I'll take Miss Church off to lunch with me in the restaurant car and I'll fix things up so that you and Calypso will have to lunch later. That will give you a clear hour all to yourselves. You ought to be able to explain away Miss Temple in far less than an hour."

Tommy hoped and believed that he would be able to explain to the princess that he was not Lord Norheys, if he got a chance of talking to her. But he remembered the note she had flung at him in the Mascotte. It seemed to him quite likely that she would not allow him to talk to her at all.

"But even if you take Miss Church away," said Tommy, "will the princess talk to me?"

"Of course she will," said the king. "She'll love to. She takes after her mother, and the late queen was almost passionately fond of talking to me, especially about Miss Temple—I mean of course whoever the Miss Temple happened to be at the moment. The number of times she talked to me on that subject would amaze you. And Calypso is exactly like her mother in many ways. I assure you, my dear boy, whatever else you may have to complain of in married life, you'll never have it to say that your wife won't talk to you. And the same thing is true of the patriarch."

CHAPTER XIII

The Princess Calypso, it appeared, was not so fond as her mother had been of talks on uncomfortable and embarrassing subjects.

The king took Janet Church away to the restaurant car. By an exercise of skill and tact of which only a man trained as a king would have been capable, he left Calypso and Tommy behind. They were safe from interruption for an hour. Tommy ought to have been able to explain his position to her. He failed, because Calypso refused to listen to him.

She turned her back on him and stared out of the window. This was discouraging, but Tommy was not going to be defeated by her manner. He took the corner seat opposite her. Calypso immediately got up and crossed to the other end of the compartment. Tommy did not venture to follow her the whole way. He sat down in the middle of the seat opposite to her.

"I hope," he said, "that you will allow me to explain myself, to tell you who I am and what I'm doing here. This letter which you wrote to me—"

He took from his breast pocket the note which Calypso had thrown to him in the Mascotte. She was staring steadily into the corridor outside, and she did not turn her head; but she knew perfectly well what Tommy was talking about.

"I don't want to listen to any explanation," she said, "and I've nothing to say to you except what I said in that letter. Go back to Miss Temple."

"But you must allow me to explain," said Tommy.

Calypso had no answer to give him except a muttered repetition of the words, "Go back to Miss Temple."

"I must say this," said Tommy. "I'm not the man you think I am."

"You're a very heartless and cruel man," said Calypso. "If you weren't heartless and cruel, you wouldn't be breaking Miss Temple's heart. Why won't you go back to her?"

"I can't go back to her, because I've never spoken to her and I don't know who she is."

"How can you say a thing like that when you're deserting her?"

Tommy, in his eagerness to be listened to, had edged his way across the carriage until he sat exactly opposite to Calypso. She crossed the carriage again to get away from him and once more Tommy followed her half way.

"I don't want to worry you," he said, "but I think you really ought to listen to me."

"You are worrying me. You're doing worse, you're persecuting me."

"The last thing in the world I want to do is to annoy you in any way. But for your own sake as well as mine, and for Lord Norheys' sake, and for Miss Temple's sake you ought to listen to me."

"I won't," said Calypso, "and if you're a gentleman you'll go away."

"I'll go away if you like, after you've heard what I've got to say."

"I thought all Englishmen were gentlemen," said Calypso.

"Not quite all. I've met one or two who weren't. And I'm Irish, not English."

"If you won't go away, I must," said Calypso.

She stood up as she spoke, intending to go out into the corridor. But to do that she would have been forced to pass quite close to Tommy. He was leaning forward in his eagerness to make her listen, so she might have to touch him as she passed. She hesitated.

"If you like," said Tommy, "I'll telegraph to Miss Temple and ask her to say that she doesn't know me and doesn't want to have anything to do with me."

"How can she say that, when she wrote to me that she loved you with all her heart?"

She began to push past Tommy. But he proved that he had a gentleman's consideration for her feelings. Rather than allow her to go out into a draughty and uncomfortable corridor, he got up and went there himself. He stayed there smoking unhappily until the king and Janet Church came back from the restaurant car. Then Tommy went off and had his own luncheon. Calypso contented herself with a few biscuits and an apple which Janet Church produced from her bags. Wherever Janet travels she always carries biscuits and apples with her.

The king made himself very agreeable to Janet in the restaurant car, and no monarch in Europe has better manners than he has. Perhaps he had never before exerted himself to be agreeable to a lady of Janet's age and appearance. The result was excellent. Janet was pleased and flattered.

"I am so very glad," he said, "that you are accompanying my daughter to Lystria. I feel that I can rely on you, on your kindness, your discretion, your wisdom. When all is said and done, a young girl cannot have a better companion than an English lady. My dear wife was English."

"I'm Scotch," said Janet.

"My dear wife," said the king, "was half Scotch, and if there's anything in the world to be preferred to an English lady as a companion to a young and impressionable girl, it is a Scotch lady."

A waiter flung three dishes of varied hors d'oeuvres on the table. The king helped Janet tenderly to a sardine, an oily slice of tomato and a small salted eel. Then he ordered a bottle of Burgundy.

"At a time like this—" he said. "After all, marriage is a great occasion in a girl's life. The help and advice of a wise lady a little older than herself—you won't mind my saying a little older, will you?"

"I'm fifty-two," said Janet, "and not in the least ashamed of it."

"I knew you wouldn't be ashamed of it. I could see that at once. Your firm mouth, your clear, far-seeing eyes. Your calm strong outlook upon life, your profound idealism—"

Janet is far less sensible than she looks. She bridled with pleasure at the king's compliments. He filled her glass with Burgundy, and Janet so far forgot herself and her principles as to sip it without saying that all continental water is poison.

"A young girl," said the king, "is apt to take exaggerated views of things which you and I regard as—what shall I say?—not right, certainly not right. But inevitable."

The waiter whisked away Janet's plate, gave her another and dumped an enormous spoonful of omelette on it. She sipped her Burgundy again. The king's manner was caressing. The wine was strong. The omelette was excellent. But it takes more than wine, food and caresses to dull Janet's conscience.

"If you're alluding to that unfortunate young man's entanglement with a London actress—" she said.

"Young men," said the king, "will be young men."

"They ought not to be," said Janet firmly.

"However," said the king cheerfully. "I'm not really nervous about Calypso. She'll get over it after a while. Her poor dear mother always got over it after a while."

"Got over what?"

"Come now," said the king, "you can hardly expect me to answer that. Of course you said you were forty-two, but—"

"Fifty-two," said Janet.

Skis and Snowshoes

Owing to the thick forests of America the snowshoe has been found to be more suitable for use than the ski, which is preferred in less wooded regions. The large, flat surface of the snowshoe furnishes a larger plane of resistance to the soft snow and by distributing the weight of the wearer over a larger surface does not break the brittle crust on top of the snow, which makes progress without snowshoes impossible.

Wife Adds to His Fame

Hepplewhite was one of the eminent furniture finishers and designers who flourished under the reign of the Georges in England, and whose furniture was in vogue about the time of the American Revolution. When he died in 1786 his wife carried on his work and produced other pieces and original designs that were very popular for several decades. Much of the Hepplewhite work was done in mahoganies and in light woods.

Spiders in Amazon Are as Big as Small Rat

A traveler who has recently returned from an expedition into the forests of the Amazon tells that he was much more frightened by the huge spiders he encountered than by the jaguars, according to London Answers. There is certainly something awe-inspiring in his description of a species of Amazon spiders as creatures with long legs, fat, black bodies, about the size of a young rat, and the wickedest, most fiendish eyes imaginable!

These spiders make "trap doors" on the ground, beautifully camouflaged, and so perfectly balanced that they shut by their own weight. Beneath them are tunnels or pits in which the huge spiders watch for their prey.

Another spider is spotted like a leopard and spins a web quite a yard across. The strands of this huge web, suspended between two trees, are so strong and tough that if a small bird flies into them it is unable to escape before the arrival of the spider, which makes short work of its struggles.

Dog Guards Master's Body

After guarding the body of his master, who was drowned in a ditch, until it was found recently, a shepherd dog in Scotland followed the corpse to the morgue, then ran two miles back to the flock of sheep and resumed his tending.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

How Much Are Poor Roads Costing You?

5,000,000 of America's 18,000,000 motor vehicles are recognized as an economic necessity on the farm.

Is your car giving the full efficiency of which it is capable—and at the lowest cost per mile possible?

Not if you are jolting over bumps and ruts. Not if you get stuck in the mud.

In addition to the time you thus lose along the way, you also pay from one to four cents a mile more in gasoline, tire and repair bills than you would pay on permanently paved highways.

Think, too, how many so-called improved roads have gone to pieces within the past few years, thereby piling up huge maintenance and rebuilding costs.

Contrast all this with the record of Concrete Roads—the roads that have repair built out and maintenance built in. Firm, rigid and unyielding, free of bumps, ruts, holes, mud and dust, they are, in every way, the most economical roads.

Tell your highway officials you want more Concrete Roads. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Michigan Horses Win Honors At Ohio Fair

Michigan draft horses, part of the M. S. C. herd, won high honors at the Ohio State Fair last week, the 12 horses shown taking 10 first and four championships. This week the same animals are entered at the State Fair in Detroit, competing again against the best in the country.

The foal of Pervenche, famous M. S. C. Belgian International Winner, won first in its class, causing much comment. It shows that prize winners can reproduce their qualities and at the same time maintain their high standards in the show ring, declared R. S. Hudson, in charge of the college horses. Lelia the champion Percheron mare won first in her class and her foal also won first.

Winners of reserve grand championships were Pervenche, Belgian mare, and Range Line Phoenix, Belgian stallion. Lelia, Percheron mare, won the reserve championship of her breed, and Utelem, Percheron mare, won the junior reserve championship.

The Movie Program

North Adams has rather good good reasons to feel proud of her achievements along the line of cinema screen work for this season, and judging from the crowds of people who have been coming in each Wednesday evening, general satisfaction is the verdict. While the out-door movie industry is somewhat handicapped by the combine, it is possible nevertheless to secure some very good films and such pictures have been exhibited in North Adams from time to time by Bob's Movie Chautauqua. Three machines are on the circuit and constantly going from town to town while one machine is kept here—four in all, so that considerable territory is covered and general satisfaction is expressed in most places where Bob's Movies have been shown. This season the company has exhibited at Allen 12 nights; Montgomery 8 nights: Hanover 10 nights, and at one time had as high as 17 towns on the list.

The circuit reaches up into the neighborhood of Flint, including Augusta, Gaines, Vernon, Ortonville Hartland, Clarkston, Otter Lake, Metamora, and constantly growing

In fact the enterprise is giving encouraging results and bids fair to increase next season. The citizens of Hanover are well pleased with the class of pictures shown and will sign up for another season. Most of these villages will continue the show as long ss the weather is suitable. This week will finish the contract in and around Flint.

Deny That Green Corn Shows Poison Danger

That the apparently widespread belief in Michigan this year that green corn is unsafe for human consumption is entirely without foundation is the statement made here this week by Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at the M. S. C.

The false "notions" about green corn are thought to have arisen from misunderstanding of warnings sent out a year or two ago cautioning farmers against feeding green corn to hogs or horses when the corn was infested with the corn ear worm. All cooked green corn which is not disfigured by the very noticeable blackened worm workings is perfectly safe, according to Professor Pettit.

The quarantine being maintained in southeastern Michigan against the European Corn Borer has also contributed to the general misunderstanding of the situation, it is said. The quarantine is simply to stop the spread of the imported pest and has nothing to do with the "eatability" of the crop.

"We can enjoy our green corn as usual", says Professor Pettit. I know from my correspondence that many people have gotten the idea that corn is dangerous this year, but the fear is entirely without foundation. Our 'national food' has nothing wrong with it.

According to reports James Meeks, Coe Emens and Lemuel Rhodes won the first prize last week at the State Fair for grain judging and their reward will be a free trip to the great International Live Stock Show at Chicago in December. Leland Graham won first in the cow milking contest and his reward is the same. Raymond Laser of Wright won the appointment to represent the State of Michigan at the National Training Camp for Club Leaders at Springfield, Massachusetts. He left for that place last Friday. Hillsdale County Club members cleaned up pretty nearly everything in the state and drew $1,800 worth of prizes, so 'tis claimed.

Friends of Irving Latimer throughout Michigan are now striving to convince the public that he was never guilty of his mother's murder but was convicted upon purely circumstantial evidence and accordingly Latimer has prepared a statement which he is submitting to the papers of the state giving his side of the situation which we are going to publish in full next week. If Irving Latimer has been imprisoned all these years for nothing and is not guilty the State of Michigan ought to be obliged to pay him $500,000 and set him in the best home in Jackson with his taxes paid for life. If it takes thirty-six years to find out whether a man is guilty of murder in Michigan, we need a severe house cleaning.

For many years it has been conceded the Knight engine for autos was one of the most silent and dependable of powers. Now comes the Federal Truck Co., who are building 1½ to 2 tons trucks with the silent Knight engine. Claims made for this engine have been proved. The absence of all valves or cams is the main feature. After this come simplicity of design, with a large number of less parts and no noise when under motion. There is not much chance for carbon to form and the matter of lubrication will appeal to all. The working parts of the Knight are merely two cylinders superimposed outside the explosion chamber proper, and the two outside cylinders move up and down a short distance to open and close the ports. We do not know what becomes of the used Knight cars, but we have never seen that engine worn out.

Death of Frank Sackett

After an illness of several months Frank Sackett died at his home in Jonesville Saturday, September 12. He was born in Horton Sept. 5, 1857 and for many years was a resident of Moscow township.

Fourteen years ago he moved to Jonesville and for a number of years has been a carpenter on the N. Y. C. railroad. Deceased was a member of LaFayette Lodge No. 16 F. & A. M., Jonesville Chapter 8, R. A. M., and Jonesville Council, R. and S. M. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Sackett, a son, Harold, two sisters, Mrs. Nettie Borden of Jackson, Mrs. Frank Rowe, of Moscow, and one brother, James Sackett, of Coldwater.

Funeral services were held Monday in charge of the Masonic fraternity.

Low Cost Temporary Fences

Quickly Erected with "RED TOP" Steel Posts

A GOOD many farmers right around here have found it pays to use temporary fences to provide temporary pasturage and to hog down a part of their corn. This saves the expense of husking, cribbing, reloading and feeding. Rustling for himself does a hog a lot of good aside from this saving.

We recommend "RED TOP" Steel Post as the most economical post for temporary fences. We have sold a lot of them for this purpose. "RED TOPS" are so easily driven with the One Man Driver. The fence wire is quickly attached. Post can be pulled and the fence moved over when new areas are to be cut off. The amount of labor and time required is surprisingly small.

SAVE MONEY

Our advice is to build your new fences and repair your old ones now. Prices on the "RED TOP" Post and fence are unusually low. You can make a real saving if you buy at this time. And fall is the best time to do your fencing, rather than trying to crowd it into the busy season next spring. You have so much other work to do then.

"RED TOPS" are easily and quickly driven no matter how hard and dry the soil. They have made fencing a fall job around here. They have a mighty strong service record behind them in this community. You take no risk when you buy them. We stand behind every "RED TOP" we sell with a guarantee.

Come in right away and get our low prices. If you have never used the "RED TOP," we will show you why we are able to guarantee it. It's the biggest time and money saver we have to offer.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Honolulu Flight Aviators Are Found Alive Near Island of Kauai.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEN hope for their survival had been almost abandoned, the five men who comprised the crew of the Honolulu flight plane PN-9 No. 1 were found on Thursday afternoon, afloat on their plane and all well. Capt. John Rodgers and his four companions had been at the mercy of the sea for ten days when they were picked up, by the submarine R-4 fifteen miles east of the island of Kauai. This was considerably outside of the zone previously searched; the plane had drifted about 200 miles, passing to the north of Oahu island on which Honolulu is situated. Lieutenant Osborne, commanding the submarine that found the aviators, at once notified the naval authorities at Honolulu, and a later message said the crew and plane were being taken to Nawiliwili on Kauai island.

SOMEBODY is due to get a sound thrashing in Morocco within a short time, according to current dispatches. It may be the Riffians, against whom the French and Spanish forces are starting a great offensive squeeze movement whose objective is Adjir, the capital of Abd-el-Krim. Or it may be the Spaniards in the west sector, for it is reported that the Riffians have them almost surrounded at Tetuan and that the capital of the Spanish protectorate is in danger of capture.

At the beginning of the week the Spanish, under the personal direction of Dictator Primo de Rivera, undertook to land a large force of troops at Alhucemas bay near Adjir after thoroughly bombarding the Riffian positions on the hillsides. But they apparently overlooked a lot of machine gun nests, for as soon as the legionnaires started wading ashore from the barges a storm of bullets struck them. They fled back to their boats, leaving some 500 dead and wounded. Next day, however, Rivera successfully landed his forces at another point with the assistance of French naval and air units. Sixteen thousand men were debarked and the heights dominating Adjir were occupied. Meanwhile the French were moving up from the south and the prospect was that the Riffians would be squeezed from their mountain strongholds.

From Alhucemas bay Rivera hurried to Tetuan, calling for all available troops from the Melilla front on the extreme east. He also urged the French to start an offensive in the Ouezzan sector to relieve the pressure in the Tetuan region, where the Riffians had broken through the Spanish line near Arzila and had cut the Ceuta-Tetuan road and railway. The situation there was considered extremely serious by the Spanish commanders.

Colonel Sweeney and other American aviators who make up what is now known as the Sherifian escadrille are fully embarked on their rather inglorious adventure. Already they have made many flights, dropping thousands of tons of explosives on Riffian villages. Their exploits will not arouse general enthusiasm in this country.

THE revolt of the Senussi against Italian rule in Tripoli is gaining in intensity and Mussolini has sent reinforcements of 20,000 troops and 300 airplanes. Rome admits that the Italian forces are being forced back to the coast with rather heavy losses. As has been said before, President Kemal of Turkey is supporting the Senussi, partly because he figures the revolt will embarass the French in Morocco and partly to keep the Italians from aiding Great Britain in the Mosul dispute. Sheik Ahmed, the Senussi chief, is likely to be made caliph of Islam and leader of a general uprising of Mohammedans against Christian domination.

IN OPENING the annual assembly of the League of Nations, Paul Painleve, its honorary chairman and premier and war minister of France, made an eloquent plea for world disarmament, urging the delegates of the fifty-four nations represented to prepare a call for a conference as soon as the European security pact and other regional agreements are concluded. By some this was looked on as another attempt of the league to forestall President Coolidge's plan to call another disarmament conference in Washington, but Mr. Coolidge at once let it be known that his chief concern was that such a conference should be held, that its place did not matter so much, and that he would wait to see if there was any chance for the league conference to materialize.

Paul Loebe, president of the German reichstag, warmly approved of M. Painleve's suggestion but said it did not take the initiative from President Coolidge and he believed the crucial time had come for the latter to carry through his plan.

Delegate Zahle of Denmark made a proposition that if adopted might increase the opposition in America to adhering to the international court of justice. Briefly, he proposed the creation of a special committee of conciliation, officially attached to the world court, to which all states adhering would be obliged to submit "all disuptes without any exception."

THAT quarrel over the Mosul vilayet with its rich oil wells is a hard one for the League of Nations to settle. While Foreign Minister Tewfik Rushdi Bey of Turkey, now in Geneva, is pacific in his talk, the Turks generally are freely predicting war if Mosul is taken from them and given to the British under a mandate. Turkish authorities say: "Even British statistics show that the Arabs are in minority in the district England is trying to declare as Arab. England states there are 785,000 inhabitants in Mosul, with only 185,000 Arabs, but 570,000 Turks. Right is on our side, and also the power to fight a separation of part of the country which is wholly Turkish. We are now trusting to the fairness of the League of Nations."

TWO pieces of interesting aviation news come from Europe. One is that Capt. Roald Amundsen plans to fly over the north polar regions from Spitzbergen to Alaska in a dirigible next year and has obtained an airship from the Italian government. The other tells of the consolidation of sixteen of the European airplane lines under German leadership.

CONTINUED drought and extreme heat during August have reduced the indicated yield of corn by 65,000,000 bushels, according to the government's latest estimates. The official guess now is that the crop will be 2,885,000,000 bushels. As an offset to this there is a gain of 21,000,000 bushels in the indicated spring wheat crop, of 75,000,000 in oats, and of 8,000,000 in barley. Winter wheat and rye remain unchanged. South Dakota showed the greatest reduction in corn crop estimate—42,000,000 bushels. Minnesota and Illinois each lost 9,000,000. Ohio, Kansas and Nebraska each showed big gains over the August estimate.

WHILE Lieutenant Commander Lansdowne and three other victims of the Shenandoah disaster were being laid at rest in the national cemetery at Arlington, Colonel Mitchell continued his attacks on the army and navy air services, inviting court-martial or other discipline, and General Hines, chief of staff, started proceedings that presumably would give Mitchell his desire. Maj. Gen. Eli Helmick, inspector general, was instructed to make an investigation and began by sending Colonel Nugent to Texas to ask Colonel Mitchell if he had been correctly quoted, a necessary step preliminary to possible trial by an army court. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has made no representations to the War department on behalf of the navy. He did, however, reply to one charge made by Mitchell. The secretary said the Shenandoah had not been sent on her western trip in an effort to make up for failure of the polar flight and the Hawaiian flight. A western voyage had been planned months ago, he said, before the Hawaiian flight was arranged and about the same time that the Arctic expedition was agreed upon. Other of the Mitchell charges were denied by army officials, but the rampant colonel reiterated them, and added, "If the War department doesn't like the statements I make, let officials take any disciplinary action they want."

IN THE best of health and thoroughly rested, President Coolidge brought his vacation to a close last week and returned to the White House in Washington, which in his absence had been entirely renovated. Within a few hours of his arrival he plunged again into the business of running the country, holding a cabinet meeting and taking up, among other matters, the distribution of anthracite coal during the strike, the final preparation of the budget estimates and the selection of an ambassador to Japan. It was rumored that Undersecretary of State Joseph C. Grew would be offered the Tokio post. The day he left Swampscott the President received a visit from Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the next house, who told Mr. Coolidge it would be easily possible to pass the tax reduction bill in the house before Christmas. He said it might be possible to cut taxes more than $400,000,000.

NEW YORK'S mud-slinging mayoralty primary campaign is about over, which should be a relief to the metropolis, whatever the outcome. The fight between Tammany and the Hylan-Hearst combination degenerated into a contest between Governor Smith and Publisher Hearst as to which could say the meanest things about the other and the other's candidate. Last week odds of four to one were offered that Walker would beat Hylan for the Democratic nomination, and there were few if any takers. It is taken for granted that Hylan, if defeated, will run as an independent candidate, and on this largely the Republicans base their expectations of electing their nominee, probably Mr. Waterman.

CHAIRMAN AITCHISON of the interstate commerce committee has been holding hearings in Chicago on the question of increasing freight rates on the western railroads. Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and Northwestern, said the unfortunate conditions under which the western railroads are laboring have a direct and depressing relation to the prosperity of the communities served. A reasonable increase in rates will correct this situation, producing greater general prosperity.

Mark W. Potter, one of the receivers of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, proposed there be a 5 per cent increase and that its benefits be pooled among the western roads. Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, opposed this as "socialistic, impossible, unworkable and in effect a long step toward government ownership. However, it was said Charles Evans Highes would support the Potter plan in final arguments before the full commission in Washington.

FRANCE lost one of her most eminent statesmen in the death of Rene Viviani, former premier. He was at the head of the government when the war broke out in 1914, and a year later became minister of justice. In 1917 he accompanied General Joffre to the United States, and in 1921 he came with M. Briand to the Washington conference, in which gathering he was an important figure. He was a moderate Socialist and an anti-clerical, and had much to do with the separation of the church and the state a quarter of a century ago. M. Viviani was premier three times and a minister five times. His ability and his patriotism were of the highest order.

Discovery May Change System of Smelting

Tacoma, Wash.—The lowly clam may be given credit for an invention of great importance to the smelting industry. B. H. Bennetts, a local chemist and assayer, observed that all the clam shells on the beach near the Tacoma smelter were green, as if discolored by copper. He studied the mystery and finally discovered that raw limestone would precipitate the copper in copper sulphate.

Under general smelting processes the raw copper is reduced to liquid copper sulphate. Then iron is added and copper is precipitated and the result is then in shape for final fluxing, limestone being added for the flux.

Thanks to the clam Bennetts learned that iron could be eliminated entirely. The ground limestone is added to the copper sulphate and the precipitate comes forth as copper carbonate and calcium suplhate and is in form to be finally smelted without the addition of any more lime. The process is said to result in a great saving by eliminating iron. It is estimated that the saving will total a cent a pound.

The discovery was made by Bennetts more than two years ago, but only recently he received his patent from the government.

Bennetts, who already has invented various devices and methods used in smelting, says that if his new plan works out as expected he will adopt the clam shell as his official coat of arms.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Petoskey—Announcement made by Jacob Cohn and Harry Schweit, Chicago capitalists, that they will erect a 600-room fireproof hotel on a site on which the Clark Tavern now is located and on adjoining property. Construction will begin next April.

Lansing—Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was approved, 179 to 8, by the Michigan Methodist Episcopal conference here. The conference rejected a proposed amendment providing for the admission of laymen to the ministerial conferences.

Jackson—"I had a headache and was just taking the air," Harry Uptegraff, 23, of Detroit, Michigan State Prison inmate, told guards when he returned to the barracks at the west farm after a posse had searched several hours for him. Uptegraff was sentenced from Detroit for from 2 to 14 years for forgery.

Monroe—At a meeting of the county road commission here the Thompson Paving Construction company, of Toledo, was awarded the contract for the construction of Saline street in the village of Petersburg, bidding $13,696.45. Carl Kiburtz, of Monroe, was awarded the contract for the purchase of $105,000 bonds on the Heisse road, and $57,900 on the town line road.

Escanaba—Chased by a bull she was endeavoring to drive out of her orchard, knocked down and gored, Mrs. William Good, 59, of Harris escaped death only as the result of presence of mind. She crawled under the fence as the bull charged for the second time and escaped with a dislocated shoulder and severe bruise about the face and body.

Muskegon—Mrs. Florence Prince, 21 years old, Grand Rapids balloonist, narrowly escaped death, when she substituted for Mrs. Frank Stewart, a local balloonist, killed in a flight at White Cloud recently. The balloon became entangled when it left the ground and Mrs. Prince fell 50 feet to the ground. The woman suffered painful, but not serious injuries.

Ann Arbor—Altering of the entrance requirements of the University of Michigan, continuation of the elaborate building program outlined by the late President Marion L. Burton and encouragement of college athletics will be sponsored by Dr. Clarence Cook Little, new president of the university, when he takes over his office on September 20, he stated in an interview.

Muskegon—Injuries received in a silo filler explosion were fatal to Walter Paulson, 29 years old, of Fruitport, who died at Hackley hospital. Paulson was directing the work between the engine and filler when pieces of teel let go, striking his back and arms Farmers believe the explosion resulted from an accumulation of gas that wrecked the filler.

Ann Arbor—The new Ecorse road in Washtenaw County, built at a cost of $146,000 by the State highway construction department with prison forces, was opened to traffic Sept. 12. The new highway connects with the Ecorse road in Wayne County at the county line and will provide a direct paved route from Ypsilanti to Detroit only nine-tenths of a mile longer than the Michigan avenue route.

Marshall—Wilmot Jones, 22 years old, son of a broker, held in connection with the death of John (Blackie) Vielkoff, cook for a Grand Trunk Railway construction crew at Battle Creek, was freed by Justice Paschal Hughes after preliminary examination. Vielikoff's body, pierced with six bullets, was found on a lonely road between Bellevue and Marshall August 19.

Lansing—Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, pastor of the Central M. E. church of Detroit, won an indirect approval of his belief and utterances on evolution when a committee investigating similar beliefs of Rev. William H. Phelps, editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate, cleared him of heresy charges. The clearing of Phelps, who printed Rev. Mr. Hough's sermons in his publication, is taken generally by Methodist Episcopal churchmen as assurance that Hough also will be cleared when Detroit conference meets.

Lansing — Representative Republican women from various sections of the state met here and completed organization of the Republican Women's Federation of Michigan. The first step toward such an organization was taken at the Republican State Convention at Grand Rapids in May, 1924. Then at Port Huron last June at a meeting advertised as a reception to Mrs. A. T. Hirt, vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee, a tentative constitution was adopted and officers were elected.

Houghton—Dr. William O. Hotchkiss, chairman of the Wisconsin state highway commission, has accepted the presidency of the Michigan College of Mines here, according to an announcement by the college board. He has returned to his home in Madison to wind up his business, preparatory to returning here to assume his new duties when the college fall term opens. Dr. Hotchkiss succeeds Dr. F. W. McNair, who was killed in a railroad accident in Illinois a year ago. Dr. Hotchkiss conferred with the board of control.

Houghton—Passenger travel through the Keweenaw waterway reached its peak for the 1925 season in August, according to the monthly statement by George H. Banks, engineer in charge of freight and passengers carried. A total of 8,160 passengers were carried through the waterway in August compared with 6,378 in July this years, and 7,283 in August last year. Freight shipments through the waterway in August this year amounted to 183,363 tons against 124,656 tons in July, 1924, and 142,621 in August last year

Port Huron—Miss Detroit VIII, Gar Wood's sweepstakes contender, which was to race in Detroit, capsized just east of the north end of Walpole island. J. H. Stoneham, whose home is in Detroit, was drowned.

Port Huron—According to a mortgage document filed with the register of deeds, the steamer Tashmoo and Tashmoo Park have been mortgaged to the Detroit Trust Co. The steamer and park belong to the White Star Navigation Co. and the purpose of the mortgage is to protect a bond issue.

Owosso—Plans have been drawn for a children's ward to be added to Memorial hospital here at a cost of between $6,000 and $8,000. It will be one of the most modern in the United States. Private donations will finance it. A contagious disease building, just completed, will be opened September 17.

Lansing—Surplus and assets of the Ford Motor company without subsidiaries have reached $644,624,468, according to the corporation tax report made public by the department of state. Other Michigan properties of Henry Ford will bring his total wealth at least to the billion dollar mark, corporation diversion attaches expect.

East Lansing—The proportion of girls to men students at the Michigan State College which has been steadily increasing for the last few years will probably take a big jump, this year, according to H. H. Halladay, secretary. To care for the increased enrollment expected three new dormitories are being fitted out at the college.

Iron Mountain—The mining of yellow ochre may become a profitable industry in Dickinson county. John Jacobson and George Nygard, farmers at Metropolitan, have started working it on their farms. Shafts are being sunk and if the enterprise proves satisfactory, it is planned to obtain capital to fully develop the industry. Yellow ochre now is bringing about $16 a ton. It is used in the manufacture of paint.

Albion—The Methodists of Albion settled to the satisfaction of all concerned the question of lay representation in the annual conference when four prominent churchmen debated the issue before a large crowd. Dr. D. D. Martin and R. T. Baldwin defended the affirmative, and Drs. Samuel Dickie and W. W. Diehl, upheld the negative. Dr. John L. Seaton, president of Albion college, presided The audience acted as judges and gave their decision in favor of the negative.

White Cloud—Mrs. George Stewart, 40 years old, of Muskegon, who has thrilled thousands of Michigan folk, during the several years she has plied her trade of balloonist and parachute jumper, provided her last thrill here, when she dropped more than 1,500 feet to her death before a throng of 1,200 villagers and farmers, gathered for the annual soldiers' reunion and homecoming Mrs. Stewart's husband and her son, 12 years old, witnessed the tragedy.

Lansing—Two new offices are planned for Detroit by Secretary of State Charles J. DeLand, in order to handle the increasing business of his department. For the sale of auto licenses next January an office will be opened in Convention hall, which will have sufficient capacity to take care of the bulk of the licensing transactions. In addition DeLand will open an office at once at 119 Dime Bank building to handle the general business of his department.

Jackson—The first units of Michigan's new Jackson prison, to be the largest state penal institution in the country, larger than Joliet or Sing Sing, will be completed this fall, and work soon will be in progress on the first of the huge cell-blocks designed to accommodate 5,180 prisoners. These units, Harry L. Hulburt, former warden, and now superintendent of construction, explained will be the new dye plant and the towering concrete wall that will surround the 64 acres within the prison.

Grand Rapids — Light, noiseless street cars which can be operated at half the cost of regular equipment and have the same carrying capacity are being experimented with here in an effort to meet motor bus competition. The experiments are closely followed by the American Electric Railway association. It is contended that if the cars prove practical, street railways will be able to operate more profitably than buses, and will pdovide more rapid and comfortable transportation.

Pontiac—Stealing automobiles became passe here with the first report of a stolen airplane turned in to Sheriff Frank Schram. Harry Brooks, youthful aviator, reported the theft, the plane belonging to his friend, Hoyt Brown, of Birmingham. The plane had been taken to a flying field near here for repairs. In order to fly away with the plane, Brooks told the sheriff, it was necessary for the theif to replace certain parts of the magneto and to fill the tanks with gasoline, oil and water.

Detroit—The Packard Motor company has filed suit against the city of Detroit in circuit court seeking the return of $74,497.87, declared to be due because of excess taxes levied against the company. The motor concern paid a tax of $265,609.83 under protest, alleging that the law under which the assessment was levied is unconstitutional, and that the difference, $74,497.87, between the old tax rate and the present one, should be returned. Under 1915 tax regulations the company would have been taxed a total of $191,111.96

Monroe—After all the testimony had been introduced in the circuit court here in the case of J. J. Corcoran, of this city, against Fred M. Longnecker, asking for an alleged partnership accounting and for the appointment of a receiver, an amicable adjustment was reached whereby Mr. Corcoran sold out his interest in the business to Mr. Longnecker, who will continue the business. The business was established six years ago for the manufacture of paper dishes. The concern has so prospered that the daily output was 400,000.

Tells Why He Can Now Eat Hearty

"A letter which I read in the paper about Carter's Little Liver Pills fitted my own case so closely that I could not help trying them and am very happy I did." So writes Mr. Frank J. Trumbull of Jersey City, N. J., whose letter goes on to say, "I had heard about Carter's Little Liver Pills for years but never knew they helped overcome poor appetite and sour stomach, until I read about another man in the same plight who took Carter's with good results. I tried them and can honestly say that they freed me of nasty gas on stomach, so that I can now eat without getting bilious, and they improved my appetite fully 100%. You can rest assured that from now on I will boost Carter's Little Liver Pills whenever I can."

MEN'S DRESS

By W. A. Churchill, Secretary

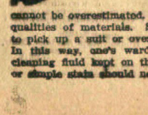
BORN TAILORS GUILD

Taking Care of Your Clothes

NO MAN can ever be well dressed who does not take proper care of his clothes. Even the man who prefers to wear them hard and replace them often will find he cannot be well groomed without giving a certain amount of attention to the upkeep of his apparel.

The average man, however, buys his clothes with a view to getting good service and having them look well during their entire reign. For this reason he buys good materials, conservative styles. The dash of color and the note of originality can be secured in the accessories—socks, ties and belt that can be discarded when out of style.



Plenty of changes is one secret of getting full returns from your clothing investments. It is poor economy to put on an everyday suit and wear it constantly and the same applies to shoes, hat and gloves.

The suit that has been worn all day is as much entitled to a good night's rest as is its owner. It should be put on hangers, and, if possible, hung out in the open and not shut up in some airless closet. Shoe trees take only a second or two to slip in and are excellent in preserving the shape of the shoe.

The value of frequent cleaning and pressing cannot be overestimated. Dirt is one of the greatest menaces to the wearing qualities of materials. Some men leave a standing order with the cleaner to pick up a suit or overcoat a week at the same time that he returns one. In this way, one's wardrobe is kept constantly in condition. A bottle of cleaning fluid kept on the bathroom shelf is a necessity. A spot of grease or simple stain should never be allowed to stand overnight.

The Bible's Place In The Schools

It is not so much a question as to the way the Bible shall be taught as it is question as to whether we shall have any religion taught in our educational system. The danger of using the Bible in some form or other in our public schools is nothing compared with the danger of not using it at all. There are in the United States today over 8,600,000 Catholic youth under twenty five years of age, and of this number over 6,800,000 are not in any religious schools. There are in the United States today over 42,800,000 Protestant youth under twenty five years of age, and out of that number over 27,200,000, or 66., percent are not enrolled in any religious schools. A majority of all these youths are enrolled in some sort of day school.

A new definition of education is being urged by the best minds in the educational world today. The things that the ordinary text-books do not teach and that are not touched in class room examinations are beginning to be recognized as the great things in a well-rounded mind and well developed heart.

A definition of education has been given by Dr. Randall J. Condon, Superintendent of Schools in Cincinnati, and it is commended to those teachers who have been laying the emphasis on the acquisition of facts. It is so good and so new in many ways that it may well be committed to memory:

"Courage, faith, hope, kindness perseverance, punctuality, regularity, accuracy, industry, and application; honor, truth, integrity; sincerity and simplicity; love of work and pride in work well done; unselfish service, sympathy; self control and self reliance; duty and obedience; reverence for God, for each other, and for all his lowly creatures."

Dr. Condon says, "These—the moral and spiritual values of life we believe, are the fundamentals of education."

And we believe he is right. By all means let us have more religion and morals in our educational system, and less emphasis on the mechanical and material things. And there is a national rising along this line that is the most hopeful sign we have seen in decades for the development of our youth.

It looks to me as if the United States were getting ready to write a new chapter in its educational life. Russia is writing a chapter in its educational scheme that starts with the teaching of all youth under sixteen that there is no God, and that religion is a thing to be hated and feared. The Uuited States will have to do something with its program of education to take care of the morals and ethics and behavior of its millions of youth who are getting no religious training in the home or from the State.

I believe that the Bible, in its substance of teaching, freed from all sectarian and theological bias, can be taught with safety in our public schools, and that it ought to be and will be. And the time can not come too soon for some of us who believe that education without religion is the greatest blunder of the human race.

General Lincoln Andrews Outlines Enforcement Plans

In an address at Chautauqua, General Lincoln C. Andrews stated that he believed the agencies of prohibition enforcement hereafter are going to be kept clear of politics.

Fresh from the task of reorganizing the whole system of clamping down on bootlegging, General Andrews addressed the Chautauqua audience with a frankness and a confidence in the success of the task he faces that won a ready response. He told how the new organization is intended to operate. Nothing he said convinced the audience so firmly of the coming triump of law enforcement as the evident honesty and practical wisdom, and hard-hitting character of the man himself.

He assigned to the general public a large part of the task of enforcing prohibition. "Because," he said, "you never can drive a law down the throats of those who do not believe in it." The people who had the foresight to line up against a social evil and prohibit it by law cannot turn over to the police force of the United States the whole task of its enforcement, but must keep on making public opinion with the same effectuality as before the Eighteeth Amendment became effective.

General Andrews made a thorough analysis of the prohibition situation. "The prohibition laws made it unlawful to supply drinks to those who still wish to buy them he said. "But the demand continues, and thus there has grown up the business of supplying this market. It is necessarily an outlaw business and can be conducted only through bribery and corruption. It is this bribery which makes bootlegging the serious menance it has become to the stability of society, business, and government. It is a real enemy of society and its elimination is the main objective of the law enforcement agencies of government."

Two ways exist for wiping out the liquor business, he pointed out The market can be eliminated or the supply can be shut off. Reducing the market is chiefly a matter of education. The Federal program against liquor is especially directed against shutting off the supply.

Troopers Spare Life Of Moonshiner

West Virginia State Police do not shoot unless they have to and that's why two moonshiners got away from a detachment led by Corporal Harry C. Myers, in Kanawha county, recenty. It would have been a simple matter to have brought the men down, as they were within easy range, but Superintendent R. E. O'Connor has impressed upon his men that it is not within their jurisdiction to impose the death penalty, or even maim a person, who may be suspected of a crime.

Private N. T. Sites and D. W. Harper, a federal prohibition agent accompanied Corporal Myers into Chappell Hollow to search for the still, and they soon found two barrels of mash near the site on which the still was supposed to be located The men were known to be operating a portable plant, and accordingly the raiders waited for the moonshiners.

The troopers had to lay in the wet grass for three hours, which accounts for their inability to over take the raiders, and finally two men appeared. One carried two buckets and another one large bucket, and they separated to approach their still from different sides of a hill. The raiders decided on a hasty mode of procedure, but one of the officers slipped in the wet grass and his man fled. The other was covered by Corporal Myers, and while he kept his hands in the air and muttered incessantly "I won't do anything boys," he continued to back away and finally made a spurt for liberty, just as his companion drew a gun. It was unfortunate for the second man, as it is believed he was shot in the hip the minute he "threw down" on the trooper—and that was a distinct overt act—but both men escaped as no attempt was made to kill them.

However, the troopers know both their men and federal warrants will be issued, as the raiders found a 30 gallon still, 180 gallons of mash, and much still equipment —State Trooper.

Spanking And Discipline

Elbert H. Gary said, in the course of an interview, that he never spanked his children to discipline them, but recalled that he once locked his daughter in a closet for a misdeed and kept her there until she said she was sorry.

He compared this plan of rearing children with that of the past generation, and remembered that he once was spanked by his father for saying "damn."

Mr. Gary does not condone spankings, but the very fact that he has a distinct recollection of his treatment when he used the profane word in the presence of his father, indicates that the methods of his father had a most wholesome effect

There are undoubtedly occasions where nothing will serve the purpose like a spanking. A little more of it might be used to advantage in enforcing discipline in the present generation.—Pittsford Reporter.

When an Iowa farmer complained that the pheasants were eating his corn, the game department killed two of the birds, examined their crops, aad found 200 cutworms—and no corn. Almost without exception when the Scientists investigate such cases they will find the same result. The farmer owes his crop to the feathered police that keep down the bugs, insects and worms. With continuing slaughter of every form of bird life, the insect loss will be heavier and farm work harder. The nation could train an army of riflemen in a comparatively short time, but it couldn't in a century restore the bird armies that are the farmers' allies in raising food to feed the country.

The Precociousnes of Youth

If you should happen to notice these days the extreme swiftness of our young people don't think anything wrong, since it is the natural trend of the times. The other day we heard a certain man remark that when he was a boy things were different. He is quite right—things were different. He probably did not see any such thing as manual training in his little district school. He never knew what it was to see a young woman in a bathing suit that was not a suit, but a mere postage stamp. He never saw a vaudeville with the extreme artful plays which are put on today. His imagination was not helped to run riot by lascivious pictures thrown upon the cinema screen. He was not allowed as a boy to remain out with his best girl over night at some road house where they happened to be delayed on account of a "busted" tire. He did not expect to see the human beings of this earth flying through the air as a bird. He supposed that people who heard sounds out of the air without even a wire up, were simply "luny" and if they should have told him that scarcely a horse drawn vehicle would run the roads he would have "poohed" the idea.

He is now living in an age of wondrous happenings and no one knows what will turn up next. It is not at all improbable the chemist will soon be able to manufacture some kind of life from mere matter; wars will soon be fought in the air with poison gases; People will make long journeys by air and send telegrams home by air while they are above the clouds. There will not be much use for the old top buggy in which he did his sparking, except as a relic for the museum. Horses will be used purely for trotting purposes and for fanciers. It will be possible to freeze a man's body into a block of solid ice and lay him away for ages then thaw him out again and let him enjoy a long pleasant life.

Everything is topsy turvy and it is no wonder the good old soul of the pioneer is somewhat shocked. But his shock will soon wear off or else he will pass into the mold of the cemetery. Because all things that are old must pass away, and he is no exception. He must not look too sharply at what he would term precociousness among our younger generation since they are the product of scientific changes in our social life. The day is not far distant when it will not be considered wrong to appear in public theaters as the conscience of the actress dictates, (sans clothes) and not one remark of derision will be made—it will be taken as a matter of common occurrence. If the weather becomes too hot the human family will dress accordingly, and it is not unlikely the costumes will be very brief. Our students in the high school will be so wise in physical and sexual matters that they will be able to accomplish many stunts heretofore unknown and with absolutely no danger of being ridiculed—for such it seems is the verdict of the masses.

Within a decade electric washing machines, ironers, water heaters, mixing devices, refrigerators and similar power appliances will be as much a part of the house as the modern bathroom, so the scientists claim. "While the modern office is filled with labor-saving devices, only 18 per cent of the homes are so provided. The women are required to do the same kind of drudgery their grand-mothers did, all because the home is within the category of the "same old thing in the same old way. The development of consumer-owned power companies which is the real public ownership, will bring about the further use of electricity in the home."

College Horses Take Honors at State Fair

The draft horse string at the M. S. C., already known as one of the strongest herds in the country won high honors at the Michigan State Fair last week, practically duplicating the record made at the Ohio State Fair the week before.

The twelve horses shown at Detroit won eight first places in their classes and took seven championships. Pervenche, International champion Belgian mare, and Leila star Percheron mare, won their classes again, while their foals also took first places in the juvenile section. The competition in the Belgian classes at Detroit is said by R. H. Hudson, in charge of the college herd, to have been the stiffest in years.

Cattle and sheep entered in the competitive classes by the college also placed high in their various groups. Another string of draft horses was shown by M. S. C. at the West Michigan fair, which was held the same week.

Economy

NOT SHOWN BY FACTS

Recently a group of Hillsdale ministers agreed, that the only real Christian in the world to day, is the Hindu Ghandi, who has said that he is ready to join the church when its members show their belief in the seventh chapter of Matthew.

The movement begun in Heathen India for practical Christianity may yet regenerate America, otherwise hypocracy will cause us to become a most depraved nation.

"Government Economy" and "Farm Relief" have been fed to us daily. Not one paper of general circulation has dared to give us the truth until forced to do so by such personalities as Senator Wheeler, Senator Couzens and General Mitchell.

What has happened to these men? Why are they silent? Senator Wheeler is busy defending indictments.

Senator Couzens is busy defending a $10,000,000.00 Tax levy. General Mitchell has been demoted in rank pay and influence since he pointed out, that whereas the people had been taxed to the extent of some hundred millions, the army and navy combined had only 20 servicable airplanes as a result.

The looting of the Naval Oil Reserves and the Treasury itself, to the extent of something like $3,000,000,000.00, under the present Secretary, according to the investigations of Senator Couzens, shows the kind of economy that is being practiced.

I am powerless to present these facts to the people of the Third District without the financial support of those interested. Free Newspaper publicity is limited, and it costs money to buy advertising space.

Give what you can for your own sake. Remember if we win you will be repaid a thousand times. Give as religiously as you give to your church, and we will not lack for funds.

Farmers are compelled to work 16 hours a day for a bare existance while money pours into the coffers of the rich, under the workings of the Fordney MaComber Tariff.

Never at any time or in any country has there been a period of Political Depravity, equal to the present, in enormity, subtilety and shrewdness.

THE MELLON PLAN

Millions of slush funds are used to indict, bribe, intimidate, coerce, extort from, and discredit Democrats and Republican Dissenters in the U. S. Senate, in order to secure a majority favoring the Mellon Plan, which we are told is to be forced through the next meeting of Congress under a new name.

Such a reduction would throw upon the working classes, the burden of paying One Hundred Billioins in pensions alone, based on Civil War experience.

Surtaxes should be increased rather than diminished for two important reasons, first because enormous holdings of the Earth's resources deprive the people of their just inherited rights; second, such taxes tend to prevent further concentration of wealth, threatening the life of the Republic, by money control of elections, such as we have witnesses since the Newberry campaign of 1918, without a break in any election held since.

TOWNSHIP MEETINGS

Even the Farm Bureau, financed in the beginning by the Coalition Committee, supporters of Senator Newberry, which was later on paid up, and repudiated by an indignant membership, is now asked to join in the Wall Street propaganda to tax bonds for public improvements. Such a tax would make road building cost more and throw a heavier direct tax upon the people for all kinds of public improvement. It would, however, allow a reduction of surtaxes on enormous individual incomes, which if permitted to increase will destroy Republican Government, and establish an autocracy in America.

Any man who allows himself to be lulled by "Economy" propaganda when the real facts of graft and exploitation are easily accessable in reports of Senate investigations, is un-American, un-Christian, is committing the unpardonable sin of the Bible which is the sin against the Holy Spirit, struggling to make "Thy Kingdom Come."

MONEY TO LOAN

5 Per Cent Interest

In addition to both forms of Government Loans, the county has recently been approved for loans by several large Life Insurance Companies.

Because of recent foreclosures, loans must be made on lower valuations. Hence, farmers need small amounts more than the loan granted by the Insurance Company, to pay off present mortgage and take advantage of the lower rate of interest. For the small amount needed, some are willing to pay 10% interest, secured by deed to the farm subject to 5% mortgage, and contract for repurchase with added security, if desired, on stock and tools.

Amounts desired from $100 up. For $100 you can have a title to a 40 acre farm subject to 5% mortgage and contract to repurchase with 10% interest on your investment. Why send money away when such opportunities are afforded at home, at higher interest and better security. Farm prices will be high for many years. A world food shortage and restored credit abroad will make high prices for corn, wheat, oats, and all grains which Hillsdale County farmers can raise during the coming season.

We have many opportunities to buy farms at bargain prices. The outlook for farming is very promising. There are still many idle farms. Farm help is wanted. Farmers can afford to pay better wages this season because of the better prices now afforded for all kinds of grain, which will continue for many years to come.

Grade milch cows from Hillsdale County are said to be selling in some parts of New Jersey at a premium of $25 per head over those shipped from adjoining counties in Michigan. There is a big demand for money in Hillsdale county to take care of this profitable industry. Live stock on many farms is worth as much as the farm itself. 5% loans can be made for not more than 50% of the value of the farm exclusive of buildings. Hence, loans for larger amounts must be made on the security of buildings and live stock at higher rates of interest.

GOVERNMENT LOANS

Never at any time or in any country has there been a period of political depravity comparable to that in which this country is now plunged.

Slush funds are not measured in mere millions accounted for by campaign committees, but by Billions expended by the same interests which contribute to such campaign funds.

LaFollette, Brookhart, Couzens and other Republican dissenters who have exposed graft are pictured as self seekers and enemies of the Constitution.

I believe in Government Loans, but there is no good reason for paying 2% on Postal Savings and charging the farmers 6% for the best form of security for such savings, while Insurance Companies are allowed to loan at 5% with no greater expense for negotiating the loan than the average borrower on a so called Government Loan.

Enlist with the Dissenters in the Republican Primary Campaign of 1926. Let me send you a concise typewritten summary of recent investigations, also sample copies of various co-operating publications.

Give what you can weekly for your own sake. Remember if we win you will be repaid a thousand fold.

Government more than labor determines what each of us shall possess and enjoy. Advantages to be derived from recent inventions may be completely set at naught by political depravity. Besides you are contributing to a great moral cause, "The New Day" of peace on Earth and good will toward men.

Mail contributions. There will be no charges for literature mailed to you.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE

It is not sufficient to have an Abstract. Getting an Abstract is usually the beginning of your troubles, because the Abstract shows errors difficult to correct, and more and more difficult, as people die, who could make the necessary affidavits to correct the title.

One man came to me to get a loan, when he didn't need the money. He was buying a farm and took the cheapest way of getting expert opinion of the title on the farm he was buying. He purchased 6% Bonds with money received from his loan.

One man lost the sale of a farm to an Ohio buyer, because he had neglected to fix up his title, while people were living who could make some necessary affidavits to correct his abstract.

Heirship claims never outlaw. Fifty years ago, estates were commonly settled by quit claim deed, but frequently records do not show that all the heirs signed off.

The fact that your family have owned the farm fifty years is likely to make you more trouble than if you had recently purchased it, because there are some mortgages which have not been properly discharged, and people are dead who could have executed a proper release.

A Good Bull Story

A traveling man with torn clothes and a crushed hat sat in a country hotel expounding upon the necessity of compulsory automobile liability insurance maintained by the state to protect the public from damage done by automobiles. His clothes had been torn, his car wrecked and his life endangered by a driver with no assets.

A farmer in the corner grocery store, with a bloody nose and a broken buggy whip in his hand, was cussing his neighbor Jones for allowing a bull to run loose on the highway to frighten his team, cause a runaway, upset his load of berries and nearly kill him.

Jones was financially irresponsible but nobody thought of suggesting a law that all owners of bulls should be required to carry compulsory state liability insurance to protect the public from the dangers of such animals. Yet hardly a day passes that one does not read of some person or animal being gored to death by an enraged bull.

Our present laws provide for collecting damages from people whose acts cause injury or loss to others. If persons who are liable are financially insolvent the injured party cannot secure compesation. The same law applies to automobile accidents as to bull accidents or to any other kind of accidents.

Why should the automobile owner be made an exception to the rule in regard to compulsory automobile insurance in order to provide against a possible insolvent driver? Why should the state be put into the business of insurer? The whole proceeding is just another step toward socialism. People thoughtlessly argue in favor of this type of compulsory insurance supported by a state fund, who would not for a minute consider such a proposition if they understood it in all its ramifications. The traveling man and the bull story are everyday examples.

The "Daddy" of Them All

What is claimed to be the largest and most powerful electric locomotive in the world, is in use on a railroad in Virginia and unless figures lie considerably this giant is destined to be the largest for several years. It is practically three units in one coupled permanently together, forming an engine 152 feet in length, and 1,726,000 pounds in weight, capable of exerting 7,125 horse power.

The three units make it possible to negotiate curves handily.

Each unit is equipped with 12 large drive wheels hooked three tandem as in common steam locomotives, making in all 36 large drive wheels, while each unit has two trucks and two trailers, making all 48 large and small wheels under the engine.

Electric power is supplied to this wonderful engine by an overhead trolley carrying from 11 000 to 22,000 volts. This leads to a transformer which steps down the current to a comparatively low voltage where is is supplied to the 3-phase motors. The whole mechanicism is under control of the one motorman in the front cab. It is claimed for this machine that its dragging power for a train is comparatively unlimited. At last reports Henry Ford was still busy with his big electric engine at Dearborn and nothing has yet been learned as to what he intends to do with it, but it is presumed he will install in on the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton to move heavy freights in and out of Detroit. Mr. Ford has laid claim to having absolutely the largest electric engine in existence but he will have to yield prestige to the Virginian.

The Corbett-Fitzsimmons Fight

A few of our readers will remember back to the days of the great Fitzsimmons—Corbett bout which took place in March 1897, and will also recollect it was pulled off at Reno, Nevada, since that wild and woolly state was one of the few in the country which would allow such a Roman holiday. James J. Gorbett was then in the height of his boxing fame and was known as the quickest man on his feet, who followed the profession, but was probably no better man than his opponent, Robert Fitzsimmons, though somewhat shorter in stature. When the two men faced each other in the arena "Bob" weighed 156½ pounds and Corbett a little more.

They fought fourteen rounds of one of the hardest battles ever staged, and although "Gentleman Jim" was supposed to be the most scientific man of the two, he was knocked down and out—completely whipped. Fitzsimmons was examined by a physician directly after the fight and the only blemish on his entire body was a red spot over one kidney, where one of Corbett's undercuts had landed. His profits from the transaction amounted to $15,800, while to day any such prize fight would net the winner right around a half million dollars. While Corbett was much the best man at the beginning, his endurance was no match for the iron constitution of the freckled Australian.

It is claimed the two men had been enemies personally for some time, and had insulted each other in various ways, and made threats, also refused to recognize each other at the ring-side.

The very latest development in aeroplane engines is designed for the United States Flying Division It uses absolutely no water for cooling but the cylinders are air-cooled thus doing away with a large proportion of the resistance in front. The new engine has nine cylinders arranged radially like the spokes of a wheel around the crank shaft, and is being installed in place of the 400 horse power Liberty motors previously used by the government, and is said to out-class them in speed and other ways. The noses of the new planes are very pointed, making for more speed than formerly. They develop 450 horse power with 285 pounds less weight, and climb at the amazing speed of 12,400 feet in 14 minutes.

State Farm Women Enter Show Game

Farm women from eight Michigan counties made a successful entry in the show game last week, putting on a special series of exhibits at the West Michigan Fair, Grand Rapids, which attracted widespread attention.

The exhibits, which represented various phases of household management projects carried out under home economics study, were prepared by the women themselves, a delegation of two from each county being in attendance all through the fair to explain the work.

Washtenaw, Lenawee, Kent Branch and VanBuren counties showed clothing exhibits, including demonstrations and lectures on sewing and tailoring subjects. Allegan and Ionia counties stressed household management, especially kitchen arrangements, refinishing furniture, etc. Ottawa, the eighth county, took a nutritional or food subject for its exhibit.

The showings made by the county women were part of a general display arranged to illustrate state wide work of the home economics extension program at the M. S. C.

Bean Crop Outlook Said Not So Good

That extensive damage from disease and drought during the past few weeks have affected the bean crop outlook in the state, causing hopes for an unusually large crop this year to dwindle, is the opinion of Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the M. S. C.

"The blight damage extends throughout the central part of the bean district and to its most northern limits," says Professor Cox. At the M. S. C., it is estimated that yields of 'increase' fields there have been reduced 25 per cent by blight. Many neighboring fields show much greater reduction in yield.

In Midland, Bay, Arenac, Gladwin, and Sanilac counties, anthracnose has occurred and is causing considerable yield reduction,

An unusually large acreage was planted in Michigan and the crop started off with great promise. Heavy dews followed by hot weather during the past few weeks, however, have been ideal for the development of bean blight. Just at the time of pod filling, blight made its appearance, causing leaves to fall from plants, and many fields failed to develop fully podded plants.

In general, early crops of beans that have been threshed to date have not come up to expectations, The later harvested crops will suffer even greated reduction due to drought disease.

PROGRESS IN RURAL ELECTRIC ACTIVITIES

Iowa Vies With Minnesota in Thorough Methods Used—News From Other States.

In more than a dozen states, from one end of America to the other, the question of making electric service available to the American farmer is being studied, with the aid of practical experiments, in a painstaking and encouraging manner. Steady progress is to be noted, most of the states investigating the problem in their own way, but all seeking to devise a practical economic program which will meet the needs of both the farmers and the power companies.

Iowa's Rural Community

A rural community for electrical development has been established by Iowa at the town of Garner. This community is termed a field laboratory by the investigators. Three rural electric service lines have been built out of Garner, running in different directions. These lines cover a total of 63 miles and serve a total of 39 customers.

Already a preliminary survey has been made covering all of the 39 farms, but a certain twelve farms have been picked out for special experiments with electricity as applied to various kinds of farm equipment and farm-house appliances. A state rural electric committee is conducting this whole investigation.

Practical Work in Illinois

Similar activites have been started in Illinois, where there is also a field laboratory, located near Tolono, and involving ten farms. Several electrical and agricultural interests in Illinois are co-operating, with the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois as the guiding head.

One of the Illinois electric light and power companies has built a service line seven miles long in Champaign county. Farms varying from 75 to 600 acres will be served from this line, and will represent every type of farm enterprise. The practical working out of this line will be carefully studied.

Oklahoma Starts Study

Oklahoma has taken active steps to grapple with the farm-electric problem, the sentiment of a recent meeting of interested parties being that "general rural electrification is an immediate progressive necessity."

A special study committee has been organized to recommend experimental work in Oklahoma.

Sentiment in New York

The organized electric light and power companies of New York have just held a conference at which the prevailing sentiment was that the utilities of the state have an obligation to develop electric service for the farm, "because the average New York state farm is both a home and an industry."

Although there is no experimental rural electric line in operation in New York state, several large electric utilities are extending lines to serve the farmer in whatever way it can profitably be done. It was the opinion that electricity should first be introduced to the farm through the farm household, followed by the development of electric power in farm work.

Making Survey in Ohio

A survey has been started in Ohio, having for its object the electrification of farms and rural communities in that state. The Ohio state rural electric committee is conducting this preliminary investigation, which will cover most of the 250,000 farms in the state. At present about 33,000, or 12 per cent. of the farms of Ohio use electricity.

Following the survey now being made, the committee intends to select an Ohio community having fifteen or twenty farms, and to make an intensive study of how electricity may be applied to typical farm processes as operated on those farms. These farms will then be electrified and the study of farm operations by electricity will be made, thus showing the situation without electricty and with electricity.

Minnesota Still Enthusiastic

In Minnesota, where the first extensive farm electric experiments were inaugurated at Red Wing, activity continues in that community. A great deal of valuable data is being accumulated as to how the farmer can use electricity, and the farmers themselves are finding out much about the economic problem of the power companies.

Some of the electrical appliances used on the Red Wing farms have been the occasion of community gatherings, as was the case when the electric range was demonstrated. A huge dinner was cooked in the range, comprising, among other viands, two ten-pound hams, two angel cakes, an omelet, a broiled steak, asparagus and peas, these articles being served as a buffet luncheon to the men and women who came from miles to see the electric range at work. The demonstration, with questions and answers, did not conclude until midnight—and it was right in the middle of the haying season, too.

The states where the largest number of farms are so far using electricity to a greater or less extent appear to be Iowa, Illinois, California, Oregon, Washington, New York, and the Dakotas. California is in a class by itself, however, because of the immense amount of electric power used in that state for irrigation.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March. A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savinge Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty-four hundred dollars ($2,400.00)and of interest thereon, amountingto two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610] and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy ths amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage providsd. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit; the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

—18—

"Even so," said the king, "you can scarcely expect me to answer that question in detail. Even at the age of forty-five, if you really are forty-five—"

"Fifty-two."

"At any age," said the king, "such confessions are embarrassing, embarrassing for both of us. Besides, it isn't only with Calypso that I want you to use your influence. There's the patriarch. Do you know our patriarch?"

"I hope to. I'm going to Lystria in order to enlist his sympathies in our great movement."

"And I'm sure you'll succeed," said the king. "Our patriarch is full of sympathy with all good causes, and I'm certain that your movement is one of the best."

Janet helped herself to some of the veal which a waiter was pushing at her in a large dish. The king refilled her glass. She had sipped away almost half of what was in it.

"It's the establishment of world peace," she said, "through the medium of the United Christian Churches."

"In that case," said the king, "you can count with certainty on our patriarch. There's nothing, absolutely nothing, he likes better than the establishment of world peace except perhaps the Unity of Christian Churches, though perhaps he's a little inclined to take the view that the other churches should unite with his and not his with them. I mean to say, he thinks that if there's to be a compromise, it must be on the basis of every one else giving way. But all ecclesiastics are like that. Our patriarch isn't peculiar."

"When we speak of the union of churches," said Janet, "we mean a concordat based on the essentials of the Christian creed."

"Of course," said the king, "and you'll find our patriarch absolutely agrees with you about that so long as you don't ask him to shake hands with the Megalian Archimandrite. He might draw the line there, though, as I said, he's always on for anything really good. A good cause simply fascinates him. If he has a weakness—as we all have—it is that he's not so fond as he might be of the things which aren't quite so good as the Causes. Take young men now. As you very rightly said a few minutes ago, young men are young men."

"I said they ought not to be."

"But they are," said the king, "that's what the patriarch cannot be got to see, but I am sure I can rely on you to put the thing before him in the proper light. After all, Miss Temple is a long way off. It isn't as if she was in the least likely to turn up in Lystria."

"I fear that I can scarcely undertake—"

Janet was softened, perhaps for the first time in her life. If it had not been for the wine, the good food, and the king's charming manners, she would no doubt have replied to him much more blankly than she did. She might even have spoken fiercely.

"I fear," she said, "I cannot undertake to persuade the patriarch that Miss Temple doesn't exist."

"Well, perhaps not," said the king. "After all, the patriarch is a very difficult man to persuade. I never could do it. I dare say it will really be better if he doesn't hear about Miss Temple at all. And he never will if Calypso doesn't tell him."

"I shall not consider it my duty to tell him," said Janet. "My business with him—"

"Is world unity through peaceful Christian churches."

"World peace," said Janet, "through the Unity of Christian Churches."

"Quite so," said the king, "and even if it had been World Churches Through the Unity of Christian Peace, it would still be far more important than our little affairs. Still, if you persuade Calypso not to tell the patriarch—"

If Casimir had been there he might have said that the king, like poor old Lear's worst daughter, gave "sweet oeillades and most speaking glances" to Janet. I doubt very much whether any one had ever made eyes at her before. The treatment had a certain effect.

"I shall not," said Janet, "advise that the patriarch be told."

I dare say Janet's conscience was gnawing her a little. She had drunk a glass and a half of Burgundy and the king was putting a liqueur glass full of cognac beside her coffee. That was enough to make her uneasy. She had promised to conceal, or help in concealing a scandal. I suppose she had never before in her whole life agreed to do such a thing, and no doubt the thought of it was unpleasant. By way of compounding with her conscience and so quieting it, she made up her mind to say something really nasty about Tommy.

"Are you aware," she said, "that the young man about whom we have been speaking is not what he pretends to be?"

"He pretends to be a curate?" said the king.

"Exactly, and I'm perfectly certain he's nothing of the sort."

"I thought not," said the king. "I thought not. I'm glad you've confirmed my suspicion."

"I've known many curates," said Janet, "perhaps hundreds of them, and I've never known one yet who behaved as this one does. He drinks cocktails in the morning and goes to the Mascotte in the evenings."

"The patriarch wouldn't dream of doing such things," said the king.

"Which makes me certain that he's not a curate or indeed a clergyman at all."

"That," said the king, "is more the sort of way a young man like Lord Norheys might behave."

"Very possibly. I don't know Lord Norheys."

"At the same time," said the king, "it is not our business to expose the unfortunate young man. Deplorable as his conduct it, I don't see that we need warn the patriarch against him."

"For the sake of the reputation of the Church of England," said Janet, "I feel that I ought to make it clear that he is not one of our clergy."

"If he does anything scandalous while he is in Lystria," said the king, "kisses a housemaid, or anything like that, of course you'll have to tell the patriarch and Calypso too, that he isn't a clergyman. You'd be bound to do that for the sake of the Church of England. But if he behaves with ordinary decorum— After all, he may have good reasons for pretending to be a clergyman. I'm pretending to be a head waiter in order to earn my living. There's nothing really wicked about that. I don't see that either you or I are bound to tell the patriarch that he's not a curate."

"So long as you know the facts I don't see that it's anybody else's business."

"And I do know them thoroughly."

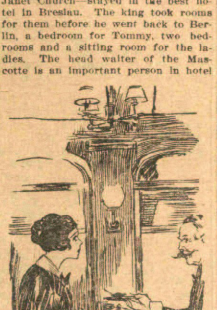
"I felt bound to tell you," said Janet, "but I don't see that I need tell anyone else."

"Thanks," said the king.

Part III.—Lystria

CHAPTER XIV

It took Casimir two days to complete his arrangement for the reception of the princess at the schloss. The little party—Tommy, the princess and Janet Church—stayed in the best hotel in Breslau. The king took rooms for them before he went back to Berlin, a bedroom for Tommy, two bedrooms and a sitting room for the ladies. The head waiter of the Mascotte is an important person in hotel keeping and restaurant circles in Germany. Tommy's party was treated with the greatest courtesy and consideration.



"He Pretends to Be a Curate," Said the King.

But the two days in Breslau were not very pleasant for Tommy. He saw but little of the princess, and he never saw her alone. They met at meals; but Janet Church was always there. Afterward the princess and Janet either retired to their own sitting room, or took a walk without asking Tommy to go with them. He got no chance of explaining himself to the princess or trying to convince her that he knew nothing of Miss Temple. This worried him. On the other hand, the princess' manner became gradually more and more agreeable. The extreme hostility with which she had greeted him in the Mascotte and afterward in the train gave way to ordinary politeness and at last to friendliness.

Janet, of course, was with the princess all day and talked to her incessantly, almost always about world peace and the Unity of Christian Churches. This would have inclined any girl to feel kindly toward a young man, even if he were the callous breaker of another girl's heart. And Calypso came to be doubtful whether Tommy had really broken Miss Temple's heart. Janet, when her mind could be diverted from the Union of Churches, dropped hints about Tommy which set Calypso wondering. She said, for instance, that Tommy was not the man he professed to be. So far as Calypso knew, Tommy professed to be Lord Norheys, and the thought that he might be somebody else gave her a queer little thrill of pleasure. If he were not Lord Norheys, then he was not bound in honor to marry Miss Temple.

She began to look at Tommy with interest, at first as a man whom it might be her duty to marry, later on as a man whom she might be content to marry even if it were not her duty. Her view of Miss Temple changed in an odd way. It occurred to her as possible that this London dancer might be one of those wicked women who lure young men into entanglements and then hold them to their half-made promises. She came by degrees to think of Miss Temple as a nuisance, some one who had no right to be there at all, certainly no right to interfere with Lord Norheys' life.

Tommy could not fail to observe the change in Calypso's manner, and the thought that her feelings toward him were becoming more friendly filled him with a determination to go through with his adventure whatever happened.

There were difficulties. One, trifling in itself, but singularly embarrassing, met him almost at once.

On the evening of his arrival, while he was smoking a pipe before going to bed, Tommy was greeted by a cheerful, intelligent looking young Englishman.

"Excuse me, sir, but aren't you Colonel Heard?"

Tommy was not Colonel Heard any more than he was Lord Norheys; but he knew he had Colonel Heard's passport in his pocket and his party were entered in the hotel register as Colonel and Mrs. Heard and Miss Gisborne. The king had done that for them before he went back to Berlin.

"My name," said the stranger, "is Allen. I don't think we've ever met."

"Never," said Tommy firmly, thankful that Allen was not one of Colonel Heard's oldest friends.

"But when I saw your name in the hotel register," said Allen, "I thought I'd introduce myself. I'm doing Reparations, you know."

He gave that piece of information as if it formed some excuse for having seen Colonel Heard's name in the register book. Perhaps it was an excuse. Any one concerned with Reparations is bound to be filled with curiosity and ought to investigate everything he comes across. How else is he to know whether the conquered nations can or cannot pay the fines imposed on them?

"I hope," Allen went on, "that you'll introduce me to Mrs. Heard. I'd like to tell my sister that I've met her."

Tommy could not do anything else but promise to introduce Allen to Mrs. Heard next morning. But he could not help wondering which of his two ladies were the better suited for the part. Janet Church was almost the age that colonels' wives generally are. But Tommy knew that he himself looked absurdly young. There cannot be many instances of colonels of twenty-six years old married to ladies of fifty-two, and Janet looked every day of her age. On the other hand one of his two ladies had to pose as the secretary of the Graves Registration commission. Calypso did not look like a secretary and it would be difficult to convince any one that she was chiefly occupied with graves. Janet, with her face and figure looked exactly like a lady who spent her time in typing letters about tombstones. Tommy made up his mind that Calypso must be Mrs. Heard.

"I want to thank Mrs. Heard," said Allen, "for all her kindnesses to my sister in 1915. She was like a mother to the girls in that canteen, and she kept a tight hand over them, too. Quite right. They needed it."

The date gave Tommy a shock. In 1915 Calypso was at the utmost fourteen years of age and could not possibly have kept a tight hand over any one, except perhaps the inhabitants of a dolls' house. Tommy altered his plan. Janet would have to be Mrs. Heard. But he was by no means certain of how Janet would like that. She had already accepted the position of his aunt, and it is distinctly laid down in the Prayer Book that an aunt may not marry her nephew. Janet, with her strong ecclesiastical instincts might very well object to committing herself to a breach of the marriage laws of the Church.

Do Not Force Plants

If a plant has been growing thriftily for some time and then begins to go back it probably needs a rest, and no amount of forcing will do any permanent good. During the resting period a plant is better if left entirely alone in a dry, cool cellar. It will of its own accord and without any attention of any kind begin to put out new green shoots. When these new shoots show themselves the plant should be given a thorough watering, a repotting if necessary, and brought up into its place in the sun. After it is growing well it may be given fertilizer.

Scriptures Say Little of the Barber's Art

The word barber is only once mentioned in the Scriptures, namely, in Ezekiel 5:1, which reads: "And thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, and cause it to pass upon thine head and upon thy beard. . . ."

Although barbers are not expressly mentioned, yet from the constant mention of shaving and the incident of Delilah sending for a man to shave Samson there can be no doubts that his class existed among the ancients. The Hebrews were particularly careful of their head and beard, and all seem to have applied the razor except the Nazarites, who were untouched by it from their birth. The Egyptian barbers were called khak or shavers, and they are represented at work in a tomb of Beni-Hassan, of the Twelfth dynasty, holding their razors in the hand, which have a short cylindrical handle, with a broad, flat blade of bronze on a line with the axis of the handle.

Polish Auto Trade Hit

Winters in Poland are so severe that the automobile trade is almost paralyzed.

FARM POULTRY

ERADICATE MITES TO SAVE POULTRY

There are few poultry producers who do not know of the ravages caused by the common chicken mite. It is very common in all parts of the country and while it is more prevalent in mid-summer it is well to eradicate it from the chicken houses before the young chickens arrive in the spring.

The removal of all interior fixtures and a thorough disinfection with a strong dip applied with a force pump is recommended by the Kansas experiment station. They state:

All rubbish should be removed and burned. Care must be taken to get the spray into all crevices. Kerosene emulsion, crude petroleum, and wood preservatives may be used for spraying, followed by whitewash. Whitewash aids mechanically by helping to fill up many crevices. Spraying should be repeated after a week in order to get any mites that may escape. Roosts should be painted frequently with wood preservative or crude petroleum. A treatment of the roosts, nests, boxes, etc., each spring with undiluted crude carbolic acid or sheep dip is usually sufficient to reduce the action of the mites to a minimum. The fact should be kept in mind that mites are blood-sucking parasites and do not remain on the birds as do lice. Mites are more harmful to poultry than lice and in treatment it is necessary to treat the house and not the bird, as is the case of lice.

The construction of roosts and nesting places so as to reduce hiding places to a minimum is an excellent control measure.

If new birds are brought to the farm, or birds to new quarters, they should be isolated for a few days in a pen separate from the permanent quarters so that all of the mites will leave them, thus preventing the infestation of new quarters. If birds are moved in the daytime mites will not be carried on them.

Poultrymen Use Greens in Greater Quantities

New Jersey poultrymen are finding that for greatest success plans should be made to supply poultry with an abundance of greens. They find that vegetation usually becomes tough and coarse in the summer and free range conditions do not provide the proper type of green food for poultry.

To offset this the principal crops sown in yards or on range are oats, rape and alfalfa. An alfalfa sod makes an ideal range because of the new growth constantly coming out. Rape also makes a new growth as the old is eaten off. It produces dark yellow yolks, however, and must be avoided if light yolks are desired. Oats make a very good crop for a few weeks. They should be planted in small quantities, because if not consumed while young they soon become too large and coarse.

In addition to range crops, cabbage, kale and swiss chard are often grown in a side field and fed to the birds. Kale has proved particluarly well suited for summer feeding as it continually sends out new shoots after being cut. Cabbage makes a fine feed for late summer and fall.

Regardless of the kind of succulent feed used, successful poultrymen aim to provide six to eight pounds daily per 100 birds. When fed the first thing in the morning or the last thing at night, the green feed does not interfere with consumption of other feeds, and egg production is improved by its use.

Poultry Facts

A Leghorn cockerel may become a rooster, but never a roaster.

It is a good rule never to let a sick chicken die on the premises. It should be killed before it reaches that stage.

If you are expecting to get the best results from your poultry flock, feed a balanced ration and do not overfeed.

The ancient buncombe about hens getting too fat to lay is still widely credited when, as a matter of fact, no hen except a fat hen can lay.

A full feed early in the day tends to make the hens listless, while a small feed encourages them to take the exercise which they need in order to keep in the best of health.

A hoe with 15 or 18-inch blade is very satisfactory for scraping the dropping boards, and if used regularly once a week or oftener, will assist materially in maintaining the health of the flock.

A good scratch grain ration consists of equal parts of cracked corn and whole wheat. Feed a little of the grain in the morning to make the flock exercise and give all they will clean up at night in fifteen or twenty minutes.

Don't abuse the hen because she wants to set. Instead, put her in a slatted coop, feed her well and give plenty of water. Generally she will be ready to get back to laying in two or three weeks.

Farmers who have been convinced of the true value of a good sire in the breeding of live stock also have begun to find it pays to have a good rooster in the flock of chickens. It is necessary to get new blood at least every two years.

MRS. BORGELIN'S REMARKABLE RECOVERY

MRS. OSCAR F. BORGELIN
FOREST CITY, IOWA

Forest City, Iowa.—"My first child lived only a short time and I was sick for a year after. When I bent over and raised myself up again I could almost scream with pain in my back. One day I was so bad that I had to leave my washing and get ready to go to the doctor. He gave me medicine, but it did no more good than if I drank just water. Once when we had been in town a little book telling about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was left in our car. I have taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound now and I do all my housework and help with the milking, and taking care of chickens and garden. Besides I have a fine baby girl eight months old, just the picture of health, and I am feeling fine myself. You may use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. OSCAR F. BORGELIN, Route No. 5, Forest City, Iowa.

A Bad Case of Nerves Relieved

Denver, Colorado. — "I was very despondent, blue and sad all the time, which is worse than real pain, and extremely nervous, with no appetite. I was this way for about two years and thought no one cared for me. My mother had had the same trouble and had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it. I tried everything else, then I began to take it. I soon had a better appetite and restored mental condition. I moved to a bright, sunny house, began calling on different people, and changed many other things. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for my female weakness. With the aid of your medicines I am now a fairly healthy, happy and contented woman. I've used the Vegetable Compound at different times and will say it always helps me over the bad spells that come to every woman past 40 years."—Mrs. HELEN FINE, 35 South Washington Street, Denver, Colorado.

A few years ago the University of Idaho had a president named Brannon who happened to be a person with high ideals. The mining kings of the State who bossed the University fired Brannon because they didn't like his ideals but the people of Idaho demanded that he should be re-instaled and the mining kings obeyed. Later they fired Brannon a second time so Brannon went to Wisconsin where he became president of Beloit college. All went well until Brannon started plans to build dwelling houses to be sold at cost to working men and then the financial interests of Beloit brought pressure to bear upon several merchants who were backing Brannon's plans and as the result of the pressure the working men's homes were never built. Money is power at Beloit.

Chemists in France have discovered a new form of glass which has all the advantages of real glass with none of its faults. It is manufactured from synthetic rosins and is if anything, more colorless and transparent than real glass. It will not splinter when broken, and will not cut so seriously, therefore it is the ideal material for windshields. It is very strong and will bend and stand hammering without breaking will take a high polish and can be turned on a lath the same as ivory.

On Monday the voters of Jonesville granted permission to the village council to sell the village lighting and water works plant to the Southern Michigan Light and Power Co. and also a lease to operate the same for twenty years beginning January 1, 1926. The plant has been a sort of white elephant to the village ever since it was built and cost considerable more than it produced to run. The Jonesvillians think they will thus reduce taxes by $3,000 and buy their current much cheaper. Manchester and Reading have done the same thing and it is probably only a matter of a few years when all the municipal plants in this state will be owned by the big power companies. In some cases it will be a God-sent blessing in others no doubt a curse. The day is coming when the electric octopus will look vastly bigger and uglier than the Standard Oil monster does now, but of course you can't make these skeptics believe it. Their only way of learning will be by bitter experience. It is paramount that they get good electrical service, but they will find it will have to cost. The present coal monoply ought to be a good illustration.

Mud Lake School Notes

Ovanda Greenfield was absent from school on Wednesday. This is the first absence for the term.

School opened August 31, with an enrollment of eight—four girls and four boys. We have no 1st and 4th grades.

The school has enjoyed three watermelon feasts. The melons for the first feed were furnished by Loceal Shull, Mildred and Merle Coryell. Loceal Shull brought those for the last two feeds.

The Popular Fair of Southern Michigan

Hillsdale County Fair, coming as it does at the end of the season, seems to still hold its reputation as the biggest and cleanest of all. Family reunions and meets with long ago friends are always planned for the big day of the Fair, and this year will likely be no exception to the rule. Load up your old lunch basket, fill up the icy hot bottle and crank up "Lizzie." We presume it will be the last event of the summer season, and you should put in the whole day. We hope the weather will be propitious and reasonably warm, at any rate we don't want our home fair to fail. It never has Entries are coming in very fast and if you intend exhibiting anything, see that your application is sent to the secretary this week. He is the hardest worked man in the organization and you must not block his game by being late. He has literally thousands to deal with and all his work must be correct. All aboard for Hillsdale!

Happy Couple Wedded In Wheatland

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dillon of Wheatland township was the scene of a pretty home wedding Saturday at noon when their daughter, Ellen Marie, became the bride of Walter VanCamp of Jackson.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dewitt McLouth of Addison in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and groom. Miss Alice Dillon was her sister's honor maid and Leland VanCamp was best man. After the ceremony the wedding dinner was served and the couple left on a trip to Niagara Falls.

Both parties are graduates of the Addison High school. They will reside in Jackson.

The bride was! formerly a resident of this village her father, Harry Dillon; having been proprietor of the meat market.

Road Building Goes Right On

Contractor Hoffman who has been on road contracts in Kentucky for the past summer will enter into contracts for road work in Florida this winter, as it is impossible to keep going the year through in Kentucky on account of cold weather. In "Old Kaintuck" he still has 20 miles of new construction along the bluffs of the Ohio River where the scenery is very picturesque with the stream in view for many miles as it winds in and out. Mr. Hoffman states that good gravel is scarce in Kentucky and he has often found it necessary to ship large quantities of gravel one hundred miles which makes it quite expensive. Good white labor can be obtained for $2 per day, and he will take men from here to operate his machinery and depend on local labor for the rest. He says a number of roads are to be contracted in and about Okechobee Swamp in Southern Florida where mosquitos are so large and fierce, it is difficult to work, but the material used is easy to obtain, being a soft limestone rock which is crushed and quickly amalgamates to form solid pavement under sun, water and oil treatment given it, but is not durable as our highways and it would not stand up under heavy traffic, though it does very well for passenger cars.

The state of Florida is specializing in road work in an effort to attract tourists and often hits off as much mileage in one contract as Michigan would build in one year, so it is paramount the contractor should get on the scene early. Considerable marl is used in the road work, and the city of St-Petersburg near Tampa is expecting to build a good stretch of highway this winter

Hylan's Defeat in New York Gives Smith Dominating Position in Party.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NEW YORK CITY'S political battle of last week, which was nationally interesting and in a way nationally important, resulted as the political wiseacres predicted—in the defeat of Mayor Hylan by State Senator Jimmie Walker for the Democratic mayoral nomination. That was the concrete result but as everyone knows, it meant that Gov. Al Smith, who led the anti-Hylan forces of Tammany, was still the dominant figure in the Democracy of the East and retained the chance of the Presidential nomination in 1928. It meant, too, another failure on the part of William Randolph Hearst to control Democratic politics in New York.

Anticipating the defeat of Hylan, the Hearst papers were ready with the announcement that there would be "a ticket independent of the Tammany hall street car owned Albany crowd" and assumed that it would be headed by Hylan. But the mayor killed all chance for a bolt by declaring for Walker. He said: "I am getting out of politics with a clean record. I have done my best." F. H. La Guardia, former Republican and now a Socialist, indicated his willingness to head a third party ticket but apparently Hearst did not think him big enough for the job. Therefore the mayoral election probably will be contested by only Walker and Frank D. Waterman, the millionaire fountain pen manufacturer whom the Republicans nominated. Waterman swamped his two rivals John J. Lyons and W. M. Bennett. The Hearst press classes him with Walker as a "traction man."

Al Smith's victory in this primary election means not only that he will have the backing of New York and other Atlantic states for the Democratic Presidential nomination, but also that if he wishes it he can have the Democratic nomination for senator from New York next year. If Walker is elected mayor, Smith will have more power than any person in the country except the President.

WISCONSIN Republicans, still faithful to the name and tradition of Robert M. La Follette, nominated the late senator's son, Robert M. Jr., to fill his father's seat in the senate. The young man piled up an impressive majority over the combined votes of his three rivals, Wilcox, Woodward and McGovern. Despite this his success at the special election on September 29 is not assured, for Roy Wilcox, backed by the anti-La Follette faction of the party, is out as an independent candidate, and there are others. The Democrats went to sleep and their only candidate, William George Bruce, failed to receive the required 5 per cent of the Democratic vote of last fall. He, too, however, is running as an independent. John M. Work is the Socialist nominee and George Bauman the Socialist-Labor candidate. Among other possible candidates are Arthur Barry, who favors light wines and beer, and E. F. Dithmar, former lieutenant governor.

"I GO with the hope that our transatlantic friends will have sufficiently big hearts and are good enough business men to accept an equitable settlement. Under these conditions I hope to succeed and I hope to give the United States an opportunity to prove the Anglo-Saxon spirit of fair play. I will not go to the United States to repeat the phrases which Americans have heard so often, 'France does not deny her debts.' I go to tell the Americans, 'France pays her debts.'"

With these optimistic words Joseph Caillaux, France's finance minister, started last week for Washington to arrange the debt settlement. With him comes a large delegation, including, besides experts, Senator Henri Berenger, Louis Dausset, Paul Dupuy, Marquis Chambrun and a few deputies. Full power to settle the debt question has been given M. Caillaux by President Painleve and the cabinet and their political fate rests on his success.

Coincident with the departure of the French mission, Senator Smoot of Utah, a member of the American debt funding commission and chairman of the senate finance committee, issued a statement in which he said: "The United States will settle with France without any reference whatever to the conference held between M. Caillaux and Mr. Churchill or any propaganda by either one or both of them. The United States has nothing to say about any political deals or understandings between European countries and does not propose to be drawn into them. M. Caillaux and his associates will be given every possible chance of presenting their side of the question. The United States commission will look after the interests of America."

At the same time Senator Borah of Idaho was conferring with President Coolidge on the debt question, and he indicated that any undue leniency given France would be opposed in congress.

Rumania will send a debt commission to Washington in October or November. M. Titelescu, minister to England, who probably will head it, says Rumania will pay honestly, according to her capacity. She owes America $45,000,000. England, France and Italy insist that she settle her debts to them also. Rumania has an offset claim amounting to some $70,000,000 for bullion and state jewels and art objects which, sent to Moscow in 1916 for safe keeping, were seized by the Bolsheviks. She also asks compensation for the dynamiting of her oil wells by allied engineers.

GERMANY has received the joint invitation of the allies to participate in the negotiations of the foreign ministers for the adoption of a European security treaty, which probably will begin early in October, and has been given assurance that Great Britain will insist on absolute equality of treatment for Germany at the conference. The draft of the proposed pact for western Europe is ready and it contains nothing that could be interpreted as placing Germany in the category of a vanquished nation. The treaties for Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia may have to be shelved for a time, for they are more troublesome. The Poles and Czechs feel that they are being abandoned by France and are sore.

THERE were indications that the League of Nations assembly would dodge the embarrassing Mosul boundary question by referring it to the world court for settlement. The league does not wish to place itself in the position of having one of its members refuse to accept its decision, and that probably would happen if it decided against Turkey and in favor of the British contention. The Turks assert that they are not bound by their promise of last year to abide by the decision, because conditions have changed. It was proposed in the assembly to give the disputed territory to Great Britain on condition that it accepted a twenty-five-year mandate over Irak. The Turks maintain the league's duty is to draw the boundaries without conditions. President Mustapha Kemal apparently is prepared for armed action if the case goes against Turkey, for he has concentrated thousands of troops behind the disputed frontier; but the British authorities profess not to be worried over the danger of warfare.

CONSIDERABLE progress was made last week by the French and Spanish armies in their drive against the Riffians, but the natives were fighting hard in the central zone and renewed their attacks on Tetuan in the west. They may be able to hold out until the rainy season checks the operations of their foes. The main achievement of the French was the capture of El Bibane fortress, one of Krim's strongest positions. It was recovered by the Riffians momentarily but was retaken by the French after a furious assault in which the infantry were aided by 150 air bombers and many tanks.

DELEGATES to the twenty-third conference of the Interparliamentary union which opens in Washington October 1 are on their way from all parts of the world. But one gentleman who intended to be present and to do a lot of talking will not come. That is Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons. Last week Secretary of State Kellogg ordered revoked the passport visa already granted to the Red in London, explaining: "I do not believe in curbing free speech, nor do I believe in making this country the stamping ground for every revolutionary agitator of other countries." Mr. Kellogg quoted from recent utterances of Saklatvala from which it was concluded that he was coming to the United States especially to spread Communism. The action taken was contrary to the advice of Senator Borah who believed it would imply a greater restriction on free speech in America than in Great Britain, where Saklatvala has been permitted to say whatever he wished.

TWO investigations of aviation, one of the Shenandoah disaster and the other a general inquiry into the adequacy of American air power, are now under way. The former is being conducted by a board of naval officers; the latter by a special board named by President Coolidge, which incidentally, or perhaps especially, will determine the degree of truth or falsity in the charges that Colonel Mitchell has been making against the army and navy air service. Mr. Coolidge entertained the nine members of his board at luncheon Thursday and their procedure was mapped out. Though the President leaves it largely to the board to determine the scope of its inquiry, he let it be known that he thought the sessions should be public, except when the testimony might touch on confidential matters pertaining to the national defense.

THE Soviet government of Russia has a lot to answer for already, and now is accused of a plot to cause a decline in the price of wheat in the United States and Canada for the purpose of creating unrest among the farmers of America. Rumors of this were current among traders in Chicago and Winnipeg and became so definite that the grain futures administration of the Department of Agriculture started an investigation. Grain dealers have become suspicious that something is wrong with the news from Russia, especially the recent official report telling of the big wheat and rye crop and of shipments of 2,000,000 bushels of wheat from Black sea ports.

J. P. Griffin, a former president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said: "I think some wheat will be exported from Russian ports, but I believe most of the stories about Russia's fabulous surplus is propaganda. This Russian bugaboo has been exploited so much in recent years that one of our members here a few months ago truthfully described the situation thus: 'Russia is going to feed the world every summer, but before Christmas the world is feeding Russia.'"

"The continued offerings of Russian wheat for future shipment and the reported sales of such contracts to Italy and France are not convincing evidence of any purpose to deliver wheat on any important scale," said B. W. Shaw, former assistant secretary of agriculture. "It is said one term in the contracts requires payment of a substantial amount of money on the signing of the contract. This money is in the shape of a credit against which the Russian officials may draw for the purchase of goods. The fact that England has not bought such contracts is significant of doubt in the English mind as to their soundness."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE JARDINE has put an end to the fight against merger of the Armour and Morris interests by dismissing the complaint which was instituted by the late Secretary Wallace in February, 1923. Mr. Jardine says the evidence shows the transaction was consummated in order to reduce expenses and to increase sales, and that neither monopoly nor price manipulation to the disadvantage of producer or consumer has occurred.

United States Motor Car Fatalities Lead

Cleveland.—America's death rate due to automobile accidents leads the world, being 14.8 fatalities for every 100,000 population, against 5.2 in England and Wales, 4.3 in Scotland, 4.6 in New Zealand and 3.6 in Canada during 1923.

Figures for 1924 show that for 158 American cities the automobile accident death rate was 19.4 per 100,000 population, causing not less than 17,400 deaths in automobile accidents, not counting accidents which involved railroad trains, or street cars, and automobiles.

The toll of human life taken by motor vehicles last year in this country was at the rate of more than two for every hour in the day. These statistics have been compiled by the national safety council for consideration at the fourteenth annual congress which is scheduled to open its sessions in this city on Monday, September 28.

M. O. Eldrige, director of traffic, Washington, D. C., will discuss "Traffic Control Systems"; Maj. Thomas H. Allen, commissioner of fire and police, Memphis, Tenn., "Pavement Markings"; F. F. Rogers, state highway commission, Lansing, Mich., "Safe Construction of Equipment of Highways"; H. W. Lueck, Chicago, "Nontraffic Street Hazards"; O. J. Brown, president of New York State Automobile association, "Why We Believe in a Driver's License Law."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Hillsdale—At a special election held in Jonesville, voters cast an overwhelming majority granting a 20-year franchise to the Southern Michigan Light and Power Company to furnish light and power to that village.

Bay City—Paul Payne, 9-year-old son of Daniel J. Payne, of Hampton township, owes his life to the presence of mind of his younger brother, who pushed him into a cistern when his clothes caught fire following a gasoline explosion.

Marquette—Two guards on the wall of the State Branch Prison here prevented the escape of three prison inmates who attempted to gain their freedom in much the same manner that Eddie Weisman and three pals made their sensational getaway last June.

Battle Creek—Frank S. O'Grady, a gateman here for the Michigan Central railroad, lays modest claim to the smallest farm in the world. His ranch is about a yard square, and contains a corn crop of one six-foot stalk with a single ear on it. O'Grady says he hopes the ar is red.

Petoskey—One of the first steps in the general campaign to lengthen the summer tourist season in this region has been taken by the Pere Marquette railway in providing through Pullman service out of here until October 31. In other years the closing of the tourist season usually was set for late September.

Lansing—School children must be taught to walk on the left side of country roads and to look to both right and left before crossing every thoroughfare, Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, and Frank F. Rogers, State highway commissioner said in a joint letter to school teachers.

Cadillac—Potato prices are expected to be much higher this season, according to George Wager, sales manager of the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange here. Home grown potatoes near the large markets are about exhausted, Mr. Wager said, and this will tend to hasten the demand for shipments.

Grand Rapids—William Koffman, Algoma township farmer, was just $25 poorer and considerably wiser when he lost his temper because his neighbor's cows ignored a fence and overran his crops. He maimed several of the cattle with buckshot from his shotgun. He pleaded guilty in Circuit Judge Perkins' court.

South Haven—The English ship, Erington Dunsford, loaded with clay, is due to arrive at this port October 5. Former shipments of clay for use by Kalamazoo paper mills have been docked at Michigan City, but through efforts of the Chamber of Commerce cargoes hereafter will be unloaded here. The Dunsford will be the first ocean-going vessel to dock at this port.

Muskegon—Muskegon has quit furnishing fire protection to North Muskegon and the suburb has purchased a new fire truck. The city hall was remodeled at considerattble expense to accommodate the truck. The truck arrived recently and the entire populace turned out to see the truck driven into its new home. Then it was discovered that the truck was so large it could not be put inside the city hall.

Owosso—The city commission will within a few weeks pass an ordinance putting into effect the zoning plan which has been prepared by Irving C. Root, Flint city planning expert. The decision was reached following a hearing in which virtually no changes were suggested. Under the plan the city will be divided into zones for one family and two-family dwellings, apartments, business houses and industrial plants.

Alma—Classes were put under way at Alma college with an enrollment in the four classes that is close to the 300 mark, and is approximately the same as attendance figures of a year ago. An exact check is not possible yet, but it is believed that the record of last year when over 62 per cent of the students enrolled were men, is even exceeded this year. It is a record that few co-educational institutions in the country show.

Lansing—The state public utilities commission has authorized the Ford-Hydro-Electric company to incorporate and do business in Michigan. The company, which is one of the Ford string of hydro-electric projects, has its headquarters in Wisconsin. The Michigan company is capitalized at $25,000, all of which is taken up by the Ford interests. A power plant is being developed on the Menominee river near Iron Mountain. Property owners in the vicinity of the project may protest the use and condemnation of flowage land.

Flint—Petitions demanding the recall of Mayor Judson L. Transue have been circulated among residents in the western part of Flint. Mayor Transue is accused of incompetency and indifference toward the public welfare. It is charged that he violated the state constituion by entering into a day-to-day agreemens with the D. U. R. permitting the railway company to charge a higher rate of street car fare than is provided in its original franchise and has shown partiality in granting city contracts to others than lowest bidders.

Lansing—Of the 197 applicants who took the bar examination, held Sept. 8, 9 and 10, 143 passed and were recommended for admission to the bar.

Lansing—The Detroit Edison Co. petioned the State Public Utilities Commission for permission to issue $6,738,350 worth of capital stock to retire outstanding bonds and finance improvements.

Escanaba—John Johnson, an immigrant, applied for American citizenship and was given his examination. "Of whom are you a subject and to whom do you renounce allegiance?" the examiner asked Johnson. "My wife." Johnson replied.

Dexter—William Stoffer, postmaster of this village, was instantaneously killed when his automobile stalled on the railroad tracks near the station and was struck by a freight train. Stoffer was about 30 years old and was a World War Veteran.

Marquette—In an effort to prevent further escapes from the State Branch Prison here, officials of the institution have employed Merritt B. Wilson, of Menominee, as rifle inspector in charge of the prison guards. Wilson, a former army lieutenant, will train the guards in the use of the rifle.

Bay City—James R. Davis, former head of Federal prohibition activities in Michigan, operated upon here a few days ago for chronic appendicitis and gall stones, is making a good recovery according to his physicians. It is believed he will be able to leave the hospital within the next few days.

Jackson—The old familiar clubs police officers here have carried on their beats for many years have been discarded. Officers now are equipped with blackjacks. It is the belief of Chief of Police Charles Phelps that carrying a club hinders an officer in the use of his hands in an emergency. It also appears as if he were looking for trouble, the chief stated.

Lincoln Park—Voters here have refused to ratify bond issues of $290,000 for city improvements. George Shanley, president of the city council, expressed disappointment over the result of the vote. A $140,000 bond issue to finance construction of new sewers was defeated by 12 votes. The small margin of two votes beat a $150,000 issue for extension of water mains.

Ishpeming—Two calves, seeing a young deer near a farm at Three Lakes and evidently thinking it was of the same species as themselves, became its companions and wandered away to the woods with it. Owners of the calves started a search a few days later and saw the calves with the deer. It seems the calves have become as wild as the deer, for efforts of farmers to catch them have failed.

Houghton—Some agency besides state governments and private owners must take a hand in recovering 57,000,000 acres of land in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota from economic ruin, according to John A. Doelle, former commissioner of agriculture in Michigan. "The aid and the experience of the federal government must be obtained if these lands are to be an asset rather than a liability," he stated.

Kalamazoo—Given up as dead by his friends here for nearly 10 years, John Kemp, a former Kalamazoo blacksmith, surprised old acquaintances by dropping in on them for a visit. Since leaving Kalamazoo in 1912 he has been engaged in business in Kansas and Nebraska. A search of Probate Courts records was made for the record of an action by which he was declared legally dead several years ago.

Grand Rapids—The possibilities of a state-wide probation service will be discussed at the Michigan State Conference of Social work, to be held here Sept. 30 to Oct. 2. Charles L. Chute, general secretary of the National Association and Judge Henry S. Hulbert, of the Wayne County Juvenile Court, will be among the chief speakers. The meeting is to be attended by judges, probation officers and social workers from all parts of the state.

Muskegon—Another step to save White Lake harbor from abandonment by the government was taken by the Muskegon chamber of commerce when it authorized Secretary John Beukema to go to Washington to make overtures for continuance of harbor aid, should Major Gilbert Wilkes not withdraw his recommendation that the harbor be abandoned. White Lake harbor is of great importance in the resort and tourist development of western Michigan.

Kalamazoo — Modern efficiency methods made possible the removal of the old Michigan Central Railroad bridge over the Kalamazoo river and the installation of a new bridge, all within the period of six minutes. There was no interruption of traffic. The new bridge was constructed just north of the old one. As the old bridge was lifted by four cranes to waiting flat cars the new bridge attached by cable to a locomotive, was hauled into position. It was the work of but a few minutes to add the capping.

Benton Harbor—Prosecuting Attorney Bookwalter announced here that Ruth Bamford Reed, of Detroit, had written him a letter asking that her charges against the fugitive Benjamin Purnell be withdrawn. It was the strength of this girl's charges, together with those of her sister, Gladys Bamford Rubel, that a warrant was issued by Circuit Judge White more than two years ago, for "King" Benjamin, charging him with criminal assault. The prosecutor said the girl did not withdraw the charges, but asked them dismissed for her family's sake.

Ann Arbor—In spite of the failure of the 1925 state legislature to appropriate funds for a new University of Michigan observatory, announcement is made at the university of the purchase of 80 acres northwest of Ann Arbor to serve as the site for the proposed building. The site was purchased out of the general university fund, and has no connection with the appropriations passed by the state legislature. For the past several years the university has been seeking a new observatory to replace the antiquated structure erected over 70 years ago.

The Old Standby in a New Dress

—the same dependable remedy that over a period of more than fifty years has been found so reliable in the treatment of catarrh and diseases of catarrhal nature.

The outside of the package only has been altered. To facilitate packing and reduce breakage in shipping, the paper wrapper which has identified the Pe-ru-na bottle for many years has been displaced by a substantial pasteboard carton.

Pe-ru-na cannot be made any better. Three generations of users testify that Pe-ru-na is the best remedy in the world for catarrh and diseases of catarrhal origin.

The remedy our fathers and grandfathers used with so much satisfaction is still the standby for the ills of everyday in thousands of American homes.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

How Much Are Poor Roads Costing You?

5,000,000 of America's 18,000,000 motor vehicles are recognized as an economic necessity on the farm.

Is your car giving the full efficiency of which it is capable—and at the lowest cost per mile possible?

Not if you are jolting over bumps and ruts. Not if you get stuck in the mud.

In addition to the time you thus lose along the way, you also pay from one to four cents a mile more in gasoline, tire and repair bills than you would pay on permanently paved highways.

Think, too, how many so-called improved roads have gone to pieces within the past few years, thereby piling up huge maintenance and rebuilding costs.

Contrast all this with the record of Concrete Roads—the roads that have repair built out and maintenance built in. Firm, rigid and unyielding, free of bumps, ruts, holes, mud and dust, they are, in every way, the most economical roads.

Tell your highway officials you want more Concrete Roads. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Let us give you all the facts about Concrete Roads, including the experience of other communities. Ask for our free booklet, R-3.

Honor State Men In New Hort Building

Michigan's leading figures in the horticultural industry are to be given place in a special "hall of fame" in the new horticultural building at M. S. C. Bronze tablets suitably placed, will carry the names of these pioneers in one of the state's most important professions.

The new horticultural building, which is being opened formally this fall, is regarded as the most modern and completely equipped structure of its kind in the country Every facility for experimental and instructional work is provided in the main building and the adjoining greenhouses.

Honoring leading horticulturists by setting their names out before the students who use the building is expected to help in developing a distinctly horticultural atmosphere for the work of the division, according to Prof. V. R. Gardner, head of the M. S. C. hort department.

To Study Corn Borer Conditions In State

Michigan sections infested with the European corn borer will be included in a special inspection trip sponsored jointly by the United States and Canadian departments of agriculture on September 29 and 30 and October 1, according to announcement made here this week by Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at the M. S. C.

While corn borer infestations have been heavier in Ohio and Ontario than they have in Michigan, the situation in the southeastern section of the state is serious enough to demand close attention from all who are interested in Michigan's corn crop. A quarantine has been in force this summer in an effort to prevent spread of the pests which in some sections of Ontario are said to have resulted this year in virtual destruction of the crop.

Prominent government and state authorities will unite on the inspection trip in an effort to determine the exact situation and to make plans for future steps to control the corn borer.

The National Dairy Show, leading exposition of the year for dairy men of the country, is attracting unusual interest from Michigan farmers this year because of the fact that the show is to be held in a neighboring state, Indiana between October 10 and 17 for the show, it is said by dairy specialists at the M. S. C.

The state will not only be represented by cattle exhibits at the exposition but will also have delegations of Boys and Girls club and college judging teams in the judging competitions.

Latimer's Statement

As we promised last week we are publishing the personal statement of R. Irving Latimer who has been an inmate of Jackson Penitentiary for 36 years, having been sentenced for life imprisonment after being tried and found guilty of the murder of his mother in Jackson by the gun route. We know very little of the case other than reports, and out of a sense of fairness we are willing to publish this statement free gratis for Mr. Latimer. As we said last week if the great propaganda put out by his friends is without foundation, and he is guilty he should be left inside to carry out the dictates of the law. On the other hand if he is not guilty and the courts of this state have blundered, the most they can do for him is too little to amend the injustice. If the latter is true the state owes him a competency and a mighty good home wherever he should choose to dwell and they should be obliged to thus recompense him for his disgrace. Following is his statement:

"To the people of Michigan:

There is but one salvation for the man undergoing life imprisonment; to keep eternally busy and to keep scrupulously clean; to balance manual labor with an adequate amount of mental work—to offset mental work with sufficient physical exercise; to keep himself physically, mentally and morally clean.

He must subject himself to a more rigorous mental and physical discipline than required by prison rules if he would keep himself in condition fit for return to the outer world, for a life sentence is a terrible and ghastly thing, more awful than ever realized by judge who imposed, more fearful than ever conceived by governor who pardoned or commuted, and the prisoner under it is carrying a burden unborne by men with sentences of lesser degree.

Still, however, rigorous the discipline one may have imposed, one does not survive thirty-six years imprisonment, maintaining mental and physical integrity, unless actuated and sustained by a greater power than self-imposed discipline, bulldog tenacity, or hope.

The answer? The Latin runs: Mens sibi conscia recti—a mind conscious to itself of right.

As I have always maintained, as I now maintain, as I always shall maintain, I am not guilty of the crime of which convicted—the most heinous man can commit. But on circumstantial evidence, I was convicted by a jury and sentenced to this prison for life.

Against the verdict of a jury, the sentence of a judge and a commitment in the warden's office, assertion that one is not guilty of the crime for which a life sentence was imposed is weightless, and none recognizes better than I the futility of making such a plea a basis for clemency.

Still the unalterable truth remains and my consciousness of it, and that alone, has sufficed to bring me through a period which breaks men; through the never ceasing monotony of a life that crushes men mentally and physically and throws them on the shore of liberty—if they survive to reach it—crushed and battered and broken wrecks.

Within less than four years after imprisoned, still rankling under a keen sense of injustice, I escaped. As a result of that escape an officer a gentleman and my friend, died. There was no intent, no thought of, no reason for his death. That he died has ever brought to me keenest regret and sorrow, assuaged only by the knowlege that his death was accidental, unpremeditated, and directly due to lack of medical attention. The immediate personal investigation by Warden Chamberlain absolved me from all intent to harm, and a subsequent investigation by Warden Armstrong of which I had no knowlege until the finding was announced, both freed me from malice aforethought and found the direct cause of Mr. Haight's death to be due to want of medical care.

When returned to prison after that escape, I faced the cold, hard unavoidable fact that I had then done something for which I should pay a penalty. I accepted that fact believing that there would come a time when I could conscientiously feel that the penalty had been paid In years past there were offers to join in successful escapes, but I passed them by; there were opportunities to escape, but I rejected them. In this there is no credit to me, for it was but in consonance with the determined resolve to accept the punishment and take it unwhiningly, because it was just.

I am not inviting your pity, soliciting your sympathy, nor entreating you for mercy, but for you, People of Michigan, I have one plain, blunt question:

For the man who has undergone thirty six years imprisonment, for the man who for thirty two years has played the game, played it according to all its rules and observed all its technicalities; played it conscientiously with fidelity and honor, doing what he had to do a little better than required, earning alike the respect of prison officials and inmates, and playing it cleanly—not because he had to, but because it was right and fair and just that he so play it; who has maintained his physique and mentality and came through unscathed and uncontaminated—for that man, People of Michigan, what is there in the game for him?

R. Irving Latimer,
Michigan State Prison, Jackson,
Michigan."

Probate Order

STATE OF MICHIGAN, THE PROBATE COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF HILLSDALE.

At a session of said Court held at the Probate Office in the City of Hillsdale in said county on the 8th day of September A. D., 1925.

The Coroners Jury At Washington

The "Tomfoolery" which is being indulged in relative to the wreck of the dirigible "Shenandoah" is enough to make one wish the United States of America would forever forget about dirigibles and anything pertaining. Survivors of the catastrophe and farmers who saw the accident have been called to Washington in an apparent effort to prove something or somebody way back who helped build the monstrous toy were blamable. How much longer this vaudeville will be kept up only depends upon the good nature and patience of the American people who furnished the dough to build the Shenandoah and who have the brunt of the loss to bear—to say nothing of the valuable lives lost in an effort to do the impossibie. After the tremendous blunders of the government in trying to maintain these ponderous air-ships and keep up a constant experimenting to prove that which can't be proved, the personnel at Washington feel of course the people are entitled to some kind of an explanation and a reckoning, hence there is a headlong effort to find a goat or stool pigeon—something or somebody who can be made to stand sponsor and take the blame.

Speed the day when the Nations of the world will consider total disarmament and not only abolish these foolish toys of the air but also the big guns on our coastal forts, the battleships and submarines which plow the deep, and substitute something called common sense in their places which will steer their ships of state in peaceful channels. Let them abolish their petty jealousies and strife—put away all old grudges—stand on their dignity as Christian nations. Henry Ford, our own "Hank" over at Dearborn, has gotten at the crux of the situation as no one else has or can when he prognostigated that the air ship of the future to be a success must be a happy combination of the aeroplane and Blimp so combined as to minimize weight, abolish unwieldiness and assure as complete stability in the air as can be expected of an automobile on land. How many lives will have to be lost and dollars squandered is a guess before this can be accomplished. Let us hope the goal can be reached within five years.

BANKERS HELP

The banks of Linn County Oregon, are showing more enthusiasm than ever this year in behalf of a county corn exhibit similar to that held last year at the Linn County Fair. Last year's exhibit was the result of a contest for a prize offered by a number of local banks. This was so successful that this year ten out of the eleven banks in the county will subscribe to the effort.

The Agricultural Committee of the Alabama Bankers Association has recommended that a scholarship fund be established for the education of worthy young men and women along agricultural and home economics lines. It is estimated that if each bank in the state were to contribute 25 cents per thousand capital, five to six thousand dollars per annum would be realized.

The Agricultural Committee of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, in its report, recommends that the bankers see that a competent agent is appointed in each county and that he has a degree from some agricultural college. They believe that the agricultural possibilities of the state should be better advertised and that each county bankers association should do some work along that line.

Searcy County Bankers Association, Arkansas, entertained as its guests recently some seventy-five farmers and business men. The result was the organization of the North Central Arkansas Agricultural Association. Its purpose will be to co-ordinate the efforts of the farmers and business men in promoting a better agriculture. Searcy County bankers are giving 100 settings of purebred eggs for distribution to the boys' and girls' clubs in the county.

RADIO IS GREAT BOON TO AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS

No Invention Since the Steam Engine Has Such a Widespread Influence Upon Rural Life, Says Radio Head.

FARM'S ISOLATION NOW PAST

Broadcasting Has Banished the Dullness, the Utter Monotony and Lack of Recreation That Were Causing the Girls and Boys and the Hired Hands to Desert the Soil and Seek the City.

In an address before the Advertising Club of New York City General James G. Harbord, the commander of the Marines at Chateau Thierry during the World War and who now holds the position of President of the Radio Corporation of America, said radio has a greater application to the farm and farm life than to any other phase of our national life. General Harbord speaks with authority on this topic for he is not only one of the leaders of radio in the United States but his boyhood days on a farm have given him an intimate insight into the problems which confront the American farmer. His address in part follows:

As more or less of a Kansas farmer I am glad of this opportunity to say a few words to you on the relation of radio to the farmer. Though I must confess that I have not worked steadily at farming—indeed have missed quite a number of crop seasons during thirty-four years of absence in the Army and several more covering my recent activities in the radio industry, my memories of sixteen-hour-days on a Kansas farm, as we lived it forty years and more ago, are keen enough to give me a sympathetic understanding of the farmer's major problems. I spent my boyhood on the Kansas prairies, went from the farm to an agricultural college, where I managed to graduate, supposed to be in possession of whatever science there was in the farming profession at that time. To the end of my days, while memory endures, I shall continue to have an appreciation of life as the farmer lives it.

Radio a Rural Regenerator

So that it is with the feeling that I am, perhaps, in some small measure discharging the obligations of forty years ago, that I see radio—my present field of endeavor—becoming more and more a factor in the life of the farmer.

A brief consideration of the farming industry will help us to appreciate what radio has done and can do for the farmer. Most of us, as city dwellers, do not take the farming industry at its full face value. We fail to recognize its tremendous magnitude and its paramount importance to the nation. Farming is not only our greatest industry, but is greater than all our other industries combined.

The sometimes inarticulate and unappreciated farmer—the symbolic Man with the Hoe—is the most important single element of our many millions. There are thirty-one millions of American farmers, nearly thirty per cent of our total population. If we add those persons living in agricultural communities, though not actually engaged in farming, we have a total of fifty-one millions, or nearly half the total population of our country.

With the tremendous expansion of farm wealth in the recent decades the problems of farm management and farm labor have more than multiplied. The great growth of our urban population in recent years has been due, in large measure, to migration from the rural districts. This represents a great loss of man-power on the farm; and it is a grave problem which affects you and me ultimately, just as it now concerns the farmer of the North, South, East and West. A similar movement from country to city preceded the fall of the Roman Empire.

The immediate reason for this exodus from the countryside, aside from its part as possibly one of the great cycles of history, lies primarily in the greater opportunities for recreation and interest afforded by life in the city.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March, A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savinge Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amounting to two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610) and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage provided. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

BORN TAILORS GUILD

How to Select a Suit

AN UNWRITTEN law still holds in England that a man, having once made his choice of a tailor, never changes. He often inherits this choice from his father and grandfather, and it is not unusual for the same tailoring firm to serve a family for several generations.

This hard and fast rule would not suit Americans, but in principle it has its advantages. The wise man selects a tailor he knows to be reputable and competent and always goes to him. In this way, the tailor comes to know his likes, dislikes, and individual requirements for fitting. He decides in advance what general type of suit he wishes and about how much he can pay, and then spends plenty of time in choosing the style and material.

A man must understand his own strong points and shortcomings and never allow himself to be carried away by a style that is not meant for his particular type. The man who would look slighter must avoid tight-fitting clothes. The bottom of his coat fronts must be square cut and not rounded, to give an effect of height. The thin man will appear less lean looking if the lines of his suits are not too severely cut.

Quality can be fairly well gauged by the price and the word of the tailor. In novelty cloths, it is that feature for which one pays and not necessarily for quality, but in plain materials, price is a reliable guide. No reputable tailor nowadays hesitates to admit that a cloth is only part wool. However, "all wool" does not necessarily mean "pure wool." Woolen goods known as shoddy is made from used cloth rewoven and does not have the wearing qualities of unused or virgin wool.

The pattern and color of the cloth should be selected on the same general principles as the style. Extremes are to be avoided for long wearing.

General Andrews has under him the Customs Service, the Coast Guard, the Prohibition Unit and the Narcotic Squad. He told how he was attempting to reorganize for better co-operation.

The Coast Guard is set to watch the importation from abroad. In making it more effective he has attempted to establish a first line of defense against smuggling along the ocean fronts. The Customs Service will be the second line, along the oceans, and the first on land borders. In order to equip the Customs offices sufficiently General Andrews has asked each to recommend what it needs. Along the Canadian and Mexican border, and also a short distance down the Atlantic, the work of reenforcing them has progressed well. Smugglers are no longer romantic figures, and are not considered p liers of an honorable trade.

Within the country the Prohibition Unit must control the domestic situation. It has been reorganized into twenty two sections, each composed of a group of Federal judicial districts, since the Treasury Department must work closely with the Department of Justice in bringing conviction in cases of culprits apprehended. In each of these twenty two districts will be sub-districts coincident with the judicial districts. The chief in every main district, and every subordinate chief of sub-districts, will have control.

Upon these heads General Andrews is going to rely, Not all the men have been selected, but enough are already chosen to put the plan into operation. These men of personal authority are backed by the strong power of the government. When a man has the government behind him he can do things with a strength of personal conviction that is invincible, said General Andrews. These men must get their honesty from a spirit flowing through the whole organization, not from being so well paid they are not likely to take bribes.

The flow of alcohol brought about through the misuse of permits to legitimate industries, which need it in tremendous quantities for their work, is going to be dammed up before long, said General Andrews. Bootleggers use the opportunity to get liquor by pretending to enter into legitimate industry, or by bribery or trickery. Remedying this is a matter of intelligent business control. A staff of trained executives will be stationed in the industries that use alcohol for the purpose of detecting which ones employ it legitimately and which illegitimately. Soon the supply from that source will be a trickle instead of a stream, he asserted.

The serious situation is created by the great American public which cares more for personal pleasure than for the welfare of the community. If the known sources are closed, and the demand keeps up somebody will meet it. If the supply comes from local stills, do not expect the Federal government to stop it. The work of the Federal government is to shut off the flow of liquor from outside, and give every community a chance to have prohibition if it wants it. If it does not want it, nothing can be done except by education. The state of mind of the people must be changed. This must be effected by the groups that have brought about the revolution in the matter of drinking which is now expressed in law. It is a part of our form of government that associations of peoples looking further ahead than others, more keen to see, and more eager to bring about a better order must keep on working for their object after they have gotten it written into law. Reforms brought by legislation must be backed by the building of more public opinion. You do not enforce child labor laws by sending police into the factory, but by building up public sentiment. In enforcing prohibition all the organizations that originally worked for it must continue their efforts.

It must be done by "speeding up" local law enforcement. The American government came out of the souls of our forefathers, because they thought themselves able to govern themselves. There seems to be a change in America now. Too many are looking for easy money, and are too selfishly engaged to give thought or time to local self government. They want to let all government swing to Washington. They owe it to themselves to exercise their rights of self government.

Named As Crop Observers

Appointment of T. F. Slater of Hillsdale and Carl Rumsey of Pittsford as crop observers in Hillsdale county for the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation Index, is announced from Chicago by P. V. Ewing, director of research for the Foundation and editor of the Index. They will form a link in the nation wide chain of county agricultural observers elected because of their first hand knowledge of farming conditions and their ability to observe these and intelligently interpret them.

The Index, to which the observers from this county will contribute, is a compilation of the monthly reports of 3,650 observers in every section of the country, and this number is being added to steadily. All the observers are practical, thinking, farm-minded men, each chosen because of the opportunities he has to observe the needs of agriculture in his own locality and for his ability to apply economic principles to current farm problems. As a group, they represent a cross section of the thoughts that the man in the furrow is thinking, and their joint analysis of existing agricultural conditions, as expressed in the Index, is considered a forward step in helping agriculture help itself.

Our cub reporter got wind of these appointments the other day and before we knew it, the rascal had got this stuck in the paper. We'll strangle that kid if he does it again. This is the way "Mickie" wrote it up:

"Sears-Roebuck of Chicago are branching out in agricultural activities all over this country and in addition to their farm Radio programs are sending out all kinds of stunts in which the farmers are interested. The latest movement by them is to appoint crop observers whose duty it will be to take an estimate of the condition of farm crops throughout their district and compile a report at intervals giving the possibilities and likely production. There is nothing made public as to the other duties of these observers but probably they will also on the side ascertain how much hooch is being distilled, how many babies are born, what the condition of whiskers are on the old pioneers, how many lice usually inhabit the healthy hens, what species of elderberries are best for drink, how many dandelions it takes to make a quart, why the wildcat is wild, why rats liye to such old ages, why some hens crow and some don't, when it is time to swipe the public nuisances what makes girls bob their locks, why boys drink beer, fight and stay out all night, etc., etc.

We are informed by the house of Shears and Sawbuck that they have appointed Truman Slater of Hillsdale and Carl Rumsey to this remarkable office and both gentlemen will be found on the job early and late."

Revival of Old Dances predicted in Detroit

An event that forecasts a nation wide revival of the old time square dances took place recently in Detroit when 50,000 people danced to the Waltz, Schottisch, quadrilles and reels during a period of two weeks.

Orchestras of typical old time fiddlers, imported from the small towns of Michigan, supplied the music. The festival took place in Convention Hall, about the largest ball room in Detroit, and was backed by the Glover Watson Organization, Dearborn subdividers and developers.

Gray haired women and girls of flapper age, fathers and sons, rich and poor, clasped hands in the "grand rights and lefts", "swing your partner" and other lively old steps that have not been seen in a great city since the day of the horse drawn street cars. Tunes reminiscent of childhood daysbrought memories back to the old folk. They included: "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning", "Jack the Ripper Lost his Slipper", "Oh, Susannah", "Pop goes the Weasel", "Clementine", "Speed the Plough", and others, as well as requested numbers. Modern "jazz" steps were barred from the floor.

There were no "wall flowers" when the fiddles struck up the "Rye Waltz". Dancers said it is a long time since Detroit saw so many shining eyes and naturally rosy cheeks. News of the infectious gayety spread throughout Detroit and its suburbs and attendance increased by hundreds every night.

Although nation wide effort is being made to bring back the square dance and its contemporaries, this is their first test of popularity, with entire great cities invited to participate. Several couples made the occasion the celebration of their silver and golden wedding anniversaries, Mr. Watson said.

"The dances were carefully planned and organized. Dancing for those who know how and lessons for learners proceeded at the same time. George Pariseau, of Bad Axe who travels hundreds of miles to play for square dances, was there with his 95 year old fiddle, and his old time orehestra.

Instructors were recruited in the same manner. Eight college youths from Detroit and Ann Arbor also volunteered as instructors and demonstrated their ability. Electric amplifiers were used to magnify the voices of the dance "callers" The dance music was broadcast nightly by W. J. R. radio station of Detroit.

The Glover Watson Organization displayed movies of Dearborn and the industrial west side of Detroit during an intermission. "Miss Dearborn", queen of the fete, was chosen by popular vote. The honor fell to Marian Ryan, 17 year old high school girl of Dearborn who secured 8816 votes out of 43,000 cast. She will receive a free trip to Europe, as a gift of the Glover Watson Organization, travelling as "Miss Dearborn".

The Southern Idea of Justice

The snuff-eaters' idea of justic is well illustrated in the burning of a Mississippi negro which took place at New Albany Mississippi early Monday morning when an infuriated half insane mob of irresponsible southerners surrounded the sheriff's automobile in which he was conveying the prisoner and took the darky from the officer chained him to a tree, poured kerosene over his body and applied the match. The papers tell the self same story as of other like affairs—that the officers were unable to cope with the mob.

We should like to see that sheriff—if he is anything like the average Southerner, the chances are he is a Roman Holiday sort of a bird just like the mob. Knowing the temperment of southern mobs why in tunket did he not take precautions to call out a regiment of state militia or a company of police and make a few cracked skulls and sore heads among the assaulters but protect his prisoner at any cost. Such is the character of the average southern officers and if you should ask him why the chances are he would reply "The Prisoner is not wo'th it Suh" or something similar. We know what the real value of the southern negro is to citizenship—just about 30 cents but he is a citizen just the same of this country, and deserves protection and hanging as per law if he is guilty. Mississippi and a few other southern states have covered themselves with ignominy many times over by these dirty murders of colored men but it don't seem to lessen the crimes of female ravaging. From a casual observation we would say the rank and file of inhabitants of Mississippi and Florida are much the same as in Civil war times when their pride got the better of their judgment by long odds, but they paid a heavy price for the blunder by losing their pleasant homes and live stock to the Northern armies, who took a forage wherever they could get it.

These fiery snuff-eaters had to be chastened similar to children of the household, and they got it durtng Sherman's march to the sea, and Lee's repulse at Gettysburg.

SICK WOMEN SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED

Letters Like This Prove the Reliability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Turtle Lake, Wisconsin. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness, backache and nervousness. I had these troubles for years and had taken other medicines for them, but I have found no medicine so good as the Vegetable Compound and I recommend it to my friends who have troubles similar to mine. I saw it advertised and thought I would try it and it has helped me in all my troubles. I have had six children and I have taken the Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound before each one was born, for weakness, vomiting, poor appetite and backache, and again after childbirth because of dizzy headaches. It is a good medicine for it always helps me. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for the last eight years for constipation." — Mrs. MABEL LA POINT, R. F. D. No. 1, Turtle Lake, Wisconsin.

In a recent canvass, 98 out of every 100 women say they were benefited by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WHY SUFFER ANOTHER DAY WITH INDIGESTION?

The big seller today for acute and chronic stomach misery is Dare's Mentha Pepsin and it is such a fine, pleasant and supremely good medicine that if the first bottle you buy doesn't help you—your druggist will return the purchase price.

One man writes, "I Cannot understand why any person will continue to suffer from gastritis or indigestion when Dare's Mentha Pepsin is available."

And tens of thousands of people—many of whom almost died with stomach agony—think the same way.

It's the right medicine for any person who suffers from bad digestion, gas, heaviness and that feeling of suffocation which is always dangerous.

For gastritis, indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach agony—acute or chronic, keep Dare's Mentha Pepsin in mind.

ALL RUN DOWN, NOW HEALTHY

"Honestly, in all my 15 years of experience as a nurse I have never known of a medicine that compares with Tanlac," is the glowing tribute of Nurse M. E. Chappelle.

"Time and again I have recommended Tanlac and always with surprising results. Some time ago my Mother complained of being generally run down and on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She had no appetite, her stomach was disordered, digestion weakened and her bowels were most irregular.

"Tanlac came to her aid at once, brought on a vigorous appetite so that she began to eat with the greatest relish, and made the digestive organs function properly once more. In a short time she was well, happy and strong, and although over 80 years of age she is now vigorous enough to look after her household duties and go out quite a little, too. This is why I praise Tanlac and consider it the best tonic and health builder ever discovered."

What Tanlac has done for others it can also do for you. Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation. Made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

In the end Tommy got out of his difficulty in a way which struck him as neat. He led Allen across the dining room at luncheon next day and brought him to the table where the princess and Janet sat.

"Allow me to introduce Mr. Allen to you," he said. Then, turning to Allen, he murmured: "My wife, and my secretary, Miss Gisborne."

That left Allen to decide for himself which was the wife and which the secretary. He was puzzled. He looked at Janet and then at Tommy. He looked at Calypso, and thought of his sister and the other unruly maidens in the canteen. At last he decided in favor of Janet.

"I want to thank you," he said to her, "for all your kindness to my sister."

Janet took that very well. She had been kind, after her own fashion, to so many different people that she could not possibly recollect them all. She inquired graciously for Miss Allen, and received an account of her marriage to a young officer she had met at the canteen.

The introduction passed off surprisingly well; but Tommy was by no means done with Allen. That evening they met again.

"Ever see any of the fellows from the old regiment nowadays?" said Allen.

Tommy would have been glad to know what the old regiment was. He wished very much that he had thought of asking Casimir and the king for a little more information before he undertook to be Colonel Heard.

"I ran into Simpson the other day," said Allen. "You remember Soapy Simpson and the old Frenchwoman in the rest billets behind Givenchy."

"Rather," said Tommy heartily, "that's how he got the name Soapy, wasn't it?"

"Was it?" he said. "But there wasn't any soap in that business, was there?"

"It may have been cheese," said Tommy. "One gets confused about these things."

"Oh," said Allen, "you're thinking of Collins. They always said it was on account of that cheese that you recommended Collins for the D. S. O."

"That," said Tommy, "is a gross slander. As a matter of fact, Collins' recommendation for the D. S. O. went in before any one heard a word about the cheese."

He felt that he owed that much to Colonel Heard's reputation. Whatever Collins had done about the cheese, whether he had eaten it, refrained from eating it, stolen it, or baited a mousetrap with it, no conscientious colonel would have recommended him for a D. S. O. on that account alone.

"Oddly enough," said Allen, "I heard from Collins the other day. I suppose you know he married that little red-haired V. A. D. who used to be at Wimereux."

"I always expected he would," said Tommy, "though in my opinion she was a great deal too good for him. I can't imagine what any girl could see in Soapy Simpson?"

"It was Collins who married her, not Simpson. Did I say Simpson?"

"Oh, Collins," said Tommy. "That's different, of course. What's Collins doing now?"

"He and she are running a chicken farm in Monte Carlo," said Allen, "making quite a good thing out of it, I believe."

After that Tommy escaped and went to bed. But Allen came at him again the next morning. He had a passion for reminiscence, and seemed to have known every single officer in "the old regiment" except Colonel Heard himself. Young Bright had come to grief over a dud check which he cashed in a night club in London. Tommy expressed great regret for his fate. Poor Styles was still limping about and would never get back the use of his leg. Tommy regretted that, too. After a while Allen got back to the subject of his sister, and Mrs. Heard and the canteen.

"She'll be surprised when I tell her I've met Mrs. Heard out here," said Allen. "That last letter I had from her she said she'd been invited to meet Mrs. Heard at a teaparty somewhere in Kensington. Unfortunately she couldn't go."

"That must have been a long while ago," said Tommy.

"Not so long," said Allen. "I only got the letter last week."

"If your sister had gone to that teaparty," said Tommy, "she wouldn't have met my wife. She's been out here for the last six months."

That, he felt, ought to put a stop to any chance meeting in London between Mrs. Heard and Miss Allen, whose name of course was not Allen any longer, for she had married an officer whom she met in the canteen—a thing which showed that Mrs. Heard had not kept a tight enough hand over her.

Tommy went to bed very well satisfied with himself. It had proved surprisingly easy to play the part of Colonel Heard. It would, no doubt, have been equally easy to play that of Lord Norheys. He began to feel sorry that he had not done so instead of claiming his own name and position. Then he remembered Miss Temple and felt glad that he had refused to be Lord Norheys. Miss Temple would, apparently, have been a hopeless obstacle to his marriage with Calypso. He wondered a little whether the existence of a Mrs. Heard would be another obstacle. If Calypso objected to a man who was engaged to be married, she might very well object even more strongly to a man who had been married for at least seven years.

CHAPTER XV

The princess, Janet Church and Tommy sat at lunch on the third day after their arrival in Breslau. Thanks to the king's influence with the manager of the hotel, they had a very pleasant table, placed in a bow window from which they had a view of the town's market place.

A large motor car drove slowly across the square and pulled up at the door of the hotel. The driver was remarkable. He wore a high cap of black fur with two long black ribbons hanging from the back of it, a brown overcoat, double-breasted and adorned with great silver buttons. The collar and cuffs of the coat were of curly black fur. Even while he sat at the steering wheel it could be seen that he was a very big man, probably tall, certainly broad and strongly built. A thick black mustache covered his mouth. He had heavy eyebrows which met across his forehead. His face was almost mahogany-colored.

Tommy stared at him with interest and pointed him out to the princess. The moment she saw him she jumped to her feet and clapped her hands in excitement and delight.

"It's Sandor," she said. "Sandor from the schloss. He has come to take me home."

Tommy realized that they were entering a new stage of their adventure, that the journey into Lystria was to begin.

They hurried over luncheon. They spent half an hour in frenzied packing. Hotel porters dragged down bags and rugs. The little party gathered in the porch of the hotel. But the start was delayed.

An official in uniform, perhaps a policeman, perhaps a military officer, appeared from the room of the hotel manager, and walked up to Tommy. He halted, saluted and in a long speech asked to be allowed to see the passports of the party. Tommy did not understand anything the man said except the word passport. That made him uneasy. Breslau is not a frontier town. The examination of travelers' passports there is unusual, and in most cases unnecessary. Tommy turned to Janet.

"Is it our passports he wants?"

Janet, who knew she was traveling with a stolen passport, became nervous. She spoke to the officer bad-temperedly, asking him what right he had to inspect their passports. It was the worst thing she could have done. Her nervous irritation aroused the man's suspicions. Her question did not frighten him at all. His uniform gave him a right to do almost anything he chose.

"Come on," said Calypso. "We can't stand here all day."

She seized Janet Church by the arm and pulled her into the car. The officer hesitated and stepped forward to stop them. He was a shade too late, but he stood between Tommy and the car, clearly determined that he at least should not get into it.

Tommy's mind worked quickly. One of two things had happened. Perhaps Colonel Heard had discovered the loss of his passports and set the German police looking for them. In that case Tommy saw no hope at all for himself and his party. Colonel Heard's passports would be recognized at once. But perhaps it was Prince von Steinveldt who had set the police in motion. He might have changed his mind about leaving Tommy free to go where he liked. He might not care to run the risk of allowing the princess to enter Lystria. But he would not know what passports the party held. It might be possible to persuade this troublesome officer that he was Colonel Heard and that the two ladies were his wife and secretary.

He took the passports out of his pockets and handed them over. The officer scrutinized them carefully. He appeared to read through all the visas and to examine all the official stamps. At last he fixed his eyes on the photograph. As a rule, passport photographs are totally useless for the purposes of identification and might just as well represent any one else. But Colonel Heard had a heavy mustache. Tommy was clean shaved. The officer looked at the photograph, looked at Tommy, looked at the photograph and became suspicious.

Mrs. Heard was a plump, good-natured lady of about forty-five, with round cheeks, a double chin and fuzzy hair. The officer looked at her photo and compared it with Janet's lean face and sinewy neck. Then he tried to see if it in any way resembled Calypso. It did not.

"These are not your passports," he said.

Tommy was actually uncomfortable; but he was not yet desperate. The officer was not searching for Colonel Heard's passports. He was merely looking out for suspicious travelers. It was possible that a bold attempt at bluff might cow the man.

"Here," he said, "I've had about enough of this tomfoolery. Hand over those passports at once and let us get away out of this."

The man did not understand a word that was said to him, but he was impressed by the confidence with which Tommy spoke. He might possibly have given back the passports, if the princess had not tried a plan of her own for getting away. She leaned forward and whispered to the driver of her car.

The man stepped out of the car and stood, a huge and threatening figure, in front of the officer. He deliberately unbuttoned his long overcoat, flung it open and displayed a whole row of weapons tucked into his belt. There were two large pistols, silver mounted, with very long barrels. They looked as if they might be of some value as antiques. There was also a heavy modern revolver which was certainly valuable as a weapon of offense. There were five large knives, two of them straight and pointed like daggers, the other three curved in a manner that struck Tommy as horribly murderous. These were evidently the man's favorite weapons. His fingers closed round the handle of one of them.

But the police officer was a man of courage. He had, besides, help at hand. From various parts of the market square uniformed men appeared, all of them with swords, some of them with revolvers. They gathered round the group in front of the hotel.

Tommy was frightened. A fight in the streets of Breslau might end in a victory for the German police, or it might end—that seemed almost probable—in a victory for the militant chauffeur. Either way Tommy and his party would get into serious trouble.

"Look here, he said to the officer "If you don't believe we're the people we say we are, send in to the hotel and ask for Mr. Allen. He'll identify us."

The officer, who did not understand a word Tommy said, stared at him angrily.

"Oh, hang it," said Tommy. "Why can't the fool understand plain English? Say it to him," he turned to Janet, "in German or some language he does understand. And at the same time tell this swashbuckler to stop fiddling with his revolver and get back into the car."

Janet, who was quite as frightened as Tommy was, began with the orders to the chauffeur. She gave them in German, and the man took no notice of them at all. He understood German no better than the officer understood English.

"You tell him," said Tommy to the princess.

Calypso spoke to the man in a language which sounded as if several hungry ducks were quacking, all at the same time. The man replied with a number of deep bass quacks, which sounded threatening. Calypso quacked back at him. The man bowed low to her, kissed her hand, and stepped back into the car.

Irish Wake

A wake is a vigil with a corpse. The word is derived from "waecan," Anglo-Saxon for a watching. It is still customary in many countries for friends and neighbors of the deceased to sit up nights with the corpse until it is buried. The custom probably originated in the ancient superstition that unless carefully guarded a corpse was in danger of being carried away by spirits from Hades. The Irish wake is especially notorious. In some parts of Ireland those remaining up nights with a corpse spend the time in drinking, dancing and telling jokes and stories. It is a highly festive occasion. Grace Greenwood in her "Stories of Travel" has this to say about the Irish wake: "A wake, sure it's an entertainment a man gives after he is dead, when his disconsolate friends all assemble at his house to discuss his virtues and drink his poteen."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Fine Distinction Made Between Common Words

"Loan" as a verb is extensively used in the United States. There is some authority for such usage since it has so appeared from time to time in literature over the last four or five hundred years. Such usage, however, is frowned upon by grammarians who insist that "loan" is a noun only, says the Literary Digest.

Dictionaries, which must be simply recorders of the language as it is used, recognize "loan" as a verb, meaning "to lend money, especially on interest," and Doctor Vizetelly in his "Desk Book of Errors in English" says: "'Loan, lend'; one may raise (put an end to) a 'loan' by paying both principal and interest, and another may 'lend' money to do so. The use of 'loan' as a verb, meaning 'to grant the loan of or lend, as ships, money, linen provisions, etc.,' dates from the year 1200 and is accepted as good English. Some purists, however, characterize it colloquial." To some ears "lend" may be preferable, but "loan" is not incorrect, and has the support of Acts 34 and 35 of Henry VIII (1542), Langley (1644), Fossenden (1729), Calhoun (1834), Brownson (1847), Bonamy Price (1800) the North American Review, February, 1901, etc.

WINDOW GLASS IS HELP FOR POULTRY

A short time ago scientists found that animals do better when they can be in the open at least a few hours each day exposed to the direct rays of the sun. This has been demonstrated to be especially true of hogs and chickens. The reason is that ordinary window glass acts as a filter to the direct rays of the sun. Glass filters out the so-called ultra-violet rays—the rays that have a great deal to do with invigorating the animal.

Recently Prof. L. V. Crum, physicist of Iowa State college, has completed some tests that are of interest in this connection.

Professor Crum took 24 chickens that had been kept under ordinary glass for three weeks. The birds were divided into three groups of eight each. One group was housed under glass cloth. The second group was housed under celo-glass, another product that does not exclude ultra-violet light, and a third group was housed under ordinary window glass. All were given the same feed and general care. The experiment continued for four weeks. Two of the chickens kept under ordinary glass died of rickets. The remaining six gained 180 per cent in weight during the four-week period. All of the eight chickens kept under the glass cloth remained healthy and made a gain of 250 per cent during the four-week period. The group kept under the celo-glass did not do so well as that under the glass cloth. In this group two birds also died, but it appears that one of them died from an unavoidable cause, for which the celo-glass could not be blamed. The other, however, died of rickets, but is was not a healthy bird when the experiment began.

While this test is not reported because it is conclusive, we refer to it merely to remind our readers that ordinary window glass is not as good a product as we have been in the habit of thinking, because it screens out some of the most active rays of the sunlight, says the Wisconsin Farmer. No doubt the open front houses that have come into such general use in recent years owe their beneficial effect upon the flock at least partly to the fact that the ultra-violet rays of the sun pass freely through the curtain fronts.

Many Poultry Diseases Are Easily Preventable

Though most poultry diseases are curable, they all require more time and work than the average farm flock is worth. Therefore, it may easily be seen that prevention should be the first and most important rule in poultry sanitation and disease control. Roup, tuberculosis, chickenpox and fowl cholera are the most dangerous diseases affecting chickens.

Most farm poultry houses lack a simple and effective method of ventilation. In many houses the fowls are overcrowded, and when this is the case and there is no good method of ventilation, the air is sure to become damp, and we all know that it is in just this sort of an atmosphere that roup thrives. To avoid this condition, see to it that the front of your poultry house has an open space that equals at least one-fourth of the floor space of the building. And allow at least three square feet of floor space for each fowl.

Poultry diseases spread through the droppings of diseased birds. Most flock owners have dropping boards under the roosts, and if they haven't they should have by all means. If a part of the flock is diseased, millions of germs may be removed through the droppings instead of leaving them in the litter to contaminate the other birds. Much of the surplus moisture is also removed through the droppings.

Keep the drinking water pure and clean, and sterilize the vessels every two or three days so long as disease is present in the flock. A teaspoonful of permanganate of potash may be dissolved in all the water it will make purple for drinking water whenever the birds seem in need of a tonic.

Poultry Notes

Separate the cockerels and the pullets.

Give plenty of feed to growing stock.

Each duck yields about two ounces of marketable feathers.

Houses must be sprayed frequently with a good disinfectant to keep down mites, lice, and disease germs.

Rations for the laying hens should be compounded so that the hens will eat at least one-half as much mash as grain.

Soft-shelled eggs may be caused by a lack of shell material, which may be the case if the hens do not have access to oyster shell.

It is profitable to keep hens comfortable. Keep the coop free from draft, still well ventilated and dry. The coldest coop is the tightly closed, ill-ventilated one.

The egg is made up of several different substances, and unless these are available in the ration eggs cannot be produced.

The principal thing in the raising of ducklings or goslings is plenty of water. No need of their being in it at all, but enough at all times to drink.

Cripples, birds with frozen feet, crooked backs, weak legs or deformed toes can never become profitable layers. They spoil the looks of the flock and add to the cost of feeding.

Sugar From Artichoke

By a process discovered by experts of the government bureau of standards, sugar one and a half times as sweet as the cane and beet varieties may be extracted from artichokes. The refining treatment necessary is so simple that, it is said, the cost of manufacturing the product can be greatly reduced. Because of the low expense in cultivating the vegetable and its heavy yield when compared to other sugar-bearing plants, it is believed the artichoke may be extensively employed to provide a great part of the future crops. Lack of means of crystallizing the extract has been a bar heretofore.

Obituary

Clara Belle Bohn was born in Moscow township, Hillsdale county February 18, 1899 and passed to the great beyond September 12, 1925 following an operation at Ford's Hospital in Detroit,

On November 12, 1916 she was united in marriage with Arthur Floyd Moore of Detroit and have since made their home there. To this union were born three children, Mary, age 8, Roy, age seven and Stanley age five years, who with the father are left to mourn the untimely death of a loving mother and wife.

Of the immediate relatives surviving are a father Conrad F, Bohn of North Adams, a brother Carol Bohn, a sister Jennie Bohn two half sisters, Mrs. Alexander McBeth and Mrs. Dell Burke all of Detroit and a half brother and sister Charles and Frances Bohn of this locality besides a host of relatives and friends who were shocked and saddened by the news of her death.

The remains were brought to the home of C, F. Bohn from which funeral services were conducted by Rev. Virgil Hunt Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock and she was laid to rest amid a bank of flowers beside her mother in the North Adams cemetery.

The Debate At Jerome

On Saturday evening there took place at Jerome Methodist church a debate on the queston "Resolved That no individual should engage in War" and Rev. Scott took the affirmative and Harley Lane took the negative side of the argument. Both gentlemen created quite a stir with their talks and both did ample justice to the subject. The house was well filled with spectators and the judges decided that the negative had won. Both gentlemen put up mighty good arguments. George B. Smith was chairman of the meeting and judges were Harley Voorhees, C. W. McGregor and I. W. Wertenberger.

Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. M. Kempton of North Adams celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary Saturday, September 26th. A banquet was served in the parlors of the Congregational Church to about fifty guests, following which there was a short program.

Mr. and Mrs. Kempton have been residents of Hillsdale County all their lives. Mr. Kempton is a son of David B. Kempton who took up the land which Mr. Kempton still has in his possession from the government in 1837. Mr. Kempton's ancestory in this country dates back to 1623, when the first immigrant, Ephriam Kempton, arrived at Plymouth, Mass. in the ship Ann, which was one of the companion ships of the Mayflower.

Until the last few years Mr. Kempton has resided on his farm one half mile west of North Adams, always taking an active interest in civic and political affairs. He was for over twenty years a member of the school board and for several terms acted as supervisor of the township. In 1919 he was elected Treasurer of Hillsdale County, serving for four years at which time Mr. and Mrs. Kempton resided in Hillsdale later returning to their present home in North Adams. He is a past master of the Masonic Lodge, in which he has always taken an active interest.

Mrs. Kempton is the daughter of Joseph and Lydia Noyes Bagley whose ancestry dates back to early New England stock. Mrs. Kempton is a descendant of Colonel John Franklin who played such an active part in settling the land controversy between Connecticut and Pennsylvania before and during the Revolutionary War.

For many years both Mr. and Mrs. Kempton have been active supporters of the Congregational Church. In early years they did much to aid in a musical way, and Mrs. Kempton has always been a devoted worker in church and Sunday School activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Kempton have four children—Mrs. Fred Randolph of Jerome, Michigan, J. E. Kempton of North Adams, Dr. R. M. Kempton of Saginaw and L. R. Kempton of Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

What the Aircraft Board Is Learning From Army and Navy Officers.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL'S pet scheme, the creation of a separate department of aeronautics, received many sharp blows during the first week of the hearings held by the President's special aircraft board. For the army, it was opposed by Acting Secretary of War Davis, Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service; Major General Hines, chief of staff, and Brig. Gen. Hugh Drum, assistant chief of staff. For the navy, vigorous objections were voiced by Secretary Wilbur, Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations; Admiral Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, and Admiral Strauss of the general board. Incidentally, Colonel Mitchell has been suspended from active service.

Mr. Davis told the board and the American people that there was "no need for fear about the condition of the nation's air forces," insisting that the service would be quickly put in excellent shape if congress would grant larger appropriations. General Patrick, though opposing a separate aeronautics department in the cabinet, did favor the consolidation of the War and Navy departments into a department of national defense; furthermore, he supported the charges made by Colonel Mitchell, that the development of an adequate air froce has been hampered by higher officials who do not comprehend its vast importance. He justified the policy of conservative building of planes until there is more certainty as to the types wanted for quantity production. But in contrast with Mitchell's assertion that the army has but a handful of effective, up-to-date planes, General Patrick said he has 396 fit for use in an emergency. Of these, 90 are bombardment planes, 249 observation planes, 26 pursuit planes and 31 training planes. He stated he had no attack planes. In addition, he has 40 obsolete planes and 1,000 others that could not be used in war.

Asked just what is the matter with the air service, General Patrick replied:

"The air service is not treated as a real member of the family. Our recommendations are frequently ignored and our motives questioned. The fact is that the development of the air arm has lessened the importance of every other arm of the national defense.

"Aircraft reaching out over sea have minimized somewhat the need of coast defense.

"Scouting far in advance, they have made cavalry less necessary for reconnaissance.

"Conducting operations far beyond the range of land guns they have made artillery less important, and even the infantry, the backbone of the army.

"So, coming into being as it has, the air arm has not been welcomed. The recommendations for its development must be passed on by officers belonging to these various other arms whose importance is being minimized by the new force and they—well, they don't realize the importance of the new weapon. It was a long time before I could get any recognition of the air force in the War department."

Generals Hines and Drum disagreed with General Patrick as to the superior importance of the air force to infantry, cavalry and artillery. In the matter of congressional appropriations, Representative Vinson of Georgia, a member of the board, asserted congress had voted all the air force funds the War department had asked for.

NEXT the navy came to bat, and Secretary Wilbur led off with the declaration that to divorce the aeronautics arm from the navy arm would be "a well nigh irreparable mistake." Admiral Eberle asserted that adoption of the Mitchell proposals would "bring disaster to national defense interests"; and Admiral Moffett argued that because of the intimate connection between naval vessels and naval aircraft in the fighting of future sea battles, it would be suicidal to take aviation away from the navy and put it in a separate department.

"Such a change in organization would violate the fundamental requirement of national defense, which is unity," he explained. "The plan for a separate department is unsound strategically, tactically and economically. The organization of a single air service would fatally complicate the national defense problem. This has been amply demonstrated abroad. Commander J. H. Towers, a naval aviator of wide experience, who has lately returned from duty abroad, has stated, 'The more I see of the separate air force idea the more opposed I am to it.'"

Admiral Strauss said that the experiment of England and Italy with a unified air service has been a failure and England is reverting to the old system.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Postmaster General New were called on to tell the board about commercial aviation prospects, and they agreed that America is about to witness the development of the greatest commercial air transport system in the world, if only the government does its part.

Mr. Hoover told the board that commercial aviation can be established on a vast scale in this country without the payment of the large government subsidies to private enterprise which have resulted in the development of the European aerial carriage systems and, he believes, without the payment of any direct subsidy at all. But it will be necessary for congress to enact air transport legislation analogous to the merchant marine law, he said, and to provide for air navigation service by the government such as is afforded water navigation.

BESIDES starting its technical investigation of the causes of the Shenandoah disaster, the naval court of inquiry brought out a number of facts concerning the dirigible's fatal flight. It was learned that Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne had recommended that the flight be deferred until the second week of September, but this was not because of probable weather conditions, but solely on the ground of the limited time for receiving, regassing and refueling the airship at Scott field, Illinois, and at Detroit. The Navy department already had deferred to the opinion of Lansdowne that the flight should be made in September instead of July because the earlier month was the season of violent storms in the Middle West, but it disapproved of his suggestion to wait until the second week of September because it was desired that the dirigible should fly over a number of state fairs held during the first week.

JOSEPH CAILLAUX, French finance minister, together with his colleagues of the debt-funding commission, arrived in Washington, prepared to settle the French debt terms quickly and avowedly hopeful of that result. On the way across the Atlantic M. Caillaux formulated the terms he intended to offer the United States, but he did not tell them to anyone, not even to the other members of the commission. Moreover, the American commission has agreed that the proceedings shall be in secret, so probably the public must await their conclusion to learn authoritatively what is offered by the Frenchman. It was stated in Washington that if no agreement has been reached before October 3, when Caillaux must leave for home to prepare for the opening of the French parliament, he will offer annual payments, beginning in 1926, of $40,000,000, to be increased after 1931. If this is not accepted he will ask the United States to send a commission across to study France's financial situation and capacity to pay. He frankly said he expected easier terms than those granted Great Britain.

AS WAS expected, the League of Nations found the Mosul question too hard for it to settle, and so referred it to The Hague court. The British and French members of the inquiry committee had agreed that the league should handle the problem, but the Swedish delegate was obdurate, and as the constitution demands unanimity of all committee reports, he carried his point and had the matter referred. The British, both the delegates in Geneva and the officials at home, are much disgruntled and now some of them begin to doubt the full efficacy of the league. As for Turkey, there is no assurance that she will accept the decision of the world court if it is adverse to her claims.

ACCORDING to the London Daily Graphic, the British government has learned that since 1922 more than $3,000,000 of Moscow gold has been paid to Socialist members of parliament, trade union officials and prominent radical leaders. The home office has the details of the case and the paper says there would be a tremendous political sensation if the names of the recipients of the propaganda money were made public. The largest payment to an individual is said to have been $26,000. Another London paper says Georges Tchitcherin, soviet foreign minister, is likely to be removed because he failed to prevent Germany's turning to England and France instead of to Russia for a security pact. He may be succeeded by M. Karakhan, now ambassador to China.

AMERICAN aviators who are in the service of the sultan of Morocco in the Riffian war have been warned by the State department that they are violating the law and are liable to arrest and punishment in the United States. But they assert they have taken no oath of allegiance, have signed no enlistment papers and feel quite justified in serving under the sultan. They declare they will remain there throughout the campaign. The French commander is making use of them continually and they have demonstrated their efficiency in many bombing operations, these frequently being against undefended Riff villages. It is reported in Fez that Abd-el-Krim has offered $5,000 for every member of the Sherifian squadron brought to him dead or alive. The French and Spanish armies are still advancing into Riff territory but will soon be compelled to dig in for the rainy season, when the more mobile natives will have a chance for swift raiding. Their foes hope and expect that the winter season will bring famine that will compel the Riffians to submit.

INSIDE facts of the futile campaign to secure for Gen. Leonard Wood the Republican presidential nomination in 1920 were brought out in Chicago in the suit of William Cooper Procter of Cincinnati to recover $50,000 from Col. A. A. Sprague of Chicago. During the campaign they jointly signed a note for $100,000 to obtain a loan from a bank. The defense alleged the campaign cost $1,750,000 and was conducted entirely by Procter who had sole control of the expenditure of the money, telling those who protested against extravagance that it was none of their business.

PROMINENT men who died during the week included James Deering, Chicago and Miami millionaire and former official of the Deering Harvester company, who succumbed to a complication of diseases while at sea on his return from France; Sir Francis Darwin, son of Charles Darwin and himself an eminent scientist; Paul Bartlett, American sculptor, at his home in Rome; A. C. Bedford, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey; and Sir Pratap Singh, the maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, whose nephew and heir was the "Mr. A." of the blackmail case which created such a sensation in London last winter.

RESUMPTION of civil war in China between the forces of General Feng and Marshal Chang Tso-lin is expected "within a few days," according to dispatches from Tokyo. The first fighting will be for the control of Shansi province, and Marshal Wu Pei-Fu is likely to take an active part there. The Japanese government has declared it will maintain neutrality.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has issued a proclamation recommending that the week of October 4 be observed as national fire prevention week. He appeals for "earnest study of the principles of fire protection" and asks all state and municipal officials and citizens generally for fullest co-operation.

Bribery Charged to British Labor Leaders

London.—London is much aroused over the exposure of the chief Communist agitators among leaders in English life who have received money from Russia.

A. A. Purcell, Labor member of parliament and one of the leaders of the left wing of the Labor party, was a member of the British trade union delegation which visited Moscow last December. On his return he was closely interrogated on December 29 by the executive committee of the trade union congress, of which he is a member, about an alleged receipt for £5,000 ($25,000) from the Soviet government.

Mr. Purcell said the money was his own. When pressed he said he had been robbed of £5,000 on the train going to Moscow and the Soviets made good the loss. Pressed to tell where he got so much money, he said it was intrusted to him by friends for a private trade deal.

Five days before the opening of the Labor party congress at Liverpool Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the party and former prime minister, had launched a vigorous attack on Communists who are seeking admittance to the party. Writing in the Forward, a Glasgow labor paper, he says their admittance is impossible.

"In office and out of office we have found that their chief desire is to hamper us," he said. "Their criticisms are more unscrupulous than those of our sworn enemies."

SICK WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Can Be Carried Comfortably Over The Critical Period by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound —Note Mrs. Headden's Case

Macon, Georgia.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with my whole right side and could not lie on my left side. I was in bed about two months and could not get up only as my son would lift me. After doctoring without relief a man who was rooming with us told my son that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured his mother at the Change of Life, so I began taking your medicine. After taking it for two weeks I could get out of my bed by myself. I am now 53 years old and in better health and stronger than ever in my life. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to many suffering women, young and old, and you may use my name anywhere as long as you please. I will be glad to answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. F. B. HEADDEN, 5 Holt Avenue, Macon Georgia.

In a recent country-wide canvass of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 200,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported they had been benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Brought Up on a Farm

As a young man Dr. Pierce practiced medicine in a rural district and was known far and wide for his great success in alleviating disease. He early moved to Buffalo and put up in ready-to-use form, his Golden Medical Discovery, the well-known tonic for the blood, which is an extract of native roots. This "Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's clears away pimples and annoying eruptions, tends to keep the complexion fresh and clear. It corrects the disordered conditions in a sick stomach, aids digestion, acts as a tonic and enriches the blood. Vim is sure to follow its use. All dealers. Tablets or liquid.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Ann Arbor—A report on the advisability of erecting a new stadium is expected at a meeting of the regents of the university. A special committee of the senate council will make the report.

Grand Rapids—The Consumers Power company soon will offer to purchase the municipal lighting system which furnishes power to city-owned buildings and boulevard and corner lights.

Paw Paw—In recognition of 50 years membership in the Odd Fellows Lodge of this place, an appropriation medal was presented to Captain James D. Bullard, of St. Cloud, Fla., formerly of Paw Paw.

Lansing—Mrs. Georgia White, of Grand Rapids, was chosen leader of Michigan's woman Democrats, when the minority party executives met here to bolster up its spirits and make preliminary plans for 1926.

Trenton—Mail delivery for the village of Trenton has been authorized by the postoffice department, Fred Pomering, postmaster, announced. The new service will be started November 16, covering the village twice a day.

Grand Rapids—An inquiry into the collection of a toll fee from motorists at the temporary bridge on the Bridge road as in the days when a ferry was operated at the spot, revealed that Ottawa County officials had sanctioned the charging of the toll.

Port Huron—U. S. Representative Louis Cramton will be the guest of the city October 15. He will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Hawaii." Representative Cramton also will receive the thanks of the city for his efforts in obtaining the lighthouse park from the government.

Ann Arbor—Debaters from the University of Michigan will make a trip to seven of the largest English universities during the coming spring, it was announced by Professor Thomas C. Trueblood, head of the public speaking department of the university, and coach of the varsity debating team.

Utica—Announcement was made by the comptroller of currency that a charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Utica, Mich., with a capital of $25,000. The new bank succeeds the Farmers' and Merchants' bank at Utica. August B. Hahn, is president and E. F. Schulz is cashier.

Saginaw—Miss Ottilia M. Frisch, Saginaw county school commissioner, was elected secretary of the commissioners' department of the Michigan State Teachers' association at the final meeting of the commissioners' conference. Fred Fischer, assistant commissioner at Wayne county, was named chairman.

Bay City—Bay City is to be host to a group of Red Cross workers during the first week of November, when a regional conference is to be held here. About 20 Michigan counties will be represented. The National Red Cross will send a speaker of wide repute here, and the veterans bureau will also be represented.

Bay City—Martin H. Carmody, of Grand Rapids, deputy supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, has accepted an invitation to visit Bay City on the occasion of the installation of new officers on October 7. A number of men prominent in the Knights of Columbus from various points in Michigan will also be present.

Lansing—The State Conservation Commission passed a resolution Sept. 21 attributing the serious forest fire losses of the last summer to the fact that Michigan has no slash law, and calling upon Gov. Alex. J. Groesbeck to call a conference for the drafting of a uniform slash law for submission to the Legislatures of Ontario, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Ionia—The Ionia Water Power Electric company will be purchased by the Consumers Power company, according to information here. It is an old established firm, dating from 1888, with one of its original stockholders, H. R. Wagar, as present president. The Consumers company purchased the Ionia Gas company a few weeks ago. It is understood the gas and electric offices will be combined here.

Saginaw—County school commissioners from all over Michigan, state department of public instruction officials, officials of the Michigan State Teachers association and others were here Sept. 23 and 24 for a two day conference. Subjects of general interest to the commissioners were discussed. The educators were entertained at a dinner at the Hotel Bancroft, and an address by Dr. Hilton Ira Jones followed.

Lansing—The State Conservation Commission has decided tentatively that it will be necessary for the state to disguise its game and fire wardens as land experts and send them out to decide what lands are eligible for registration under the Pearson timber land tax act. The act was passed to encourage the holding of potential timber land. Under its terms all general property taxes would be set aside in favor of an annual acreage tax of 5 cents a year on pine lands and 10 cents a year on hardwood lands.

Lansing—Approximately 350 miles of highway construction work will be completed this year, compared with 849 miles last year, according to an estimate by Frank L. Rogers, state highway commissioner. The marked slump in the amount of mileage is in line with the announced policy of Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck and members of the State Administrative Board to cut down to a 'pay as you go" basis. The cost of road work this year averaged about $35,000 a mile for concrete and around $11,000 for gravel according to Rogers.

Had Lost All Hope of Ever Being Well

Read story of the fight for health and final victory as told by Mrs. James A. Hall, Box 31, Norris City, Illinois.

"About twelve years ago my health failed. I could not eat anything without suffering. I had heartburn, sour stomach, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells, pains in my back and sides and a cough almost like consumption. Nothing helped me. I grew worse and was able to sit up only part of the time. I had lost all hope of ever being any better when someone gave me a Pe-ru-na book. The book described my case so truly that I began to take Pe-ru-na. After two and a half bottles I could eat without suffering and improved from then on. I took eight bottles and felt like a new person. That was fourteen years ago. So many diseases are due to catarrh that I think Pe-ru-na the greatest family medicine in the world."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has been doing just such work as this.

Many Kinds of Oak

The sign by which all oaks may be recognized is the acorn. All acorn-bearing trees were given a name long years ago by the Britons, and in our modern language this name is oak. As time went on and settlement of the world was extended many kinds of oaks were found, and there are now known no less than 300.

What Pretty Girl Did for Sick Stomach

Miss E. Rich of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I don't know what the cause was, but every few days my stomach would feel all bloated up with gas, my appetite was poor and I felt sick to my stomach—to say nothing of headaches.

"I never thought of using Carter's Little Liver Pills until nothing seemed to help. After using Carter's I felt relieved at once—and now as soon as my stomach 'talks' back I answer with Carter's and have the last word."

Why Is a Newspaper Publisher a Goat?

We have often noticed during the 30 years we have been in the printing trade that a large amount of free advertising goes with the business, and the newspaper publisher is constantly menaced by some form of circular of publicity cunningly disguised, and which he should receive pay for, and if he could collect would amount to thousands of dollars during the year, and the question naturally arises "Why the free publicity?" Some forlorn rascal who engaged in the art preeervative way back in past years, no doubt started the notion by "passing the buck" to some one who wanted a little praise for something he had done or undone, and thus the miserable business got a foothold, which it has maintained ever since.

The days of the one-horse four-corners weekly with subscriptions paid in wood and pumpkins have about ended, and a man either runs a paper of consequence with real currency of the realm or he quits right quick—in other words the running expenses of the average paper in country villages to-day is no small item, and he who would succeed and realize a profit must look to his pay roll. Help and materials are terribly high and it costs 80 per cent more to keep the wheels turning than 15 years ago. and the man who fritters away his time and space for less than $2.00 per hour or 25c per inch is bound for ruin at a galloping pace. Hence the wide-awake publisher declines with thanks most of the sugar coated propositions sent out by publicity sharks throughout the United States. The chances are the man who invents this cunningly camouflaged stuff is paid a tremendous salary (so great is the stake) and so important and lucrative the results, and any man who resides in the country districts and is foolish enough to publish this line of gaff will eventually become an easy mark. We do not presume to mention names but it is a fact that many of the fairs and carnivals make it a point to sandwich in line upon line of readers free accompanying their paid space, which under the circumstances the publisher cannot easily refuse.

In small villages of 500 population more or less, it is indeed fortunate to keep a real live paper as it should be kept, since the business of little bergs is so seriously cut into by near-by cities, but most of them are making manful struggles to keep the newspaper going.

There is in every small village a class of disgruntled birds who get slightly offended with the local editor and develop a strong admiration for the publisher of the big daily and they believe the daily paper in an adjoining city is their salvation when in reality the daily is their worst enemy, and if they knew the injustice it worked to the home publisher, they would quit at once. If you should see the local paper moving out you would at once want the reason, and no one removal would land your village in the cemetery quicker than this.

If you have an idea the daily has any interest in the welfare of North Adams other than the size of your pocketbook you are mistaken, for its little they care for your ideals or your troubles. They'll soak you $7.00 to $10.00 for an auction bill ad set off on the back page in small type and laugh at your joke. Nine tenths of their circulation for which you pay 40c to 50c per inch and get only one-tenth benefit, is in the distance, several miles away—too far for you to draw from.

Do they pay your village tax?

They do not.

When a loved one dies, do they publish the obituary?

They do not except as you pay them by the word.

You send an item with a number of people's names not familiar to the daily force and Jim Johnson is quite likely to appear as John Jackson, and so it goes.

Finally, we don't believe there is a person in North Adams or vicinity whe would like to see the village without a paper.

Death of Augustus Borden

Augustus Borden, brother of J. H. and Ed Borden and Mrs. Edd Carter, an uncle of Everett Borden the old-time singing master of this village, passed away last week Wednesday afternoon at the home of his son, Charles, near Jonesville aged 85 years, after a long illness from kidney trouble. Augustus was a ranking craftsman, being one of the oldest Masons in Michigan, having been born in the state of Ohio Dec. 27, 1839. He joined the Hamilton Lodge at Moscow one year after the breaking out of the Civil war, and later joined the Royal Arch Masonry at Jonesville. He resided in North Adams, Moscow, Chicago, Mt. Pleasant and at other points during a long active life, He was the father of one daughter Carrie, also musically inclined, now Mrs. Stogvill of Buffalo, and one son, Charles Borden of Scipio township.

Many were the happy singing schools conducted by Mr. Borden in the community and the vocal music of the times received an uplift.

Funeral services were conducted at the home of his son Sept. 18th and the remains conveyed to Mt. Pleasant, Michigan for burial.

"There is a reaper grim, whose name is death, and with his sickle keen he reaps the bearded grain and the flowers that grow between"

We Attended The Jackson Fair

And we wish to state right here that it was managed on a strictly clean basis this season for we understand Police Chief VanDeBogart had his strict orders to pull any and all offenders who seemed the least little bit off color or who wanted to pull off any buzzing little wheel deals. We saw no gambling devices of any nature inside the grounds. The splendid exhibits of vegetables and fruits such as Jackson county is noted for, was wonderful and no mistake The exhibits of splendid automobiles was beyond comparison and stock entries we suppose up to the standard.

The sore thumb of the Fair this season was the terribly inclement weather which kept a large delegation away—and also we hate to say it—but the sky high price of admission (50c) was beyond a large number of pocketbooks among certain classes of people who might have ran the perilous chance of exhausting the family exchequer by paying 35c and 40c stiff though it might seem. These two factors we are sorry to say entered in with brazen impudance and practically swamped what might have been a successful enterprise. We are genuinely sorry for the officials of the organization, since it is plain they have labored and sweat blood to build up what the Burris administration failed to conceive—viz., a thoroughly clean and well financed fair.

It is too bad the powers behind the throne in Jackson county could not have seen the dilemma better than three years ago when things began to go awry. At that time a strong clean hand could have brought the Fair out of the woods, but alas and alack! The burnt out ashes of a mis-managed and immoral exhibition are the reward. We feel sorry for ourselves—since we did our best to advertise the Jackson Fair this season, and we suppose we are among a bunch of watching and waiting creditors—but it cannot be helped. Let the county fairs of the state of Michigan profit by Jackson's fiaso, and see to it they build on the solid rock of reputability, not the shifting sands of a "get-the-dough-at any-price" philosophy. Many a man has lost his soul by reaching for more a little too far out, likewise many a Fair has gone to the junk heap by public approval simply because they followed the God of Mammon at the expense of decency.

Hillsdele Fair this week.

RADIO IS GREAT BOON TO AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS

No Invention Since the Steam Engine Has Such a Widespread Influence Upon Rural Life, Says Radio Head.

FARM'S ISOLATION NOW PAST

Broadcasting Has Banished the Dullness, the Utter Monotony and Lack of Recreation That Were Causing the Girls and Boys and the Hired Hands to Desert the Soil and Seek the City.

In an address before the Advertising Club of New York City General James G. Harbord, the commander of the Marines at Chateau Thierry during the World War and who now holds the position of President of the Radio Corporation of America, said radio has a greater application to the farm and farm life than to any other phase of our national life. General Harbord speaks with authority on this topic for he is not only one of the leaders of radio in the United States but his boyhood days on a farm have given him an intimate insight into the problems which confront the American farmer. His address in part follows:

As more or less of a Kansas farmer I am glad of this opportunity to say a few words to you on the relation of radio to the farmer. Though I must confess that I have not worked steadily at farming—indeed have missed quite a number of crop seasons during thirty-four years of absence in the Army and several more covering my recent activities in the radio industry, my memories of sixteen-hour-days on a Kansas farm, as we lived it forty years and more ago, are keen enough to give me a sympathetic understanding of the farmer's major problems. I spent my boyhood on the Kansas prairies, went from the farm to an agricultural college, where I managed to graduate, supposed to be in possession of whatever science there was in the farming profession at that time. To the end of my days, while memory endures, I shall continue to have an appreciation of life as the farmer lives it.

Radio a Rural Regenerator

So that it is with the feeling that I am, perhaps, in some small measure discharging the obligations of forty years ago, that I see radio—my present field of endeavor—becoming more and more a factor in the life of the farmer.

A brief consideration of the farming industry will help us to appreciate what radio has done and can do for the farmer. Most of us, as city dwellers, do not take the farming industry at its full face value. We fail to recognize its tremendous magnitude and its paramount importance to the nation. Farming is not only our greatest industry, but is greater than all our other industries combined.

The sometimes inarticulate and unappreciated farmer—the symbolic Man with the Hoe—is the most important single element of our many millions. There are thirty-one millions of American farmers, nearly thirty per cent of our total population. If we add those persons living in agricultural communities, though not actually engaged in farming, we have a total of fifty-one millions, or nearly half the total population of our country.

With the tremendous expansion of farm wealth in the recent decades the problems of farm management and farm labor have more than multiplied. The great growth of our urban population in recent years has been due, in large measure, to migration from the rural districts. This represents a great loss of man-power on the farm; and it is a grave problem which affects you and me ultimately, just as it now concerns the farmer of the North, South, East and West. A similar movement from country to city preceded the fall of the Roman Empire.

The immediate reason for this exodus from the countryside, aside from its part as possibly one of the great cycles of history, lies primarily in the greater opportunities for recreation and interest afforded by life in the city.

Something has had to be done to cherish our farm life and safeguard our great farming industry. The farm has had to be made more attractive, both in the actual work done, and in the actual living of its life. Much has been done and much remains to be done.

The rural telephone first came and, to some extent, helped to end the isolation of farm life. The farmer and his family, even though many miles distant, could keep in touch with their neighbors when the telephone line came to their home. The rural telephone line is usually a purely local institution. It is of practical utility, but it is also a convenient means of keeping in touch with friends living too far away for face-to-face conversation and exchange of gossip. Farmers' party lines, I have an idea, are largely supported by the exchange of news between the women of the rural neighborhood. The farmers' party line, with numerous eavesdroppers listening in on conversations not intended for them, must have been a legitimate ancestor of the broadcasting of our modern day.

Magic Advent of Broadcasting

The memorable year of 1920 marked the magic advent of radio broadcasting. In that year dawned the art of disseminating information and entertainment to unlimited audiences—and with it there dawned a new era for the farmer and his family—and farm isolation became a matter of history.

Radio broadcasting, I devoutly believe, is the greatest force yet developed by man in his march down the slopes of time. Since Gutenberg devised his crude wooden type and made printing possible nearly five centuries ago, there has been no single invention so closely touching human interest and human welfare as this miracle of the ages. The voice of radio broadcasting penetrates the cottage of the humblest farmer as readily as it does the palace of the Fifth Avenue millionaire. It laughs at distance. It recognizes no distinctions and plays no favorites. It is the entertainment and the education for the million and as such is available to everyone, being literally as free as air.

For a fraction of the cost of his motor car the farmer buys his seat in the radio audience, in the form of a receiving set. Thereafter the farmhouse is in touch with city life; its isolation has forever gone. Via radio the farmer goes to distant markets to learn conditions and better to direct the shipment of his crops and live stock. Through radio he receives the advice of agricultural authorities. It is a friend in the time of the farmer's need. Be it insect plague, animal epidemic, threatening weather or other adverse condition, the radio brings to the farmer the information necessary to meet the problems of the time. With these utilitarian benefits of radio there come a wealth of entertainment.

Gives Information and Entertainment

Now for a few of the details of these varied services which roughly divide into the two parts of information and entertainment.

The chief handicap to the farmer in marketing the results of his labor has been his lack of knowledge of market demands and the trend of prices on the day when he started his products to market. Radio can supply the need by giving market information, accurately and timely. That is what is being done by broadcasting stations throughout the country with the free co-operation of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, similar bureaus in the states, and certain farm journals whose interest in this work extends quite unselfishly beyond their printed pages or their subscription lists. With accurate crop and market reports the farmer, in full confidence, can work with his radio information in much the same manner as the stock broker does with his ticker tape in buying and selling stocks and bonds.

The city listener, tuning in on a station only to hear a voice reeling off the price of White Leghorn eggs, fancy cabbage, red onions and pork, where he had hoped to hear jazz, may not be much impressed with the value of market reports. He may even deprecate the use of radio facilities for matters that are without interest to him. But at that very moment there are thousands of men on farms who have laid aside everything else in order to listen in on what is, to them, business information—a matter of dollars and cents in handling the crops of the season.

To the city dweller, luxuriating in a steam-heated apartment, it may matter little to know that a cold spell is expected within forty-eight hours, but to the farmer it means the orchard to be protected from frost, the hen houses to be closed, the pumps and pipes to be drained, the emptying of tractor and automobile radiators. Weather reports are very valuable in times when perishable crops are being gathered. The farmer must make his hay while the sun shines.

There are many uses of radio broadcasting in connection with the securing of labor in time of scarcity; in coping with epizootics among farm animals; in battling against insect pests; in furthering the mission of farmers' organizations; and in developing better methods of farming. In rush seasons broadcasting may well call attention to the availability of labor supply. It may contribute to the fluidity of such supply by enabling one region to draw on the labor surplus of another.

In animal epidemics there is, generally, no lack of information as to the proper procedure. The problem is to make such information instantly available The farmer who, in times of emergency, must act promptly, has the time or the inclination to

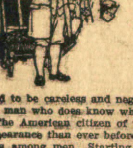
By
W. A. Churchill, Secretary
BORN TAILORS GUILD

The Effect of Good Dressing

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN appeared at the French court dressed like an ordinary farmer. The treaty of alliance between the united colonies and France was signed against a most sumptuous background of gorgeously dressed courtiers in satin breeches, gold-braided coats, buckled slippers and powdered wigs. The king was there in all his regal splendor. The assembly room was bedecked with the most lavish brilliance of the period.



And in the midst of all this splendor stood the American envoy in his faded old brown suit and holding a shabby, fur cap in his hands. This incongruous appearance was taken, both at home and abroad, as being representative of American simplicity and democracy, but nothing could be further from the facts. Franklin had, it was afterward learned, ordered a suitable court costume from his tailor, one that would enable him to take his place with satisfaction among the diplomats and nobles of Europe. But the costume was not finished in time.

The effect of proper dressing is just as great upon a man as it is with women. It gives him a self-confidence and self-esteem that is not gained in any other way. The very fact that some men tend to be careless and negligent about their clothes gives an added asset to the man who does know what to wear and when to wear it.

The American citizen of today demands a higher standard of tailoring and appearance than ever before. Each year has brought an increased fastidiousness among men. Starting with a well-tailored custom-made suit, the 1925 man selects shoes and socks a few shades darker, a hat that will tone with but not match the suit and a tie that affords a pleasing but not pronounced contrast. He looks well, he knows it and is in keeping with the slogan, "dressed to succeed."

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Five Years Of Prohibition And Its Results

In its June-July-August issue, The North American Review published ten articles, written from the point of view of those opposed to the present system of National Prohibition. In the September October-November issue appear corresponding articles written from the point of view of those who approve and support the Eighteenth Amendment. The editors tell us that "both sets of articles were written and received by The North American Review at the same time so that neither was prepared with any knowledge of the contents of the other, or with any reference to it." We quote in part from the current number:

"Is there prohibition? And to what extent? asks Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America, and pertinently suggests that we must "determine progress by measuring distance from the starting point rather than from the goal."

He says, "The extent of prohibition's success is evidenced by the revolutions it has caused in private and public life, in social and economic fields, in the realms of crime, povery, disease and insanity. These, with kindred social indicators, are the sole trustworthy witnesses we may summon to join the history of license days in testimony to the achievements of this new national policy. If we had no prohibition, conditions today would probably be as they were before the Eighteenth Amendment, with the natural increases incident to population growth and the unwholesome stimulation ot immorality and crime that usually comes as the aftermath of war. Our memories are rather short. Prohibition has accomplished so much that we expected it to build Rome in a day It has cleaned up so much of the moral and social wreckage of a century in which Booze was King that we are shocked today to find hidden away furtively in the corner, some of the debris from the old Belshazzar's Feast." Mr. Wheeler follows with a convincing deadly parallel of conditions before prohibition and at present.

PROHIBITION AND RESPECT FOR LAW

James J. Britt, chief counsel of the Prohibition Unit, says in part: "Upon the whole, the progress made has justified the hopes of all familiar with the history of great reforms. At the beginning many thought it would take a generation to effect the end. We are dealing with human aptitudes deeply ingrained and long abiding It took more than three hundred years to lead the people of Israel from the practice of idolatry, and more than forty years for the Amer icag people to stop the slave trade after Congress had made it unlawful. In the light of human experience, we should not expect complete prohibition for some time yet, but that it will come and be a part of the nation's order of life, let none doubt. Nor has prohibition injuriously affected respect for law in general. The charge is a gratuitious assumption made for anti-prohibition propaganda. There is no logical connection between the alleged cause and effect. The writer asked that keen observer, Secretary Mellon, whether in his opinion prohibition is responsible for the prevailing disregard for law to which he replied, 'I think not. I believe it to be due, at least in part, to the general let down and disorganization following the War. Of course the prohibition law has suffered in the general breakdown in common with other laws.' Unbiased opinion everywhere supports this view."

PROHIBITION AND CRIME

On the theme, "Prohibition and Crime", the Hon. Richard J, Hopkins, Justice of the Supreme Court of Kansas, states: "Liquor can never 'come back'. Those who have hopes or misgivings as to the ultimate outcome of the struggle should consider the history of Kansas. Kansas is forty-five years removed from the thought of legalizing the saloon. Liquor is an outlaw within her borders. She does not want it and would not tolerate modification. Conviction of violators is easier than in the past, because public sentiment has been crystallized; her people realize that intoxicating liquor is a commercial and social detriment to any community. Kansas officials and private citizens are agreed that prohibition is the state's best business asset."

PROHIBITION AS SEEN BY A BUSINESS MAN

"I am not blind to the fact that the prohibition law is being broken," says Richard H. Scott, a business man, "there is no news in that, Liquor laws were being broken when I was born. But there is news, financial news; stock market ticker news, in the fact that the law is being observed and enforced, As observance and enforcement grow, business will continue to improve. Accepting at its face value the swollen propaganda of the wets about law violators, the bank clearings, commerce reports and business indicators generally are evidence that prohibition, even when diluted by moonshine, is far superior to licensed liquor. That is the business man's view of prohibition."

The Grim Destroyer Needs No Invitation

Good parents we want a little converse with you regarding some of the things which you have been advocating for Lo! These many years.

It wasn't more than a month or so ago we heard a mother say who had a son and daughter neither of them over ten years of age: "Well if the measles and whooping cough comes this way during the winter I sincerely hope Charlie and Jennie will catch both of them and be done with it. I do not want them to grow up without ever having had these diseases." And this mother was smart too, supposing she knew what she was talking about. This is the grim tale you often hear from mouth to mouth after some child has died from the maladies. I often wonder if the parents who talk this way really know the danger and percentage of cases which are fatal in whooping cough measles, scarlet fever, chicken pox, mumps, etc. classed as children's diseases. I am afraid they little realize what they are entering into. I wonder if they know how many little children develop the nasty, troublesome, abhorrant chronic diseases such as eye weakness. kidney disease, meningitis, rickets, tuberculosis, ear trouble, nervous prostration, and hundreds of other troubles and deformities just because their measles, whooping cough or scarlet fever was not properly treated?

Fond mother, do you realize that in the United States in one year 13,000 deaths occurred from measles alone; did anyone ever tell you that over 90 percent of the deaths from measles were among children under five years of age? Please do not think your child is in duty bound to contract these maladies. It is a mistake. And you are running an awful chance by wilfully exposing the little one, Whooping cough causes more deaths than scarlet fever and 90 percent of deaths from scarlet fever are in children under ten years of age. It is vital to see that children do not contaminate one another from throat and bronchial diseases practically all of these ailments are contagious and can be spread by excretions from the nose or throat.

Don't you think for one minute your child needs to catch any of these diseases! It is a fallacy.

Marl To Lower Farm Liming Cost In State

That increased use of marl on Michigan farms will result in a material saving on the state's "liming" bills in the future is indicated by results of an extensive summer marl extraction demonstration tour just finished by the M. S. C.

More than 5,000 yards of marl were actually dug during the demonstration meetings, and carefully figured costs show that in many sections of the state the material can be "extracted" at a saving of a dollar or two a ton over ground limestone, according to Larry Livingston, extension specialist at the college in charge of the marl work. This fact points to a great saving for farmers in future liming operations where the local marl beds are developed.

"The whole marl extraction situation is still in its infancy", says Livingston. "Thousands and thousands of yards will be used in the state in the future, and at a saving over the cost of commercial ground limestone."

Two demonstration crews started work the first of July and finished this week. They held 31 demonstrations, with an attendancc average of 128 farmers to the meetings and actually dug 5,506 yards of marl in connection with the demonstrations.

Counties in which the meetings were held were: Tuscola, Livingston, Hillsdale, Branch, Cass, Allegan, Newaygo, Oceana, Shiawassee, Eaton, Kalamazoo, Kent, Montcalm, Mecosta, Wexford and Grand Traverse.

Plan Harvest Home Gathering at M. S. C.

There will be something new in farm gatherings in the state this fall. Members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association and their families will gather at the M. S. C. for a special Harvest Home meeting on Nov. 6 and 7.

Winter and summer meetings of various kinds have been held at the state college for years by various farm organizations, but the coming conference of Crop Improvement Association people is said to be the first "harvest" festival of its kind.

In addition to inspection of the crops and seed work of of the college farm crops department, a variety of entertainment and general "picnic" features will be planned for the November meeting. These will include a Halloween party and attendance at a football game it is said.

H. C. Rather, secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association and extension specialist at M. S. C., is arranging the program for the gathering.

Watch Your Diet, Says Prima Donna

Cyrena Van Gordon.

Cyrena Van Gordon, prima donna of the Chicago Opera company, believes in the flapper and her privileges. She believes in the practice of this much-discussed person in wearing no corsets, in wearing short skirts, going in for athletics and outdoor life and in thoroughly upsetting the theories and practices of her mother and grandmother. Miss Van Gordon, who is, in private life, Mrs. S. Bogart Munns, the wife of Doctor S. B. Munns, says that all of these things are woman's right and are necessary if a woman is anxious to keep her youth and beauty. But exercise is not the only thing that is necessary for the woman who is desirous of being attractive. She must watch her diet and be careful not to eat anything that will, in any way, be fattening.

There are certain dishes to which Miss Van Gordon is partial and to which she gives the credit for the retention of her beauty. These dishes. she prefers to prepare herself and, when on tour with the Chicago Opera company, she carries a small electric stove in order that she will not be deprived of the food she deems necessary. These dishes are easily prepared.

Miss Van Gordon uses for

Celery and Cheese Casserole.

1 cup cheese	1 tbsp. butter
2 cups chopped celery	1 cup cooked spaghetti
½ cup evaporated milk	½ cup buttered bread crumbs
½ cup water	½ tsp. salt
2 tbsp. flour

She makes white sauce of milk, water, butter, flour, and salt, and mixes it with all ingredients except crumbs. She then places it in an oiled baking dish and covers with crumbs, baking in a moderate oven until brown.

Chicken a la King.

2 cups cold chicken, diced	1 cup evaporated milk
3 tbsp. butter	¼ lb. mushrooms
3 tbsp. flour	1 cup chicken broth
½ green pepper, shredded	1 egg yolk
½ pimento, shredded	Salt and pepper

Cook the peppers (also mushrooms, if they are used) in the butter for 15 minutes, keeping them covered while cooking slowly. Add the flour and seasonings, also the milk and broth. Stir to a smooth sauce. Put chicken in sauce to heat, and just before serving, stir in beaten egg yolk. Cook in double boiler to prevent curdling.

Why have RHEUMATISM?

OH, what a wonderful feeling to be free from that miserable rheumatism. To know again the joy of limber joints and active muscles—freedom from that agonizing pain!

How often have you longed for some relief as you suffered torture from swollen, inflamed muscles and joints—how often have you said you would give anything in the World for a few hours comfort!

But you didn't know that all you had to do to get real relief from this nerve wracking misery was just to build rich, red blood, did you? You didn't know that rheumatism had to be stopped from the inside by destroying the impurities that cause it—by building millions of red cells in your poor, weak blood, did you?

Until you fill your system full of healthy, rich, red blood you will never end your rheumatism. S. S. S. will surely help you. That's because S. S. S. helps Nature build the red-blood-cells that fight off the impurities that cause rheumatism.

Conquer rheumatism! S. S. S. has shown the way. For generations S. S. S. has brought blessed relief and comfort to thousands of rheumatic sufferers.

When the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build goes coursing through your system, it purifies the blood in your body. Rheumatism vanishes—skin blemishes disappear—you begin to get hungry again and enjoy your food—strength and power fill your body—you are vigorous—red-blooded and ready for action. Know this joy of living again! Take S. S. S. and banish rheumatism!

Then Janet talked to the police officer in German. He was evidently relieved by the withdrawal of the threatening chauffeur and was quite ready to send for Allen.

There was an awkward silence for five minutes. Then Allen appeared and took command of things at once. He began by taking the passports out of the officer's hands and giving them back to Tommy. Then he made a speech. It began mildly. It increased in speed as it went on. It became domineering and even threatening toward the end. The police officer was visibly uneasy while Allen spoke. Before the speech finished he was completely cowed. Allen had vouched for Tommy's identity with Colonel Heard and had spoken with an assurance which carried conviction.

"I told him," he explained to Tommy, "who you were, and that you were in search for the graves of British soldiers. I said to him that if he interfered with you in any way I'd see to it that Germany's bill for reparations was double and that he wouldn't be particularly popular with his own people when that happened and it came out that it was his fault. I said that the way he was behaving looked uncommonly as if he had something in this neighborhood to conceal and that if you found a single British soldier in an unsuitable grave, I'd put a fine of a million and a half marks on the city. I couldn't have done it, of course, any more than I could have doubled the reparations, but he didn't know that."

Tommy felt deeply thankful that Mrs. Heard had been kind to Allen's sister in her canteen in 1915. He was glad that he had not shrunk from discussing Soapy Simpson and Collins, who married the red-haired V. A. D., and the other members of "the old regiment." Allen could not have spoken as he did unless he had felt that Colonel Heard was a familiar friend of his.

"I say," said Allen cheerfully, "what a funny-looking bird your chauffeur is. Where did you get him?"

"Oh, just picked him up," said Tommy. "Fancy he's a Pole or a Russian."

"Looks to me like a brigand," said Allen. "The sort of fellow I shouldn't care to be left alone with on a dark night if I had any money in my pocket. Well, good-by, and good luck."

Tommy shook hands with him gratefully and stepped forward toward the car.

Then an odd thing happened. The tall chauffeur left his place, opened the door of the tonneau of the car, took Janet Church by the wrist, and, quite gently, pulled her out. For the moment Janet was too much astonished to protest or resist. The man, bowing low, motioned Tommy to enter the car and take the seat beside the princess.

"I thought he was an odd-looking bird," said Allen, "and he is. Fancy his dragging Mrs. Heard about like that."

Janet, furious at being treated with a total want of respect, forgot that the man knew no German. She told him angrily that she was a representative of the League for Establishing World Peace Through the Unity of Christian Churches, and that she would sit where she chose in the car. The only effect of this speech was to astonish Allen, who understood it, and to make Tommy uncomfortable because he did not.

Fortunately Calypso kept her presence of mind and quacked out a series of orders to the chauffeur.

"It's all right," she said, "he's mistaken you for my maid. That's all."

Janet took her seat again sulkily. Tommy sat down beside the chauffeur. Allen, really bewildered, waved a feeble farewell. He found it difficult to believe that any chauffeur, even a Pole, could mistake his master's wife for the maid or a secretary typist.

Two days later he wrote a letter to Collins, at the Monte Carlo chicken farm, and told him that Heard was running a regular rig about Europe with a d—d good-looking girl, who certainly wasn't Mrs. Heard, but must be pretty well off because she traveled about in a big motor with her own maid. Colonel Heard, a most respectable man, spent months contradicting that story.

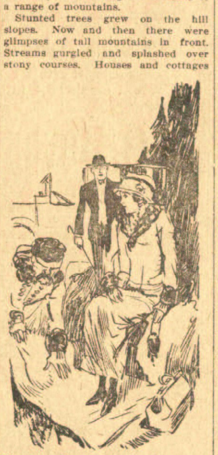
CHAPTER XVI

The chauffeur, who was a Lystrian, looked like a brigand and no doubt was far from being completely civilized. But he was a good driver and competent mechanic. The car threaded its way through the traffic of the Breslau streets smoothly and evenly. When it reached the open country the speed increased to thirty-five miles an hour along a good road. Once, at about eleven a. m., something went wrong with the engine. The tall chauffeur understood what the trouble was and set it right in two minutes.

Shortly after five o'clock, the car turned off the broad main road on which it had been traveling. The chauffeur, who seemed to know exactly where he was, drove confidently along a number of byroads which were often little better than muddy lanes. At about seven o'clock they entered a thickly wooded district. The last glimmerings of daylight faded away among the trees. The car's headlights were switched on and for a while they traveled along a moving patch of white light between two walls of impenetrable darkness. Soon after eight o'clock they reached a little village. At one end of the street stood an inn with brightly lighted windows. The party was received by a fat and obsequious innkeeper, who treated them as guests whom he had been expecting. Whether it was Count Casimir or the Lystrian chauffeur who made the arrangements for the journey, the thing was well done. An excellent warm supper was ready. On the table were set jugs of hot Tisch Wein pleasantly spiced. Tommy, at least, probably the princess, slept soundly in marvelously soft feather beds. Perhaps Janet Church slept well, too; but she ought to have lain awake tormented by her conscience. For the third time since she came to Germany she had been false to her temperance principles. But hot spiced Tisch Wein is a sleeping drink. It may have overpowered even Janet's conscience.

Next morning the party started early and drove along roads which were even worse than those of the evening before, roads with vile surfaces, sharp corners and sudden steep gradients. The chauffeur was forced to drive cautiously, but he kept up at a good pace. After a while they emerged from the woodland and Tommy saw that they were among the foothills of a range of mountains.

Stunted trees grew on the hill slopes. Now and then there were glimpses of tall mountains in front. Streams gurgled and splashed over stony courses. Houses and cottages were few and far between. The cattle which grazed in the open spaces were small and lean. At rare intervals the car slowed down to allow a peasant to coax a frightened mule past it. This plainly was a country in which motor cars were few.



The Chauffeur Took the Rugs and Curtains From the Car and Spread Them on the Wiry Grass Which Grew Beside the Road.

Shortly after one o'clock the car stopped and the chauffeur got out. He said something to the princess and held open the door of the car.

"He wants us to get out and have lunch," said Calypso.

"Good," said Tommy. "I feel nearly starved. This sort of driving makes one furiously hungry and the Germans, though they have an excellent idea of dinner, simply don't understand breakfast at all."

"I always make it a point," said Janet, "of carrying some malted milk lozenges in my pocket."

That is the sort of thing I should expect of Janet. I have never to my knowledge seen a malted milk lozenge. I have certainly never tasted one. But I have a feeling they are insipid and slightly sickening.

The chauffeur took the rugs and cushions from the car and spread them on the wiry grass which grew upon the rocks beside the road. He made a kind of throne for Calypso, much, I suppose, as the Israelitish captains did for Jehu with their garments. Then, when she sat down, he bowed before her three times, so low that his forehead touched the ground. After that he kissed the toes of each of her shoes. Calypso received the homage with dignity.

Tommy was invited to sit down on an inferior throne and was only given one bow. Janet was left to settle herself as best she could on a single rug laid flat on the ground. The chauffeur did not bow to her at all, and though her feet stuck out when she sat down he made no attempt to kiss them.

The chauffeur brought luncheon baskets from the car. The meal was excellent. The wine, there were two bottles of a red wine new to Tommy, was very good. There were knives, silver forks beautifully polished, fine china plates and napkins. At last came coffee, hot from a large thermos flask. The chauffeur was evidently by no means such a savage as he looked. Tommy enjoyed his luncheon thoroughly, all the more because Calypso talked to him amiably and pleasantly while they were eating it. She was by that time exceedingly tired of Janet, who had been discussing the plans of the society for establishing world peace ever since they left Breslau. Tommy might be—she only half believed he was—an unscrupulous betrayer of innocent maidens, like Miss Temple and herself. But even a Lothario is a pleasant change after hours of Janet Church.

After luncheon the chauffeur made a long speech to the princess. He spoke earnestly and pointed forward along the road with outstretched hand.

"He tells me," said Calypso, "that we are quite near the German frontier post. We'll reach it in another twenty minutes and of course there'll be an examination of our passports."

"I hope it'll be all right," said Tommy. "We passed the man at Breslau, thanks to Allen. I dare say these people won't stop us."

"A few yards beyond the German post," said the princess, "we'll come to the Megalian frontier guards. They'll want our passports, too."

"Well," said Tommy, "the passports are all right in themselves, properly fixed up with diplomatic visas and all that. No one ought to object to them."

"Let me look at them," said Janet.

Tommy took them from his pocket and Janet examined them carefully.

"We don't any of us look much like the photos," she said. "You," she looked at Tommy, "ought to have a mustache."

"A man might shave off his mustache," said Tommy. "Lots of fellows do, quite suddenly, without telling the Foreign office or asking for new passports."

"And Miss—looks a great many years younger than I am," said Janet.

"Let me look," said Calypso. She studied the photographs of the two ladies. "It seems to me," she said at last, "that I'd better be Miss Gisborne."

"But then," said Janet, "I should have to be Mrs. Heard. That is to say," she looked fiercely at Tommy as she spoke, "your wife."

"Only quite temporarily," said Calypso.

"Well, I won't," said Janet.

"One of you has got to be," said Tommy, "and we'd better decide which before we get there, in case we're asked, and very likely we shall be asked."

"I can't possibly say I'm his wife," said Calypso to Janet.

"Why not?" said Janet. "He's going to marry you, isn't he?"

"He's going to marry Miss Temple," said Calypso.

"No, I'm not," said Tommy. "If you'd only allow me to explain—"

But Calypso having remembered Miss Temple's pathetic appeal to her, was not going to listen to anything Tommy had to say.

"You must," she said to Janet.

"No, I won't," said Janet.

"One of you will have to," said Tommy, "or else we'll certainly be stopped and probably be arrested."

"I won't," said Janet doggedly.

"I promise faithfully," said Tommy, "that I won't take any advantage of the position."

Calypso, I am sorry to say, giggled. It was a vulgar thing to do and she checked herself immediately. Janet became very angry. Tommy got red and stumbled on.

"I mean, that I won't hold your hand or—or—kiss you, or anything like that."

The princess went beyond giggling. She laughed aloud.

"You appear to forget," said Janet, "that I am a Scotswoman."

"I don't see how that can make any difference," said Tommy.

"According to the Scotch law," said Janet, "if I say that you're my husband, and you say that I am your wife in the presence of witnesses, then we are married."

"Is that really the law?" said Calypso. "How dreadful it must be for actors and actresses on the stage with lots and lots of witnesses listening."

"It's Scotch law," said Janet.

"But we're not in Scotland," said Tommy.

In Ancient Oxford

There is, perhaps, no more interesting place in the whole world than Oxford, the ancient English university town. Any one who likes quaint old things can agreeably spend weeks there. Oxford university is not a single institution like practically all American schools, but a group of 26 separate colleges, all linked together in a sort of league. The oldest one, Balliol, was founded away back about 1260. The buildings of Christ Church college are the largest and most imposing of the lot. Many of the stone steps of these old Oxford buildings have been worn nearly through by the footsteps of succeeding generations of students and have had to be replaced.

"Prisons" May Yet Be Maintained in Open

Prison in the open air seems a contradiction in itself, for the very word "prison" calls up the idea of incarceration in locked and walled-up buildings.

However, there is such a thing, and it is in Holland that very successful experiments have been made with outdoor prisons.

Sixty persons were drafted to the town of Veenhuizen, to serve their term there. Their task was to convert moorland into cultivated field, and they showed themselves very industrious in the undertaking. They are divided into gangs, each containing a few persons, but are not supervised or watched by any sort of warder or official; these prisoners may live in common and advance their social sense, unsubjected to supervision.

The foreman of each gang is, however, not a prisoner, but a workman who joins voluntarily. It would not be difficult to escape under such conditions, but no one has hitherto attempted to do so. The environment is much more favorable than in an ordinary prison, and the Dutch government is considering setting up several centers of this sort.

There are 6,448,343 farms in the United States; 711,090 in Canada.

Electricity to Do World's Hard Work

Electricity costing about one-fiftieth of the present price is coming, predicts the scientist, J. B. Haldane, says Capper's Weekly. Then "to light a lamp as a source of light will be as wasteful as to burn down one's house to cook a pork roast." In England, where Mr. Haldane lives, he thinks the power question will be solved by covering the country with rows of metallic windmills working electric motors, which in their turn will supply current at high voltage to great electric mains.

At suitable distances will be great power stations where, during windy weather, the surplus power will be stored by an electrolytic chemical process and made to run motors as needed. In time to come all the hard work in the house or on the farm will be done by pressing a button.

Seven Hours Over Precipice

An unusual mountaineering fatality is reported from the Italian Alps. Two tourists, a man and a woman, had set out from Trent to ascend Mount Marmolada, and had almost reached the summit when the woman slipped and fell over the edge of the precipice. The rope which linked her to her companion did not break, and with the utmost difficulty he was able to make her fast to a crag. He was unable, however, to haul her to safety and had to leave her suspended in mid-air while he sought help.

When he returned seven hours later with a party of guides she was still hanging by the rope from the edge of the precipice, but she had been frozen to death.

The Denarius

The word penny occurs a number of times in our English version of the New Testament, especially in the four Gospels; for instance, Matt. 20:2: "And when he had agreed with the laborers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard." The coin to which the name penny is given was the denarius, a Roman silver coin in circulation in the time of our Lord and the apostles. It was the principal silver coin then in use throughout the Roman empire. From the parable of the laborers in the vineyard it would seem that a denarius was then the ordinary pay for a day's labor.

Fight Over Lucky Find

The battle over the will in which David Barclay's two daughters were left $60,000 by their father's chance friend reveals the fact that 30 years ago two penniless men found a whale washed up on the shore of Tasmania, says the Los Angeles Times.

The ambergris which the whale contained was sold in London for $100,000, making both men rich. It is over the will of one of the men the fight is being staged in London.

Worn Spots in Floor

Worn spots on polished floors in doorways or at the foot of stairs may be prevented by applying a thin coat of wax once or twice a month. Put the wax in cheesecloth and rub over the worn spots, allowing 15 minutes for drying, then polish. In an hour or two apply a second coat of wax and polish again.

Death of Andrew Roose

Andrew Roose aged 59 years died at 1:30 Saturday afternoon, at his home in Adams township. Death was due to a complication of diseases. He was born in Williams county, Ohio, Feb. 1866 and came to this county twenty-four years ago where he has farmed it since. He is survived by one son, Cavera Roose at home, two sisters, Mrs. Ida Wineland of Hillsdale, Mrs. Nettie Clifton of Montgomery; three brothers Lorenzo D., of Hollywood, California, Frank of Topeka, Kansas, and Albert, of Garrett, Indiana, and two grand-children.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the home, Rev. Jagger of Osseo, officiating, and he was buried in Osseo cemetery.

Primary School Money

North Adams' share of the primary school money under the terms of the Bohn primary school fund law will be increased when the next primary money apportionment is made, according to Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction. Had the 1923 legislature passed the law North Adams' share of the increase would have been $130.00. North Adams' increase will be in the neighborhood of that figure unless the population materially decreases.

Work of compiling the 1925 census under which the new apportionment will be made is now under way in Johnson's office. Private and parochial school enrollment figures are considered in the rearrangement of the fund.

The new school census for Hillsdale county shows a total of 7,675 pupils in the schools in that county. The total primary school money available for Hillsdale county this year is $105,147.50.

Michigan Sunday School Convention

Dr. Kurtz, President of McPherson College, McPherson, Kansas, is to be one of the chief lecturers at the great State-wide Sunday school gathering to be held at Detroit Nov 3 to 5 under the auspices of the Michigan Sunday School Council of Religious Education. Four thousand Sunday schools in all parts of Michigan will be interested in this event, and in this announcement.

Dr. Kurtz has 2500 friends in Michigan won at the Kalamazoo convention in 1921 by his series of lectures on Christian Doctrine.

He is a man who made himself coming up through poverty and destitution finally landing in Universities of theology where he graduated.

Plans are now well laid by the Detroit committee for a creditable meeting and entertainment. It is expected that at least 1500 from out of the city will be in attendance. 17 Protestant Evangelical denominations are co-operating in the council and its activities. Each county has a quota of delegates to secure, Hillsdale county's quota is 45. All registrations, requests for lodging, and reduced railroad rates may be sent to Jessie S. Allison, Reading, Mich., county secretary. This convention will provide an abundance of help for all Sunday school leaders in the county.

Death of Mrs. Henry Porter

Our community was shocked on Saturday afternoon to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Clara Porter which took place at her home west of Hoxie. She had not been real well for some years, although able to be about her social and home duties as usual up to within a short time of the Grim Reaper's call that came to her as appoplexy.

Dr. McFarland was summoned and Mr. Porter came to North Adams but she died before he returned

Deceased was 63 years of age and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Edwards formerly of Hillsdale. She is survived by her husband, Henry Porter, two daughters, Mrs. Mable Ossmer of Jackson, Mrs. Louise Knight of Jefferson, three sisters Bertha, Erma and Mrs. A. C. DuBois of Bankers, her father, two grand-children and a host of friends

She was a faithful member of the North Adams Methodist church and kindred societies, a good mother, wife and citizen: she has been a stand-by in church and neighborhood affairs and her passing leaves a gap which cannot be filled.

Funeral services were held at the late home on Wednesday at 1:30 p, m., Rev. Harry D. Henry of the Hillsdale Methodist church assisted by Rev. Wylie of the local church. officiating. Music was rendered by members of the local church choir.

Floral tributes testified mutely to the respect of large numbers of neighbors and friends, and interment was in Oak Grove cemetery, Hillsdale beside her mother.

Growing Interest In Railroad Safety

Great and growing interest in the promotion of safety on railroads is indicated by the preparations for the sessions of the Steam Railroad Section of the National Safety Council, which open in New York next Tuesday. The attendance will be a record breaker, judging by hotel reservations made.

It is now the practice for the railroads to send representatives of different classes of employes from various points on the system as one of the many means of stimulating interest in the movement. For example, the New York Central Lines will have no fewer than one hundred employes from various points and branches of the service.

M. S. C. Farm Courses To Start October 26

The first of a series of special winter courses in agriculture which will be given at the M. S. C. this year in connection with the regular college short course work will open on October 26, according to announcement made here this week.

The sixteen weeks course in general agriculture, running for two years, is the one which opens on that date. Other courses start just after the first of the year. The sixteen weeks course is the longest and most comprehensive of all the short courses offered, and is said o give a very complete practical course in scientific agriculture.

Be A Real Sport

It is a peculiar thing, something that has so far been quite unexplained by the so-called modern psysico-analists, but the moment some folks take to the open country in their automobiles they become changed individuals. People who are the very acme of uprightness at home, seem to have no hesitancy in climbing out of their machines and descending upon the farmer's crops along the highways and appropriating unto themselves whatever seems to strike their fancy, It is a practice that is wrong, both in mannerism and principle, and should be stopped.

Not that we say that all motorists are addicted to this pernicious habit, for the great majority would no more think of following such a practice than they would think of breaking into a neighbor's home, but enough have been guilty of this petty form of thieving to cause state-wide comment. If the rural folks were to come to town and invade your dooryards in search of flowers, or went into the business districts and picked up numerous small articles, right away we'd probably counsel the authorities to have them stowed away in the local bastile.

Yet in every way they are just as much entitled to do this as the people who steal their flowers, fruit or vegetables and seem to think it a huge joke. Don't make the mistake of unthinkingly joining this band of petty marauders, but be a real sport and respect the other fellow's property, just as you expect him to respect yours.

We are still giving the Advocate and McCall's Magazine both on year for the small sum of $2.25 and this is the most combination for the money on record. DAIRYING - AT HOME AND ABROAD

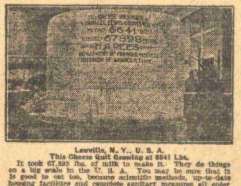
Amsterdam, Holland
Unloading Cheese Along the Canal at Amsterdam
Thousands of tons of Dutch cheese like those in the picture are consumed annually. A big percentage is exported. Holland is one of the most productive dairy countries, size considered, in the world. The most intensive and scientific methods are practiced. Cow testing associations are numerous.

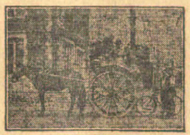
Chile, South America
A South American Milkman
This picture was taken in Ancud, Chiloe Island, Chile. A can of milk slung on either side of a mule or some other native beast of burden and a quart measure are all this milkman needs to serve his trade. The quart measure has seen hard service. The lady customer wears an intent look—on the lookout for short measure.



Lewville, N. Y., U. S. A.
This Cheese Quit Growing at 6641 Lbs.
It took 67,898 lbs. of milk to make it. They do things on a big scale in the U. S. A. You may be sure that it is good to eat too, because scientific methods, up-to-date housing facilities and complete sanitary measures all enter into the production of milk in America's greatest dairy State.

Seattle, Washington, U. S. A.
Segis Pietertje Prospect, a Real Champion
Her home is on Carnation Milk Farms, Seattle, Washington. N. A. Brown, Manager, says: "We furnish sterilized milk especially for babies. It is necessary to keep our cows in the very best of condition." Clipping increases productive capacity and decreases bacterial count. Segis Pietertje Prospect is one of a herd of 175 milk cows.

Dairying at Home and Abroad
The production of more milk, richer milk, purer milk starts months ahead where dairying is done on real business standards. Extreme care is given in rationing, housing and sanitation of the dairy farms.



New Zealand
Early in the Morning the Milkwoman Arrives
Wellington, N. Z., milk supply is all under the control of the City which permits no milk to be sold except that which has been inspected and certified by the Health Officials. The City buys the milk from the farmers and allows peddlers to sell it at a fixed price—No profiteering here.

Antwerp, Belgium
The Lady Milkman Makes Her Daily Trip in Her Dog Chaise
In Belgium, you know, as well as in Holland, it is a very common thing to see a team of dogs hitched to a milk wagon, but usually the owner of the team gives them a helping push. This lady must have been tired or she would surely have helped out her little team.

Claude Reed was in Jackson Monday on business.

—Dr. C. J. Howe, O ptometrist Hillsdale. Comfortable glasses. 24

The Hoxie Ladies Aid has been postponed two weeks and will be held October 29th with Mrs. Etta Welker.

A special meeting of Adams Lodge 189 F. & A. M. will be held Saturday evening October 10th at 7:30. Work in E. A. Degree.

Mrs. Eugene Rogers will coduct a recital of her pupils at the Methodist church Friday evening at 8 o'clock standard time. Attendance will be by invitation.

J. C. Schauppner and son John and wife of Detroit were guests of Frank Foster and family and Will Corey and wife in this village for a few days and attended the popular Hillsdale Fair last week.

Rev. Selden B. Ford and wife of Maple Rapids were guests of friends in this village and vicinity the first of the week being called here by the death and burial of Mrs. Margaret Shepard.

Reports have been circulated in this vicinity that the Jackson Fair had gone bankrupt on account of the extremely bad weather this season but it is not correct. The Society expect to pay their premiums and running expenses.

A public Reception will be held for Rev. H. E. Wylie and family at the parlors of the Methodist church Monday evening, October 12th. Refreshments will be served and invitation is extended to all denominations in or out of the church.

Farmers in this vicinity are about to protect their farm property and interests by posting "No Hunting" signs in conspicuous places. The Advocate supplied them with 300 signs recently. Mr. Hunter please take notice and remember the law is rather strict along this line.

Rev. C. W. Long and wife of Grand Rapids came to this county the first of last week to attend the Hillsdale Fair and returned home the latter part of the week after visiting C. W. Bleech and wife and other friends at North Adams. Mr. Long is doing occasional ministry work and also has a good real estate business.

It will be extremely good news for our citizens to learn that M-14 is to be asphalted next season from the present asphalt this side of Jackson clear through to its junction with M-23 at Somerset Center. While a good gravel surface is preferable to drive on yet none of us will register many kicks if the state sees fit to asphalt this important artery of traffic.

In compliance with the request from the W. C T. U. a temperance theme "The Temperance Question and Personal Interests" will be presented by the pastor of the Methodist church next Sunday morning. The evening service from now on through the winter months will be held at 7 o'clock with Epworth League service at six o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

North Adams Hive L. O. T. M. elected the following officers for the ensuing year on Wednesday evening: Commander, Grace Williams; lieutenant commander, Murel Owens; record keeper, Addie Van-Aken; finance keeper, Inez Alpaugh mistress at arms, Allie Holkins; sergeant, Ettie Corey; chaplain, Mable Goodacre; sentinal, Lida Keefer; picket, Effie Barber; past commander, Ida Relyea. Installation of officers occurs October 28th with potluck supper.

Two accidents occurred in this vicinity on Friday morning of last week owing to the extreme foggy condition of the weather. At Ferguson's Corners three miles east of the village the Greendale milk truck being driven by Homer Sturdevant was crashed into by a machine from the cross roads with the result that the truck was overturned and Mr. Sturdevant escaped death only by a narrow margin. His life was saved by a cream can which held up the machine off his body. The radiator and left front was badly damaged. The touring car which collided with the truck was badly smashed and rendered useless. It was left standing by the road and the following night thieves stripped off the balloon tires and wheels. The same day Sherman Tower of Jerome was rounding the Main four corners in this village from the east and his touring car collided with a Ford truck driven by Otis Metcalf east-bound. The radiators of both machines were smashed and the Ford truck sustained a broken windshield and front wheel. Several dozen eggs were ruined and the highway in the immediate vicinity looked as if a rotten egg party had been pulled off by a mob. Nobody was hurt.

Lee Alpaugh of Pittsford and Hal Alpaugh of Detroit spent Sunday with Chester Alpaugh and family

Cottage prayer meeting will be eeld at the home of Mrs. Fred Westcott next Tuesday evening October 13th.

Mrs. Don Watson of Hillsdale spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week with her sister, Mrs. C. J. Alpaugh.

The Friendship Club will meet with Lillie Gary Friday, October 16th, for an afternoon meeting. Remember the shower.

Regular meeting of Alpha Chapter, No. 288, O. E. S. on Tuesday evening, October 13th. A good attendance is hoped for.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hayhoe of Leslie and Mr. and Mrs. Het Kinch of Lansing visited Geo. Hayhoe and wife the last of the week and attended the Fair on Friday.

Frank Helmick and wife of Churches Corners and his nephew John Blodgett, wife and son, Bernard of Hudson spent Sunday with Mr. Helmick's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Helmick.

Everyone buy their eats of the S. P. I. class at their food sale to be held at Wertz's store Saturday Oct, 10. Anyone having a special order please phone Maud Anderson. The eats will be there in plenty of time for your Saturday's dinner.

We are still giving the Advocate and McCall's Magazine both one year for the small sum of $2.25 and this is the most combination for the money on record. All the home news and a top-notch monthly containing all latest fashions, from Paris, the best works of Harolld Bell Wright, best illustrations, best all through.

Friends from away who attended the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. M. Kempton besides the children were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ressler and Mr. Snow Marlatt and daughter, Zona, of Lansing, Luther Thompson, wife and son, Ford, Mrs. Minnie Ford of Detroit. Mrs. Janet Collins went home with Lansing relatives.

Some Home Brew Undoubtedly

We note with alligator tears in our eyes and a lump the size of a qumquat in our throat that the flow of "booze" in Hillsdale last week at the Fair went to high tide something like the saloon days of slippery, slimy Broad street. Whether this means the officers are unusually zealous or the human race is decoming rottener, we cant say And then to think these boys probably drive machines! Following is the roll of the besotted ones:

Lester Betts, Melvin Weeder each paid a fine of $26.10.

Ralph Anderson paid the same.

Will Hammond had no lucre in his clothes and went back to jail in lieu of $25.75 fine.

Tobe Martin of Ohio paid $25.75 because "it stingeth like an adder

Death of Margaret Shepard

Mrs. Margaret Shepard passed away at her home Monday forenoon and was laid away in the North Adams cemetery Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Shepard lived to the good old age of 88 years and spent most of her life in this vicinity.

Her parents, Horace and Rachel Wisner, were pioneer settlers of Moscow, coming by train to Adrian, thence on by ox-cart from Nunda, New York in 1843, where Mrs. Shepard was born June 21, 1837. Her father, mother and sisters were buried in Moscow.

Mrs. Shepard was married to Samuel Gilmer in 1860 and five children came to bless the union, of whom three are living Minnie Frey of Battle Creek; Ira Gilmer of Salem, Oregon; and Emma Young with whom she has always resided; Emmet who died at this place and Frederick L., another son, in Scipio. Three step-children found in her a mother, two now living, Jonn M. of Jackson and Eliza Sisson of Parma, Martin buried in North Dakota. Mr. Gilmer died in 1886 and in 1892 she was married to Franklin Shepard who passed away in 1906.

At the age of 16 years she began teaching at the Knowles school house. She was a faithful member and attendant of the Methodist church of this place until old age claimed her.

Only three of this pioneer family are now living. Orrin H. Wisner of Hillsdale, Oscar A., of Humble, Texas and Albert B. of Battle Creek.

A good many of our customers have made that very remark after they tried out the Red Top Steel Fence Post.

For instance, you can drive over 200 of these posts in a day without a helper. Some have driven as high as 300. The One-Man Driver makes this possible. What a difference from the old back-breaking method of setting wood posts. No post hole digging and no tamping with Red Tops. This saving on labor costs makes the price on Red Tops installed very low.

That's not the only saving you'll make. One Red Top will outlast at least two wood posts. And there is very little fence repair work required with Red Tops. The Handy Fence Fasteners which come free with the posts can't loosen up and let go of the wire, so there isn't this constant restretching, restapling and upkeep.

We've picked the Red Top line because we know it is the leader and we believe it to be the biggest value for the money. One of our main policies is to pick goods that are bound to please our customers. We want you to feel that no matter what you buy of us you are getting as much or more for your money than you get anywhere.

Why the Sheetrock way is the quickest way

QUICK construction is one of the important advantages you get in using Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard.

For Sheetrock comes all ready to use. You simply nail the wide, ceiling-high sheets to the supports. The trim and decoration can follow without waiting for the walls to dry.

Besides being ready for immediate decoration, Sheetrock walls are proof against cold and damp, fire and sound. They are non-warping, non-buckling and permanent.

Aircraft Board Hears Col. Mitchell on Weakness of America's Air Defense.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WITH 800 pounds of "ammunition" in the shape of documents and undaunted by his approaching court-martial for insubordinate utterances, Col. William Mitchell appeared before the aircraft board last week and repeated and elaborated on his charges that obstinacy and inefficiency of high army and navy officials have rendered the United States utterly deficient in air defense. He read a prepared statement in nine sections, the main points of which are thus summarized:

Development of air power has made it the chief weapon of national defense, navies and armies becoming subordinate and auxiliary to it. As airships can destroy any surface ships, the submarine becomes the backbone of the navy. The army, unchanged in constituent elements, will function as the last line of defense when the air and sea forces have failed to stop the enemy, or offensively only when control of the air permits transport of troops at sea. Anti-aircraft guns are ineffective and always will be, crippling only a very small percentage of planes. The United States has no air forces worth mentioning and if involved in war today would need from three to five years to develop an adequate air force properly equipped. Great Britain could invade America with a thousand planes in eight or ten days and a few days later would reach the heart of the country; and Japan could invade America by way of Alaska. In future wars the nation losing control of the air will capitulate to desolation by unrestricted air attack. An adequate air and submarine force would make this country invulnerable to attack, and the cost would be but a fraction of that of the army and navy at present. Finally, the United States should have a department of national defense, comprising the navy, army, and air force, and a department of aeronautics, comprising military and civil aviation and aircraft manufacture.

The mission of the land, sea and air forces, said Mitchell, should be definitely stated by law. That is:

"The army to be charged with the defense of all land areas;

"The navy to be charged with the defense of all sea areas, on or under the water beyond the control of missile throwing weapons from the shore or effective aircraft operations from shore bases;

"The air force to be charged with the complete defense of operations and the aerial attack of all enemy targets on sea and land."

To the self-asked question why the air service is in such sad plight, Colonel Mitchell replied:

"Because air matters are entrusted to the army and the navy which are handled and governed and dominated by non-flying officers. They not only know next to nothing about aviation, but regard it merely as an auxiliary of their present activities and not as a main force in the nation's military equipment. Their testimony regarding air matters is almost worthless, sometimes more serious than this."

Next day Colonel Mitchell continued his attack and criticized the navy for the Shenandoah disaster and the failure of the Hawaii flight. Then he was questioned at length by various members of the board and finally Chairman Morrow asked Admiral Fletcher of the navy and General Harbord of the army if they desired to put any questions to the witness. To the surprise of everyone, both declined to do any cross examining. Mitchell himself was evidently disappointed.

IN THE naval court of inquiry at Lakehurst, Capt. Anton Heinen, former German Zeppelin pilot who instructed the crew of the Shenandoah, expressed the opinion that the wrecking of that airship was primarily caused by the failure of the officers in charge to heed danger signals that were "shrieking out loud." Specifically he blamed Commander Lansdowne, saying: "In my opinion the ship ran deliberately into the center of the storm for at least half an hour after danger signals had been shrieking out loud. With the ship having sufficient power for steerage way, she easily could have got out of danger. I stand ready to prove this from the evidence presented to this court."

Captain Heinen criticized certain structural changes in the Shenandoah, and said he had heard from many members of the crew that they mistrusted the airship because of her condition.

Lieut. J. B. Anderson, aerologist on the Shenandoah, testified that Commander Lansdowne disregarded his advice to change the course.

ANOTHER misfortune befell the navy in the ramming and sinking of the submarine S-51 about twenty miles from Block island. Struck by the steamship City of Rome, she sank immediately and of her crew of 36 men only three were saved. Every effort to save the men imprisoned in the vessel's hull was made, but in vain, largely because of stormy weather and swift tides. After several days divers brought up the bodies of two of the victims, and operations to recover the others and to raise the submarine were continued. Blame for the distressing accident has not yet been fixed.

GERMANY accepted the invitation of the allies to a conference on a security pact, and this week the foreign ministers are assembled in Locarno, Switzerland, discussing the terms of the proposed treaty designed to give lasting peace at least to western Europe. The Germans sought to stipulate that their country should be purged of guilt for the war, but this was firmly refused by England and France. Probably the request and its rejection were designed to satisfy the nationalists in both Germany and France.

DISTINGUISHED statesmen from thirty-six countries are in Washington attending the sessions of the Interparliamentary union. The conference was opened Thursday with addresses by Secretary of State Kellogg and Senator McKinley of Illinois and a response by Baron Adelswaerd of Sweden, president of the council of the union. Silly friends of various factions in foreign lands took advantage of the arrival of certain of the delegates to exhibit their silliness. For instance, Gen. Richard Mulcahy of the Irish Free State was mobbed, both at his landing in New York and on his visit to Philadelphia, by Irish republic sympathizers; and the Italian delegates who are Fascists were attacked by anti-Fascist Italians in New York.

NO SETTLEMENT of the French debt was reached because M. Caillaux was unable to offer terms that the American commission would accept, and the negotiations have been suspended indefinitely, the French mission returning to Paris. However, a temporary arrangement was proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and this was carried back by M. Caillaux for submission to the French parliament, which probably will agree to it gladly. This plan is that France shall pay the United States $40,000,000 a year for five years and that at the expiration of that period the discussion of the definite funding of the debt shall be resumed. The sum suggested amounts to 1 per cent interest on the total French debt with accrued interest. In reality the payments by France would be increased only $20,000,000, as she has been paying a like sum annually as interest on the A. E. F. war stocks she purchased in 1919.

M. Caillaux could not commit himself on the American offer, because, as he explained, he was vested with full powers to reach a conclusive settlement but held no mandate to sign a temporary makeshift agreement. But he assured Mr. Mellon he would support the plan before parliament.

Caillaux's final offer, which was found unacceptable, was that France should pay $40,000,000 annually for the first five years, $60,000,000 annually for the following seven years, and $100,000,000 annually for the next 56 years, thus spreading payments over 68 years. To this was attached a "security clause" providing that France might at any time reopen the question and attempt to show that the terms should be revised owing to her incapacity to carry them out. This was objectionable to the Americans, especially to Senator Smoot, and rejection of the offer followed. Senator Borah took a hand in the affair by going to the White House and warning the President not to permit the American commission to grant to France easier terms than were granted to Great Britain. Both he and Senator Smoot told Mr. Coolidge there would be violent opposition in the senate to any such settlement as Caillaux proposed. Mr. Borah was highly displeased, also, by the makeshift plan of Mr. Mellon.

M. TCHITCHERIN, soviet foreign minister, balked in his attempt to persuade Germany to stand with Russia against western Europe, is now said by Baltic diplomats to be trying to unite Russia, Poland and Turkey in an anti-English bloc. He was in Warsaw recently and induced the Poles to instruct their delegation in Moscow to begin negotiations for a political agreement. This is worrying the Baltic states considerably. Tchitcherin then went to Berlin to discuss a Russo-German trade treaty.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE JARDINE is getting tired of waiting for the Chicago board of trade to take steps to prevent manipulation that causes wild price fluctuations. Last week he issued another warning, saying: "A failure on the part of the board to take these steps immediately will leave me no alternative but to inaugurate action looking to suspension or revocation of the designation of the Chicago board of trade as a contract market."

COMMUNISTS of Great Britain fared badly in the national congress of the Labor party in Liverpool, and the more conservative elements carried out their expressed determination to rid the party of the Reds entirely. Chairman Cramp in his opening speech declared the Communists were a hindrance to the labor movement and traitors to its tradition. The Reds met their first defeat when the congress by a tremendous majority refused to reverse a vote of last year by which members of the Communist party were excluded from membership in the constituent Labor party. Former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, J. H. Thomas, leader of the railway men, and the chiefs of the miners all took severe whacks at the Reds, and the latter brought on their final and conclusive defeat when they demanded that MacDonald apologize to Russia for the action of his foreign office in making public the notorious Zinovieff letter just before the last election.

YOUNG Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., had a walkover in the Wisconsin election to fill the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of his father. His majority over the field was about 2 to 1. E. F. Dithmar of Milwaukee, who was the only "regular" Republican candidate after Roy P. Wilcox had been forced out by the national organization, ran second but never threatened the winner. The votes for the others were negligible.

GOV. AL SMITH'S campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928 was actually launched at a big picnic of the Cook county, Illinois, Democracy in Chicago. The popular New Yorker in his speech especially attacked the economy record of the Coolidge administration and promised to do much better in that line if he were sent to the White House. He made a great hit with the 100,000 persons who heard him.

OVER the protest of Chairman O'Connor, the federal shipping board rescinded the resolutions designed to divorce the Fleet corporation from the board and readopted a resolution of 1921 under which the board keeps full control over the actions of the corporation. President Palmer of the corporation is likely to resign, for it is understood he accepted the office on condition that he have certain authority. Chicago business men are asking that the shipping board be abolished.

Federal Convicts Will Make Shoes

Fort Leavenworth, Kan.—A $1,000,000 factory within the prison walls of the Fort Leavenworth federal penitentiary will begin making shoes for the men of the army and navy and federal institutions next January.

One of the serious problems with which Warden W. I. Biddle has had to contend is that of finding employment for his prisoners. The shoe factory will put to work 700 convicts now idle. The men will be taught a trade; a small remuneration will go partly toward the support of their families and partly into a fund at interest, to be paid them on their release. The government will take a profit from production.

The plant is expected to turn out from 2,500 to 3,000 pairs of shoes daily when operating at its capacity, but this will not be possible until skilled labor has been developed among the prison laborers.

When the peak of quality and quantity has been attained, the penitentiary will begin manufacturing footwear for the army and navy, and later a work shoe in addition for other institutions maintained by the government.

Six hundred wards of the government helped build the plant.

Modern sanitary and safety devices and the latest shoe-building equipment will be used.

Superintendent Warren F. Goldthwaite, in charge, came to Fort Leavenworth from Haverhill, Mass., where he had been with a shoe factory.

Science Called On to Come to Nature's Aid

Some alarm has been caused recently by the announcement that the Matterhorn is in a distinctly shaky condition, and may topple over into the Italian valley above which it towers.

Similar fears were entertained some twenty years ago regarding the Rocher de la Clusette, in the Jura, which then threatened to fall into the valley of the Areuse. Had this happened, the valley would have been blocked, and the flow of water, on which the district depended for its supply of electricity, would have been stopped.

Immediate action had to be taken to avert this calamity, which would have plunged the countryside in darkness and disorganized its transport. Engineers rushed to the spot, the mountain was shored up with concrete, and all was well once more.

WHY SHOULD ANYONE SUFFER WITH INDIGESTION OR ANY STOMACH MISERY?

If you want to fix up your dyspeptic, out of order stomach so that you can relish what you eat with not the least bit of after distress, do what tens of thousands of people have already done.

Getting rid of gas, bloating, belching, heaviness and that feeling of near suffocation isn't such a hard matter as you may think—You've been getting hold of the wrong medicine—that's all.

But better late than never—ask your druggist for a bottle of Dare's Mentha Pepsin—a real stomach medicine and a very pleasant one. For acute indigestion one or two doses is enough, but when the trouble is chronic, two or three bottles may be needed to put your disordered stomach in good healthy condition and make life worth living.

Making a start is the main thing, so why not get one bottle today with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't help you the purchase price will be returned.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

St. Louis—W. A. Carpenter, who has been managing editor of the St. Louis Leader for the last year, has bought an interest in the Imlay City Times, where he assumed the editorial management October 1.

Ionia—Laurence I. Hale, well known miller here, was elected commander of the John F. Girard post of the American Legion, to succeed D. O. Mellinger, who will serve as past commander the coming year.

Lansing—The state administrative board recently released $35,000 to the Michigan State college for additional work on the new horticultural building. It was estimated this amount will complete the structure.

Marshall—The Southern Michigan Transportation company has started its auto bus service in connection with the Michigan Electric Railway company. In this section, the busses operate between Kalamazoo and Jackson.

Lansing—Corporation tax receipts for the year will yield about $6,000,000, according to department of state estimates. Collections thus far total $5,784,691 and considerable of the levy is outstanding. Last year the yield was $5,803,865.

Marshall—William Felter, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Felter, of Marengo township, disappeared over a week ago and nothing has been heard of him since. He was last seen at the fair grounds, where he assisted in erecting the merry-go-round.

Lansing—The counties should look after persons afflicted with tuberculosis although the work should be under the supervision of the State, Dr. R. M. Olin, State Health Commissioner, told delegates to the Mississippi Valley Conference on Tuberculosis.

Ypsilanti—The enrollment at the State Normal College here now is 2,379, about 300 fewer than last year, according to figures given out by Registrar C. P. Stemle. Many of last year's graduates experienced difficulty in obtaining positions because of the over-supply of teachers.

Grand Rapids — Vice-president Charles G. Dawes is being sought by C. Wellington Koiner, of Pasadena, Calif., president of the International City Managers' Association, as a speaker during the annual convention of that organization to be held here Nov. 17, 18 and 19. Mayor Elvin Swarthout has joined in the invitation.

Sault Ste. Marie—Despondent over his slowness in school, Stewart H. Faulkner, 17 years old, committed suicide by swallowing a strychnine capsule. A physician was called, but the boy died three hours later. He had returned from a Chicago school recently and was attending the local high school. His father is a dentist.

Lansing—A return to the former limitations regulating ages of women operating dangerous machines in Michigan factories is to be asked of the coming legislature by Carl Young, commissioner of labor. The session of 1923 changed the minimum age from 18 to 21 through the passage of a House bill, which was amended in the Senate.

Ann Arbor—Construction of new buildings for the Department of Architecture and the museum will constitute the program of expansion for the University of Michigan during the next year, according to J. Christensen, assistant secretary. The Architecture building will be started on the $400,000 provision made by the state legislature last spring.

Saginaw—Pastors and teachers attending the seventy-fourth annual convention of the joint synod of Ohio and other states at the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church voted unanimously for a union of the Ohio and Iowa synods. Delegates were directed to instruct their respective congregations to vote on the matter before November 1.

Baldwin—Michigan's right to fish in Michigan streams was assured temporarily here recently, when the jury hearing the case of Frank Collins, of Toledo, O., owner of stump lands on both sides of Pine River, against Gideon S. Gerhardt, of Reed City, who crossed Collin's river fences while wading in the bed of the stream in fishing, returned a verdict of no cause for action.

Cheboygan—Instead of the elaborate wedding festivities planned, a very simple, quiet ceremony marked the union of Miss Celia Brovage and her second cousin, Louis Brovage, of Riggsville. The groom, while taking the bride's father, Anthony Brovage, to the wedding by motor car met with a serious accident, in which he was hurt painfully and the elder Brovage was injured so seriously he lies in an unconscious condition in the hospital in the city.

Lansing—A new high record for gasoline tax collection was set in August a report completed by the Department of State shows. The two-cent levy netted the State $977,010, an increase of $29,232 over the net return of $947,677 in July. Gross collections in August were $1,025,433, refunds totaling $48,423. That the total yield of the new weight and gasoline highway finance plan will yield in excess of $21,000,000 appeared certain. The weight tax, up to Sept. 1, had turned $12,866,638 into the treasury and the total probably will run close to $14,000,000.

Lansing—Asserting that the drainage of water from the lakes through the Chicago drainage canal is becoming an increasingly serious matter to Michigan, the state administrative board authorized Edgar Cochran, secretary of the conservation commission, to appear at meetings scheduled in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, to explain the gravity of the situation. Cochran will attend conservation and other meetings for the purpose of telling about the recession of water in northern Michigan resorts, the destruction of shore line and damage to property.

Sat., October 24. One day only

Office Hours 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.

Returning Every Three Months

The Progressive Doctors' Specialist is licensed by the state of Michigan; a graduate of one of the best universities; twenty five years of practical experience; comes well recommended. Will demonstrate in the principal cities methods of preventing many diseases such as goitre, consumption, etc. and also methods of treating diseases of long standing by means of medicines, diet and hygiene, thus saving many people from a dangerous and expensive surgical operation.

This specialist is an expert in diagnosis and will tell you the exact truth about your condition. Only those who have a good chance to regain their health will be treated, so that every one who takes treatment will bring their friends at the next visit.

Some of the diseases treated: Diseases of the stomach, bowels, liver, blood, blood vessels, skin kidneys, bladder, heart, lungs, eye ear, nose, throat, scalp, enlarged veins, leg ulcers, rheumatism, high blood pressure, tumors, enlarged glands, goitre, piles, nerves, weakness, or exhaustion of the nervous system giving rise to loss of mental and bodily vigor, melancholia, discouragement and worry, undeveloped children. either mental or physical, and all chronic diseases of men, women and children that have baffled the skill of the family physician.

A diagnosis of any disease of long standing, its nature and cause will be made Free and proper medicines will be furnished at a reasonable cost to those selected as favorable cases for treatment.

Children must be accompanied by their parents and married ladies by their husbands.

Amazing Achievements In Railroad Safety

Amazing results in the railroad safety movement were announced by Charles E. Hill, General Safety Agent of the Steam Railroad Section of the National Safety Council, now holding its fourteenth annual congress in this city. Addressing the opening session of the Steam Railroad Section at the Hotel Cleveland, Chairman Hill said, among other things:

"Fourteen years ago, or about the time organized safety started functioning on American Railroads our progress at first was measured almost wholly in the elimination of physical conditions contributing to the casualty toll. As time went on we gradually passed from the physical aspect into the realms of the human equation.

"Man has kept pace with progress in that he has modernized machinery, renovated industrial plants, put his house in order, so that accidents from the proper use of these agencies have been rendered almost negligible.

"The progress of things inanimate has been greater than the progress of man himself. While he has been busy in delving into the intricacies of the things which are for the betterment of mankind he has neglected to train the mind to meet the new order of things as they exist to-day. Thus, we find the human element as the potent factor in our safety program we must train the mind so that man in the performance of his duties will pursue the course that is efficient and safe.

"In analyzing employee casulties we are stunned at the disclosures. When we find that out of the 1,479 employees killed and the 124,655 injured on the railroads of the United States last year that 90 per cent of the entire number was due to the human element—that the fault lies either with the victim or one or more of his coworkers, we then realize what a tremendous responsibility we have.

"I am glad to say that leading railroad men are fully in accord with the general policies followed in our efforts to prevent accidents. They recognize the fact that safety is a vital factor in railroad operation and the financial and moral support they are giving this movement is indicative of their great interest in conserving the lives of their employees.

"Organized safety has indeed been a vital factor in railroad operation. In 1923 before constructive safety work had an opportunity to make itself felt, 10,964 persons were killed and 200,308 persons injured. In 1924 there were 6,617 persons killed, a reduction of 39.6 percent, and 143,739 persons injured, a reduction of 28.2. It must be remembered that this reduction in casulties—which refers to all classifications—was made in the face of a material increase in the number of railroad employees, an increase in the volume of freight and passenger traffic, and what is still of greater moment and increose of 167 percent in the number of casualties at railroad highway crossings. If we confine ourselves to employee and passenger falalities our record of achievement would show the phenomenal reduction of 58 per cent.

"The duty is ours to carry on this great work and it must be pursued with greatest zeal than ever before. Where cooperation is greater, accidents are fewer."

State Police Are "Go-Getters"

To those who suppose the State Police are a drag on the body politic and a useless appendage, we want to warble a few notes relative to the work done the past summer—some of it right here in our midst—during the month of July alone, and we ask you can your local officers do any better? Can they do anything at all on some cases. We believe you will agree with us that some of this work is entirely out of the catngory of local officers—at least they can't do it and never have. For instance we hear mighty good reports of the patrol work done on the angling road between North Adams and Hillsdale during the Hillsdale Fair, to cut off "speeders" "road hogs" and other general nuisances Let them go to it.

July arrests by the Michigan State Police totaled 424, one of the biggest months of the year, being exceeded by only one, when a few over 500 were arrested. Of the arrests there were 268 convictions, another near record for a single month. The other cases mostly are pending, though a few were discharged.

The 268 convictions brought fines of $4,841 into the state library fund. During July cases which were held over from the previous month resulted in 58 convictions and fines of $3,181. The costs assessed in the 326 convictions amounted $1,423.95.

Assistance of various kinds was offered by the State Police in 120 cases during the month. The assistance is classified as follows: Local officers, 34; federal officers, 7; auto accidents, 47; pay rolls guarded, 3; miscellaneous cases, 29. In addition 228 complaints were received and 195 of them were answered. Two hundred and twenty six prisoners were transferred during the month.

The liquor seizures during the month netted 7,793 quarts of whiskey, 23,686 quarts of beer, 967 quarts of wine, 20,252 quarts of mash, and 17 stills. Wayne county (Detroit) led in the whisky and beer seizures, alleged blind pigs, rum running launches and the like, contributing 3,793 quarts of whiskey and 20,231 quarts of beer. Monroe county, which is along the Ohio border, was a close second in the amount of whiskey seized, 3,520 quarts being taken. This county led in the amount of mash.

The bureau of identification, one of the most important of the State Police branches, made 564 identifications during July; mailed out 4,620 circulars and had calls for the assistance of finger print experts 19 times. These calls came from Wayne, Paw Paw, Jackson, Baldwin, Haslett, Lansing, Northville, Adrian, Holt, Elk Rapids, Manistee, Monroe, Howell, Dowagiac, and Hart. One thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven prints and 1,213 photographs were received by the department from other parts of the country.

The fire marshal's division, which has to do with oil inspection and investigation of suspicious and incendiary fire, collected $11,000 in fees in the oil inspection work and investigated 17 fires in different parts of the state. Building inspection by officers of this department covered 250 private buildings, for which 207 orders and 374 recommendations were issued; two for private schools and two orders for their repair, and two motion picture theatres, repair orders being issued for each of them.

The State Police recovered seven stolen automobiles valued at $2,900, and confiscated 14 autos valued at $8,500 in booze raids. Six boats valued at $6,000 were also confiscated by the river patrol.

OPTIMISM EXPRESSED BY SEC. W. M. JARDINE

Government Agricultural Officer Feels Sure Rural Electric Problem Will Be Mastered.

Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine is confident that the right steps are being taken to discover the key to the farm electrification question. He feels certain that a satisfactory solution of the matter will be finally arrived at.

Secretary Jardine has expressed his views in a letter to the electric utilities of Nebraska, in which he summarizes the problem and declares it to be an undeniable truth that the farmer would find himself better off in every way if he could make liberal use of electric power.

"The farmer needs electrical power," said Mr. Jardine, "both because of the added pleasures its use brings to farm life and also because of its economic value to the agricultural industry. The use of electrical energy not only makes a more efficient application of power possible in many cases, but it opens up an extensive field of new uses for power application for which other types of power are not adapted.

"Agriculture has benefited from the use of power as well as other industries, but unfortunately it is handicapped in the efficient application of its power due to the diversity of the operations, the small size of the power unit usually in the hands of one operator and the seasonal demands for the power in proportion to the quantity of work to be done. This situation has resulted in a relatively high cost per unit of power utilized, and it would appear as though the adoption of electrical distribution of power might reduce this cost in many cases if an economical method of rural electrification can be developed.

"The utilization of electrical energy for curing foods and field crops, combating insect pests and for the stimulation of plant and animal growth, while not as yet fully understood, would appear to have considerable possibilities that may also in time prove of great aid to agriculture.

"While undoubtedly the rural electrification problem is such that it will require serious thought and extensive research before its final solution can be obtained, I believe that the right steps are now being taken to reach this solution and that the electric light and power companies should look forward to this field as one that will prove to be of great importance to their industry in the future."

Electric Way of Threshing Grain

If experiments conducted on an Illinois farm can be taken as a guide, the threshing of wheat and oats by electricity offers attractive possibilities for economy. Two young farmers near Bloomington, Ill., DeLoss and Eugene Funk, have demonstrated to their own satisfaction that electrical threshing is 60 per cent less costly than steam threshing, in the case of oats, and less than half as expensive for wheat.

They gave both methods a thorough trial, and in addition also experimented with a gasoline tractor. Their figures, however, compare steam and electricity.

The cost of their steam equipment amounted to $4,772, with operating costs of $1,577, a total of $6,349. The cost of the electrical equipment came to $2,260, and the operating costs were $655, or a total of $2,915.

The same amount of work was performed by each method—sixty thousand bushels of oats and fifteen thousand bushels of wheat were threshed.

ELECTRIC LAWN MOWER

Motor-Driven Machine Cuts Swath of 20 Inches in Fast Time.

On farms where the trim appearance of the grounds around the farmstead is part of the daily objective the advantage of an electrically-driven lawn mower is likely to have an appeal. Such an apparatus has recently been brought out, the electrical equipment consisting of a one-half horsepower General Electric motor which operates at 110 volts on either direct or alternating current circuits.

The motor was especially designed for the mower after electrical engineers had studied the particular requirements of this machine for some time. It drives the mower with ease, either on level ground or on grades. Reduction gears carry the power from the motor to the wheels, and these gears are enclosed in dust-proof housings and run in oil.

The machine cuts a swath twenty inches in width, and the revolving cutter is equipped with five blades.

A Superhuman Housemaid

An enthusiast points out that electricity as the housemaid-of-all-work does not: Consume food, require lodging, go home nights, ask for one day a week off, refuse to do the washing, or demand higher wages. If anyone had described such a maid as that to your great grandmother—you can imagine the look she'd have shot back!

Trainer of Boxers Gives Diet Hints

To Kid Howard of Chicago and his new system of training and conditioning, Sammy Mandell, the present lightweight boxing champion of the world, gives a great deal of the credit for his meteoric rise to stardom in the world of pugilism. When Mandell first started fighting, he was small, weak and undeveloped, but after turning himself over to Howard it was only a short time before he took the decision from Sid Terris of New York that resulted in him being recognized as the boss of the lightweights.

Sammy Mandell.

Howard's system is unique in that it works no hardship on the athlete who is in training. Unlike the systems that have been used for years, this prominent and successful trainer of men makes conditioning more of a pleasure than a distasteful necessity. Instead of demanding that his men eat only certain things he advises them to eat what they want and when they want it as long as it is cooked in a proper manner. Mr. Howard, in a recent interview on the subject of diet and condition, said, in part: "Years ago it was a task, and an unpleasant one, for a boxer or a wrestler to train for a bout because he was forced to literally starve himself unless he wanted to eat steaks and chops at all times. I remember that when I was training for a match, I was so truly tired of steaks that I choked every time that I ate one but it was steak or nothing. I advise my men to diet at all times but it is perfectly possible for them to diet and, at the same time, to enjoy their food. My only 'don't' is the one regarding the eating of such combinations as fresh milk and cheese, and fruit with cream. In fact, I advocate the use of evaporated milk entirely. Vegetables are fine and the more that the athlete eats the better he will be for it. Pastry, of certain kinds, such as homemade pies, cakes and cookies, if made correctly, and with pure butter, evaporated milk and pure lard, are very beneficial. Stews and boils are ideal. Taken as a whole, any food, with a few exceptions, is all right if properly cooked and eaten without gorging."

And one has but to look at Howard, who is the most religious user of his own system, to realize that it is a success.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

On Signing Papers for Strangers

"Did you hear about the terrible thing that happened to Mrs. Thompson, Aunt Emmy?" asked Maud. "It seems that a man came to see her to ask her to invest in some securities his firm was selling, and she said she did not have any ready money. He asked her if she had some Liberty Bonds, and she showed him her one Liberty Bond, a thousand dollar one. He told her that there were a number of counterfeit bonds about and upon examining her bond said there were some marks that indicated it might be spurious. Poor Mrs. Thompson nearly fainted and begged the stranger to tell her what to do about it.

"He told her not to be unduly alarmed, that there was a chance that he was mistaken. His firm was indignant, he said, about the counterfeit bonds that had been foisted on the public and intended to do everything in its power to run down the culprits. They employed a man who was an authority on counterfeits and he could tell in a minute if her bond was good or not. So Mrs. Thompson let him have the bond to take to his office for examination."

"And, of course, he didn't bring it back," commented Aunt Emmy.

"Worse than that!" Maud went on. "He said that, being a widow, she should be very careful in her business dealings, so he made her sign what he called a receipt, although she didn't read it. About a week after his visit she received a number of shares of stock that she says she never heard of and certainly never bought. So she wrote to the investment house the stock came from and said she thought a mistake had been made. Imagine her surprise when she was informed that she had signed an order for those shares of stock in exchange for a $1,000 Liberty Bond!

"First she was coming right over to see you and then decided not to, because she felt ashamed when she remembered that you had warned her about being taken in, now that Mr. Thompson is dead and she has to handle her own business affairs. My brother Tom says he thinks nothing can be done about it, as the receipt bearing her signature is really an order for the stock."

"I am sorry to hear this, Maud," said Aunt Emmy. "What a pity she did not take her bond to the bank to have it examined if that slick salesman aroused suspicions in her mind as to its genuineness. She would have been dealing with people of integrity, whom she could trust absolutely. And yet she allowed herself to be duped by a perfect stranger!

Clothes for Sunday

WHAT has become of the old-time Sunday suit? The one that mother used to lay out on the bed for father every Sabbath morning and whose appearance was a sign for children to straighten up and remember what day it was?

Of course, it was black and very severe looking, with its cutaway coat, high stiff collar and white bow necktie. The Sunday suit, however, is a thing of the past. It was an extravagance to have a suit for only one day in the week. Moreover, the man of today insists on being comfortable. So summer Sunday mornings find him donning a business suit for church, well pressed and enhanced with smart hat, tie and gloves. If he feels he must observe the day by being the least bit uncomfortable, let him wear the vest to the suit to complete the outfit.

Church over, a long afternoon and evening ahead, the business suit is put aside in favor of loose flannels, knickers, soft shirts with turn-down collars. Sports clothes that make him at home on the golf links, at the wheel of his car or when pitching a few good balls to work off that Sunday dinner.

The one requirement of Sunday clothes is that they must make you feel like a different person from the one you are all week long. One day's rest in seven is essential and by rest is meant, for the most part, change. A complete change of clothing is one of the best ways of getting this variety into our lives.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Five Years Of Prohibition And Its Results

PROHIBITION FROM THE WORKINGMAN'S STANDPOINT

"Labor has learned that there is neither profit nor pleasure in getting drunk," insists John G. Cooper of Ohio, a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and also a member of the United States Congress, in an article on "Prohibition from the Workingman's Standpoint." "Labor gets more 'kick' out of an auto and a decent home than it ever did out of the corner saloon. The bootlegger does not find many of his customers in this social group. The rank and file have learned that drink does not pay. Men might 'drown their sorrows in the flowing bowl' but labor hasn't as many sorrows as joys today and no one wants to drown joy. The older element, conservative and slow to change, may still grumble about a man's right to have a glass of beer when he wants it. The old brewery trades may still orate and agitate in the hope of getting their easy jobs back again. But Labor, as a whole, is back of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act and Labor's wife joins Labor in whole hearted opposition to any attempt to weaken the enforcing laws. That is why each election sees heavier votes cast for dry measures and dry men than the preceding election. Labor is "sitting pretty' just now, with high hopes for the future and with an increasing conviction that drinking never was what it was cracked up to be, anyhow."

PROHIBITION AND THE MEDICAL FRATERNITY

"Most reputable physicians object to excepting our profession from the beneficient law establishing universal prohibition and resent the permission to dispense liquors as an occasion of the lowering of a noble and dignified body to the level of the bootleggers," is the belief of Howard A. Kelly, M. D., Professor, John Hopkins University, in an article entitled, "Prohibition and the Medical Fraternity." "They hold that even if the prescription of liquor does some occasional good, that modicum of benefit is many thousand fold outweighed by the enormous harm done from keeping open this avenne for the easy violation of the law. That better part of our profession which takes greatly to the heart the present great moral problems threatening the very life of so many nations views with no little alarm any parleying whatever, or the slightest compromise with the liquor fraternity, which obviously continually plots to wreck our government for its own miserable profit—we extend this strong feeling also to the predatory rich allies of the liquor men, and the indifferent of all classes.

"We insist with every energy at our command that the state has the inalienable right to restrict any action whatever, whether it concerns our eating or drinking or other personal habits, in order to promote the public welfare. If the government controls our use of opium and of cocaine, then why not by parity of reasoning, alcohol? Communities have frequently been forbidden to drink from suspicious wells, and such wells have repeatedly been closed to the great inconvenience of their near by patrons, and yet no doctor has appeared to insist on reopening such a well to exploit his personal liberty We believe that this 'due regulation' of our conduct for the benefit of the social body is clearly implied in the very word 'government', and so as citizens who esteem the public welfare as an obligation higher than our personal tastes we cheerfully render due obedience to all laws."

PROHIBITION AND LAW ENFORCEMENT

"Roughly, there are three points of view from which to judge of the progress of law enforcement," suggests Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania, in an article entitled "Prohibition and Law Enforcement". "One is that of the bootleggers and liquor politicians who understand fully that the Eighteenth Amendment is a permanent part of our Constitution, that the laws under it can be and some day will be effectively enforced, but who in the meantime are making their profit out of law violation. Their point of view has the same right to be considered as that of similar criminals engaged in the white slave traffic and their polical backers, and no more.

"Second, a numerically insignificant but often socially conspicuous group of people, mostly rich, who hold that their personal habits are more sacred than the Constitution of the United States, and whose conversation was almost exclusively, and still is very largely confined to the alleged tyranny and unenforceability of the Eighteenth Amendment. Neither the noise they make nor the amount of attention it attracts represents any proportionate influence on public affairs. 'Sound and fury, signifying nothing.'

"Third, the great body of right thinking, law abiding people of the United States who believe in God, believe in the Constitution, and believe in law enforcement and are becoming more and more determined to get it. That means at least nine-tenths of us. From the point of view of these people the Eighteenth Amendment is here to stay. The power to keep it is in their hands."

Start Super Grade Potato Seed Class

A super grade of potato seed stock, to be known as "registered" seed, will be included among classes certified in the future by the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, according to announcement made here this week by extension specialists at the M. S. C.

Foundation stock for the certified seed potato growers of the state will be provided by the new grade. The result is expected to mean constantly improved quality of seed tubers, as produced under the grading program of the college crops department and the improvement association.

Points upon which the new registered seed will be selected, as drawn up by the seed potato inspection committee of the college, are as follows: freedom from disease; uniformity and vigor of plant growth; yield and quality of crop; known history of seed and at least two years of satisfactory results with the seed in Michigan State College official seed tests; and seed to be grown, harvested, stored and marketed under conditions that meet the approval of the college inspection committee.

Districtive certification tags and special tags for the registered grade will be used for the inspected potatoes, it is understood. The new registered grade was decided upon by the M. S. C. potato certification committee, which includes H. C. Rather, secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, who is chairman; H. C. Moore and J. W. Weston, potato specialists of the college; R. J. Baldwin, director of extension work; and J. F. Cox, head of the college crops department.

Michigan Cows Rank High In Production

Ranking second only to Wisconsin among dairy states of the country in the number of herds which have qualified for the National Dairy Exposition "300 pound herd average" honor roll, Michigan dairy farmers have made an enviable name for themselves as efficient producers.

A total of 813 Michigan herds are listed in the national roll as having more than 300 pounds of butterfat per cow from the period from July 1, 1924, to June 30, 1925 Wisconsin, with 934 herds in the select circle, tops the entire country; while Minnesota takes third place with 387 herds listed. Other leading states are: Pennsylvania, 259; Iowa, 193; Ohio, 150; Indiana 145; and Illinois, 115.

The Michigan herd are all members of 86 of the state cow testing associations. There are 106 active cow testing associations. There are 106 active cow testing associations in Michigan now, according to A. C. Baltzer, extension specialist at the M. S. C. who has charge of the association work. Wisconsin has more than 160 active associations, and Mr. Baltzer points out that Michigan's percentage of 300 pound herds is greater in proportion to the number of test associations than is Wisconsin's.

Special certificates will be awarded the 813 Michigan "300 pound" herd owners during the National Dairy Exposition, in Indianapolis from October 10 to 17. A number of prominent dairymen of the state are also entering animals in the competitive judging classes at the big show.

Our Imperialistic Policies

It is likely that for the past 15 years our national policies have considerably outgrown the Monroe Doctrine and we have practically nolle prossed the old time boasted system which so many seem to think has been our salvation. Not only the Philippine Islands are spoils of our war policies but a number of South and Central American countries are today under our directorate. Cuba, Hayti and other parts of the Indies we have reached out and grabbed and the grabbing process still goes on, so that really it is a parody on the Monroe Doctrine after all. It might surprise you to learn that Hayti under the guise of needed protection had to come under our flag. The Haytians could do nothing to prevent it. Cuba needed "protection" and she still has to ask Washington for some things, although we were supposed to let go of Cuba way back in 1904. When we were in district school we used to read to lot about our wonderful free institutions and our aloofness from the European Mix-up because they said we were happily situated on this side of the big ocean away from the quarreling bickering jealous nations of the Old World and we had no use for their land stealing tactics. What has changed our ideas so extensively? Greed is the only answer. Greed led our gunboats into the harbor of Manilla, greed hoisted the stars and stripes on Hawaii, greed took possession of Guam, greed is tinkering today with Mexico.

A thousand reasons are paramount for our leaving the Phillippines to themselves but the grisly hand of capital lays its bloody talons on the government at Washington and says the investor must be protected. Untold millions of American capital are in Cuban sugar plantations. A lot more went to Nicaragua and Honduras to establish the fruit business and hew out plantations from the tropical jungle of Central America; several million went across the Rio Grande into old Mexico for mining enterprises and the recent up-risings in Mexican states have seriously interfered with the comfort and prosperity of American mine owners and oil well promoters. The Gringoes never hesitate to express their regards for the Yankee wherever they run against his properties. We needed naval stations in Cuba, the Philippines and Hawaii but did we make an honourable proposal of purchase for them? We did not. All these little fellows needed "protection" and they were likely to be "overrun" and "annexed" by old world nations—so of course we had to gather them under our wing, and after we had "protected" them for a period of incubation, Lo and behold! There was hatched a sturdy chick of a new state. The Philippinos have seen quite enough of American protection and would like to try a hand at their own management, but the chances are they will never see the day when they can do it. They will always be considered wee fledglings, cute enough for our dependensies but not quite smart enough to be their own bosses. Of course the explanation is simple. We have sent thousands of teachers to the Islands—a thousand other Americans of wealth have chosen to invest American money in various enterprises; we need the gold, the iron, the tropical woods and other exceptional products of the Islands—hence we are going to keep them.

State Sunday School Convention

Nearly four thousand Sunday schools in Michigan are expected to send delegates to the all state convention which takes place at Detroit November 3 to 5 inclusive this fall.

The Convention is to Sunday Schools of the state what the State Teachers' Convention is to the Public School Teachers; not so much a program of business or of controversial discussion but three days packed by contacts with International thinkers in the field of character building through religious education. The platform and discussion groups will fairly bristle with suggestions for building a Christian Community cooperatively.

Educators are coming—folks who know what to teach and when to teach it. The Week Day School of Religious Instruction will be discussed in its many phases. Those who are in a position to know the trend of things in Michigan state with emphasis that this subject will soon be receiving careful consideration in practically every town and city in the State, that civic leaders will be making a study of it, that church leaders will be coming together to discuss it; in fact the Boards of Education will soon be working on its introduction.

Of immediate interest throughout the State is the announcement of quotas of delegates expected from each county. Local leaders will be asked to secure advance registrations to cover the quota. According to the early plans of the big State Committee of seventy representing seventeen Protestant Denominations, the Convention will be of special interest to pastors, directors of Religious Education, Sunday School superintendents, Community and public school leaders. The rank and file of Sunday School class work in the Conference sessions arranged for their special benefit daily. The rural Sunday School will be given a larger place than usual on the program.

This will undoubtedly be a fine chance to hear the head officials of the Sunday school work in Michigan tell all about how to do it, and not only that but famous educators will be there. You should go if at all interested in Sunday school activities. Any delegates wishing lodging and meals will please communicate with Jessie Allison, Reading Michigan.

Owing to a raise in the price of McCall's excellent magazine we are unable to longer offer it for $2.00 with the Advocate. So here. after the price of McCall's and the Advocate will have to be $2.25.

A HOME WITHOUT CHILDREN

Lacks the Greatest Joys of Life

Many Wives are Childless Because of Ill Health. Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Mrs. Benedict

MRS. MARY R. BENEDICT
313 PAYSON STREET, KEWANEE, ILLINOIS

Kewanee, Illinois. — "When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my 'teens until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson Street, Kewanee, Ill.

Has a Beautiful Baby Girl Now

Bridport, Vermont.—"In the first place I wanted a baby, but none seemed to come to me. I just love children and my husband is away all day, so I was not happy at all. A doctor told me I could not have a baby until I went to a hospital. But my sisters said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you will be O.K.' I was nervous, had organic weakness, with backache, sideache, headache and no strength. I had been in bed nearly a week when I began taking the Vegetable Compound. It was all that ever helped me and I just wish you could see my beautiful baby girl. I am fine now, and so is she. I am still taking the medicine as it keeps me well. You may be sure I am recommending the Vegetable Compound and always will."—Mrs. A. W. HOWE, Bridport, Vermont.

"Wherever a Scot happens to be," said Janet, "is Scotland."

"The law can't really be exactly like that," said the princess. "It would be too inconvenient."

"That is the law," said Janet. "If I say that I'm married to him, I shall be, and there'll be no getting out of it. That would be intolerable."

"It wouldn't be particularly pleasant for me, either," said Tommy.

He ought not to have said that; but he was getting angry with Janet. A woman has a perfect right to refuse to marry any man who asks her; but she ought not to tell him to his face that he is intolerable. No man can be expected to submit tamely to that, particularly when he has not really offered himself as a husband.

"Besides," said Calypso, "if he married you, what would happen to poor Miss Temple?"

"I wish to goodness Miss Temple was here," said Tommy; "you won't listen to me. But if she were here she wouldn't want to marry me any more than either of you does. But anyhow, if we're to go on at all, one of you must own up to being my wife. "I'll leave you settle it between yourselves."

He walked off, walked to the car and looked at it, walked a little way along the road and back again, finally sat down on a stone and looked at the river, which ran, turbid and yellow, under a little bridge.

But Tommy's ill temper never lasts long, and he is a man of active and resourceful mind. In a quarter of an hour he was back with a proposal to meet the difficulty.

"According to that Scotch law of yours," he said to Janet, "would you be married to a man if you said you were his wife, but he didn't say he was your husband?"

"Of course not," said Janet.

"Even if there were witnesses present?"

"That wouldn't matter," said Janet. "Unless we both said we were married we wouldn't be married."

"And supposing while you were saying you were his wife another man said he was your husband—quite a different man whom you didn't claim at all—which of them would you be married to?"

"I shouldn't be married to either," said Janet.

"Even according to the Scotch law?"

"Of course I shouldn't."

"Very well," said Tommy, "when we get to that frontier post you say that Colonel Heard is your husband. He can't say that you're his wife because he won't be there. Therefore you won't be married to him. I shall say that you're my wife, but if you don't claim me as a husband, which you won't, having already claimed Colonel Heard, then you won't be married to me and I shan't be married to you. In fact, we shan't either of us be married to any one, even by Scotch law. That will be all right, won't it?"

"Besides," said Calypso, "Colonel Heard seems to be married already, and nothing you could say would make any difference to that, would it?'

"Exactly," said Tommy. "That's another point. Even Scotch law can't let a man in for bigamy, in that casual way, especially against his will, and I don't suppose Heard particularly wants to marry you."

"So that's settled," said Calypso.

Janet did not seem satisfied, and I can scarcely wonder. A woman as intimately connected as she is with the movement for reuniting the Christian churches of the world has to be very careful of her reputation. It would be a terrible thing for her if it were to become generally known that she claimed a married man as her husband. That is the sort of thing a woman never quite succeeds in living down, and the world is censorious.

The men at the German frontier post turned out to be peaceful and quiet. They looked at the passports but made no comment on them. They inquired whether the travelers were taking any new clothes, gramophones, photographic apparatus, surgical instruments, telescopes or dyes out of Germany. The princess said that their dresses were years old, that they all hated gramophones and never took photographs. Janet added solemnly that the party did not possess a single lancet or a telescope. Tommy, when he understood what was happening, said "Nein" four or five times emphatically. Then there were some inquiries about the car. The princess asked the bearded chauffeur to produce his papers. In getting at an inside pocket he displayed his pistols and knives to great advantage. The Germans asked no more questions about the car, did not look at the papers and permitted the travelers to go on. Very likely, like Dogberrys' watch, they thanked God they were well rid of a knave.

The Megalians, when the car reached their post, turned out to be men of quite a different kind. They looked as savage and were quite as well armed as the chauffeur. They spoke a tongue which was neither German nor the quacking language of the Lystrians. Tommy and Janet did not understand a word of it. Even the princess seemed puzzled.

"As well as I can make out," she said, "they're saying that the photographs on the passports are not in the least like us."

"Tell them," said Tommy, "that that's a matter of opinion, and that if they know anything about the recent Cubist and Vorticist developments they'll see at once that these photographs represent our subconscious selves and are exactly like them."

"I don't believe I could say all that even in German," said Calypso, "and I don't know two hundred words of Megalian, which is what they're talking."

The chauffeur, seeing that something had gone wrong, left his car and approached the Megalians with his overcoat flying wide open. They were less impressed than the Germans by his display of weapons. In fact they were not impressed at all. All they did was unbutton their own coats and show that they possessed weapons of similar kinds.

"This," said Tommy, "is getting quite like Ireland."

The chauffeur quacked at the Megalians in Lystrian. They replied in Megalian, a language which consists principally of sounds like hisses. He quacked again, but mingled a few hisses with his quacks. They hissed in reply, but uttered a few quacks too. Gradually the speakers drew together until the Megalians were quacking nearly as much as they hissed and the chauffeur was hissing frequently. The princess understood about half of what each party said.

"They've just asked him," she said, "which of us is your wife."

"Tell him," said Janet, "to say I'm not."

But it was too late to tell him anything. He was making a long speech in mingled hisses and quacks.

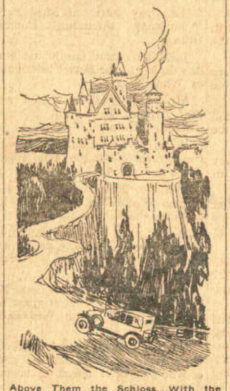
The princess giggled again.

"He's just told them," she said, "that I'm Mrs. Heard, and that we're all French subjects."

"I won't be called French," said Janet.

"I hope he'll be careful," said Tommy. "I can't talk French any more than I can German. Why didn't he say we were English?"

"It's no use saying that to the Megalians," said the princess. "They think the English never send armies anywhere or do anything except pay other people's debts for them. But they're desperately frightened of the French."



Above Them the Schloss, With the Light Still Bright on It, Looked Like a Fairy Palace.

The chauffeur quacked and hissed a little more.

"I'm awfully sorry," said Calypso to Janet, "but he's just told them that you're my maid."

The man had been treating Janet as if she were a servant ever since the party left Breslau. She was determined to assert herself and not to leave the Megalians under a false impression.

"Please tell him at once," she said, "to say that I'm the European representative of the League for Establishing World Peace Through the Union of Christian Churches."

She spoke so fiercely that Calypso dared do nothing but obey her. She did her best to explain to the chauffeur Janet Church's position in the religious world. I do not know what the chauffeur thought or how much he understood of what was said to him. Nor is there any way of finding out what he told the Megalian soldiers, or how much they understood. But the effect on them was excellent.

They all took off their hats, knelt down and crossed themselves piously.

They must somehow have gathered that Janet was an ecclesiastic of an unusual kind. They continued to kneel for several minutes in hope of a benediction which Janet did not give them.

Troyte tells me that Megalians have the reputation of being the most religious people in Europe. They take the greatest delight in Passion Plays, which they continually perform, keep rows of spittoons in their churches (a sign of real reverence) and have several well authenticated miracles every year.

As soon as they realized that Janet was a priestess, deaconess or abbess, they made no difficulties about allowing the party to go on.

Calypso's spirits rose after passing the frontier posts. That corner of the Megalian territory consisted of the old kingdom of Lystria, so that the princess was at last back in her own land. The few peasants who were herding cattle on the hillsides were Lystrians and no doubt talked to one another in the quacking language which the chauffeur used. The cattle were Lystrian cattle, long-horned, active little beasts, which looked as if they afforded little milk when alive and not much meat when dead. The cottages were Lystrian, the roads, the heather, the mountains themselves, all were Lystrian. Calypso drew deep breaths of Lystrian air with keen delight, pointed out one thing after another to Janet, who was not deeply interested. Now and then she clapped her hands with joy.

The spirits of the brigand chauffeur rose too. He still drove carefully. Any other kind of driving would have brought swift disaster on the Lystrian roads. But he blew his horn whenever he saw a man, woman or child, however distant. He threw off his cap and let the mountain air blow freely through his thick curly hair. Once, for a short while, he quickened the car's pace and pursued a hare which was foolish enough to run straight along the road. After a while he began to sing, mere snatches of song at first, in the end whole verses. This was highly unconventional behavior in a chauffeur driving a royal car. But Calypso did not resent it. She seemed actually pleased. Soon she joined him in singing. When the man heard her high treble ring out he dropped naturally into a bass part. The Lystrians, like most half-civilized people, are very musical, and every kind of singing is a delight to them.

Calypso started the Lystrian national anthem, a wild tune, as exciting as the Marseillaise, with something in it of the grandeur of the old Russian czarist national air. The chauffeur joined in with a kind of fierce enthusiasm. They sang the tune through together three or four times. Then Calypso leaned forward and laid her hand on Tommy's shoulder.

"Join in," she said. "You sing, too. Let's all sing."

She shook up Janet, who was dozing, and told her to sing.

Janet has no more ear for music than a crow has. Hymns are the only things she ever attempts to sing, and I am told that when she does the rest of the congregation suffers acutely.

It was her attempt at the Lystrian national anthem which put a stop to the singing in the end. Janet, who is quite unconscious of her infirmity, sang loud when she began to enjoy herself. She has a very powerful voice. The chauffeur must have been actually musical, more musical than either Tommy or the princess. His face twitched when Janet's high notes reached him. His steering became very erratic and once or twice he ran the car dangerously near the edge of the road. He tried to assuage his misery by sounding his horn fiercely when he knew a high note was coming in the song. I suppose this only made the discord more intolerable. At last he stopped the car, turned round, and quacked out an angry speech to the princess.

Calypso understood what he said well enough. She would probably have understood his feelings even if he had not spoken, for she was sitting beside Janet. But she was very tactful.

"Sandor says that we had better stop singing. The mountain air is bad for the voice and we shall have sore throats tomorrow if we go on."

What Sandor really said was that unless the English housemaid stopped squalling he would be forced by uncontrollable emotion to stab her and throw her out of the car.

They drove on without singing for the rest of the afternoon, steadily climbing into the mountains by twisting and sometimes perilous roads. At about six o'clock they reached the highest point of a lofty pass. On each side the mountains rose to snow-clad peaks. In front the road dipped steeply into a narrow valley. Beyond the valley stood, steep and frowning, another mountain. On its side, perched on a plateau—Sandor gripped Tommy's arm and pointed forward—there, a gray pile of masonry, stood the schloss, oldest, most impressive and least comfortable of the palaces of the Lystrian kings.

The car plunged into the valley, out of the sunshine into deep shadow. Above them the schloss, with the light still bright on it, looked like a fairy palace. They crawled over a narrow bridge which crossed a foaming torrent. They began a winding ascent along a singularly stony road.

Lenny Really Didn't Know Weight of Hog

If old Lenny Foskett was anything more than deliberate, he was exasperating. He moved, spoke and lived at his own sweet will, and no one had ever been known to budge him. He came into the village store one morning, threw himself down on the bench in front of the counter and announced that he had just killed his prize hog.

"Guess how much he weighed, boys," he drawled.

Lenny shook his head.

Others offered suggestions; the guesses grew so brisk that it began to sound like an auction. All sorts of weights were given, but to all of them Lenny merely shook his head. The others began to lose patience. From mere curiosity they began to long passionately to learn the weight of the hog and pass on to another subject.

"Well, for heaven's sake, how much did your old hog weigh?" somebody demanded. "We've guessed every figure possible! How much did he weigh?"

Lenny yawned. "Hi—hum. I dunno," he drawled. "I ain't weighed him yet."—Youth's Companion.

Concrete protects against Fire, Tornado and Earthquake

Ask Dad—
See If He Knows

Father and mother are always thinking of your welfare—there isn't a thing within reason they wouldn't do for you.

But they may unknowingly have been risking your life every day.

When you are at dinner tonight with dad, ask him this question:

"Dad, is our school firesafe?"

Perhaps he won't be able to answer—he may not know.

Ask dad if he knows that somewhere in the country a schoolhouse burns every day. Ask him if he knows that one-third of all the schoolhouses in the country are nothing better than firetraps — maybe your school is one of them.

Of course dad knows that buildings can be built that will not burn. They are being built everywhere, every day.

If your school is firesafe, you're lucky. If it isn't, ask dad what he is going to do about it. You have a right to know.

The highest type of firesafe construction is concrete. Our illustrated booklet "Concrete Schoolhouses" contains a wealth of information on firesafe construction with which every parent ought to be familiar. Write today for your free copy.

Ob Richards of north Moscow township, a life-long resident of the farm on which he died, passed away Saturday evening at the age of 73 years from a complication of diseases. He was a High Mason, having joined Hamilton Lodge at Moscow when he was a young man. His splendid farm home is a land mark on the highway, being supplied with large and commodious barns well kept, and the farm has never had any other owners than Mr. Richards and his father who took up the land from the government in territortorial days. Funeral services were held Tuesday at the home and interment was at Hanover.

Judge Chester's Decision Reversed

It will be remembered that in 1923 Marjorie Kuhn was tried and convicted in the Circuit court of the poisoning of Zelon Lake at Jonesville. The jury found her guilty and Judge Chester sentenced her to life imprisonment at Detroit. News comes that the Supreme court has handed down a decision reversing the verdict, and the case must be tried over again at several thousand dollars expense. The results will hardly justify the effort but justice must be satisfied. It is possible the jury and court blundered in this case, and we recall that many of our citizens remarked at the time they could not understand how the woman could be sent up for life on what appeared as purely circumstantial evidence.

There has just been issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture a very timely bulletin on the making of bread and other baked goods. This bulletin is entitled "Home Baking" and is prepared by Charlotte Chatfield, of the Bureau of Home Economics.

Some kind of bread is served on the average American table three times a day. The quality of that bread is an important matter. The food value depends on the materials which go into it, whether it is made at home or in the bakery. This bulletin has been planned primarily as a guide in home baking but through its discussion of materials it offers help also in the choice of commercial baked products. Copies of the bulletin may be secured, without cost, by addressing Congressman Joseph L. Hooper, Washington, D. C.

Dairy Cow Efficient Food Producer

© Underwood & Underwood

Keep the utensils clean.

With increasing rentals and values of farm lands, dairy farming is rapidly replacing other types of live stock farming. A dairy cow producing 8,000 pounds of milk a year furnishes 1,000 pounds of dry matter, all of which is edible and digestible. A two year old steer weighing between 1,200 and 1,300 pounds furnishes about 550 pounds of dry matter, not all of which can be used for food. In other words a fairly good producing dairy cow furnishes twice as much edible dry matter in one year as a good two year old steer when he is killed for meat. A cow can be kept for additional years of service, while to replace the steer, another animal must be fed for a period of two years.

The United States consumption of milk per capita has increased from 42 gallons of whole milk in 1918 to more than 54 gallons in 1925.

With growing acceptance of milk as a food has come an increasing knowledge of the proper care of milk on the farm. Because odors from foods and animals in the cow stable are easily taken up by milk, injuring its flavor, they must not come in contact with the milk. Removal of the milk from the stable as soon as possible reduces the amount of dust and dirt entering it and keeps down the bacterial growth in the milk.

Bacteria increase rapidly in warm milk causing it to sour quickly. Removal of the animal heat from freshly drawn milk by lowering the temperature to that of cold well water (approximately 60° F.). greatly aids in preventing bacterial growth. A well lighted, well ventilated milk house, not too close to the stable, is also very helpful.

Cleanliness in the stable is vitally necessary. The stall platform should be just long enough for the cow to stand comfortably without room to spare; otherwise, the cow will become dirty from droppings when she lies down. The gutter should be wide and deep. A good gutter is 16 inches to 18 inches in width and 9 or 10 inches below the platform. Bedding should be clean and plenteous.

Long hair on the flanks, udders and tail above the switch of the dairy cow should be removed at regular intervals. Removing this long hair removes the clinging places of dirt which otherwise will fall into the milk pail in quantities. Keeping the hair short on these parts of the cow permits cleaning in much less time and more thoroughly. Brushing should never be neglected. It removes loose particles sticking to the body. When the hair is short, wiping the udders with a damp cloth just before milking, is an easy and important aid in securing clean milk.

It is generally recognized that most of the bacteria found in milk finds its source in dirt clinging to the cow and dropping into the pail during milking time. Simple precautions will practically eliminate this source of bacterial growth and dairymen find themselves well repaid for the little time necessary in taking such precautions,

This is "Brother Charlie" who came nearer baing Vice President of the United States than his brother, William J. Bryan ever got to the presidency. However, a miss is as bad as a mile, and Charles Bryan could hardly qualify for such a scrap in the Senate as has been put up by Colonel Dawes. The Democratic timber is scarce but it is more than likely by the time another Presidential Election rolls around, another star will have been born into the realm of politics. There is considerable speculation as to who will be the next Colossus of Rhodes spanning the straits of Democracy.

Old Resident Celebrates Birthday

Mrs. Josephine Thompson of this village entertained a company of relatives at her home on West Main Street Sunday, Oct. 11 in honor of her eighty-first birthday which occurred the following day, October 12th. Twenty-six people were present to partake of the pleasant occasion, coming from Hanover, Mosherville, Jefferson, Plymouth and other points to join the home town folks in reminding Mrs. Thompson that she is remembered most cordially by them all.

Bertha Powell of Hanover produced a beautiful appetizing cake with 81 candles which were duly lighted. All too soon the hours slipped away when it was time to wend the homeward way and all departed, wishing the hostess a large portion of the joys that come as a reward for a life well spent.

Mrs. Thompson has been a resident of this village about 20 years and has two sons, George Smith of Plymouth and Neil Thompson of Hillsdale.

REV. VIRGIL HUNT, Pastor

The sermon topic for this Sunday will be "Witnesses". You are urged to feel your responsibility at these services and keep them alive and full of interest.

Sunday school immediately following the morning worship.

Please bear in mind the following announcements:

The W. C. T. U. meeting is to be held in our church this coming week. You are invited whether a member or not. Come! You will receive good from the meetings.

Saturday October 24 is the Church Auction to be held for the purpose of helping us to pay off some more of the debt of our church building. The public are urged to come and buy from the auction. There will be articles there of interest to all. Come and see! Sale starts at 1:00 p. m. at or near the Town Hall.

Sunday October 25 the Women's Missionary Union will hold a Thank Offering service in the church at 7:00 p. m. A choir from Hanover will render special music and a short address will be given by Rev. Mud Lake School Notes

The teacher was pleasantly entertained at the Carl Shull home last Thursday night.

At the present time the spelling contest is tied by Loceal Shull and Mildred Coryell.

The school enjoyed another watermelon feast on Thursday of last week when Loceal Shull hrought two large melons.

We have decided to have a Thanksgiving instead of a Hallowe'en social to raise money for our warm lunches, which we will have during the winter months.

The report of our Fair exhibit should have read two firsts and four second premiums, a total of $3.75. It was voted to keep this money for the warm lunch fund,

A good many of our customers have made that very remark after they tried out the Red Top Steel Fence Post.
For instance, you can drive over 200 of these posts in a day without a helper. Some have driven as high as 300. The One-Man Driver makes this possible. What a difference from the old back-breaking method of setting wood posts. No post hole digging and no tamping with Red Tops. This saving on labor costs makes the price on Red Tops installed very low.
That's not the only saving you'll make. One Red Top will outlast at least two wood posts. And there is very little fence repair work required with Red Tops. The Handy Fence Fasteners which come free with the posts can't loosen up and let go of the wire, so there isn't this constant restretching, restapling and upkeep.
We've picked the Red Top line because we know it is the leader and we believe it to be the biggest value for the money. One of our main policies is to pick goods that are bound to please our customers. We want you to feel that no matter what you buy of us you are getting as much or more for your money than you get anywhere.
Come in and look over our stock of Red Tops. Prices are mighty reasonable now.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Federation of Labor Spurns Briton's Plea for Union With Russian Workers.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GREAT BRITAIN is alarmed by the spread of communism in that country, but Americans need not worry about it over here, if the words of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and the cheers that greeted them in the federation's annual convention are a true indication.

Arthur A. Purcell, member of the British parliament, president of the International Federation of Trades Unions and a fraternal delegate in the meeting in Atlantic City, told the convention of his recent visit to Russia and his study of industrial conditions there, and then advised the workers of America to establish the closest relations with the Russian workers.

"We must not be afraid of new ideas," he said. "It has often struck me that, while the Americans have been the most advanced, the most receptive, in ideas concerning mechanical inventions and business organization, they have been slow in accepting new social and political ideas. Just as British workers have sent delegations to Russia, so I hope and trust the American Federation of Labor will do the same. Do not be afraid of being called names. Were Abraham Lincoln, Samuel Gompers or "Gene Debs, those great sons of the American people, ever afraid of being called names or being reviled, maligned or persecuted?"

Whereupon President Green arose with fire in his eyes and said: "We in America know something of the teachings of communism and the control the communist party exercises over the so-called Russian internationale. We know that influence emanating from Moscow is seeking, as it has always sought, not to co-operate with us but to capture and control us. They call the officers and representatives of the American labor movement fakers, crooks, and scabs. Frankly they say they do not believe in collective bargaining. They do not see in any strike an opportunity to increase wages, to shorten hours, to improve the condition of the employment for workers, but they see in every strike an opportunity for revolution.

"The Trade Union Educational legaue here in America, which is a creature of the communist party, frankly announces that its policy is to bore within the labor movement, to destroy it and substitute for our philosophy the philosophy of communism. We are not ready to accept that, and we wish that our friend who has so kindly offered such frank suggestions might take back to the Russian Red Internationale this message: That the American labor movement will not affiliate with an organization that preaches that doctrine."

In the opening of the convention Mr. Green voiced the determination of organized labor to fight for passage of the child labor amendment to the Constitution. The executive council reported an increase of 43,000 in membership over last year.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE won new laurels for himself by his address before the convention of the American Legion in Omaha. "Tolerance" was his main theme, and he pleaded eloquently with his fellow Americans to drop every vestige of racial, religious and sectional intolerance. "It seems clear" said he, "that the results of the war will be lost and we shall only be entering a period of preparation for another conflict unless we can demobilize the racial antagonisms, fears, hatreds, and suspicions, and create an attitude of toleration in the public mind of the peoples of the earth. If our country is to have any position of leadership, I trust it may be in that direction, and I believe that the place where it should begin is at home.

"If we are to maintain and perfect our own civilization, if we are to be of any benefit to the rest of mankind, we must turn aside from the thoughts of destruction and cultivate the thoughts of construction. We cannot place our main reliance upon material forces. We must reaffirm and reinforce our ancient faith in truth and justice, in charitableness and tolerance. We must make our supreme commitment to the everlasting spiritual forces of life. We must mobilize the conscience of mankind."

Mr. Coolidge paid warm tribute to the service rendered to the country and to humnalty by the members of the Legion, and thus summarized remarkably well America's effort in the World war:

"In the victory which was finally gained by you and your foreign comrades, you represented on the battlefield the united efforts of our whole people. You were there as the result of a great resurgence of the old American spirit, which manifested itself in a thousand ways, by the pouring out of vast sums of money in credits and charities, by the organization and quickening of every hand in our extended industries, by the expansion of agriculture until it met the demands of famishing continents, by the manufacture of an unending stream of munitions and supplies, by the creation of vast fleets of war and transport ships, and, finally, when the tide of battle was turning against our associates, by bringing into action a great armed force on sea and land of a character that the world had never seen before, which, when it finally took its place in the line, never ceased to advance, carrying the cause of liberty to a triumphant conclusion. You reaffirmed the position of this nation in the estimation of mankind. You saved civilization from a gigantic reverse. Nobody says now that Americans cannot fight."

Earlier in his address he said he was "a thorough believer in a policy of adequate military preparation, and after the cheers subsided he continued:

"No doubt this country could, if it wished to spend more money, make a better military force, but that is only part of the problem that confronts the government. The real question is whether spending more money to make a better military force would really make a better country. I would be the last to disparage the military art. It is an honorable and patriotic calling of the highest rank. But I can see no merit in any unnecessary expenditure of money to hire men to build fleets and carry muskets when international relations and agreements permit the turning of such resources into the making of good roads, the building of better homes, the promotion of education and all the other arts of peace which minister to the advancement of human welfare."

The Presidential party, which included Mrs. Coolidge, returned at once to Washington, with a short stop in St. Louis.

The Legion gathering was considerably stirred up over Colonel Mitchell and his air service charges and theories. Finally a compromise resolution was adopted which, without naming Mitchell, recommended the reorganization of the national defense under one cabinet officer with subdivisions of equal importance for land, sea and air.

Philadelphia was awarded the convention of 1926 and it was decided to hold the meeting of 1927 in Paris, France.

WITH Judge E. Finley Johnson of Michigan, a member of the Philippines Supreme court, presiding, the international judicial commission to investigate the Shanghai riots opened its inquiry. The body is composed of American, British and French judges, and, according to the Chinese, is dominated by the British with the Americans as their dupes. Therefore the Chinese are violently opposing the investigation, asserting that there is no chance of a fair decision.

ALTHOUGH the allied and German statesmen in conference at Locarno, Switzerland, are working earnestly and apparently amicably to draft a security treaty, they have not, at this writing, solved the main problem, the eastern frontiers of Germany. Briand insisted that France should have the right to guarantee the arbitration treaties between Germany and Poland and Germany and Czechoslovakia, and Chamberlain for Great Britain supported him, but the Germans, Stresemann and Luther, objected, preferring England as the sponsor for the treaties. They also declared firmly that they would not agree to any provision in any of the treaties which would prevent Germany's seeking revision of the eastern frontiers. The security pact for the Franco-German frontier could be fixed up speedily except for one point—the right of France to send troops through German territory to aid her allies of the little entente in case they are attacked.

ITALY'S Fascists are going ahead at a great pace. Last week they brought about an agreement of closest co-operation between the confederation of industry, representing the employers, and the federation of Fascist labor unions, and then the grand council of the Fascisti framed constitutional changes giving the government absolute control of every phase of industrial, political and administrative activity. One provision creates a board of compulsory arbitration for industry and labor, and another makes strikes crimes punishable by death. The Fascisti also are conducting a violent campaign against Freemasons and there have resulted serious disorders in various cities, especially Florence where several murders were committed.

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL, on the eve of court-martial for insubordination, was ordered by the adjutant general of the army to appear before the naval court investigating the airship Shenandoah. He showed up in full uniform and accompanied by his counsel, Congressman Frank Reid of Illinois. The colonel objected to taking the oath but asked leave to read a brief statement. Admiral Jones, president of the court, refused to allow this and Mitchell still declining to testify, the court took the matter under advisement.

The President's air board heard a large number of officers of the various services. The air officers were about equally divided for and against the proposition of a defense department with a separate air force. Rear Admiral Moffet, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, was an especially interesting witness, giving his opinion of the air service as of the greatest value and telling the board at length what he thought should be done to improve it. On Wednesday the board adjourned to attend the three days of air racing at Mitchel field.

DEFYING the known wishes of the President, the federal shipping board, after depriving the Fleet corporation of its powers, removed Leigh C. Palmer from the presidency of the corporation and ordered that Elmer E. Crowley be elected to succeed him. Palmer was offered a vice presidency in charge of European affairs but declined and severed all connection with the corporation. Other changes of personnel were ordered by the board and carried out. Rear Admiral Cone, retired, vice president and general manager of the Fleet corporation, then resigned, telling Chairman O'Connor that "without regard to other considerations, I cannot, as a retired naval officer, serve any organization that defies the wishes and policies of the President of the United States."

FRENCH and Spanish forces in eastern Morocco have effected a junction, the former advancing northward from Kifane and the latter moving south from Alhucemas bay. Thus the Riffs are completely surrounded. But the rainy season on which Abd-el-Krim has been counting has come and the Europeans are finding their operations increasingly difficult. Jules Steeg, minister of justice, has been selected as resident general of French Morocco to succeed Marshal Lyautey, who resigned.

In Syria the rebellious Druses have been thoroughly routed by the French tanks and bombing planes.

JUST as the world's championship series between the Washington and Pittsburgh ball teams was opening, all lovers of the national game were saddened by the word that Christy Mathewson, one of the most famous and best loved of all pitchers, was dead at Saranac Lake, N. Y. "Big Six," as he was called, succumbed to tuberculosis which attacked him after he was gassed in the World war.

Special Schools for Filipinos Great Need

Manila.—That a special system of instruction is desirable for the non-Christian peoples of the Philippines, especially for the Moros, who inhabit Mindanao and Sulu and who are Mohammedans, is the conclusion of a board of American experts, headed by Dr. Paul Monroe of Columbia university, which spent four months in making a survey of the educational system of the islands.

The board suggested that a special department of the bureau of education be created to take charge and make a close study of school work among these peoples. The board's report says: "The non-Christian peoples need a system of education that in many essential respects should differ from that developed for the great mass of the Filipino people. Only by such special treatment can the non-Christian peoples be brought up to the cultural and economic level of the Christian population."

A bill providing for separate schools for boys and girls in the departments of Mindanao and Sulu, where nearly all the inhabitants are Mohammedans, has been introduced in the house of representatives by J. P. Melencio, son-in-law of General Aguinaldo. Co-education in the elementary schools of Mindanao has not produced good results, in the opinion of Representative Melencio, who believes the enactment of the bill into law will greatly improve the public school system among the Moros.

Why That Bad Back?
Is backache keeping you upset? Feel all tired out—so nervous and dispirited you can hardly keep going? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys rid the body of poisonous waste. But if they lag, impurities accumulate and poison the whole system. Then one is apt to suffer backache, stabbing pains, headaches, dizziness and other annoying kidney irregularities. If your kidneys are sluggish, help them with a diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. They are praised the world over. Ask your neighbor!

Men or Mars?

Several scientists have come to the conclusion that Martians actually exist, and are a race not very different from our own. They are said to have proofs that Mars is in the condition that the earth is approaching—that is a desert.

Wind erosion has removed the mountains and hills and the seas have disappeared. The canals are not ditches nor water-courses, but vegetation on each side of conduits of water used as routes of travel.

These scientists also hope to prove that beings of an intelligence and a civilization far in advance of ours exist on Mars.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Lansing—A permit to operate a motor bus freight line from Benton Harbor to the Indiana state line was granted Mammina Bros. Motor Express by the public utilities commission. The line will also operate in Indiana to South Bend.

Saginaw—The contracting firm of L. A. Davidson company, Flint, was low bidder with an estimate of $18,405 for the construction of the bridge on the east side Bay City road across the Cheboyganning creek, the county road commission announced.

Lansing—Adolph Ackerman, employe in the Fisher Body company plant here, suffered a fractured neck when a box fell on his head at the plant. He was removed to the St. Lawrence hospital, where it was reported his condition was extremely critical.

Grand Rapids—Indictments against Gerrit and Jacob Viser, brothers, charging them with having failed to file income tax returns, were among the 27 true bills reported by the district court grand jury. It is the first time such action has been taken here against delinquents.

Ann Arbor—In memory of the late Charlotte Blagdon, of Jackson, who died last August shortly after completing her term of office as president of the University of Michigan League of Women, a scholarship fund, to be called the "Blagdon Memorial Fund," will be established by the league.

Lansing—The state will complete the pavement between Ypsilanti and Saline, on M-24, this year, if possible, the state administrative board directed recently. The board also directed the highway department to complete 2.26 miles on the same route in Hillsdale county, from M-14 east to the county line, when no bids were received.

Lansing—Fear that continued rains will cause damage to stocks stored in basements near the Grand River, which is at its highest level since last spring, has caused a number of business men to transfer their merchandise to higher ground. The river has risen several feet in the last few days and has over flowed its banks at several points.

Grand Rapids—Disregarding traffic signals and traffic officers stationed along the route, John Rood is believed to have saved the life of his 2-year-old son, Otto, by rushing him on a truck from his home to Butterworth hospital, after the child had swallowed a cupful of kerosene. Delay by observing the traffic signals would have caused the child's death, hospital attaches said.

Manistee—Ground was broken recently for Manistee's new high school on the northern half of Sanda Park. The excavating will be completed in about two weeks, preparatory to building the foundation. Actual construction will be started this fall if the weather remains moderate. It is to be a three-story building, capable of filling the needs of this city through years of ordinary growth and will be completed in time for occupation early in 1926.

Battle Creek—Declaring their city market a proven success, and the space provided for it to be inadequate the federated clubs composed of practically all women's organizations in Battle Creek, and with a membership running into the thousands, has petitioned the city commission to investigate existing conditions and provide adequate space for the parking of wagons and trucks and to provide shelter for the same during inclement weather.

East Lansing—Representatives of Michigan scientific and agricultural interests will hold a meeting in Detroit October 22 to plan a campaign against the cornborer, following an inspection trip which has just been completed through southeastern Michigan, northern Ohio and Ontario. The cornborer, which originally came from Europe, started its depredations in the eastern part of the United States, reached Michigan three years ago and now has advanced as far as Livingston county.

Grand Rapids—The attitude which many citizens have assumed toward the federal prohibition law has created "a terribly menacing situation" in this country, declared District Judge C. W. Sessions in his charge to the grand jury. Discussing the point that there is a prevailing opinion that the prohibition act should be repealed or modified, Judge Sessions said, "It requires a two-thirds vote of both houses of congress and the affirmative vote of 36 states to repeal a constitutional amendment. Do you imagine for one moment enough votes could be mustered to repeal the prohibition amendment?"

Saginaw—Although the Consumer's Power company declares it has the right to put into effect lighting rates submitted a week ago to the council and which are materially higher than the present schedule effective for the last 10 years the company is willing, according to John K. Samson, district manager, to follow the state rates. These are considerably lower than those offered. The council which received this statement has asked the city attorney to prepare a statement defining the city's rights in the matter.

Lansing—"Trouble in industry the last few years has been due to lack of understanding and co-operation of the human elements in industry and the Y. M. C. A. can, through developing a better understanding between men and management, do much to avert misunderstanding in the future," declared H. M. Taliferro, general manager of the American Seating company, at an industrial conference here called to discuss human relationships in industry. About 50 plant executives from several states and larger cities and industrial secretaries attended.

Will demonstrate in the principal cities methods of preventing many diseases such as goitre, consumption, etc. and also methods of treating diseases of long standing by means of medicines, diet and hygiene, thus saving many people from a dangerous and expensive surgical operation.

This specialist is an expert in diagnosis and will tell you the exact truth about your condition. Only those who have a good chance to regain their health will be treated, so that every one who takes treatment will bring their friends at the next visit.

Some of the diseases treated: Diseases of the stomach, bowels, liver, blood, blood vessels, skin kidneys, bladder, heart, lungs, eye ear, nose, throat, scalp, enlarged veins, leg ulcers, rheumatism, high blood pressure, tumors, enlarged glands, goitre, piles, nerves, weakness, or exhaustion of the nervous system giving rise to loss of mental and bodily vigor, melancholia, discouragement and worry, undeveloped children. either mental or physical, and all chronic diseases of men, women and children that have baffled the skill of the family physician.

A diagnosis of any disease of long standing, its nature and cause will be made Free and proper medicines will be furnished at a reasonable cost to those selected as favorable cases for treatment.

Children must be accompanied by their parents and married ladies by their husbands.

Peanuts 30 Million Dollars Worth

How the humble peanut is closely allied with American history is told in the United States Department of Agriculture educational film, Peanuts—$30,000,000 Worth.

This vegetable, which is not actually a nut but a ground pea, is a native South American plant and found its way to North America by way of Africa as food for prisoners on board slave ships in early Colonial days. Up to the time of the war between the States the plant was neglected by the southern planters and was grown mainly in small patches by the slaves. During the war Union soldiers foraging for food came upon the "goober pea" and found it palatable and nourishing. After Appomattox many of them carried the pods home with them, and the peanut won immediate favor in the North, and its culture has undergone great development in the South.

Jug The Trespassers

We are hearing a large number of complaints this fall from farmers of this section because careless knights of the gun troop across their farm property leaving gates open, cutting wire fences and shooting their livestock in its tracks. Many of the property owners are becoming a little savage about such trespassing and they are posting signs right and left warning all hunters to veer off. We never owned a farm but we think we can sympathize with most of these fellows, and while we have no bones to pick with hunters we believe that a man who is mean enough to shoot a helpless sheep or lamb through, simply for the sport of ohe thing should be dealt a dose of real live medicine by organizations for the purpose, and if such a miscreant could be taken to a secluded spot and tied to a tree and whipped severely, we are of the opinion such care free indulgences would become obsolete at once. Probably one whipping would be sufficient to spread the propaganda If not, then it might be real timely to administer one more and follow it with the tar and bird ornaments. We have in mind one instance a few years ago where a farm dweller owned a fine flock of turkeys. They became restless and made a practice of wandering a half mile from home to a secluded wood lot. One evening the turkeys did not return home and the next morning a search revealed several of them riddled with shot and others so badly frightened they fled in all directions. More than a quarter of the flock had been killed outright by hunters supposedly for deviltry. A Moscow farmer reports recenty one sheep was killed by somebody, name unknown, and at times we have listened to similar tales of woe. These farmer gentlement are not lying or exaggerating, and we feel it is shameful they cannot be protected as well as the banker or the merchant. The fact that livestock, often times valuable, is far away from human habitation don't give tho gunmen a license to practice marksmanship on them, and we would advise the farmers to organize vigilance commitees on the plans of many years ago in the mining regions of the west. One or two examples as above mentioned ought to help a little anyhow. We don't claim the hunters are all irresponsible drifters—far from it. Some of them may be your own sons for aught we know. So much the more deplorable when a neighbor might trek across a man's farm and slaughter his valuable livestock sometimes by accident but more often by intention. The farmer must be protected.

The New Line Is Ready For Business

The Consumers Power Company of Jackson which has undertaken the erection of the first high powered electric line in Hillsdale county have a large force of laborers putting up wires through this section and already the line is completed through the east end of our village The high tension wires are cables larger than one's finger and carry all the way from 20,000 to 60,000 volts so it is claimed and it is easy to see results would be very disasterous should one of these wires become loose and fall to the ground or across a telephone line anywhere Therefore the poles are higher in the air and average 20 inches in diameter at the base. The buried portion of the poles have been treated to resist decay and all important ones are guyed securely four ways to the ground making a practically indestructive construction.

Farmers along the line are talking a little louder than they did since it is beginning to be seen the Consumers representatives did not enlighten them as to all which would be put on the land when they made the contract. In some places the poles are standing out in the fields instead of by the fences and this with the guys causes no end of trouble and always will.

We are very glad to see this high powered line come to the county and should welcome more of them. The selling of electricity is now only a lusty infant, but twenty years hence we are expecting to see wonderful developments in all kinds of work performed by it. Even on small farms homesteaders will saw wood, grind feed wash clothes, shell corn, pump water, run sewing machines, cream separator, and light and heat their homes. It's coming to this very rapidly, because the increase in quantity is going to make the juice a little cheaper than it is now. However in this immediate territory of southern Michigan where available water powers are scarce it is not due to fall in price very much since coal is constantly getting higher and scarcer, but in central and northern counties where rivers are abundant and power dams easy to get, we look for electric current to be so cheap that house uses of it will be general, in fact a few years hence we shall be living in a complete electrical age. The western builders of lines use an iron support for the wires which lasts indefinitely and gives the best satisfaction but of course here we find the steel products so expensive that wood poles are better. The life of a good cedar pole is surprising. For instance the telephone line which followed the highway from Hillsdale to North Adams and thence north to Jackson built forty or more years ago using common white cedar pole is still intact with the most of the original material. In some places on marshes and low spots the poles have been re-placed two or three times but as a rule many of the original ones till stand.

Proprietors of small plants of all kinds operating light machinery find in the high power line great satisfaction as small horse power motors are cheaply bought and installed anywhere or taken to the work. In garages, feed mills, blacksmith shops, wood working shops, cabinet shops, machine shops, or any place where machinery is used the lightning bolt is harnessed to man's treadmill and does his work quietly and well.

When the immortal Ben Franklin went out in a thunder storm and placed his kite in the heavens he little dreamed of the achievements of the race and if the old boy could rise from the mould of the church yard and remain here just one week which would enable him to inspect most of the paraphernalia of electricity he would be so weary and so beat out he would ask to be laid away again for a thousand years.

HOW EXCESSIVE TAXES BLIGHT A NATION'S LIFE

WEALTH IN RUSSIA FLED BEFORE THE TAXGATHERER

Men in America Prefer Golf to Giving Fruits of Three Days Work a Week to Income Taxes

The blighting effects of excessive taxation, leading to a nation's economic destruction, are described in the current issue of the American Bankers Association Journal by Garrard B Winston, Under-secretary of the Treasury. Citing possible effects on the Ford Motor Car Company, he declares that "the value is so large and its ownership so centered it is conceivable that collection of inheritance taxes may check, if not destroy, that unit of policy which has created and expanded that industry and thus prevent its future prosperity. Of what avail, then, is it to any government if it collects one hundred million dollars once in estate taxes and destroys a source of income upon which it can rely for revenue year after year?

"Success of the Ford Company does not mean simply that Mr. Ford and his son have grown wealthy. It means employment of tens of thousands of men and women; that mines, forests, railroads and vessels are brought into use; that the public has received an efficient and inexpensive means of transportation; that the farm is in touch with the city, and the worker with his office." Mr. Winston says in part:

Wealth Flees Oppression

"Upon first impression it might appear that a nation could take all of the earnings of its citizens or all of their property. The Soviet government proposed to appropriate all instrumentalities of trade and commerce. Yet, when the state reached out to grasp this wealth, it disappeared and left nothing but a few tangible objects, such as gold and jewels, which were easily transported to other countries. Wealth in Russia ceased to exist.

"If income tax rates are placed so high that capital in productive business no longer gives a net return commensurate with the risk, capital will go out of productive business, lie idle, go abroad, go into tax-exempt securities, or find other ways of avoiding the tax. If income tax rates are so excessive that a man of ability finds he must work more than three days a week for the government, he will become discouraged and decide that the result is not worth the effort. Less income will be produced and less will be realized from the tax.

"Recently a letter came to the Treasury from a small farmer. He owned a few acres which in 1913 were assessed at $900 and on which a tax of $13 was levied. In 1924 the assessed value increased to $3,200 and the tax to $123, but the farm failed to produce any more. Taxes exceeded the rental value of the land and more than the net earnings of the property were taken by the state. The farm was abandoned and now produces no tax.

"Often there come to notice cases where a particular improvement is not made, or a particular business is not started, because after deducting taxes the risk exceeds the value of the expected return. Men have dropped business, spent their winters in Florida and their summers abroad, because what they are permitted to retain under present tax rates is not worth the labor they must give to acquire it. They prefer golf to the further development of the country

Unscientific Taxes Destroy a Nation

"Unscientific methods of taxation may actually destroy the very earnings or property which it should be the principal interest of a government to foster. When it reaches the limits of what is known as its taxable capacity, a nation has begun to die. If taxes are raised too high, a country will slowly but surely destroy itself. It will use for daily consumption the seed corn on which its future life depends, and the spirit of initiative and adventure in its people will finally disappear. One or more of three things happen: The quantity of consumption is cut down, which means a lowering of the standard of living; or capital accumulations for extensions, improvements and new undertakings must diminish, resulting in a slowing up of progress and lessening eventually of taxable revenue; or, thirdly, a slackening of effort on the part of the citizen will take place when too large a part of his earnings are taken in taxes.

"The effort in taxation should be to find the tax which will continue to raise money over a period of years. Invariably, with an excessive tax, its yield has fallen off year by year while each rate reduction is reflected in an increase of taxable income. If the Treasury is to be assured a continuance of revenue, our citizens must prosper. If they are to prosper, the appropriation by the state of their earnings and property must be based upon economically sound principles."

FEEDING BABY DURING SUMMER

Milk is recognized as the ideal food for young children. It should be carefully guarded during the warm summer months, to insure its freedom from germs or bacteria that might cause harm to the child. Because of its nature, it is, under certain conditions, a breeding and propagating ground for germ life and may soon become unfit for use unless it is handled with the utmost care and vigilance. Perhaps the ideal way to obviate this risk is through the use of evaporated milk. This milk is only pure milk with sixty per cent of the water removed from it and is absolutely sterile. It is of double richness but may be modified by the addition of water, which will return it to its original volume with a greatly enhanced food value.

Evaporated milk is sterilized and has a high nutritive content. This causes it to be a very excellent food for the young child and the infant. In fact, many of the leading pediatricians of the country advocate its use after the child is deprived of its mother's milk. A formula, evolved by these pediatricians, through experimentation, is as follows:

From Sixth Week to Third Month.

Milk, evaporated	6 ounces
Lime water	3 ounces
Milk sugar	2 ounces
Boiled water	26 ounces

Seven feedings in twenty-four hours; 4 to 5 ounces at three-hour intervals during the day and four-hour intervals at night.

From Third Month to Fifth Month.

Milk, evaporated	7½ ounces
Lime water	3 ounces
Milk sugar	2 ounces
Boiled water	29½ ounces

Six feedings in twenty-four hours; 5 to 6 ounces at three-hour intervals during the day and a feeding at 10 p. m.

From Fifth to Seventh Month.

Milk evaporated	10 ounces
Lime water	3 ounces
Milk sugar	2 ounces
Boiled water	29 ounces

Five feedings in twenty-four hours; 6 to 7 ounces at four-hour intervals, the last feeding to be given at 10 p. m.

From Seventh to Ninth Month.

Milk, evaporated	11 ounces
Lime water	3 ounces
Milk sugar	2 ounces
Boiled water	35 ounces

7 to 9 ounces at four-hour intervals during the day. Last feeding at ten at night.

From Ninth to Twelfth Month.

Milk, evaporated	12 ounces
Lime water	3 ounces
Milk sugar	2 ounces
Barley water	34 ounces

8 to 9 ounces at four-hour intervals during day. Last feeding at ten at night.

CAMPING AND PROBLEM OF FOOD

There is no healthier sport than camping. During the warm and balmy spring and summer days, it is real recreation. To get out in the fresh air and sunshine, free from worry and care, enhances the health of anyone, be he office man, salesman or what not.

But due to the entirely inadequate means of food preservation and refrigeration found in the majority of camps, there is the ever-present danger of sickness from infected foods. The utmost care must be taken in order that this may be avoided. Butter and eggs should be bought only as used. The milk is a problem in itself. Perhaps the solution lies in the use of a milk other than market milk, in order that purity and sterility may be assured. For such use, evaporated milk is ideal. Many people are wont to confuse evaporated and condensed milk but there is no similarity between the two. Condensed milk is a combination of sugar and milk and can be used only when both of these substances are desired. Evaporated milk is merely pure, fresh milk with about sixty per cent of the water removed and the nutrient content left intact. It is absolutely sterile and pure, having been sterilized before leaving the factory. The water, removed by evaporation, may be replaced very easily and the milk returned to its original volume. Evaporated milk may be obtained in small cans, containing six ounces or in larger ones containing sixteen and can be taken to the camp in quantities sufficient for the needs of the entire period, thus assuring a constant supply of pure, fresh milk without the worry or the danger attached to the use of the market product.

Following are recipes for a few dishes that are best adapted for camp consumption because of ease of preparation, purity and food value.

Tomato Soup.

1 pint tomato pulp or canned tomato soup
1¼ cups evaporated milk
1¼ cups water
Salt and pepper to taste
⅛ tsp. soda

Bring tomato pulp or soup to the boil, add the seasonings and soda. Heat the milk and water and combine slowly with the tomato mixture.

Shirred Eggs.

¼ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup water
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. paprika
6 eggs
2 tbsp. fat
Grated cheese

Beat the eggs, add the milk, water and seasonings. Melt the fat in a frying pan. Add the egg mixture and stir until the mixture is creamy. When almost done, sprinkle with grated cheese. Serve on slices of bread, toast or crackers.

MORTGAGE SALE

Defaulthaving been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March. A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savinge Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty-four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amountingto two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars [$2610] and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy ths amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said morgage provided. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four (24) Town six [6] South, Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N, Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said morgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit; the north one half of the southeast quarter of section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

Give Your Clothes a Rest

THE weary waistcoat and the tired trousers—these are not fancies of the imagination but cold realities. You wouldn't make your horse go day after day without a rest or run your car without giving the engine a chance to cool off. And in just the same way your clothes have an occasional vacation coming to them once in a while if you want to get the most wear out of them.

It is known that even steel, when constantly used, gets what engineers call "metal fatigue." Wool is no exception. The sturdiest wool fibers become flattened and pressed out of shape by continuous use. Their strength returns, if they are allowed to rest up a bit.

Fortunately, you do not have to send fatigued suits to the seaside or mountains to recover their vigor. A nice, dark closet and well-fitting hanger make an ideal vacation for their jaded nerves. What you do need, though, is enough suits to keep them from getting too tired out. Two suits worn alternately wear considerably longer than three suits purchased one at a time and each worn continuously every day until worn out.

What is true of suits is equally true of shoes. Besides the greater economy of having two or three pairs of everyday shoes going at once, the man who has to stand or walk a great deal will find it much easier on his feet to have a Monday-Wednesday-Friday pair to alternate with his Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday brogues.

Five Years Of Prohibition And Its Results

MORAL AND ETHICAL ARGUMENT FOR PROHIBITION

"If the moral quality of an act is in the motive, then the Eighteenth Amendment has the quality of an honest effort to enhance human values", is the statement of Rev. Walter A Morgan, chairman Law Enforcement Commission of the Congregational Churches of the United States. "If concrete results achieved against tremendous opposition and in five years reveal the ethical and social results of a law, then this particular law has made the future safer for everybody. In America, at least, the will of the people increases in its determination to go the way that promises most for the coming generation. The moral significance of the whole matter is just in this social will and its concrete results under law."

PROHIBITION AND THE YOUNGER GENERATION

"The whole question of the effect of prohibition upon the young is a question as to how adequately we safeguard and protect our children," says Cornelia James Cannon. "Can we deny that we have largely left them to find their way in the wilderness of temptation we have allowed to grow up about them? Prohibition has succeeded with our young people in proportion as it has succeeded with us—no more and no less. If we can gather hope for the future, it will not come from deploring present conditions nor from commiserating ourselves, but from the contemplation of the developement in our midst of vigorous, independent youth, which bears promise of courage enough to make its own judgments and genuinely establish standards, which we have indicated by a graceful gesture in the form of a law but have been too supine to enforce. Our hope lies in the honesty of the younger generation and the clearsightedness with which they watch our blundering and our fumbling. They will never allow their children to do the things we have allowed them to do, and, from the bitter knowledge gained through our weakness and indecision, will be able to throw round the next generation a protection which we have failed to give them."

PROHIBITION AND PROSPERITY

"There are many factors in the prosperity of any country or of any class," asserts Thomas N. Carver professor in Harvard University. "It would be useless to argue that prohibition has been the only or the chief factor in the prosperity of this country or of our laboring population. That it has been one of the factors is a reasonable inference from such acts as we have, by any process of reasoning which we would apply to a similar problem. When it comes to a pinch, practically every one admits that prohibition or severe restriction of liquor consumption is necessary to secure the maximum economy of man power. Such a pinch came in the World War. Not only this country, but England, Germany and Austria as well found it necessary greatly to reduce the consumption of liquor. That was a time when every unit of man power counted; when no country could afford to waste any of it. No one doubted that drunkenness, at such a time, was a waste of man power that might produce tragic results. In these times of peace, the waste of man power is not so dangerous, nor are its results likely to be so cataclysmic, but it is pertinent to ask whether in the long run, they may not be as definite. Since the prosperity of a country depends upon the economizing of its man power, that prosperity must be at least retarded by wasting it. In the long process of economic competition, the country that economizes its man power through sobriety—even enforced sobriety—may gain as definite an advantage as in the acute struggle of a great war, over a rival that wastes its man power in drunkenness. The advantage of conserving food may eventually be almost as important in time of peace as it proved to be in time of war."

"I am one of those who were opposed to prohibition", says Horace D. Taft, headmaster of the Taft School. "I believe enormous good has followed the adoption of prohibition. It has resulted in enormous benefits for the whole country. A man who will consider the overwhelming evidence to this effect may also get some understanding of the fixed opinion of a large part of the American people in favor of prohibition. He will find the results in a great increase in savings, in the marked improvement of the appearance of the school children from the homes of the poor, in the strong conviction on the part of great employers of labor as to the benefit derived by their workmen, in a great lessening in most of the country of the diseases arising from alcoholism and of the large class of petty crimes connected with the same."

Latimer Propaganda

Thirty six years ago R. Irving Latimer of Jackson was convicted and justly so, of murdering his mother by brutally shooting her as she was reposing peacefully in sleep. He was an only son and had had every advantage mother love and ample finances could give. But he loved the fast life, and to keep up his end at that cheap game the while acting as superintendent of a Sunday school, he killed the best friend he ever had, and has never been known to shed a tear over it since.

The writer knew his mother—used to run errands for her, and we can truthfully say no sweeter, more lovable old lady ever lived. Latimer's father died under mysterious circumstances and many Jackson people following Mrs. Latimer's death firmly believed he had poisoned his father. Later he poisoned a guard in the prison and escaped, the death of the guard now being classed as an accident by Latimer. But it wasn't so considered at the time.

Since his return to prison he has been a model prisoner, so he says. Why shouldn't he be? He was too cowardly to make even a fight for his freedom once he had attained it, but crafty enough to figure out that only through being a model prisoner over a long term of years could he ever hope for eventual freedom. And now he is going after it, and working for him, conscientiously, working hard, is Murl H. DeFoe, editor of the Charlotte Republican, one of the most influential men among the newspaper and political circles of Michigan. As a result R. Irving may again gain his freedom.

Knowing what we do about the whole sad affair, we hope for once Murl fails. And we know there are hundreds of old time Jackson residents who feel the same way we do about it.—Sim. R. Wilson.

Call Trip To Study Corn Borer Control

Still greater activity in efforts at control of the European corn borer destructive crop pest, will follow a special inspection trip called for October 22, in the opinion of specialists at the M. S. C.

Representatives of all phases of agricultural service in the state will join in this observation tour, which will cover some of the most heavily infested sections of Ontario, Canada. Fields are to be seen in this section which are almost total economic losses as a result of corn borer damage, according to Professors J. F. Cox and R. H. Pettit of the college staff, who have just returned from a visit to the fields in question.

The corn borer was introduced to our eastern states some years ago, an unwelcome guest from Europe, and since has spread as far west as Michigan, being reported even in Livingston county this summer. Quarantine work which has been carried on very effectively by the Michigan State Department of Agriculture has slowed up the spread of the pests in the state, and similar work has been done in other sections.

Entomologists who have been studying the situation for years, however, fear that the borers will eventually spread throughout the corn belt, unless something startlingly effective shows up to check them. As a result, farms crops men are planning to bend every effort toward learning ways and means of growing corn in spite of the pest; entomologists are speeding up their experimental program seeking effective parasitic control; and quarantine and other regulatory steps are being continued.

The inspection trip on October 22 will start from Detroit in the morning, covering many corn borer sections of Ontario before night Plans for the establishment of a special corn borer test station in southeast Michigan may grow out of the trip, it is said by the college men interested. The State Department of Agriculture and the U. S. Department of Agriculture would undoubtedly join in the establishment of such a station.

Growers Confuse Two Pests of Apple Crop

Marked infestations of apple maggots in the orchards of many sections of the state, and the danger of confusing the maggots with the codling moth in planning spray campaigns, have caused the issuance of a special warning by Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at M. S. C.

Examination of orchards in some parts of the state has revealed the presence of the most serious infestation of apple maggot that has come to my attention, says Professor Pettit. It is important, in this connection, for growers to know the difference between the work of the maggot and of the codling moth. The codling moth spray will not more than partially control the apple maggot, and growers are likely to lose faith in the codling moth spray if they are contending with apple maggot and do not know it.

Cutting the apples open and examining the grub inside is said to be the easiest way at this season of the year of telling whether the work is that of the maggot or the moth. The maggot is about one-fourth inch long, white, and legless; while the larva of the codling moth is about three fourths inch long, pink in color, and provided with six legs.

Proper spraying and destruction of the maggot infested apples as soon as they fall to the ground, in order to prevent the maggots from getting into the ground for their winter home, are means suggested for controlling the maggot. County agricultural agents of the state or the entomology department department, M. S. C., East Lansing are said to be ready to furnish detailed information on identifying and controlling the apple maggots.

Detroit Grows

We have often mentioned what we thought was an awful good place to invest your hard earned dollars and we are going to repeat it. Detroit real estate has got them all beat and we know it. Do you know what the population of Detroit is? On July 1, 1925, the population of the city was over 1,200,000 souls and growing like a mushroom.

Now the talk of St. Lawrence to Ocean Waterway is going to help matters a little in Detroit and there's honest Uncle Henry Ford who keeps reaching out and getting something all the time to convert into a factory of some kind where he puts a large force of men and starts the wheels going.

Uncle Henry is an awful good man to get next to as he makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, figuratively speaking. The suburbs of Detroit now called River Rouge, and other outskirts are being built up and made into busy factory towns by his money. Great smelters and roller mills are there and already power houses for distribution of electric energy seem to hatch out as it were, in a fortnight. In other words Henry tooka think some time ago—and you know what happens when Henry takes a think. Every time Henry has taken a think late years a great Genii has sprung up to do his bidding.

A thousand dollars invested in some parts of Detroit should in or about 1935 be worth $10,000, and in the right location it is going to exceed that figure. Remember we are not talking for any real estate sharks but we are saying from the bottom of our heart "get while the getting is good" and don't for God sake put your money into Florida swamps or lakes. We like Florida's climate all right but the price of the climate asked with some worthless land thrown in, is a little too high. The fact that William J. Bryan and Henry Ford both bought property in Florida don't indicate that the state is absolutely a safe investment. Put your money in some place where the prospects are looking up, and the fickle Goddess of opportunity is certainly infatuated at present with Detroit.

Intellectual Honesty

According to Judge Gary absolute honesty is a most important thing in a business man, and next to honesty he places accuracy. The judge emphasized the necessity of a good education and the desirability, if possible, of a college education, with all of which ideas we agree. We should like to go a little further and define honesty. The refusal to abstract our neighbor's purse or resolutely avoid second story windows or refrain from putting slugs in subway stiles in place of nickles are not necessarily manifestations of honesty. Feeling a little cynical, we often wonder whether the United States is better served by that kind of honesty than it would be by intellectual honesty. As a people we measure up to the general standard of honesty. But that standard is one which contrasts honesty with the larceny of the penal codes. We suffer enormously in this country from intellectual dishonesty both in public and private life although we can never assess in dollars and cents the exact amount. A man with a crooked mentality is worse than a pickpocket. However, we have no desire to amend the penal code and reduce the penalty for larceny. If we did amend it, we would put in intellect crook in jail for eighty years and as long thereafter as he lived.

The Nights were Torment

Now, thanks to Tanlac, Mrs. Bradley "really and truly" feels like a brand new woman!

Mrs. M. J. Bradley had come to the point where she could scarcely do her housework. Two years of suffering from indigestion had shattered her health. What little she ate caused stomach fermentation, gas bloating and pain. She lay awake through the long hours of the night and was tired out through the day.*

"That four bottles of Tanlac should correct my troubles when all other attempts had failed makes it seem altogether wonderful to me. Now I enjoy a fine appetite, good digestion and really and truly feel like a new woman. It is the ideal tonic."

*Authentic statement; address on request.

Casimir's preparations for the reception of the princess were complete.

The greater part of the Lystrian army was there to greet her, drawn up on each side of the road. As the car passed the men fired their rifles into the air, each one shooting off round after round, refilling his magazine when it was exhausted. There was plenty of ammuntion, which showed that some of Cable's money was wisely spent. No doubt is was his money, too, which had provided new uniforms for the whole army, not dingy khaki tunics and breeches like those worn by unimaginative soldiers of western lands, but fine blue cloaks and crimson tunics and great boots with fur tops to them and wide black trousers or short pleated petticoats like Highland Scottish kilts. Some of the men wore caps with tall green feathers in them. Some had shiny metal helmets.

At the gate of the palace stood a group of the magnates of Lystria, the very least of them a count by right of four or five hundred years' descent from other counts. Perhaps half of them were Casimirs, members of one branch or other of the family of which Count Istvan was the head. They, like the soldiers, were splendidly clad. Some of Cable's money had gone in providing gold-laced coats, fur-lined cloaks and green breeches. But their jewels were their own. Blue turquoise, red garnets and green stones like emeralds shone on the gilt metal belts which held their swords, on the broad collars round their necks, on multitudinous buttons of their clothes, on tall cap badges, even on their spurs.

In the middle of the group of nobles stood the patriarch, perhaps the tallest, certainly the broadest man there. He wore a long purple cassock and a purple cape lined with white fur. Round his neck, on a heavy gold chain hung a double-armed Greek cross, thickly studded with jewels. On his head was a shiny miter. Behind him stood four priests, white-robed, with long black silky beards. One of them held the patriarch's immense pastoral staff. Another carried a tall ebony pole with a gold star on it, a very large and splendid star with sharp pointed rays sticking out of it in all directions. The other two held aloft a kind of canopy made of embroidered silk, not unlike a huge two-handled umbrella. If they had held it, as they should, over the patriarch's head, it might have kept the dew from settling on his miter. Held crooked, a little behind him, it served no useful purpose. But it was highly striking and ornamental.

Calypso, now at last a veritable princess, stepped from the car, paced slowly forward to where the patriarch stood while the magnates cheered wildly and the army fired its guns. The patriarch raised a plump, pudgy hand in benediction. The four priests behind him wailed a loud "Amen." The nobles shouted and the guns fired. Calypso stood erect. The patriarch, a heavy man, afflicted with rheumatism in his legs, knelt slowly and stiffly. He gravely kissed Calypso's hand.

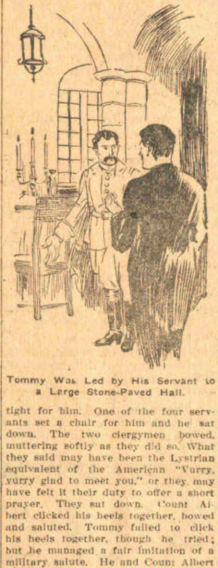
Then one by one the nobles stepped forward, headed by Count Albert Casimir. They bent until their foreheads touched the ground and then kissed the toe of one of Calypso's boots. The patriarch was, I gathered, the only man entitled by his rank to kiss her hand. Cheers and more firing of guns greeted each act of homage. When the last was accomplished a band, set on the battlements above the gate of the schloss, began to play the national anthem, the same tune which Calypso and the chauffeur had sung in the car earlier in the afternoon. The whole mass of men, the patriarch and his priests, the nobles and the army, down to the remotest of them, shouted the song whole-heartedly. Tommy, excited by all he had seen, joined in and sang as bravely as the best. Janet Church would no doubt have sung, too, but Sandor, the chauffeur, stood beside her with the most murderous looking of his knives in his hand. He made it clear to Janet—indeed she could scarcely have mistaken his meaning—that if she attempted to sing she would immediately be killed.

When the whole ceremony was over the princess and Janet Church were led away together to the state apartments in the schloss. Count Albert Casimir conducted Tommy to the suite of rooms which had been prepared for him. Albert's English was not nearly so good as Istvan's. Indeed, he seemed to be able to say very little except "Please." He said that every time he said anything, and he always smiled in a friendly way. But language, for the simpler affairs of life, is not really necessary. Tommy understood without difficulty that the rooms were entirely for his use, that a bearded savage, who bowed to the ground every time any one looked at him, was his servant, that there was hot water for the bath, and that as soon as he was ready he could descend to— There he would have been thankful for a few intelligible words. He had to descend somewhere and supper would be waiting for him when he did, but where the place was Tommy could not make out.

Half an hour later, washed, brushed and very hungry, Tommy was led by his servant to a large stone-paved hall. It was an immense room with a vaulted roof, high-placed tiny windows, and a raised dais at one end. On this dais a small table was spread. Four servants stood stiffly behind the chair set for a solitary dinner. They wore dark green liveries decked with silver buttons nearly as big as half-crowns, and had silver epaulettes on their shoulders. The whole scene was strikingly medieval, and Tommy, who was fond of Scott's novels, appreciated it. There was just one jarring note. A stone-flagged vaulted hall in a medieval schloss ought to be lit with torches stuck into iron brackets on the walls, or—and even this would have been a concession to modernity—with tall wax candles in silver sconces. But King Wladislaws, who used to come to the schloss occasionally, had conceived the idea of making use of the water power supplied by the torrent in the valley. The whole castle, from turret to dungeon, was lit by electric light. Bright groups of bulbs hung from the vaulted roof of the hall. On Tommy's table stood a silk-shaded lamp, like those in use on the table is the Mascotte.

After supper, just as Tommy had lit his first cigarette, the patriarch entered the room. He came in some state, clad in his purple cassock, accompanied by Count Albert Casimir and two of the Lystrian clergy.

Tommy, rather uncertain how he ought to receive such company, laid down his cigarette, stood up and bowed. The patriarch bowed, a little stiffly. He was a portly man and had no doubt supped somewhere else. The girdle of his cassock seemed a little tight for him. One of the four servants set a chair for him and he sat down. The two clergymen bowed, muttering softly as they did so. What they said may have been the Lystrian equivalent of the American "Vurry, yurry glad to meet you," or they may have felt it their duty to offer a short prayer. They sat down. Count Albert clicked his heels together, bowed and saluted. Tommy failed to click his heels together, though he tried; but he managed a fair imitation of a military salute. He and Count Albert sat down. The patriarch gave an order and a servant brought a fresh bottle of wine. One of the priests drew a box of cigarettes from some pocket among the folds of his cassock and handed it round.



Tommy Was Led by His Servant to a Large Stone-Paved Hall.

The business of the meeting began. Count Albert acted as interpreter.

"Sprechen Sie Deutsch, please," he said.

Tommy understood that and replied emphatically that he did not.

"Franzosiche?"

Tommy with an effort recognized Franzosiche as the German for French.

"Nein," he said. "That is to say Non, at least nothing worth mentioning, though of course I know a few words like petit-dejeuner, and bonjour, and l'etat c'est moi."

"Italianisch?" said Count Albert, but not very hopefully.

"No," said Tommy, "I don't. Nor Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish, Russian, nor modern Greek. In fact, I may as well own up at once, that it's English or nothing with me."

It was evidently very difficult to communicate with Tommy. There was consultation in the course of which one of the priests made a suggestion which was regarded as hopeful. Count Albert turned to Tommy.

"Patriarch," he said, pointing to him "Lateinisch."

"All right," said Tommy, "I'll try. I've learned Latin of course and I used to know it quite well, but not conversationally."

The patriarch was not so fluent with his Latin as he might have been. It is the ecclesiastical language of the world, but— Well, I once knew a priest who asked whether temere in the title of the famous Ne Temere Bull was a second or a third conjugation verb. Yet that man read his breviary faithfully. There was more excuse for the patriarch than for him. The services of the Lystrian church are not said in Latin.

But even if the patriarch's Latin had been much better than it was, there would have been difficulties. Our English schools have, of late years, altered their way of pronouncing Latin. No doubt the new sounds are better than the English a's, i's, and soft c's to which I was brought up, but we have not yet achieved the true Italian ecclesiastical whine. Tommy did not understand the patriarch, nor could he make the patriarch understand him.

"Es ist trauerlich," said Count Albert at last. "A pity, not so?"

Every one, especially the stout patriarch, was extremely good-humored, but no one knew how to say what had to be said to Tommy.

"If—" Count Albert's English came very slowly. "If—here—were—Casimir Istvan Graf—Ach!"

"I say," said Tommy. "What about getting the princess to come and interpret? She knows all the languages there are."

He must have pronounced the word "princess" very badly, for no one knew what he meant.

"Calypso," he tried.

This time the patriarch understood; but he shook his head decisively. For some reason the presence of the princess was not desirable.

"Well, then, try Miss Church," said Tommy. "She knows German though she can't talk Lystrian."

"Mees Zurz?" said Count Albert doubtfully.

"Yes," said Tommy. "Miss Church: Fraulein Kirche. That is to say, if you really speak French, Mademoiselle Eglise, or"—here he turned to the patriarch and spoke very clearly—"Ecclesia—Virgo Janetta Ecclesia."

The party of Lystrians was entirely bewildered; but Tommy was not beaten yet. He took a pencil and a piece of paper from his pocket and made a rapid sketch of Janet. Tommy was no artist, and any resemblance his picture bore to Janet must have been that of a caricature. But it was instantly recognized and greeted with applauding laughter.

"Ach so," said Count Albert. And the patriarch made sounds which are the Lystrian equivalent of "Ach so."

One of the priests was sent to fetch Janet. The patriarch ordered a fresh bottle of wine. The cigarettes were handed round and the party settled down very comfortably to wait. There was no conversation, for the Lystrians were much too well bred to talk to one another in a language which their guest did not understand. But everybody smiled amiably at everybody else.

Janet had gone to bed; but the priest who was sent to fetch her was a determined man. A quarter of an hour later he led her into the hall. She was clad in the pink dressing gown and the slippers, which she had worn when Tommy first saw her in the corridor of the Adlon hotel.

Janet was not in the least embarrassed by her costume, or by the company in which she found herself; but she was very much annoyed at being roused out of her first sleep.

"I wish to goodness," she said to Tommy, "that you'd learn enough German to be able to get on without perpetually appealing to me."

The patriarch unfortunately shared the view of Sandor the chauffeur, that Janet was the princess' maid. He neither stood up to greet her nor invited her to sit down. This, very naturally, increased her feeling of irritation. If Tommy had not rushed off to get a chair for her, the chances of the reunion of the other Christian churches with that of Lystria would have been compromised.

The patriarch spoke to her. Janet listened for a while and then cut the poor man short in the middle of a sentence.

"He says," she told Tommy, "that the marriage is fixed for tomorrow morning."

"Marriage! The princess and I?"

"I suppose so," said Janet. "It's certainly not you and I."

"But he can't do that," said Tommy. "Marriages can't be rushed in this way. It takes a fortnight to get a license. If he calls the banns it'll take three weeks."

Janet said something to the patriarch and he replied.

"He's surprised," she said to Tommy, "to hear that you are unwilling to marry the princess."

"I'm not in the least unwilling," said Tommy. "Tell him there's nothing in the world I'd like better. Make that clear to him, will you? It's a most important point, and I don't want any misunderstanding about it."

Janet translated; but Tommy did not altogether trust her. He tried an explanation of his own in Latin.

"Jucundus et laetus ero," he said "reginam in matrimonium ducere, any time you like."

Inventor Had Taken No Chance of Losing

Surely, the Scotch are the most tolerant people in the world, as they bear the brunt of most of its so-called humor. But there is considerable basis for the well-circulated theory that the Scot is canny. Here is an authentic yarn, vouched for by Harry Furniss in his "Some Victorian Men" that illustrates the point.

When Bessemer, the genius who gave to steel his name, came to make his discovery public, he put a lump of the famous steel in his pocket and made his way to Nasmyth, of steel-hammer fame.

Placing the metal on Nasmyth's desk, he told him that he had made an extraordinary discovery which would revolutionize the whole metal world. Then came a little incident which shows what wonderful heads these Scotch financiers possess. What do you think Nasmyth said to this excited inventor?

"Eh, mon, it's vary risky to show your wonderful invention. The world is very dishonest."

To which the inspiring inventor replied:

"Right, Mr. Nasmyth, I just calculated whom I was coming to see, so with my last half-crown I registered the invention on my way."

Students Show More Interest in History

A marked rise in the interest in history since the World war is seen in the increased enrollment in history correspondence courses of the University of Wisconsin extension division says an official bulletin. Some 226 students completed their history courses in the two years from 1922 to 1924, as compared with 232 who completed their courses in the twelve-year period from 1908 to 1920. In 1918 the enrollment in history was 895, and in 1924 the total had climbed to 3,442.

"The popularity of the course reflects public opinion decidedly," said Miss M. L. Edwards, in charge of the extension history department. "After the war the demand was chiefly for a general European history course. After the Egyptian tombs brought the King Tut craze, our ancient history courses swelled in enrollment. The demand for American history is constant."

Costumes of Old Days

During the Eighteenth century the old-fashioned doublet had developed into a coat and close-fitting breeches tied below the knee, worn with light silk stockings and buckled shoes; hats were broad-brimmed, turned up on three sides and edged with feathers or ribbons. The coats were of velvet, silk or broadcloth and brightly colored, according to individual taste. After 1790 a change began, and round hats, short coats, light waistcoats and pantaloons which reached the ankles and fastened with buttons superseded the old finery. Shoe strings replaced buttons and hair powder went out of fashion.

Faustina Zappi

Faustina Zappi was the daughter of a painter, Carlo Mazzati, and wife of Gambatista Zappi, who was born in 1668 and died in 1719. Faustina was very lovely and also wrote very beautiful poetry. Some of her sonnets are very fine. She resided principally at Rome, being very happy in her composition and in the love of her husband.

Conquers Bad Breath and is Popular Again

"The day I started taking Carter's Little Liver Pills," says Mr. John A. Perry of New York City, "my habitual bad breath and bad stomach stopped. I strongly recommend them to all those afflicted with these nasty troubles. I assure you that my own case was a bad one, causing me untold embarrassment, and Carter's helped me right from the start."

Bad breath comes from sour stomach and can usually be relieved quickly by Carter's Little Liver Pills.

They are wonderful for constipation, sick-headache and indigestion and they physic the system in a mild and gentle manner, no bad after effects.

Parent-Teachers Association Meets

The first meeting of the P. T. A. was held on Monday evening at the school house, opening the season with a good program, and an attendance which would have been large but for other gatherings in the village. Meeting was called to order by the vice president Mrs. Laura Meeks. Myra Beecher read a paper on the early history of Michigan; Laura Meeks read a paper on the early educational history of Michigan; Favorable mention is given the piano selections of Miss Naomi Crapser of Moscow township who is an advanced pupil of Mrs. Eugene Rogers.

Recital At Methodist Church

The pupils of Mrs. Eugene Rogers gave a recital at the Methodist church in this village on Friday evening last and the attendance was quite large and we hear very good reports of the program which was given as follows: Three-piece orchestra, Arthur Holcomb, Fay Stevens and Clark Pierce. Greeting Song, Pauline and Marjorie Gochanour Moscow.

Ethel Struble, Martha Morton both of Jerome and Marie Wilcox of this place, all first graders, about six years of age, surprised the audience with their remarkable rendering of difficult selections.

Bettie Westcott Jerome; Muriel VanAllen and Bessie VanAllen Jerome; Ervin Wells; Bacarolle "Tales of Hoffman" Genevieve, Louise and Janett Roberts and Ethel Rogers; Dorothy Linsday Jerome; Alice Brooks musical recitation Jerome; Lola Bishop Moscow; Geraldine Baker; Three-piece orchestra, Mrs. Grace Hall of Jackson piano, Ethel Rogers, banjo ukelele, Fay Stevens, saxaphone; Marian LaCore Jonesville; Margaret Shambaugh gave a very hard classical piece "Spinning Song" Leah Holcomb; Veral Adams Moscow; Virginia Roberts; Alvin Wells played the "Curious Story"; Muriel Holcomb did the Minuet in G by Beethoven; Muriel Shambaugh gave a splendid selection; Kathryn Sherrard Moscow; Marjorie Gochanour Moscow; Naomi Crapse gave an extra fine rendering of a waltz on the piano and her playing as an advanced pupil was certainly meritorious.

The church was beautifully decorated in green and white with gladiolas, asters and other flowers.

Reception For Rev. Wylie

At the Methodist church parlors on Monday evening occurred a reception for Rev. H. E. Wylie and family and a large crowd were present from all denominations in the village. Impromptu speeches of welcome were made by Rev. Hunt, Rev. Carrel, Jay Knowles, R. C. Young to which Rev. Wylie fittingly responded. Music was furnished by Frank Holcomb, Cleve Crater Percy Wells, Ethel Crewer and Margaret Meeks. A reading was given by Miss Otis and much appreciated. Refreshments were served informally and after a real social time the crowd broke up feeling that the church year was very well launched.

Death of Mrs. Adam Hergert

Mrs. Adam Hergert who has resided in this county practically all her life, passed away at the home of her son, Perry Hergert, near Jonesville at about 8:30 Wednesday evening. She was 79 years of age and is survived by two sons, Perry and Lew, and 2 daughters, Mrs. Earl Norris of Reading and Mrs. Clyde Godfrey of Milnes, one brother, George Schmitt, and grand-children.

Her husband, Adam Hergert, died 13 years ago since which time she has resided with her children.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at the Moscow Plains church at 2:00 p. m. and interment in the Plains cemetery beside her husband.

We note that on last week Thursday at the Michigan Com. of Optometrists held at Port Huron. Dr. C. J. Howe of Hillsdale was appointed as State President of the organization. Dr. Davenport of Battle Creek was appointed fourth vice president. The organization perfected plans for a series of public clinics to be held in different parts of the state and the next meeting in 1926 will be at Holland Mich.

The Advocate received very neatly printed announcements last week which read as follows: "William H. Kerman C. P. A. and Leland Kerman C. P. A. announce the formation of a partnership under the firm name of Kerman & Kerman for the general practice of Public Accounting, with offices at 602 Tri-State Building, Fort Wayne, Indiana" These gentlemen are both natives of North Adams, graduates of our high school and nephews of E. There will be a Halloween program and Toe Social at the Grubby Knoll school house Thursday evening October 29. Candy and fortunes will be sold. A real good time is expected. Everyone come. Potluck supper served cafeteria style. Witches, ghosts, goblins etc, will be on hand waiting for a chance to scare you.

The Annual Banquet of the Womans Club occurred on Monday evening October 19th at the Methodist church in this village and to say it was a highly successful affair is hardly necessary since everything passed off in a merry style and the black cats and spooky goblins which walked the boards and scooted among the audience added zest to the occasion. The following program was given: Music, orchestra; greeting, by President Alice Williams; "What is a good Wife?" a question which is much desired in these days of chivalry was ably discussed by L. B. Eggleston; music orchestra; "Pigmies and Giants in The Home" Gladys Williams; "Grouches and Gardens" Anna McFarland; vocal solo, Mildred Hunt; "Value of Men's Clubs in The Community" Josephine Jones; "Value of Women's Clubs in The Community" Virgil A. Hunt; music, orchestra. Following was the menu: Veal croquettes, mashed potatoes, squash salad, jelly, pickles, rolls, brown bread, ice cream, cake, coffee. After the program a very weazened and sharp nosed old char-woman witch appeared on the scene from somewhere an the forecasts she made for the futures of some of the persons present were conducive of chilly sensations in the region of the vertebrae.

Hunting Chances Have Gone Glimmer-Glum

Judging from the number of "No Hunting" signs which the Advocate office is putting out the only place where a man can hunt will be at some remote spot ten thousand feet or so above the earth. as there will not be a square foot of territory in this county where the festive sportsman can roam this fall.

It is possible the craze is being worked to the limit but the farmers are inexorable for it is undeniable they have been long patient sufferers.

There are various expressions of opinion among the hunters but as a rule they must admit that the farmer should be protected, and the wild denizens of the wood also. Personally we feel that the fertile farming country of Southern Michigan is not suited for a game preserve, but in northern counties the vast tracts of uninhabited cut over pineries and slashings where everything from a partridge to a deer abounds is the proper Mecca of the sportsman, The State of Michigan should take the matter in hand and establish a game preserve including several thousand acres of this worthless land.

Hillsdale County W. C. T. U.

Beg Your Pardon

In last week's issue of the Advocate in the write up of the Recital by pupils of Mrs. Eugene Rogers we accidentally omitted the name of Hazel Walworth from the program. She gave a splendid piano selection. Not being present at the recital we had to get this second hand and presumably in the copying from another item the mistake was made.

AUCTION

For the benefit of the Congregational church on Saturday, October 24, 1925 at or near the Town Hall in North Adams, will be offered a large variety of useful articles such as may be given at that time. Your co-operation in helping to make this sale a success will be appreciated. Sale starts at 1:00 p. m.

A good many of our customers have made that very remark after they tried out the Red Top Steel Fence Post.

For instance, you can drive over 200 of these posts in a day without a helper. Some have driven as high as 300. The One-Man Driver makes this possible. What a difference from the old back-breaking method of setting wood posts. No post hole digging and no tamping with Red Tops. This saving on labor costs makes the price on Red Tops installed very low.

That's not the only saving you'll make. One Red Top will outlast at least two wood posts. And there is very little fence repair work required with Red Tops. The Handy Fence Fasteners which come free with the posts can't loosen up and let go of the wire, so there isn't this constant restretching, restapling and upkeep.

We've picked the Red Top line because we know it is the leader and we believe it to be the biggest value for the money. One of our main policies is to pick goods that are bound to please our customers. We want you to feel that no matter what you buy of us you are getting as much or more for your money than you get anywhere.

PE-RU-NA

Under the date of March 6, 1902, Mrs. Maggie Durbin, 139 Riverside Ave., Little Rock, Arkansas, has this to say about her experience: "I was troubled for five years with a chronic disease. I tried everything I heard of, but nothing did me any good. Some doctors said my trouble was catarrh of the bowels, others consumption of the bowels. The medicine I took did no good. A friend advised me to try PE-RU-NA. I did. After taking two bottles I found it was helping me and continued. Am now sound and well."

A letter from Mrs. Durbin, dated December 12, 1923, shows that, even after twenty-two years, she is in the best of health: "I still recommend PE-RU-NA to my friends who need a good medicine and everybody is pleased. I thank you many times for what PE-RU-NA has done for me."

There is nothing strange in this experience of Mrs. Durbin. It has been repeated thousands of times by sufferers from catarrh and catarrhal diseases.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Allied and German Foreign Ministers Agree at Last on the Security Pact.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SECURITY for western Europe appears to have been achieved by the agreement reached last week by the conference of allied and German foreign ministers and other statesmen at Locarno, Switzerland. Great tact and a spirit of conciliation were displayed by all concerned and obstacles that for a time seemed insurmountable were climbed over or removed. The most serious of these were the demands of Poland, but Poland's political and financial position is exceedingly shaky, and so she was brought into line by pressure from those on whom she depends. Germany was most insistent on a provision exempting her from application of article 16 of the covenant upon her joining the League of Nations, but was persuaded to accept a "gentleman's agreement" by which the allies promised to use their good offices to obtain for her this exemption and also to provide eventually for colonial mandates.

It was agreed that the Polish and Czech arbitration treaties with Germany should be guaranteed by the league, France undertaking to look after the interests of her eastern allies. If those allies get into a quarrel with Germany, France is to have the right to send troops through German territory to their aid only if the league council unanimously declares Germany at fault.

France gains in the agreement a guarantee of her eastern frontier with assurance of safety from attack from the east; and this presumably will make it possible for her to decrease her armed forces and so reduce substantially her military budget. Great Britain and Italy guarantee that the Rhine frontier shall not be disturbed.

Germany is to be readmitted to the concert of European powers on an equal footing; the Cologne zone is to be evacuated, conditions in the Rhineland are to be ameliorated and the status of the Saar region is to be reconsidered; rehabilitation of Germany's commercial aviation industry is to be permitted, and there will be no further fear of sanctions for her failure to fulfill the Versailles treaty.

After the drafts of the agreements had been approved by President Von Hindenburg and the German cabinet, Premier Mussolini, who is also foreign minister of Italy, went to Locarno to sign for his country as guarantor with Great Britain of the security pact. Only the drawing up of the four arbitration treaties remained to be done, and it was planned to have all the documents ready for signing by Saturday night. Too much credit cannot be given the statesmen who have brought about those pacts, and when the treaties go into effect the whole civilized world will breathe a sigh of relief.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has let it be known that the attitude of the administration toward foreign loans is based on the principle that those nations that have funded their debts to the United States will be more likely to obtain loans over here than the nations that have not made such settlements. This view is confirmed by statements of leading bankers.

It was admitted by the White House spokesman that the government has no legal authority over the making of loans to foreign governments, but it was pointed out that where loans are to be floated by public subscription it has been the practice for American bankers to make inquiry of the State department as to whether there could be any objection to such loan.

No mention was made at the White House of any individual European nation and what was said there was not believed to have been aimed, in any direct sense, at least, at France, although certain reports have indicated that loans which France was seeking to negotiate in this country probably must be delayed on account of that country's failure to reach a final agreement on debt funding. M. Caillaux is in the midst of a hard fight to sustain not only the temporary debt arrangement made in Washington, but his entire financial policy.

Czechoslovakia's debt mission, headed by Dr. Vilem Pospisil, successfully concluded its business with the American foreign debt commission last week and an agreement was signed for the funding of the Czech obligation to the United States of $115,000,000.

TAKING advantage of general dissatisfaction with the high rents imposed on poor householders in Panama City, the Reds there promoted a series of bloody riots which the local police were unable to stop. Therefore President Chiari called on the United States for help and three battalions of the Thirty-third infantry from Fort Clayton, in the Canal Zone, entered the city and took command of the situation. About the first thing the Yanks did was to raid the Bolshevist headquarters. One of the Reds was killed by leaping from a window. Quiet was restored in a day or so and business was resumed, but the clubs and saloons were kept closed by the Americans. Printers and signers of incendiary proclamations were arrested. The Panama government recognized that there was reason for complaint of high rents and President Chiari persuaded the landlords to promise a reduction of 10 per cent for the cheaper dwellings. The American troops, which were commanded by Brig. Gen. C. H. Martin, it was announced would remain in the city until the landlords and tenants had reached a definite settlement.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE announced on Tuesday that he had accepted the resignation of Secretary of War John W. Weeks, and at the same time he appointed Dwight F. Davis of Missouri to the cabinet position. Mr. Weeks has been incapacitated by illness since last spring and Mr. Davis, his assistant, had been acting secretary. He performed his duties well, and dealt so satisfactorily with the crisis precipitated by Colonel Mitchell's aircraft charges that the President concluded he was the best man to succeed Mr. Weeks. He is a young man, the youngest in the cabinet, but has a fine record, as a civil official in St. Louis, as a hard fighting officer in the war in France and as a member of the war finance corporation after the conflict ended. He is a leader of the Missouri Republicans and in 1922 nearly beat the late Senator Spencer for the nomination.

Col. Hanford MacNider of Iowa, former national commander of the American Legion, was made assistant secretary of war. As a banker he is a capable buisness man and his selection is pleasing to former service men.

The passing of Mr. Weeks from public life, foreseen for months, was pathetic. He has been the trusted adviser of two Presidents, a strong man in his party and one of the best loved men in Washington throughout twenty years. He is only sixty-five years old but his health is broken and it is understood he will soon leave for the South.

UNITED STATES SENATOR SAMUEL M. RALSTON of Indiana, who had been suffering for months from a disease of the kidneys, died Wednesday night at his home, just outside Indianapolis. He was almost sixty-eight years of age. Mr. Ralston was born on an Ohio farm, earned his living while acquiring an education and became a leading member of the bar and of the Democratic party in Indiana. In 1913 he was inaugurated governor of the state, and in 1922 he defeated A. J. Beveridge for the United States senate. He was a prominent candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in the national convention last year but, being already in ill health, he withdrew from the contest. The release of his votes started the break that resulted in the nomination of John W. Davis.

Another death that must be recorded is that of James B. Duke, the tobacco magnate and former president of the American Tobacco company, at his New York residence. It was only a few months ago that Mr. Duke gave $40,000,000 to educational institutions in the South, most of it to Trinity college in Durham, N. C., the name of which was changed to Duke university in memory of the donor's father.

PROTESTANT Episcopalians in their triennial convention in New Orleans have been attracting a lot of attention. In the first place the conviction of Bishop William M. Brown on charges of heresy was confirmed by the house of bishops and, despite his resort to the civil courts, he was deposed from the ministry. Then the house of deputies voted to exclude the word "obey" from the marriage service and the proposal went to the bishops for acceptance or rejection. Next, the church abandoned its practice of filling the place of presiding bishop in accordance with seniority of consecration and resorted for the first time to election. Bishop Brent of western New York and Bishop Gailor of Tennessee were the leading candidates but neither could command a majority. Finally as a compromise Rt. Rev. John Murray, bishop of Maryland, was elected. He is sixty-eight years old and is classed as a conservative.

OF MANY witnesses heard by the aircraft board last week, the most interesting was Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired. As has always been his habit he "talked right out in meeting," devoting his remarks especially to the Navy department and its administration at present and in recent years. This he described as "unreasonable, unscientific and unmilitary," and he respectfully but unmistakably let the board know that his opinion of Secretary Wilbur was nothing for that official to be proud of. The department's conservatism in the matter of new weapons, marksmanship and other advances he described as unutterably stupid. He urged the necessity of a definite aircraft policy, asserting that the Navy department has not and never has had such a policy. He praised Colonel Mitchell but disapproved of his proposal for a separate air force. Four generals of the army, Summerall, Ely, Drum and Parker, also disagreed with the Mitchell plan, and Ely said officers who were asking it were not playing the game because they were not supporting the other arms of the service in time of peace and lacked loyalty and discipline. All agreed that the doughboy is and always will be the decisive element in warfare.

AMERICAN capital is to regenerate Liberia, the little Negro republic on the west coast of Africa, and at the same time is to undertake to smash the British and Dutch control of the world's rubber production. Harvey S. Firestone's rubber company is the one that plans all this and he announces that it will expend $100,000,000 in Liberia, setting out great plantations, building towns, harbors, railways and highways and giving employment to some 300,000 natives. A concession has been obtained from the Liberian government, contracts have been let and work already has begun.

RENEWED attempts of communists to commit the American Federation of Labor to recognition of soviet Russia and to co-operation with the Russian trade unions were frustrated by the vote of the convention in Atlantic City. The delegates also rejected a resolution attacking training camps, instead declaring their approval of national defense and denouncing communist pacifists. Other actions of the federation were condemnation of ship subsidies in all forms, of the proposal for a uniform industrial court law, of "speeding-up practices" in government departments, and of Public Printer George Carter for alleged discrimination against union employees. President William Green and all other officers of the federation were reelected.

ON THURSDAY the new prohibition enforcement machinery devised by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the Treasury department went into full operation, and as a starter in the way of economy two thousand prohibition agents and employees of the service were severed from their jobs. Some of these will be reappointed. Mr. Andrews has announced that the administrators would be held responsible for the conduct of their forces, and that they would be given a free hand in naming their subordinates in order that the latter could, in turn be held responsible to them.

Loot So Large, Thieves Found No Sale for It

Philadelphia.—A tale of an alleged secret rendezvous in the Russian quarter in New York city, where gems and negotiable securities of fabulous amounts were piled high on tables, and a coterie of men (including a lawyer and a bank examiner) who had possessed them, but were afraid to place them on the open market for sale, was unfolded before a jury in the Federal District court.

The narrative was given by Earl Victor von Brandenburg who, with eight other men, is under indictment here charged with participating in the disposal of more than $300,000 worth of the $1,300,000 securities stolen by Gerard Chapman and his pals in the holdup of a mail truck in New York four years ago.

He was a government witness against A. W. Perelstrous and Stephen Robinson, Jr., of this city, who are charged with conspiracy in aiding the pledging of the $300,000 in securities with the Corn Exchange bank here for loans of $271,000.

"Perelstrous told me how the deal had been put through in the Corn Exchange bank with the securities," testified Brandenburg. "He told me that he had been taken from place to place until finally he found himself in a room—he didn't know the location—where there were a large number of Russians whom he did not know. He said there were diamonds, rubies, and gems of all kinds, and securities piled high on large tables."

BROUGHT RELIEF AFTER 2 YEARS SUFFERING

"The makers of Tanlac will always have my warmest thanks, for I don't consider it any exaggeration to say I owe my life and present good health to Tanlac," is the striking statement of Andrew Groeschner, fireman.

"Words simply can't express the misery I endured for 2 years from indigestion. At times gas pains would catch me around the heart and almost cut off my breath. These awful pains would last two and three hours. My nerves were all unstrung. I slept poorly and got in such a bad way that my days seemed to be shortening rapidly.

"I tried everything, but disappointment was my only reward until I began taking Tanlac. I have been taking Tanlac off and on for a year now and feel so different that there's no room for comparison. I eat good and sleep good and feel that Tanlac has given me a new lease on life."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Flint—J. Elwood Andrews, former president of the Michigan Real Estate Association, was elected president of the Flint Chamber of Commerce by directors of that organization.

Grand Rapids—Proposed construction of a $450,000 jail and detention hospital combined, will be submitted to the board of supervisors at the present session by the committee on buildings which has received tentative plans and sketches from the architects.

Flint—Further reduction in Federal income taxes by the next congress is likely, Rep. Louis C. Cramton, of the Seventh district of Michigan, told members of the Flint Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon. He also predicted a reduction of the automobile excise tax by the same body.

Owosso—Owosso property owners have failed to pay special assessment taxes to such an extent that it may be necessary to stop all further public improvements until they have been paid up, or to require those seeking further improvements to make substantial payment before the work is started.

East Lansing—The student council of the Michigan State college adopted a resolution placing it on record as opposed to "the type of humor that recently appeared in the Green Onion," a campus humorous publication criticised, was one in which an editorial advised students to "be collegiate—drink and neck," and containing many alleged off color jokes.

Battle Creek—Half a million dollars has been donated to Battle Creek College for immediate use, Dr. J. H. Kellogg, chairman of the board, announced at a banquet of the men's class. Dr. Kellogg, when seen later, refused to give any information that would lead to the identity of the benefactor save to say that the man was interested in the principles to which the college subscribed.

Ann Arbor—Sir Robert A. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, has been invited to deliver the address at the annual Washington's Birthday convocation at the University of Michigan, Feb. 22, 1926. Sir Robert was to have delivered the address at the convocation last year, but the gathering was omitted because of the illness of the late Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, president of the university.

Muskegon—A tax burden of $30,000 was switched from the city of Muskegon to the county townships through the re-equalization of the tax roll by the state tax commission at a hearing before Muskegon supervisors. The hearing followed a bitter controversy between township supervisors and city commissioners which resulted in a petition to the state commission. It reduced the city tax roll by 3 per cent.

Monroe—Board of Supervisors accepted the petition of 100 residents of Berlin township, asking for the incorporation of Estral Beach as a village and adopted a resolution ordering a special election to be held Wednesday, December 16, at which time the proposition will be submitted to the electors. There are about 1,200 acres in the proposed area. Estral Beach is located about 13 miles north of Monroe on Lake Erie.

Lansing—To spur the school children of Michigan to greater achievement and health education work, a bronze lion, to be awarded at the close of each semester, is being offered as a trophy by the Lions Club of Lansing to the school room in the state whose record of accomplishment of such work is greatest. Should any room win the trophy three times in succession it will become the permanent possession of that room.

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids memorial to the veterans of all wars, to be erected in Fulton park at a cost of $35,000 will be completed by next Memorial day, Stephen W. Collins, president of the Grand Rapids council of the American Legion, has announced. Contract for construction of the memorial to consist of two pillars, on which the names of Grand Rapids Gold Star service men and women will be subscribed, will be let about November 1.

Fremont—The fifth annual agricultural and horticultural fair will be held in the local community building October 29, 30 and 31. The arrangements are being made by the county agricultural agent, Harold Stinson, with the assistance of the agricultural committee of the chamber of commerce. The dairy department has been added to the fruit, vegetable poultry and household arts displays. The judges for the fair will come from the Michigan State College.

Lansing—Rights of the State of Michigan to refuse, through the Conservation Commission, to lease lands formerly forming lake bottom at St. Clair flats, is to be attacked in State Supreme court Oct. 27, when action brought by Detroit interests will be heard. The case consists of filing an application by George Netdwig, Detroit, asking that the court grant a writ of mandamus to force the conservation department to issue a lease to certain lands which have been drained and have been developed as a summer resort section.

Port Huron—Mayor John B. McIlwain and members of the city commission have called a meeting at which it is announced an amendment to the city commission will be introduced giving the city officials the power to install a system of busses and assume charge of the transportation system of the city. This is the answer of the city to the threat of the receivers of the Detroit United Railway, which controls the Port Huron street car system, that service will be suspended or curtailed unless a seven-cent fare is granted.

What of The Railroads?

Reports received here would seem to indicate that the local railroad lines through the neighboring small villages are not as prosperous as they once were. This is entirely wrong in principle and wrong in effect but not much can be done to ameliorate the condition since for some years the patronage of steam passenger trains has been falling off, and business in the ticket line has gone to the bad.

In the beginning the railroads assumed a large share of the responsibility in developing the nation and in pioneer days the railroad meant volumes to the naked territory of Michigan. It is with a tinge of regret we mention the swan song of the railroad. Even in our short time we can remember when the coming of the railroad was an enthusiastic event, hailed by every body young or old. As children we journeyed to the distant town to observe the construction of a new railroad and we delighted to watch the "pollocks" and "mud hogs" as they wallowed in the slime of the grades and cuts, manipulating the wheel barrow and transported the soil to grade the road bed. The laying of steel rails was a highly interesting process to us and then came the gigantic "Brooks" engines—that what we thought of them—now mere babies compared to the Juggernauts that haul the through limiteds.

Time was when the citizens of our country welcomed the railroad as his savior but in these days it is vastly different. The cunning Henry Ford put his ingenuity at work some years ago and he made a machine which would run without horse power. It glided over the highways like a serpent, it rambled up hill and down wherever there was a good road. When Henry perfected his little machine he began to sell them to the nation. You know the result—demands were at once made for gravel highways passable in winter and free from mud. This demand became a craze, and the craze became habit. No doubt the railroads saw at this time the handwriting on the wall, but the hallucination went on and on, until to-day with the exception of a few trunk lines in Michigan it is a sad but deplorable fact the railroads are not wanted. Nobody weeps when their steel rails are pulled up; nobody will sob on their urn when they are dead industrially.

Motors run by internal combustion will race about the countryside and bring man's freight to his door, and bring it on an instant's notice. He can board a motor bus and reach any city in the land by direct route much quicker than he could do so by rail. The days of the small railroads are numbered.

The Cincinnati Northern R. R. has extended from Addison to Marshall and Homer for forty-one years and in the palmy days carried a tremendous amount of coal and other heavy material from the mines of Southern Ohio and Pennsylvania but with the building of other lines this route lost its popularity and became a "go as you please" jerkwater road. Things have gone from bad to worse until it is impossible to attract enough hauling to pay the actual running expense—in fact this has been the case for several years. Such petered out lines are known as feeders and had much better be known as eaters, since they are a drag on the general system. Laws of the state of Michigan place upon railroad corporations certain restrictions—and without the consent and authority of the Public Utilities Commission a line cannot be discontinued so the company has made the best of its trouble by running one train each day. The news comes that the company is now endeavoring to get permission to tear up this branch entirely which will leave several towns with no connections for mail and freight Moscow, one of the old towns on the Detroit-Chicago Turnpike will suffer irreparably from this arrangement. When Chicago was a half Indian village of log huts. Moscow was on the map bigger and better than it is to-day. When Adams township was carved out of the howling wilderness by Salmon Sharp and William Cutler Moscow was already started but when the Cincinnati Northern pulls up its rails the last vestige of the outside world will have left the berg. What the result is can be foreseen.

As in some parts of Indiana the streets of Moscow will become a wheat field and the sand hill crane will keep this lonely vigil in the brush grown swamp of what was once a town.

Poultry Men To Hold First State Meeting

Several hundred leading poultry men of the state will be at Lansing on October 29 and 30 for the first annual meeting of the newly organized Michigan Poultry Improvement Association.

Nationally known poultry authorities have been scheduled for the two-day conference, in effort to insure unusually high class material for the first state meeting. Dr. M. A. Jull, senior poultryman of the U. S. department of agriculture; Prof. W. R. Graham, Ontario agriculture college; and other equally prominent speakers are included in the announced program.

Complimentary banquets and other features of entertainment are listed, in addition to the strictly business side of the gathering.

Chief work of the new poultry improvement association lies in the field of certification, according to J. A. Hannah, M. S. C. poultry department, who serves as secretary of the association. About three million egg hatching capacity in commercial hatcheries of the state has been signed up already for inspection and certification this year it is said. Election of officers and nal plans for the certification ork will be handled at a business ssion of Friday, Oct. 30.

The Fire Losses Usually Begin Now

The note of warning sounded by state officals and Fire Marshals as to preparing your chimneys and heating apparatus for the hot fires which are soon to be kindled, is something more than a far cry. It is vital and we hope sincerely that the people of this vicinity will heed such advice and see that chimneys are properly cleaned, and defective flues rebuilt.

In most of the houses in our immediate village and vicinity, this is a neglected item. Consequently when the cold weather comes and stoves and furnaces are fired with light combustable materials the results are quite often disasterous.

The big insurance companies are constantly circulating propaganda begging people to beware of taking chances. In this section we find many cement block chimneys which are a fire hazard under all circumstances. No cement block chimney is safe for any kind of building since it will not stand intense heat, and if it burns out is quite liable to check lateaally, opening wide cracks and if it does not fall at once, may stand for years in an unsafe condition literally unnoticed if covered with wall-paper.

If you must use cement blocks at all your chimney should be lined with flue tile of rectangular shape made to fit inside. Old brick chimneys often develop mortar cracks between the brick which are above the living rooms in the garret out of sight and live cinders will ignite cobwebs and dust, causing roof fires. Another nuisance is the crook oftentimes built in a chimney in order to conform to the roof plans and cut down costs. No wise house builder will allow this extremely dangerous practice because the weight from above will in a short time open cracks on the bottom side of the angle thus exposing your roof to great hazards. Don't build that way!

Last of all see to it that your home is protected with a force pump of some kind, preferably at well or if not there, on your cistern and not less than 20 feet of hose with a nozzle that can be quickly attached. It may save you several thousand dollars.

Big Potato Show Is Farm Week Features

A big state potato show, with all potato interests of Michigan joining hands to put on a blue ribbon exhibit, will be one of the features of Farmers Week at M. S. C. this year. The potato show is the first of the Farm Week meetings and attractions which has been announced formally.

The East Lansing show will be a championship event, the best entries from former local exhibits being shown. Potato shows have been held in connection with farmers week exhibits in former years, but this will be the first year of the state wide exhibit.

Practically all potato associations and interests in the state are represented on the committee which is handling arrangements for the show. H. C. Moore, extension specialist at M. S. C. is serving as chairman, along with the following members: A. C. Lytle. Gaylord; E. W. Lincoln, Greenville; V. I. Whittemore, East Lansing; John Sims, Caro; Wm Bowers, Central Lake; Ernest Pettifor, Gaylord; David Inglis, Van.

CARE OF CONVALESCENT IN SUMMER

For those who are just recovering from a serious illness the problem of food is a serious one. The patient, though well on the road to recovery, is usually weakened by the rigors of disease and the excessive heat is wont to sap his energy. Hence, the foods that are consumed during this period should be considered carefully as to digestibility, food value, ease of assimilation, purity and sterility. These are important in any food but especially so when the consumer is not strong and healthy.

In most cases, the one who is convalescing consumes milk in large quantities. This food contains all of the elements that are essential to the body. If milk is pure and germless, it is easily digested and assimilated.

Where the milk supply is uncertain or the quality not of the best, evaporated milk should be employed. It is sterile; it is just pure milk with about sixty per cent of the water removed. Its double richness may be modified, if desired, by the addition of water or it may be used just as it is, where rich, creamy dishes are desired.

Many people make the mistake of confusing evaporated milk with condensed milk. They are not at all similar in appearance, composition or taste. They cannot be used for the same purposes; condensed milk is a combination of sugar and milk; evaporated milk has no added sugar, being pure milk of double-rich quality and food value.

Following are recipes of easily prepared dishes and foods that are well suited for the invalid and the convalescent.

Loganberry Cream.

¾ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup water
½ cup loganberry juice
2 tbsp. lemon juice
Pinch salt

Put all ingredients in a Mason fruit jar and shake thoroughly. Chill and serve in glasses filled ¼ full of ice chips. Raspberry, blackberry, and cherry juice may be used instead of the loganberry.

Iced Cocoa.

3 tsp. cocoa
3 tsp. sugar
¼ cup water
Pinch salt
½ cup evaporated milk diluted with
½ cup water
⅛ tsp. vanilla

Mix cocoa and sugar thoroughly and add the ¼ cup water and boil over a low flame for 15 minutes. Scald the diluted milk and add cocoa syrup and salt. Continue cooking for 15 minutes in double boiler. Add vanilla. Chill and serve with chipped ice. Top with whipped cream.

ELECTRIC DATA SENT CONGRESS

Report Tells What's Being Done in Fourteen States to Study Electricity on the Farm.

IN CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

To have on record with the Congress of the United States the plans of the Committee on the Relation of Electricity to Agriculture, Dr. E. A. White of Chicago, the committee director, has sent a complete statement to Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas. At the instigation of Senator Capper this statement has been printed in the Congressional Record.

Dr. White's report reviews the circumstances that led to the formation of the committee, outlines its purpose and lists the states where electrical farm experimentation is going on.

He points out that the National Electric Light Association some five years ago appointed a rural lines committee, now called the rural service committee. This committee, Dr. White says, became convinced that the farm-electric problem could not be solved without the active co-operation of agricultural interests.

WHAT IS EVAPORATED MILK?

Did you ever stop to figure out the exact meaning of "Evaporated Milk"? The word "evaporated" may give you the idea that in the process of evaporation the milk has lost some of its valuable qualities. It hasn't. It has lost only water. Sixty per cent of the water is evaporated from the milk after it comes fresh from the cow.

The first step in processing the milk is the evaporation, when a portion of the water content is removed. The second step is the homogenization, which insures the cream being distributed evenly throughout the milk. The third is the canning. The fourth is sterilization, which takes place in the can when the milk is subjected to sufficient heat to destroy the bacteria. Thus evaporated milk remains as pure and fresh in the container as when it foamed into the pail in the farmer's barn.

Evaporated milk is now generally recognized as the freshest milk available to those not living on farms and producing their own milk. For freshness in milk means purity.

Transportation of milk from the dairy country to the city is well systematized and rapid and yet owing to the immense quantities of milk that must be rushed in daily, much of it must be obtained at considerable distances and a large per cent is necessarily some days old when it is delivered by the milkman.

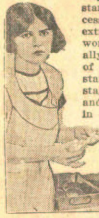
Evaporated milk, on the other hand, is last night's and this morning's milk. From the dairy barn, always under rigid inspection, it is hurried by farmers to factories located in the heart of the dairy country and delivered when it is fresh. Evaporated milk is canned just at its "freshest moment," when it is in its finest state. It is never allowed to get old. The whole process from cow to can requires only a few hours. It may be interesting to know that the process of sterilizing takes place after the milk has been sealed in its containers. Once in its sterilized containers, there is no possibility of deterioration.

The sterilizing of evaporated milk insures its purity—it makes a safe milk for the children. Evaporated milk is boiled milk, and this makes it more digestible.

It may be used for any milk need with safety and economy.

For ordinary cream needs, use it just as it comes from the can. When a rich milk is desired, add an equal part of water. For cooking and baking, two parts water and one part milk will usually suffice.

Rising Young Star Fond of Cooking



Claiborne Foster.

Claiborne Foster, that clever little lady who makes Barry Connors' play, "Applesauce," the outstanding comedy success of the year, is an extraordinary young woman. She is generally recognized as one of the rising young stars of the American stage and her services and company are always in demand but such is her nature that she shuns the "bright lights" and leads a simple and unostentatious life wherever she may be. She is essentially a home girl, being passionately fond of cooking, an art at which she is very adept, and much of her leisure time is spent in the modest little kitchenette of her apartment. When not playing in some production, Miss Foster may be found at her home a short distance from New York city, where she revels in the joys of cooking for the whole family and her friends and spends her vacations doing the work of the ordinary housewife.

There are two dishes which are regarded with more favor by Miss Foster, than are any others. These are Bronk shrimps and chicken en casserole. She uses the simplest of formulas but insists upon the purest of ingredients, using pure butter, and evaporated milk. The recipes that she uses are:

Bronk Shrimps.

2 cups shrimps, canned or fresh
4 tbsp. fat
½ tsp. salt
Few grains cayenne
Yolks 2 eggs
½ cup evaporated milk
½ cup water
1 tbsp. flour
2 tsp. lemon juice

Clean the shrimps, and cook in half the fat for 2 minutes; add seasoning and lemon; cook 2 minutes longer. Remove shrimps and make a white sauce of the remaining fat, flour and milk; when thickened add yolks of eggs slightly beaten, stirring in quickly and cooking two minutes; add the shrimps.

Chicken en Casserole.

1 tender chicken for roasting
2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. lard
Salt and pepper
1 pint hot water
1 cup evaporated milk
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
2 cups chopped mushrooms

Clean chicken, split down back, and lay breast upward in casserole. Spread fat over breast, dust with salt and pepper, add hot water, cover closely and cook in hot oven one hour. When nearly tender put in evaporated milk, mushrooms and parsley. Cover again, and cook 20 minutes longer. Serve hot in casserole.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 18th day of March, A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savinge Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amounting to two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610] and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said morgage provided. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N, Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit: the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Decay of Decency

Dear Comrades:

We, who live in the quiet little towns are unaware of the awfulness of crime of every sort in the large cities. Even in Battle Creek, a lady who lives there informed me that she and her husband attended what they supposed was a clean show, and girls, perfectly nude, came out and danced, and formed "living pictures." What are we to do about it? God grows seed for the birds, but the birds must fly for it. We must pray, but we must help God answer our prayers, by doing. Deets Pickett says: "We want you to know these things. We are going to have to fight, fight in the nation in every state, in almost every locality." He further says: "The men and women who stand for the old American ideals must awake if those ideals are not to be hopelessly and irrevocably submerged under a flood of European sensualism, foulness not tolerated by immense portions of Europe. The peril is new, but it grows, grows."

Read this with care, then pray for God to lead you in things you shall do to help put down and out this terrible monster.

Nina G. Tasker.

THE DRIFT IN PUBLIC MORALS

Under this title Deets Pickett, a well known authority, has written a leaflet from which we quote:

Aside from the one matter of prohibition, the public morality of America has dropped to almost unbelievable depths. We have been so absorbed in the prohibition issue that we have failed to notice the utter rout of the friends of decency and American civilization.

The matter of prize-fighting belongs here. The invasion of the fighting services of the United States Government by this degrading, corrupting evil is one item in the count. The degradation of the dance is another. The waltz of former days typifies modesty and propriety beside the dance of today. And the worst dancing is not to be found in the public dance halls. It is to be seen in the best hotels, and, if we are not misinformed, in many of the "best" homes. Petting mashing and automobile spooning are the by-product of the erotic stimulation of jazz music and close dancing.

The third charge that we bring is against the theatre. Mr. James S. Metcalfe in the Theatre Magazine for November writes under a head, which reads: "A flood of indecency is sweeping the stage and official control seems the only remedy."

Mr. Metcalfe for many years was theatre critic of "Life," a man whose every conviction and prejudice is "liberal." The statement is fully justified. In New York at the present moment one show displays its chorus girls entirely naked except for a whisp of chiffon which could hardly be dignified by the name of loin cloth. The girls dance in this state of disarray. This is at one of the most prominent and the audience is composed of men, women and young girls. Another show displays its girls nude to the waist only slightly draped below. Not only that, the jokes and dialogue of this show are positively obscene. Much of the humor is double in meaning. One sketch is entitled "If Ford were President," and shows a hypothetical cabinet meeting. Bryan is there with a bottle of whisky in his pocket. Ford jumps up every now and then to kiss Edsel who is called "Axle." When "Axle's" ability is questioned Ford says, "Is he not my son," and "Axle" replies, "Mamma says I am."

Another sketch in the same show is a burlesque on "Rain" which as a play was an arraignment of the sincerity of the Protestant ministry The scene of this sketch is in a Pacific Island. The dialogue is principally between a minister and a fallen woman. The humor of the thing is in the dirty meaning of the lines which are intended to show the hypocrisy of the ministry The woman hangs a red light in front of her door. The men, some of them in uniform, flock in until the room is crowded and then she replaces the red light with a green light, One of her visitors is the minister himself. Much of the talk is blashemous. The show is far fouler than the worst burlesque show of ten years ago, but the place is packed with women and young girls as well as men.

Another show in New York glorifies prostitution. Another leading play is full of such searing profanity and obscenity as would be resented by the roughest of ignorant men if uttered in the presence of his wife.

A fourth count is in the matter of indecent literature. A justice of the Supreme Court of New York placed in my hands a book called "Women in Love" which describes in great detail fondling and caresses leading to sex contact. This book had been procured by his daughter from a circulating library and to his astonishment he found it available at many circulating libraries. He tried to arrange for the prosecution of this offense and found that the matter had already been before the courts and the magistrate had expressly commended the book.

Another work which is freely on sale is supposed to describe the mental reaction of a young girl and the gossip of herself and companions. One part of the book tells how she viewed through a window the conduct of a married couple and most of the descriptions would be startling to the average married person.

Perhaps the worst count of all is the present circulatian of magazine indecency and obscene pictures. Small pocket magazines containing the foulest of bawdy house humor are freely on sale. Successful court action has been had against the worst of these magazines, but the situation is still bad. Do you realize that your adolescent son can pick up magazines which go into the best homes and find advertised there pictures of nude women which will be sent to anyone who remits the price? Perhaps you think these pictures are no worse than what your boy sees at the art gallery. That is the suggestion of your decent mind. As a matter of fact, they are unretouched photographs of life, no corrections being made which minimize the sex suggestion. This kind of picture used to be "bootlegged" and at great danger to the "bootlegger." Today the "bootlegger" of obscene literature restricts his sale to pictures far fouler. Mere nudity brings him no customers.

Pioneer Sketches

Ninety-three years is a long ways to look back and when Edward Bellamy wrote his famous novel "Looking Backward" he took long privileges with posterity. Since that time many of his seemingly ridiculous prognostigations have been made perfectly correct, and we are wondering what next?

Ninety-three years ago this part of Michigan was a howling wilderness inhabitated by a few straggling whites and bands of roving Pottawattomie Indians whose savagery equalled if not exceeded the fierce Miamis and Winnebagoes south and west of us. Where North Adams stands today was an unbroken forest and wolves howled through the long winter nights and a cold heavy snow fell among the straggling oaks, whitewoods and maples. Following is an account written by C. F. Hoffman a New Yorker, who traveled this way in 1833 on horseback, presumably down the Moscow turnpike. He went to Chicago and found quite a flourishing village there. He said:

"Being now on the mail route between Detroit and Chicago, I am travelling very comfortably in a four-horse wagon, with the gentlemen mentioned in my last. I found my horse's back so chafed at White Pigeon, that it was unpleasant to use him any longer under the saddle; and having met with my trunk at Niles, which was forwarded from Monroe by a friend, I am in a measure compelled to adopt what is certainly the most agreeable mode of travelling at this season through a bleak prairie country.

"The cold winter moon was still riding high in the heavens as we ferried over the Joseph's at Niles this morning. A low-sided scow was the means of conveyance; and after breaking the solid ice near the shore to loose us from our moorings, it required some pains to shun the detached cakes which came driving down the center of the dark rolling river, while, near the opposite shore, they had become so wedged and frozen together that it required considerable exertion to break a way with our long poles, and make good our landing. At length, ascending the bank, a beautiful plain, with a clump of trees here and there upon its surface, opened to our view.

The establishment of the Carey Mission, a long, low white building, could be distinguished afar off faintly in the moonlight while several winter lodges of the Pottawattamies, three or four hundred of which tribe inhabit this fine district were plainly perceptible over the plain. The moon, indeed, shone with effulgence such as I have never witnessed, except beneath the pearly skies of the west. Morning came at last; still, excessively cold, our horses' manes and our own clothes being covered with hoar-frost, while each blade of grass that shot its wilted spear above the snow glistened like a diamond's point beneath the uprising sun."

He May Be But We Doubt It!

The Manufacturer makes the observation that a man commanda salary of $25,000, $50,000 and $100,000 or even $150,000 a year who can give us better roads, better radios, unlimited gasoline, universal telephone service, cheapest automobiles, washing and ironing machines etc, etc, is well worth twice what he gets to the nation. This might be true then again as Josh says "It Mightn't."

In the first place no one's head is big enough to contain all these ideas and work them out; in the second place thousands of these wonderful appliances spoken of were brought to pass stage by stage, and gradually by hundreds of men. Henry Ford for instance is given credit for introducing the automobile when it is positively known he only improved the machine. Way back in dark ages when the first steam engine was invented a steam automobile was in use but of course it was crude and cumbersome and the intense ignorance of the day prevented the development of such a machine.

A good many of these high priced men are figureheads purely—men who have by diligence and attention to business worked up to the salaries which they are receiving but this is no sign they are worth what they get as values go in this country. While there are some like A. H. Smith deceased late president of the great New York Central Lines who no doubt was worth twice what he received there are hundreds of swivel chair workers whose principal asset is the ability they display in making managers and others believe they are par excellence and drawing their pay.

The Manufacturer then goes on to say that these most highly valued men in time of war made the best soldiers, sailors, officers and doctors because they served for glory and duty without thought or care for recompense.

We do not believe these men made much greater sacrifice than the private man of the line who often times left his all to participate in the great struggle to save the honor of a few rip-goats at Washington who wanted to demonstrate to the world what we could do in a military line if necessary—and they insisted it was necessary to slaughter thousands of our best blood on foreign soil because Kaiser Wilhelm had accidently sunk one of our boats in endeavoring to enforce his blockade of foreign ports. While we are glad Germany is humbled and no doubt she deserves it, yet in the quarrel across the Atlantic we had mighty little interest except as the millionaires and rich producers of materials wanted to seize that opportunity to increase their wealth.

There was a way which the great World War could have been passed from us without bloodshed on our part but they chose not to take it.

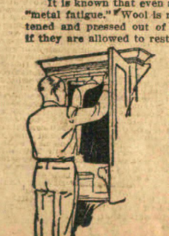
Give Your Clothes a Rest

THE weary waistcoat and the tired trousers—these are not fancies of the imagination but cold realities. You wouldn't make your horse go day after day without a rest or run your car without giving the engine a chance to cool off. And in just the same way your clothes have an occasional vacation coming to them once in a while if you want to get the most wear out of them.

It is known that even steel, when constantly used, gets what engineers call "metal fatigue." Wool is no exception. The sturdiest wool fibers become flattened and pressed out of shape by continuous use. Their strength returns, if they are allowed to rest up a bit.



Fortunately, you do not have to send fatigued suits to the seaside or mountains to recover their vigor. A nice, dark closet and well-fitting hanger make an ideal vacation for their jaded nerves. What you do need, though, is enough suits to keep them from getting too tired out. Two suits worn alternately wear considerably longer than three suits purchased one at a time and each worn continuously every day until worn out.

What is true of suits is equally true of shoes. Besides the greater economy of having two or three pairs of everyday shoes going at once, the man who has to stand or walk a great deal will find it much easier on his feet to have a Monday-Wednesday-Friday pair to alternate with his Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday brogues.

A COVINGTON, KY., WOMAN

Makes Remarkable Recovery

Mrs. Harry Ashcroft Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Severe Illness and Pain

MRS. HARRY ASHCROFT
632 BEECH AVENUE, COVINGTON, KY.

Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework as I could not stand because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen. I sat down most of the time and did what I could do in that way—as washing dishes, etc. One day a book describing Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines was put in my mail box. I saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength, but I certainly praise this medicine. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time. I would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat. I also used the Sanative Wash and I recommend it also. You may publish this letter and I will gladly answer letters from women and advise my neighbors about these medicines."—Mrs. HARRY ASHCROFT, 632 Beech Avenue, Covington, Kentucky.

Mrs. Boyer Also Found Help

Gilman City, Missouri.—"I was in such a condition that I could not eat nor sleep to do me any good and I felt draggy all the time. My head ached, my right side and back would almost kill me at times, and I could be on my feet only a short while at a time. I was irregular and so nervous, irritable and despondent that I thought I could not stand the strain much longer. I had been this way more or less for ten years, but the last two years was just terrible. I took medicines, but got little relief until I began to take the Vegetable Compound. I took three bottles before I could see any change at all. I have taken seven in all and am improving right along. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and take the Liver Pills. I can do most of my work now, and I live on a farm and there is lots of it to do. I wash, iron, hoe the garden, raise chickens and tend to the milk."—Mrs. T. M. BOYER, Gilman City, Missouri.

Either Janet had translated faithfully, or the patriarch understood this Latin. He smiled benignantly.

"But," said Tommy, "or rather sed nolo— Oh, look here, Miss Church, tell him that I won't have Calypso driven into marrying me, if she doesn't want to. She said in Berlin that she wouldn't marry me, and if she feels the same way still, she mustn't be bullied into it."

The patriarch explained at some length that the princess' feelings did not matter in the least. He had brought her up himself and taught her the duties of a princess. She would marry the man she was told to marry. This did not satisfy Tommy.

"Tell the patriarch," he said to Janet, "that unless the princess agrees of her own free will, I won't stir a foot in the matter."

But Janet thought the conference had lasted long enough and she was getting chilly about the legs. A stone-floored hall is apt to be draughty at night and she had no stockings on. She said good night to the patriarch and walked off to bed. Tommy was left to his own resources.

He got out his notebook and pencil again. He could not draw a picture of himself refusing the hand of an unwilling princess in the Lystrian Chapel Royal; so he wrote down a Latin sentence. The patriarch did not understand the language as Tommy spoke it, but he must surely be able to read it.

"Nisi regina ne amat," he wrote, "nihil faciam in re."

That, if not in Ciceronian style, was a plain statement of his meaning. The patriarch understood it, smiled and waved his pudgy hand. Then he patted Tommy on the shoulder in a most friendly and confidential manner. Count Albert attempted an explanation in English.

"That is good," he said. "Sehr gut, right. Not true? Please?"

The patriarch ordered more wine. There was much drinking of healths. Tommy's health, the patriarch's, Count Albert's, the health of each attendant priest, Calypso's (all standing), and finally Janet's. The patriarch held up Tommy's sketch of her while he drank.

The party broke up, all sober, but as Tommy said afterward, "Another bottle would have finished us."

The Patriarch Menelaus would not be happy in America. His strict views about marriage might get him into trouble with the people who appreciate the advantages of divorce.

CHAPTER XVII

Tommy slept soundly.

At six o'clock in the morning he was half wakened by the sound of a motorcycle passing close under the window of his room. He felt slightly surprised that there should be such things as motor-bicycles in Lystria. But the subject was not interesting enough to rouse him thoroughly. He slept again.

At half past eight he was wakened again, this time thoroughly, and saw Count Albert standing at his bedside. Tommy looked up and bade him a cheerful good morning. The count bowed stiffly. He held two large, leather-covered books, one under each arm. It would have been difficult for him to bow otherwise than stiffly. Behind the count, standing rigidly at attention at the door of the room, were two soldiers with long rifles on which the bayonets were fixed. This surprised Tommy a little, but he bade the soldiers a friendly good morning. He supposed that it must be the custom in Lystria to send part of the army to waken an honored guest in the morning.

Count Albert laid one of his books on Tommy's bed and began turning over the pages of the other. It was a Lystrian-English dictionary. It's compilation had been the life work of the tutor who had taught Count Istvan to read Shakespeare. It had been printed at the expense of King Wladislaws, and was that monarch's solitary contribution to the cause of literature. Ten copies in all had been published. Six of them were lost. One lay on a shelf in the palace of Count Istvan. One was in the cathedral library under the charge of the patriarch. One was kept by the head clerk of the Lystrian house of lords. The remaining one, which Count Albert was using, was in the royal schloss.

Count Albert found the word he wanted, marked it by digging his thumbnail into the paper, and then handed the book to Tommy. Like most Lystrian words, it was thickly covered with accents, and the letter X was in it several times. The English translation was given as: "Impostor—pretender (historical). One who assumes an identity other than his own. Deceiver."

Count Albert frowned severely to show that he meant everything the dictionary said. The two soldiers held their rifles at the present to show that they meant it all too.

Count Albert took up the second volume of the dictionary and looked up another word. This time the English translation was: "Arrested." To prevent any possibility of mistake, he pointed first to Tommy, then the two soldiers, and then once more, to the word. Tommy had no excuse for not understanding what his position was.

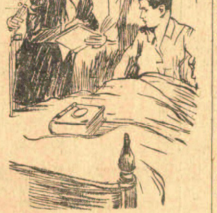
Count Albert looked out a third word, and once more handed the book to Tommy. This was a short word, consisting of three letters, one of which was an X, and three accents. It meant: "Place of execution," and, according to Count Istvan's Shakespearean tutor, might also be translated: "Gallows, scaffold or guillotine." Count Albert nodded grimly and pointed to the soldiers. Then he said, "Please."

"But not at this hour," said Tommy firmly. "It's simply never done as late as this. The regular time for shooting a man is dawn and that's passed for today. There won't be another till tomorrow. Besides, you're bound to give me some sort of a trial."

He took the dictionary with the intention of looking out "shoot," "down," "tomorrow" and "trial," believing in that way to make his meaning clear. Unfortunately, there was no English-Lystrian part of the dictionary, so the book was useless to him. Count Albert, with the air of a great nation which delivers an ultimatum to a troublesome little tribe, turned to leave the room. Tommy jumped out of bed and stopped him. He could not speak Lystrian and he could not use the dictionary. But he was not quite at the end of his resources. He tore out a blank sheet from the end of the dictionary and wrote a letter.

"Ad Reverendissimum beatissimum, excellentissimum Patriarchum, Lystriae, Archiepiscopum, cum Janetta Ecclesia (Miss Church) conversari volo."

Then he remembered that both Count Istvan and Count Albert used the word "Please" with extraordinary frequency in the most unlikely connections. It was evidently a word to which the Lystrians attached great importance. The ancient Romans apparently did not, for he could not remember a Latin equivalent for it. He added "Si vis" to the end of his letter, and then, in order to make it quite plain that he wanted to be polite, wrote, "Bitte. S'il vous plait, please." He handed the note to Count Albert.



Count Albert Laid One of His Books on Tommy's Bed and Began Turning Over the Pages of the Other.

"Patriarch," he said. "Beatitude, Archbishop, please."

Count Albert scowled, but he took the note. He walked over to the door, opened it, turned, said a farewell "Please," to Tommy, and then went out, leaving the two soldiers on guard.

Tommy got up and dressed. That took him nearly half an hour. Then he smoked a pipe. Then he looked out of the window for a while. The view was entirely uninteresting, for his room looked out on a small courtyard, but it cheered him to observe that there were no signs of the erection of a scaffold. In all the romances he had ever read the scaffolds for the execution of the heroes are put up under the windows of their cells, and they are obliged to listen to the sounds of hammering and sawing even if they have enough strength of mind not to look out.

At ten o'clock the door of his room was opened and a soldier came in bringing some breakfast. The Lystrians, alone among central, southern and eastern Europeans, have a good idea of what breakfast ought to be. Except that there was no marmalade, Tommy could not have done better in a first rate London hotel.

At half past ten, before he had finished eating, Janet Church was shown in. Tommy greeted her with an eager flood of questions.

"What's happened?" he asked. "Why am I shut up? Why did that ass, Albert Casimir, wake me up this morning by scowling at me. Why did he shove the great dictionary with the word "impostor" in it—an enormous dictionary in two volumes? Why did he threaten to hang me or shoot me or guillotine me? I don't know which he meant; but he certainly intends to execute me in some way. And what's the Lystrian for marmalade? I'd like some just to finish off a really good breakfast."

"Who are you?" said Janet.

"I'm the Reverend Thomas A. Norreys, M. A., said Tommy. "You saw my passport in Berlin, so you ought to know."

"Not Lord Norheys?"

"I've told you, I've told the other Casimir, I've told the king, I would have told the princess if she'd have listened to me— I've told every one I've met that I am not Lord Norheys. It would be just as sensible, in fact more sensible, to insist that I'm Colonel Heard. But no matter what I said, nobody ever believed me, except that pompous ass, Von Steinveldt. I think he did. If necessary I'll swear I'm not Lord Norheys. I'll swear it on Casimir's dictionary if you like, and that's the most impressive looking book I ever saw."

"What convinced them? I'd like to know; for I never could manage to do it myself."

"Two telegrams arrived this morning early," said Janet, "one from Count Istvan Casimir, sent from Berlin, and one from Lord Edmund Troyte, from London. A motorcycle brought them. They said that you're an impostor, and that the real Lord Norheys is in London. Lord Edmund Troyte is Lord Norheys' uncle, so he's certain to know."

"I expect he'll be Miss Temple's aunt soon. I mean to say, she'll be his niece, if half I've heard about her is true. I never was so plagued about anything in my life as I have been about that woman. How did the princess take the news?"

"The patriarch wakened her about seven o'clock to tell her. She came into my room about two minutes later and I never saw a girl so pleased."

"I call that heartless of her," said Tommy. "Worse than heartless, malicious. I never did her any harm. Why on earth should she be pleased at my being hanged?"

"She's not pleased at that. She doesn't think you will be hanged. Nor do I. What delighted her was the thought that you really had nothing to do with Miss Temple."

"If she would have listened to me," said Tommy, "she'd have known that long ago. However, I'm glad she doesn't want to hang me. Perhaps she'll let me out of prison. Why have they shut me up?"

"I've just told you that," said Janet. "They believed you were Lord Norheys and when it turned out you weren't, they imprisoned you, of course."

"I don't see any 'of course' about it. They can't mean to imprison everyone who turned out not to be Lord Norheys. If they did that the prisons would be horribly overcrowded. Don't you think that you could explain that to the patriarch?"

Janet looked doubtful.

"It's a complex idea," said Tommy "and probably quite new to him. Still with your knowledge of German—"

Janet had no doubt at all about her ability to explain anything in German.

"I'm afraid," she said "that the patriarch isn't as good at German as he thinks he is. He can understand simple things all right, but when anything unexpected is said to him he doesn't take it in. After the princess and I were dressed this morning he came in and had a long consultation with her. They were still at it when I left. They began in German, but the princess had to give up and talk Lystrian after half an hour or so."

"Were they talking about anything very abstruse? Metaphysics, for instance?"

"They were talking about you," said Janet. "The princess said that she was extremely glad to hear that you were not Lord Norheys, because nothing on earth would have induced her to marry him. She told the patriarch all about Miss Temple and showed him some letter or other."

"I know all about that letter," said Tommy. "How did the patriarch take it?"

"He said the princess was perfectly right, and that no man who behaved as Lord Norheys did could possibly be allowed to be king of Lystria. I gathered that he thought there'd been enough of that sort of thing when the late king was here. I hadn't heard it before, but from what the patriarch said I understand that King Wladislaws was a thoroughly immoral man."

Past Tense

The hill was icy and the big colored woman could not control her footing. "Help! Help! Ah'm slippin'!" she screamed, as she began her involuntary journey downward. "Ah'm slippin'! Ah'm slippin'!" she yelled again.

A few seconds later a man who had heard her cry found her comfortably couched in a snow bank. "Ah'm slup!" she remarked as she looked up into his face with a grin.—Boston Transcript.

One Place Where Rat Is Not Thought Pest

A deity whose name is Ganesha is worshiped by the Hindus.

Because Ganesha is always pictured riding on a rat or attended by one, the rat receives part of the homage directed to the god. For this reason many rats live in state in the temple at Deshnoke, India, where there is an old and interesting shrine erected to this mythological god.

Pilgrims prostrate themselves before a group of rats, which have no idea in life beyond that of eating everything available and keeping a safe distance from cats and hawks. But they represent the rat god, Ganesha, and the temple in which they live is sacred on account of their presence. It is even called "the Rat Temple."

According to Hindu mythology Ganesha was the lord of the Ganas who were a group of inferior deities. Ganesha removes obstacles. He is propitiated at the beginning of any undertaking. He is particularly endowed with wisdom and judgment.

Crawls Into Tree To Fight Forest Fire

Crawling into a hollow tree lying on the ground and extinguishing the fire burning within the tree was the unusual experience of Fred Call, a fire guard on the Boise National Forest in Idaho, reports the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture.

Fire Guard Call was on duty when a bolt of lightning set fire to a yellow-pine tree 42 inches in diameter. This tree happened to be hollow, and Call chopped it down in order to extinguish the blaze. Even then he was unable to get to the flames, so he crawled into the trunk, chipped away the burning wood with his knife and crawled out with it on his shovel. He made many trips into the tree, crawling about 60 feet each round trip.

It is claimed that M-23 will be paved to its junction with M-14 in about two weeks unless the cold weather intervenes. It is the intention of the highway department to pave M-23 through the state next season and connect at the border with Indiana highways This will mean a paved highway to the Pacific Coast or to Detroit.

Arthur Stevens living west of North Adams, brought to this office on Thursday a bunch of red raspberry twigs bearing a large number of berries—some ripe and some green, but fresh up to the last two or three days of severe weather. He reports that Mrs. Stevens has canned two quarts of these berries during October besides they have served fresh berries on the table for sauce and would have canned more if the recent cold snap had not interfered. The berries are not Everbearing, but common varieties and Mr. Stevens is satisfied that Michigan is getting to be a semicropping state and you won't be obliged to visit Florida for your winter fruit. This raspberry twig is at our office for inspection.

The concert at the Congregational church last Sunday evening by Horton-Hanover talent was certainly much appreciated. We should say that the two towns are well supplied with vocal music. The trio by Harley Voorhees and wife and Vern Hatch was very well rendered also the lady quartet. Practically all of these numbers called forth applause from the audience. The men's quartet composed of Charles Eddy, Harley Voorhees, Vern Hatch and Mr. Reynolds sang very creditably in fact the whole program under the efficient direction of Mr. Reynolds was well worth a much larger attendance and should have received it. The piano rendering of Miss Hatch, accompanist, is highly spoken of. After the program an informal lunch was served in the basement of the church and a real social get to gether was the outcome. Everybody seems much pleased with this idea and we are hoping to see our friends from Horton and Hanover again soon.

Sometime ago the Hillsdale Daily News stated that an application had been made to the Public Utilities Commission at Lansing to Inaugarate a bus line from Jackson to Hillsdale via North Adams. Since that time nothing has been heard of such a line here and we naturally wonder what has become of the proposition. Such an arrangement would be very acceptable to the citizens of this village.

Edward DeLamater, of North Adams, who attended the National Dairy Show at Indianapolis last week had a splendid opportunity of studying the effects of better methods of breeding and feeding of cows. He and more than 300 other members of boys' and girls' clubs represented 24 states at the Show. Fourteen of these, each the champion dairy calf club member in his state, were brought to the Show by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute.

Ira Weeks, a long time resident of Hanover and Liberty township Jackson county, passed away at his home in Hanover Sunday morning from old age and complication of diseases. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and had been a resident of Hanover village thirty years. Funeral services were conducted at the Odd Fellow Temple in Hanover at 2:30 Tuesday and interment took place in Hanover cemetery.

Chicago's great Livestock Stock Show which occurs November 28 to December 5th at the stock yards is one of the events which always draws a big concourse of citizens to the city. This season it is going to be a wonderful aggregation of animals and sights. Outside the stock yards there is much of interest to the casual observer. There will be representative exhibits from every state in the Union and foreign countries and the crops of Michigan will be played up in great shape we are promised. A large number of Hillsdale county's young people who are interested in cattle raising and potato culture will attend this show.

Hillsdale College Annual Homecoming

The annual Homecoming and Will Carleton Day will be observed on Saturday, October 31, beginning with chapel exercises at the College at 9:30 a. m. REV. VIRGIL HUNT, Pastor

The regular morning services will be held at the usual hour. Following this the Sunday school will convene to which you are all invited to attend.

Don't forget the Sunday school party given by Rev. Hunt's class for the young people of the other two churches, Friday (to-night) in the parlors of the church. Its a Hallowe'en masquerade party.

The next picture will be next Sunday evening Nov. 8th. "Ginger" is the title, having been disappointed in getting "Silas Marner" but this is highly recommended.

Feel it your duty to attend all church services and a cordial welcome is extended to all who have no church home.

This Grade Cow More than Doubled her Milk Yield in 2 Years!

Early in August, 1921, a grade Holstein was received at the Larro Research Farm, and given a number—158.

In 270 days, which constituted her first milking period, she produced 5,651.2 lbs. of milk.

In the first 270 days of her next milking period she produced 10,643.3 lbs.

And in the first 270 days of her third milking period she gave 13,157.1 lbs.

Think of it—an increase of 130% in milk production in two years! And during her first two years on the Larro Farm her weight increased from 843 lbs. to 1226 lbs.—or 45%.

There is real profit in such a cow as No. 158 is today. Yet it does not cost much more to feed and maintain her now than it did when her production was less than half what it is.

The important point to you is that many of your own cows may show equally satisfactory results with the same management and care—plus Larro.

You can easily prove that Larro is a money-maker by trying it on your herd and keeping records of milk produced per dollar spent for feed.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Secretary Mellon Advises House Committee How to Reduce Income Taxes.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OPENING its hearings of tax revision plans, the house committee on ways and means first called on Secretary Mellon to tell what the Treasury department thought would be a safe reduction of income taxes and how it should be made. The heaviest cut advised by the secretary is in surtaxes, now paid on net incomes in excess of $10,000. He argues that reduction of surtaxes will divert investment from tax-free securities to industrial and commercial enterprises; that more business will make more profits and more profits will make more tax revenue, and then it will be possible to reduce taxes again.

Summarized, Secretary Mellon's proposals are:

1. Reduction of taxes in the aggregate to the extent of from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000.
2. Reduction of normal taxes to 1 per cent, 2 per cent, 3 per cent, and 5 per cent, instead of 2 per cent, 4 per cent and 6 per cent.
3. Reduction of surtaxes to a minimum of 20 instead of the existing 40 per cent.
4. Surtaxes to begin at 1 per cent at $12,000 instead of $10,000, and run up 20 per cent above $150,000 instead of 40 per cent above $500,000.
5. Elimination of the 25 per cent deduction on earned income.
6. Reduction of and eventual repeal of the estate tax.
7. Repeal of the gift tax.
8. Retention of the taxes on admissions and on passenger automobiles.
9. Repeal of the taxes on trucks, tires and accessories.
10. Repeal of the taxes on art works and several other minor imposts.
11. Repeal of the provision for publicity of tax payments.
12. Enlargement of the board of tax appeals.

Mr. Mellon told the committee that although the soldier bonus will cost $100,000,000 more than was estimated, tax revenue also has increased and there will be approximately a $290,000,000 surplus on July 1, 1926. He guessed the surplus would be from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 the following year, so it would be safe to reduce taxes that much.

Next day representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers appeared before the committee and made suggestions substantially in accord with those of Mr. Mellon. The secretary's plan was supported also by 50 representatives of Iowa tax clubs, who asserted the sentiment in their state was strongly for the administration's advocacy of repeal of the federal estate tax. A similar group from Texas said the same for that state. Chairman Green of Iowa and Representative Garner of Texas, ranking minority member of the committee, both favor retention of the federal estate tax, and both refused to admit that the tax club men fairly represented the sentiment in their respective states.

FEELING sure that it would be impossible to secure approval by the French parliament for the temporary arrangement plan of the French war debt to the United States, the Painleve cabinet rejected the plan when it was formally presented to it by Finance Minister Caillaux. It was then announced semi-officially that within a few days the government would submit to the American debt funding commission through the French ambassador to Washington new proposals for dealing with the whole debt. What these will be could not be learned, but as Caillaux was severely criticized for offering as much as he did, it is believed the new proposals will be even less acceptable to our commission than were those formerly rejected by it. Some of the finance minister's critics said he did not mean to make an offer that he seriously expected America to accept, but was simply arranging matters so that when parliament assembled he could say that negotiations were continuing, avoiding confession that his debt settlement intentions had failed.

President Coolidge's stand that France need not expect any further loans in America until she funds her debt is backed up by the leading bankers, including President Mitchell of the National City bank and Dwight Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Company. It is known France wishes soon to borrow at least $100,000,000 in Wall street to stabilize her currency on a gold basis. After a conference with the President Wednesday, Mr. Mitchell said to the reporters: "Any large loan to France under the circumstances could be made only on faith, hope and charity."

He went on to explain that it would be necessary to ask the American people to subscribe to any loan to France that might be obtained in Wall street, and with the credit of France impaired by her failure to fund her debts and stabilize her finances, American subscribers would be investing in the loan as a flyer in the above virtues.

PUBLICATION of the full text of Locarno treaties did not lessen the chorus of praise for the achievement of the European statesmen who formulated the pacts, and their acceptance by the parliaments of the nations directly concerned seemed assured despite the opposition of various groups of extreme Nationalists and Communists. The suggestion emanating from the White House that the time was about ripe for the calling of a new armament reduction conference by President Coolidge was not so well received, especially by the French. Indeed, the Paris press frankly told America to mind her own business. Mr. Coolidge agreed that a conference limited to discussion of land forces would be Europe's own affair and could not be participated in by the United States; but he was said to be of the opinion that another conference on limitation of naval forces would stand the best chances of success if held in Washington.

THOSE who were disposed to sneer at the Locarno agreements had their opportunity last week to laugh at the idea that war could be prevented. Greek and Bulgarian troops got into a squabble on the frontier near Demihissar, Macedonia, and a Greek officer and a sentinel were killed. The Bulgarian commander explained it was all a mistake and apologized, but the Greek government at once sent an ultimatum to Sofia demanding $400,000 indemnity, punishment of the Bulgarian officers responsible and formal apology from the Bulgarian government. Meanwhile Greek troops moved up to the frontier to attack the town of Petrich. The possiblity of a new Balkan war was not a little disturbing to the governments of Europe. The situation was said to be complicated by unrest in Albania, where Italian propaganda is active. It was said in Sofia that the cabinet would protest to the League of Nations against alleged Greek invasion of Bulgaria.

REBELLIOUS Druses in Syria, penetrating Damascus, started a serious revolt there, but it lasted only one day, for the French commander, General Sarrail, attacked promptly with artillery, armored cars and tanks and compelled the rebels to surrender. The battle was fierce while it lasted, and the Moslem quarter of the city was largely destroyed by the French bombardment, and by incendiary fires. Two American warships were ordered from Gibraltar to Alexandria, Egypt, to be near the Syrian coast in case American lives and property were endangered.

GOVERNOR JACKSON of Indiana has appointed Arthur R. Robinson to fill out the unexpired term of the late United States Senator Samuel M. Ralston. Mr. Robinson, who of course is a Republican, will sit in the senate until March 3, 1929. He is an Indianapolis lawyer and in 1916 sought the nomination for the senate but was defeated by Harry New. During the World war he went overseas as a first lieutenant and was promoted to be captain and then major. He is married and has one daughter.

North Dakota must get along with only one senator next session, for Governor Sorlie announces that he will not appoint a successor to the late Senator E. F. Ladd.

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL was ordered to appear before a court-martial on October 28 in Washington, to be tried for imputation of "almost treasonable" conduct to high War and Navy department officials in the administration of the air defense. Formally, he is accused of violating the ninety-sixth article of war. Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall heads the court-martial, the other members being Maj. Gens. Robert L. Howse, Fred W. Sladen, Douglas MacArthur, William S. Graves, Benjamin A. Poore; Brig. Gens. Albert J. Bowley, Edward L. King, Frank R. McCoy, Edwin B. Winans, George Le R. Irwin, Ewing E. Booth; Cols. Blanton Winship, Sherman Moreland, and Lieut. Col. Joseph I. McMullen.

Veteran officers predicted that Colonel Mitchell would be found guilty and sentenced to dismissal from the army and that this sentence would be disapproved and changed to a public reprimand.

"MA" FERGUSON, governor of Texas, is threatened with impeachment proceedings, and if her opponents have their way she will be ousted from office as was her husband some years ago. They assert that Mr. Ferguson is really the governor and charge the administration with waste of public funds, inefficiency of management, letting road improvement contracts to high instead of low bidders and other things.

Representative A. H. King called for a special session of the legislature to investigate these and other charges. Ferguson opposed it, declaring it too expensive. King's move has the indorsement of Lee Satterwhite, speaker of the house, who says he will reissue the call. While the constitution provides that only the governor may call special sessions for emergencies, a statute enacted when Ferguson was governor provides that the speaker can call a session when joined by 50 members for impeachment purposes, and Satterwhite and more than 50 legislators intend to go to Austin and investigate.

ONCE more the Supreme court of the United States has upheld the Volstead act. Its constitutionality was questioned by attorneys for Druggan, a Chicago beer "baron," who was in jail, on the ground that it was enacted before the Eighteenth amendment was ratified by the necessary number of states. The court declared that congress had the constitutional authority to pass the Volstead law prior to the effective date of the constitutional amendment and that congress has the right to enact laws intended to carry out constitutional provisions for the future.

THE Episcopal house of bishops, in the New Orleans convention, concurred with the house of deputies in removing the word "obey" from the wedding service, and also voted to eliminate the bridegroom's announcement "With all my worldly goods I thee endow." Proposals that women should be eligible for membership in the house of deputies and that bishops might license women as lay readers were lost. The deputies voted for striking the 39 articles of religion from the book of common prayer; they also passed a resolution urging the United States senate to participate in and to assist in maintaining the permanent court of international justice at The Hague.

WHEN the National Council of Congregational Churches opened its sessions in Washington, President Coolidge, elected and re-elected its honorary moderator, delivered the chief address. Saying that it was his understanding that the purpose of the council was to enlarge and improve the moral and spiritual life of the nation, he declared that at the present time crime and defiance of law are menacing our government; and he called on all churches to contribute their influence in building up respect for the law and strengthening the foundations of the Union.

Frank J. Harwood of Appleton, Wis., manufacturer and leader in Sunday school and Y. M. C. A. work, was elected moderator for the next two years

Metal Seekers Take to the Trail Again

Denver.—Prospectors in large numbers again are tramping the mountains of Colorado seeking precious metals. Mining camps now find it profitable to work grades of ore which, a few years ago, it did not pay to dig from the ground.

Progress in the science of metallurgy, one of the principal factors in rejuvenating the industry, has caused an increase of 20 per cent over the prewar amount of metal obtainable from complex ores, while the cost of handling ore has slightly decreased.

The rise in prices of silver, lead, copper, and even zinc, long considered the "poor relation" among metals, is another factor.

A per cent of the credit for the favorable situation also is given the statesman. Colorado miners declare the fact that Poland was induced by special price concessions to use silver coinage, leading to a generally increased demand from other quarters, was largely the work of American men who used their influence in foreign fields to help American mining.

The advance in the price of zinc is attributed in part to the act of Great Britain prohibiting the shipment of zinc-bearing ores outside the empire.

The Cripple Creek gold-mining district showed a 17 per cent increase in output of metals in August, while the Silvertown district's output was 450 tons above July. Recent strikes of new veins have lent interest to the situation.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Port Huron—Port Huron Junior College has opened night sessions, and 50 students have enrolled in the various courses in addition to the regular day sessions.

Grand Rapids—The Grand lodge of Odd Fellows and the Rebekah assembly, meeting here in their annual conventions, selected Kalamazoo as the 1926 convention city.

Flint—Five hundred fifty thousand dollars worth of Genesee County courthouse bonds were purchased by the Industrial Savings Bank, of Flint, at par plus a premium of $2,806. The bank's offer was $2,000 higher than any other bid.

Ann Arbor—Students of the University of Michigan will have a holiday November 2, the day of the induction of Dr. Clarence C. Little as president. Deans of the university have reversed their decision to hold classes except during the hours of induction.

Battle Creek—Extensive additions are to be made at United States Veterans' hospital No. 100, Camp Custer, in the immediate future. This announcement follows the visit of Charles E. Isbell, construction engineer for the veterans' bureau. The total cost of the additions has not been estimated.

Lansing — Resolutions protesting against holding the Michigan State Fair on Sundays and against the management of the fair renting the grounds for auto races, games and other commercial enterprises held on the Sabbath were adopted at the state convention of Michigan Baptists at their closing session.

Lansing—The 1925 December tax rate here will be $15.31, an increase of 20 cents over the figure of last year, it was announced by the city board of assessors. Of this amount $2.58 is for state, $3.25 for county and $9.50 for the school taxes. The school tax is slightly lower than last year, but both state and county taxes are higher.

Saginaw—Fire broke out in the M. Davidson Auto Sales company building in the heart of the east side business district shortly before midnight last Wednesday and within a short time had gutted the building. Many automobiles were destroyed. James Colburn and his brother, sleeping in an adjoining dwelling, were overcome by smoke and taken to a hospital. The loss will reach $75,000.

Bay City—The Phoenix building, a four-story structure at the corner of Washington and Center avenues, in the heart of the business district, was practically gutted by fire which started here late last Wednesday night. The blaze started in the basement of the building and rapidly ate its way through the intervening floors to the roof. Shortly after midnight the fire was reported under control.

Lansing—A site on Townsend street, next to the Plymouth Congregational church, was purchased for the Y. M. C. A. building soon to be erected. The two lots purchased have a frontage of 115 feet. The property was purchased from R. E. Olds, automobile manufacturer. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy within a year. It is to be five stories high in front and three stories in the rear. Completely furnished it will cost about $300,000.

Flint—All married women employed in city offices, 11 in all, are to be discharged and single women employed in their places, Mayor Judson L. Transue announced. There are plenty of taxpayers of Flint who have daughters who ought to be provided with a means of earning a living," said the mayor. "I do not think that married women should work when they have husbands to support them and thereby keep single women out of jobs they need."

Iron Mountain—Marquette is still isolated from the rest of the upper peninsula while Michigan Bell Telephone company crews are striving to restore at least temporary service. Western Union communication was established, messages being re-routed through Green Bay, Wis. Reports now coming in show that 14 inches of snow fell at Watersmeet, Mich., where 26 cars became stalled in drifts during the blizzard. Small storm flurries are still prevalent.

Ann Arbor—Two score years separate the ages of the oldest and youngest students of the University of Michigan, a canvass of the information of the registration cards here shows. The youngest student is W. G. Baumgartner, Ann Arbor, who was 15 last April. Lillian J. Butler, Saginaw, also is 15, but is two months older than Baumgartner. Howard R. Chapman, Ann Arbor, is the nestor of the students, the records showing he was 57 shortly before the opening of school this fall.

Grand Rapids—This city, the furniture capital of the nation, will be one of the leading centers of airplane manufacturing in the near future, Prof. F. W. Pawloski, head of the aeronautics department at the University of Michigan, predicted in an address on "The Future of Aeronautics," before the Association of Commerce. He said that a survey of the city's industries convinced him the city's woodworking plants would be essential in the making of planes, especially giant multi-planes which he said would be in use later on.

Owosso—The Field Body corporation of this city, manufacturer of bus and truck bodies and cabs, filed a petition in circuit court, asking for the dissolution of the corporation. The Grand Rapids Trust company was named temporary receiver and November 28 was set as the return date. It is stated in the petition that lack of sufficient working capital makes it impossible for the company to operate at a profit and that inability to secure this capital makes it advisable to liquidate and distribute the assets. Assets are given as $1,042,112.91.

Lansing—A genuine effort to secure an air unit for the Michigan National guard has been ordered by Governor Alex J. Groesbeck.

Port Huron—James Dunn, builder and contractor, has filed his nomination petition as candidate for mayor. Until Dunn filed his application it was believed that Mayor McIlwain would have no opposition for re-nomination.

Ypsilanti—A $6,000 printing equipment has been installed in Roosevelt High school, and a course in mechanics of journalism will be given under C. A. Wackman, new member of the faculty. A high school newspaper will be published later in the year.

Owosso—Because the executive committee found hotel facilities here inadequate, the annual convention of the Michigan Dry Cleaners' and Dyers' association, scheduled for Owosso in February, will be held elsewhere, it was announced.

Albion—Announcement was made here by Dr. John L. Seaton, president of Albion college, that Dr. Clarence C. Little, the new president of the University of Michigan, would be the chief speaker at the homecoming celebration here November 7.

Monroe—Fire of undetermined origin, starting in the center of the crushing room at the entrance of the quarry hole, destroyed the stone crushing plant, office and storeroom of the France Stone company here. The damage is estimated at $250,000.

Sault Ste. Marie—Rail communication between Canada and the Upper Peninsula is at a standstill, following the wrecking of the swing bridge across the ship canal by the steamer W. J. Crosby, of the North Shore Transit company of Port Huron.

Stanton—A severe epidemic of typhoid fever is raging in Stanton. The city health officer believes the condition to be due to worn-out tanks of water of the waterworks, which are so porous as to allow the entrance of surface water when the level is low. State authorities have closed a number of private wells.

Springwells — Governor Alex J Groesbeck approved the proposal to amend the charter of the city of Springwells, to change the name to Fordson, in honor of the automobile manufacturer. A special election will be set by the governor soon to allow the residents to approve or disapprove the change.

McBain—Many farmers in this vicinity have lost both potatoes and temper through the recent activities of a gang of thieves. Shotguns, which have not been used since the last rabbit hunting trip last winter, are being oiled and many farmers have announced they will stand guard at night over their potatoes.

Saginaw—A sum of little more than $365,000 has been asked by the county road commission of the board of supervisors, for the construction and maintenance of Saginaw county roads in 1926, together with the operating expenses of the road commission. This amount is $47,000 less than the budget request made last October.

Monroe—The board of supervisors has decided to submit to the voters at the election of April 5 next, the proposition of erecting a new jail, the present structure having outlived its usefulness. The building committee was authorized to get an estimate of the cost, plans and specifications and present same at the December meeting.

Flint—Property and stock damage estimated at $250,000 resulted from a fire which started in a doctor's office in the Bush building at Kearsley and Beach streets. The flames wrecked the entire first floor and the roof of the building before all the available fire apparatus of the city was able to subdue the blaze after a five-hour battle.

Grand Rapids—The passing of the old east side power canal is a matter of only a few months. It was announced the city commission has completed a deal with the East Side Power Canal company and the Consumers' Power company, whereby the canal is to be closed, the bed used for a large intercepting sewer and a way opened to beautify the east side river bank through the downtown district.

Port Huron—A deficit of $83,873.48 in the funds of the Huron Acceptance corporation, a Port Huron finance concern, which went into the hands of a receiver several months ago, is reported to the circuit court by public accountants Ernest & Ernest. The accountants state that "there was an apparent deliberate removal of certain important records, and that certain transactions did not appear regular."

Port Huron—That the proposal to exempt from federal income tax all personal incomes below $5,000 per annum, is designed as a bribe to the general public in an effort to head off the movement aiming at doing away with the issuance of tax exempt securities, was intimated by Hal H. Smith, Detroit, general counsel for the Michigan Bankers' association and other organizations, in an address here before a meeting of the Knights of Pythias.

Lansing—Orders placed by the secretary of state for license plates for the coming year indicate that the automobile registration will reach a total of more than a million pleasure cars and a quarter million commercial vehicles in 1926. The initial order of plates for the coming year calls for 999,999 pleasure car plates and 150,000 plates for commercial class cars. The plates are to be black with white letters, and are to be of two shapes. Pleasure car plates are to be the same shape and size as the present plates.

Lansing—The state insurance department is investigating two companies, said to have been issuing policies in connection with sale of Florida lands. Salesmen, it was alleged, have been selling Florida property in Michigan, with the promise of a Lloyd's insurance policy guaranteeing earnings on the investment. An inquiry by the Michigan Real Estate association revealed that the insurance company was not Lloyds, of England. Lloyds International and Lloyds American were the names given on the policies, it was said.

Women, Why Not Enjoy Health?

Racine, Wis.—"I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it was a most wonderful benefit to me, because it gave me health and strength. It is an excellent tonic and nervine and should be given a fair trial, I believe, by every woman who is not enjoying the very best of health."—Mrs. Eleanor Pagel, 822 Racine Street.

ECZEMA
Dries right up!

If you just realized how easy it is to stop fiery, itching, burning eczema by simply building up the red-blood-cells in your blood with S. S. S., you wouldn't waste another minute trying to do it any other way.

That's the only way to relieve irritated, broken out skin of any sort. You lack rich, red blood. Impurities are in your system. The blood is so weak it can't fight back and overcome the enemy, so the impurities break out through the skin.

S. S. S. builds the blood back—builds millions of new red-blood-cells. Eczema dries right up. Boils, pimples, blackheads, ugly blotches and irritating rashes all disappear.

Clear up your skin. Get S. S. S. All druggists sell it. The larger bottle is more economical.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Fight Against Drink

BY REV. SAMMUEL D. PRICE, D. D.

Three items should be covered in the study of this lesson: (1) A general introduction to "Ephesians"; (2) the full meaning of the lesson text, Ephesians 6: 1-20; and (3) the relation to Temperance with much up-to-date data which can be obtained from the daily and weekly press.

Though Paul was a bachelor, he knew the elements that enter into the life of a true home. In the opening verses of our chapter, he states basic principles which would make an appropriate placard for posting in every home. If such teachings were only lived up to, there would not be one divorce for every seven marriages in the United States. Paul gives advice for children, parents and helpers in the home. Selfiehness is to be overcome by calling for service to others and always with the incentive that the ever watchful Christ is to be satisfied. Before any act is committed by a member of the home circle, each should stop to consider how this will affect all the others

A measure of freedom was granted to Paul in Rome as he was permitted to live in his "own hired house," but all the while the fact of his being a prisoner was apparent by the chain which joined the apostle to one of his changing guard. As he states in verse 20: "I am an ambassador in bonds." The equipment of the accoutred soldier at his side was spiritualized by Paul as he describes his armor.

Life is a never-ceasing battle; it has ever been so and will contiue the same, especially for all who are seeking to accomplish anything worth while. Material forces are not the chief obstacles to be overcome. Give the engineer a problem and he will work it out, as he uses constant forces and laws which are always his obedient servants. The real difficulties arise when incalculable elements enter in. The enemy that man must vanquish is the combination of all the forces of evil headed by the prince of the power of evil. When this fact is realized we begin to make adequate preparation to become victors in the strife. Until we appreciate the strength and subtlety of the opposition we are careless about personal preparation, and too often are over come before we even think of arming.

All the parts of an adequate protection are close at hand. Hence the exhortation is to "take up" that which has been provided. Twice it is stated that we are to make use of "the whole armor of God."

"Put on the gospel armor,
Each piece put on with prayer;
Where duty calls, or danger,
Be never wanting there."

Six elements are named and each has a significance. As the wrist is often bound when special strength is needed, so there is to be a close girdling at the waist. Truth is a good test for each of us to use right now, as we examine our own sincerity of purpose. We are not apt to give much attention to the equipment until we have made a complete enlistment. If we are the Lord's soldier; then we will stop at nothing in getting ready to fight to victory. Since no one can establish his own righteousness, we are provided with the righteousness of Christ. Frrands of peace take the feet along life's highways. There is a great difference between fighting for self or national interests and warring that Christ may become a blessing to others.

Faith is the large shield that furnishes further and more extensive protection than the breastplate. Poisoned and flaming arrows of temptation and untruth hurled by the devil and his cohorts, will be stopped and never make any impressions on us, so effective is this covering if always held in place. The head too often stills the appeal of the heart. It is necessary for the will to be in right control, else the outcry of the heart does not lead to any result. Salvation must be fully accepted and all right relationships thought out with this decision in mind.

After naming five elements for self protection, Paul indicates one with which to make the offensive and it is always adequate: "the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God." The javelin was hurled away at the outset: the short sword was held to the last for the hand to hand conflict. When the hand failed to grasp it, all was lost. Read again how Jesus made use of the Word in defeating Satan (Matthew 4: 4-10). A spiritual activity is named which can be regarded as a seventh eqipment. It is prayer and is effective both for self protection and for aggressive attack. Those of us who are old enough can remember the old time prayer meeting, when one under conviction or in special need would arise and say "Pray for me." Knowing about the Christian's armor is not enough, It must be put on. It is put on when it is put to use.

World's Temperance Sunday, just before election day in the United States, is a good time to note facts concerning the increasing victory over the organized liquor traffic. In Collier's of May 2 there was the following summary: "To-day we can directly trace only 19,000,000 gallons of spiritous liquor and 10,000,000 gallons of wine to American mouths—and not that much. Even if we credit moonshiners with 5,000,000 gallons and hoochmongers with 6,000,000 raising the supply to 30,000,000 that is only one-fifth of our old supply. Actual results: whisky prohibition 80 percent.; wine, 75 percent.; beer 100 percent. almost: prohibition all told, 70 percent."—Christian Herald.

M. S. C. Radio School Starts In Nov.

A new radio school, or so-called "school of the air", will be sent out over station WKAR beginning November 2. according to announcement made here this week by extension authorities at the M. S. C.

Success of a ten-weeks school broadcast from the college station last spring is said to have led to expand the educational radio series Two separate schools have been announced for this winter. One will run from Nov. 2 until Dec. 18 while the second will start early in January, running until early April.

The fall courses will include a wide variety of subject matter, eleven different departments of the state college contributing definite courses of study. These will include: History, English literature, sociology, botany, marketing, entomology, forestry, soils, agricultural engineering, and zoology.

The school will be held from 7:15 until 8:00 o'clock (eastern time) from Monday through Friday, inclusive, each week. Each department is to have definite lecture periods during the schedule.

The college station, WKAR, is operating on its old wave length of 286 metres this year, but is now listed as a 1,000 watt station, making it one of the super power stations of the country. After the first of January, a 12 weeks school of special interest to farmers will be broadcast. Detailed programs for this school will depend largely on requests received from listeners, it is said.

To Have Advisory Corn Borer Board

A special advisory committee to cooperate with all existing agencies in helping to control the European corn borer, dangerous crop pest which is invading Michigan will be appointed in the immediate future by R. H. Pettit, entomologist at M. S. C. and chairman of the new committee.

Decision to create the special committee was reached by a group of 87 Michigan men who are directly concerned with the future of the state's corn crop. These men met at Chatham, Ontario, during an inspection trip through corn borer sections of Ontario on October 22, and at this time named Professor Pettit chairman of the committee with power to appoint other members.

Representatives of many agricultural agencies in the state will be included in the committee, according to Pettit, who explains that the work of the new group will be that of assisting agricultural forces, rather than starting any new lines of work.

Miss Gretta Tiffany Married

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tiffany formerly of this place. Miss Gretta, was united in marriage to Warren Gibbs of Indianapolis Indiana. We publish the following account of the wedding as taken from an Indiana paper The "Times".

One of the loveliest fall weddings was solemnized on Saturday evening, Oct. 17th at the Methodist church in East Chicago, Indiana. The contracting parties were Miss Gretta Tiffany, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tiffany of 4817 Baring avenue, East Chicago and Mr. Warren Gibbs of Indianapolis, Indiana.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, tall palms autumn foliage and fall flowers being effectively used. The marriage vows were spoken beneath a beautiful archway, fashioned of varicolored autumn leaves and white chrysanthemums, erected directly in front of the altar.

Mr. Carl Hoffman and Mr. George Gromberg, brother-in-laws of the bride acted as ushers and Mrs. Vivian Meicham presided at the organ giving a fifteen minute recital preceding the ceremony, following which Miss Ethel Jordan very sweetly sang "At Dawning" by Cadman. To the strains of Lokengrin's wedding march Mrs. Chas Tiffany, the mother of the bride, becomingly attired in gray georgette was ushered to her place. The little Misses Gretta, name sake of the bride, and Beverly June Lowden, wearing dainty white gowns of lace and organdy acted as ring bearer and flower girls. Miss Gretta preceded in the line of march carrying the ring concealed in the blossom of a Calla Lily. She was followed by the maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Melching of Fort Wayne, Ind., in a costume of apple green panne velvet with Rhinestone trimmings. She wore slippers to match, flesh hose, and carried an arm boquet of sunburst roses.

Little Miss Beverly June Lowden came next carrying a basket of rose petals on her arm, slowly scattering them in the pathway of the bride.

Last of all Miss Gretta charming in a gown of oyster white silk velvet broche over silver metal cloth, slowly approached the altar leaning on the arm of her father who was to give her away in marriage. Her gown was fashioned on straight lines and elaborately beaded with shimmering silver lined beads and rhinestones. She wore a Dutch headdress fashioned of Spanish lace and trimmed with Rhinestones and sprays of orange blossoms to which was fastened her long white tulle veil. Her only ornament was a beautiful platinum dinner ring set with diamonds—the gift of het groom. She wore silver kid slippers with rhinestone buckles and moon light hose. A shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley completed her lovely costume.

She was met at the altar by the groom and the best man, Mr. Robert Dorrance of Indiana Harbor, both wore Tuxedo suits and white gloves, The Rev. George Craig now pastor of the Methodist church of Hobart, formerly pastor of the bride and groom led in the beautiful ring service, assisted by the Rev. Morton D. Carrel of the Michigan conference and uncle of the bride. At the close of the service Miss Ethel Jordon sweetly rendered "All for you" and as a recessional the organist played Mendolsohn's Wedding march.

A reception followed at the Tiffany home which was appropriately decorated for the occasion. A delicious four-course luncheon was served in the dining room to about sixty guests, the color scheme of lavender and yellow being carried out, both in the decorations and the menu. The bride's table was most attractive. A large heart shaped wedding cake wreathed in smilax forming the centerpiece. Full lighted candles in lavendar set in crystal holders cast their soft glow over the scene. Mrs. Catherine Booth was caterer, Mrs. Ethel Chartier and Mrs. Nina Lowden presided at the coffee and tea urns while Mrs. Carl Hoffman, Mrs. George Greenburg and Mrs. Mary Lehman assisted in the serving.

The bride's going away gown was a cape ensemble suit of wine silk velvet, embroidered with antique gold braid and trimmed with summer ermine. Her hat was a close model of wine satin trimmed with antique gold lace.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs left later in the evening for an extended auto trip to Denver and other western points.

The out of town guests were Rev. and Mrs. Craig of Hobart, Ind., Rev. and Mrs. M. D. Carrel of North Adams, Mich., and Miss Dorothy Melching, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kennedy of Fort Wayne Indiana.

The Truth About Florida

Returned travelers from the land of the Everglades tell conflicting stories about the real situation that exists in Florida at the present time, each description no doubt being colored to fit the personal experience of the narrator and like the three blind men who examined the elephant, each is sincere in his observations and has no desire to present other than a correct view of a situation that has aroused nation-wide interest.

A commonsense analysis of the situation would suggest at least two things: First, owing to high living costs Florida is no place for workers unless they are highly skilled in the trades that are in demand of skilled labor; and second, men with limited capital have no business going down there and engaging in the wild speculation in real estate unless they are in a position to buy and own whatever they contract to purchase and hold it if necessary until such time when it can be sold at a legitimate profit.

Florida's growth at the present time is not a growth based upont natural reasons, but seems to be the outcropping of that peculiar state of boom conditions that break out here and there over the country during every period of continuous prosperity. It is conceded by close observers that for years to come Florida taxpayers will be burdened by high taxes, brought about by the wild desire of every community to undertake municipal improvements far in excess of legitimate needs and only calculated to entice newcomers to that particular spot. Not until the land sharks and the speculators depart can real permanence in land values in that state be determined. In the meantime unless you are in a position to afford the loss of your investments, if the worst comes to the worst, it is better to keep your money right here in Michigan.

MEN'S DRESS

By
W. A. Churchill, Secretary
BORN TAILORS GUILD

Belts Versus Suspenders

FOR several years belts have entirely replaced the old-time suspenders. Thousands of men never wear suspenders at all except with formal dress suits. Those who cling to the older fashion claim it is not good for one's health to draw the belt as tight as it is necessary to keep the trousers up, while belt enthusiasts counteract this hygienic consideration with a charge that suspenders tend to make a man round-shouldered.

The kind of belt that is worn, however, is attracting a good deal of attention from smart dressers. Belts are getting wider, more colorful and in a greater range of material than ever before. There are the usual belts of cowhide with smooth or pebble grain. These range from one to two inches in width and usually come in black, russet or cordovan. Leather belts may also be had in bright colors suitable for sports wear and with light flannels.

Silk and leather combinations are on the market, as are the webbing belts in an almost endless variety of regimental orders. In wearing multi-colored belts, select one of the colors as the key for socks, ties and bordered handkerchiefs and stick to it throughout in the matter of accessories.

Predictions are that suspenders will come back to effect the new straight-drape trousers which are to be the successor of the bell-bottomed "bags." Only by hanging on the eight buttonholes of the suspenders can this desirable straight line be obtained. A concealed suspender worn underneath the shirt is due to gain favor.

Rats living about the farmyard of a home near Eureka Lake, Kansas were recently given a taste of modern warfare by a representative of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, cooperating with the extension service of the agricultural college, whose time is given to rat-control work and the demonstration of the best means of eliminating this pest, Such delicacies as canned salmon, apples and fresh eggs served in the half shell, seasoned with barium carbonate, were first rationed out along the known runways and haunts of the rats. Then came a gas attack for those that had survived. A small hand duster loaded with calcium cyanide dust was used for gassing all the burrows and hiding places. Some of the rats plunged into the dust barrage only to die at the operator's feet. A week later the gas treatment was repeated and the pɹemisesare now are absolutely free of rats.

Explosive Dust

"Good housekeeping" in mills and grain elevators, advocated as a means of preventing grain dust explosions, is demonstrated in the United States Department of Agriculture educational motion picture Explosive Dusts.

This film was recently revised to meet new practices in removing the danger of explosions in mills and elevators, and additional photography showing the dust removing equipment of two of the largest and most up to date grain elevators is included in the revised edition. Vacuum cleaning systems, bin vents, ventilations, floor sweeps and other new apparatus designed by Federal engineers to carry away excess dust are shown.

Actual scenes of some of the disastrous results of dust explosions in grain elevators, which have taken scores of lives and caused enormous property losses, are included in the film.

Chicago Stock Show To Set New Records

Advance indications are that all records will be smashed at the twenty-sixth anniversary session of the International Livestock Exposition which will be held in Chicago, November 28th to December 5th, according to Secretary-Manager B. H. Heide. He reports that never before in the long and illustrious history of this show has there been so much euthusiasm shown by both exhibitors and prospective visitors.

More than ten thousand of the finest horses, cattle, sheep and swine will be entered in the numerous contests to strive for supreme honors at this acknowledged "Supreme Court of the Agricultural Industry." These animals include the champions of the state and sectional fairs and many others which will be shown at Chicago for the first time and they represent the highest attainments of the master breeders and feeders of the world. In addition to the leading live stock authorities of the United States and Canada, two noted foreign judges will assist in making the awards, J. Egerton Quested of Kent, England, serving in the steer and Red Polled classes and Robert Duncan of Forfarshire, Scotland, acting as judge of the Breeding Shorthorns.

Bat The Bandits

The job of holding up banks in this section of the woods is going to be irksome soon, as most of the bankers are making preparations to scarify the crooks in pretty good shape. First might be mentioned the invention of bullet proof glass which is in fact three thicknesses of plate with a thickness of celluloid between. Next, there comes bullet-proof wire mesh for railings which is coming into universal use. In Detroit the highwaymen attempting to hold up the American Bank are due for a great surprise. The first thing they will be up against will be an arsenal, as port holes will be in readiness to shoot through, and in addition most of the banks will have a steel cage above the vault facing the door wherein two armed men will be in constant attendance with the quickest guns known. Every customer will be in full view the minute he steps into the bank.

Specially designed steel plates are built into the counters and cages to permit the handling of checks and money without exposing the clerks to robbers' fire. Bullet-proof speaking tubes will permit conversation under all circumstances, and in addition to this in the vault itself is concealed enough "oh-be-careful" to give a whole penitentiary of criminals the stomach ache.

International Bridge At Detroit

As previously stated in these columns the City of Detroit has been agitating the question of a suspension hridge across the river connecting the United States and Canada. Now, in view of the tremendous improvements being put over and the liklihood of a Great Lakes to Atlantic Waterway being pushed to completion, it may interest our readers to learn the initial steps of starting the bed-rock foundations of such a bridge have been taken, During the past ten days boring for rock has been started on the approaches and the caissous will be sunk to the bottom of the river, and the work of establishing foundations for the towers begun soon. This great International structure when completed will cost $12,000,000, borne jointly by the two nations.

The bridge as planned will be steel suspended on gigantic cables probably more than a foot in diameter and stretched across the river over the tops of the two towers at opposite sides of the river. This single span will be high enough to allow the tallest ships to pass beneath. The roadway will be double decked and three streets wide as we understand it. The middle will accommodate the electric cars on each side of this will be a road for vehicles, headed both ways, and on the extreme outside two walks for pedestrians.

These projects usually require from eight to ten years for building but we hope the bridge will be finished in a much shorter length of time No expense should be spared in making this bridge an ornament and a work of art. It should so ornate and beautiful that the inhabitants of Michigan a hundred years hence can look upon it with pride. It should contain statuary emblematic of the two greatest Anglo-Saxon Nations, and suitable symbols of the national coats-of-arms—something to be respected and admired for ages.

Is It Fair To the Priniers?

The whole principle involved in the subject of government ownership absolutely of industry is wrapped up in the government printing of envelopes, which is probably one of the worst monopolies the government ever went into.

What right the government has to encroach upon the honest trade of the country printer by putting out a printed envelope is more than we can understand? A large number of lawyers, doctors, stores, banks aud manufacturing institutions which would fight competition in their own lines tooth and nail, will buy a government printed envelope and use it but these same individuals quite freely berate the home newspaper if they are not protected to the limit.

The United States government is seemingly hard up for making a few dollars when it is willing to engage in these petty trades, when as a matter of fact the machinery and equipment at Washington was never intended for that purpose. Not only do the printers of the nation pay their share of the taxes to government upkeep, but their money helped to install the most modern print-shop in the country at Washington, and to be driven out of the envelope trade by UncleSam is a tough proposition for the most of them,

Let Pigs Do Harvesting Says Expert

Nearly 7 per cent of the corn in the great corn growing belt is being "hogged down" each year according to a statement by an expert over the radio from Iowa on "hogging down." He says it is good practice to do this if conditions are right. The field must be fenced hog tight, the pigs must be of right size for the process, and sufficient supplementary feed must be available to balance up the corn while the pigs are in the field. The fact that 7 per cent in the middle west is disposed of in this fashion, however, is good evidence that the farmers find it profitable to meet the conditions making "hogging down" possible.

The answer to the growing popularity of the hogging down process is that it is economical, they say. The fact that the same farmers allow their pigs to help themselves to corn year after year shows that rhe practice is standing up under the "hard knocks." The large number of persons previously opposing the practice and now enthusiastic boosters for it is another thing in its favor."

ELECTRICITY WINS WAY WITH NEW YORK FARMS

Power Lines Slowly Reaching Out to Serve Them—A Rural Town Nearly 100 Per Cent Electrified

The Schoharie Valley, one of the most fertile sections in New York state, is fast becoming electrified. The Fulton County Gas and Electric Company now has a network of wires covering approximately 50 miles, supplied with hydroelectric power, and is still active in extending its lines throughout the rural sections.

"A moral responsibility to the farmer," declared W. J. Fox, district manager for the company, when asked how the development had been undertaken. "Of course it will eventually be good business, but right now it is good will we want of the farmers."

For farm lighting, the company has established a minimum charge of $1 per month with a sliding scale of rates from 15 cents to 6 cents per kilowatt hours of electricity. Where cooking devices are used a flat rate of 4 cents per kilowatt is charged with a minimum charge of $2 per month. Where the farmer extends electricity to his barn for uses other than lighting, including power applications, the rate varies from 2½ cents per kilowatt hour to 10 cents, according to the amount of electricity used.

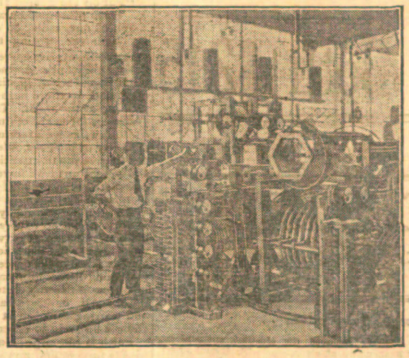
One of the villages served, Cobleskill, is now practically 100 per cent electrified. There are but two or three houses which do not use electricity at least for lighting.

SUPERPOWER IN RADIO IS USED IN FIRST TESTS

Giant Laboratory of WGY Transmits With Greatest Power Ever Used—Engineers Expect Useful Results.

From the largest and most powerful transmitting laboratory in the world WGY, of Schenectady, N. Y., has just broadcast on superpower, using 50 kilowatts on the antenna for the first time in this country or abroad.

This laboratory was erected three miles outside of Schenectady by the General Electric Company for the purpose of making a systematic study of transmission phenomena. It is equipped for research on wave-lengths from five meters to 3,000 meters with power from five watts to 100,000 watts.



Highest Powered Radio Broadcast Transmitter with which WGY made radio history.

According to Adam Stein, Jr., managing engineer of the radio department, General Electric Company, "The ultimate object of tests in the use of superpower in radio broadcasting is, of course, an appreciable improvement in the service to broadcast listeners."

"This laboratory," said Mr. Stein, "is designed to permit a thorough study of radio transmission in general, and broadcast transmission in particular. The laboratory provides equipment for obtaining the transmission characteristics of wave-lengths between five meters and 3,000 meters, and up to powers of 100 kilowatts. In addition, there has been provided sufficient antenna structures so that the best type of antennas or radiators can be determined for the various wave-lengths.

"The laboratory occupies 54 acres of land, and consists of 13 buildings, three towers 300 feet high, one tower 150 feet high, and a multitude of smaller towers ranging from 60 to 100 feet in height. From and between the towers is arranged a network of antennas with which we hope to secure fundamental data on the most efficient antenna for a given wavelength and power.

"To return to the subject of what superpower can be for broadcast reception:

"First, it is obvious that the power of the transmitter, if increased, will provide increased energy at a receiving station, thus raising the level of the signal above that of the noise. This should, to some extent, tend to decrease the effect of static and other disturbances.

"Second, the use of high power at the transmitting station may appreciably decrease the extent to which fading at present interferes with reception. The extent to which superpower may help fading is still one of the unknown facts, and one of the problems which it is the purpose of these tests to determine.

"Third, the effect of superpower is to increase the range of the transmitter so that the program can be satisfactorily received over a greater area, and hence provide better service both day and night."

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March. A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savings Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161 of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amounting to two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610) and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage providsd. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the [illegible]rest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit: the north one half of the southeast quarter of section 28 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

"All the same," said Tommy. "I don't think the patriarch ought to have talked that way to the princess about her father."

"The princess evidently felt that way herself," said Janet. "She changed the subject abruptly, and—well, she beat about the bush a bit, and it was rather hard to make out exactly what she meant. But I think she was trying to explain to the patriarch that she had no objection to marrying you. Of course, that wasn't a thing she could very well say straight out in plain words, and evidently the patriarch didn't quite grasp what she was at."

"How did it end?' said Tommy. "I'm not asking simply out of curiosity. It's really rather an important matter with me."

"I can't tell you how it ended," said Janet. "That tall count man came in who sat at supper with you last night."

"Albert Casimir."

That's his name. He came in and told me that I might come here to see you."

"I wish you'd waited a little," said Tommy.

"I waited as long as I could. I was practically ordered out of the room. But I shouldn't have been much wiser if I'd stayed. They were all three talking nothing but Lystrian. As soon as the princess realized that the patriarch wasn't taking in what she said, she dropped German and spoke Lystrian. So did the count. All I can say is that it sounded as if they were arguing."

"It always sounds as if people were arguing when they talk a language one doesn't understand. Generally, they appear to be quarelling. Which side was Casimir on, the princess' or the patriarch's?"

"It seemed to me," said Janet, "that they were all three on different sides."

"Well," said Tommy, "I suppose it's all settled by this time. I wish I knew how."

"From the way they were speaking," said Janet, "I should say the discussion might go on for hours. They all seemed to have a lot to say."

"I wish you'd go back," said Tommy, "and try what you can do in the way of influencing the patriarch."

"I don't see that I've any right to interfere."

"Still, I think you ought to try. It's a frightfully serious thing for me. As far as I can make out, I'm either going to be hanged or married."

"I'm afraid I've no influence with the patriarch."

"Oh, yes, you have," said Tommy, "as a representative of the League of Christian Churches, you must have. Suppose you were to offer the patriarch to make him president of a world conference of religions, to be held at Chicago or some place like that where a conference of the kind might be held. He'd love that. And at the same time you could tell Casimir that I don't in the least mind whether I'm king of Lystria or not. If I'm allowed to marry Calypso I'd every bit as soon go home as stay here."

"That young woman," said Janet, "is totally unsuited to be a curate's wife."

"She is," said Tommy. "I know that. Perhaps it would be better for you to say to Casimir that I'd make quite a good king from his point of view—give him any amount of balls and dinners, keep up the opera; not have any income tax; and all that sort of thing. The late king told me exactly what's wanted and I'm prepared to do it. It will be easy enough to talk over Casimir. The real trouble is the patriarch. Look here, Miss Church, if you manage to persuade him, I'll promise faithfully to use all my influence as king to unite the Lystrian church to any Christian body in the world you choose to name. Even if we have to wait till the present patriarch dies and I have the appointment of a new one, we'll pull the thing off in the end."

That must have been a strong temptation to Janet. I dare say she would have given way to it and gone to the patriarch with a proposal that he should be president of some sort of world conference. Whether he would have accepted the position or not no one will ever know. Before Janet had made any reply to Tommy, Count Albert Casimir entered the room.

He immediately ordered the two soldiers who stood on guard to go away. He spoke to them in a manner that was actually savage, just as if they had forced their way into Tommy's apartments against orders which he had repeatedly given them.

Then he marched over to the window, where Tommy was standing, and saluted. After that he marched back to the door, flung it open, stood to attention at one side of it and said, "Please."

It was evident that Tommy was at liberty again.

Janet, eagerly questioning Casimir, scarcely pausing to translate his answers to Tommy, got an outline of what had happened.

The princess had carried her point. Casimir, who did not much care who was king of Lystria, so long as there was a king of some sort, backed her up. The patriarch, who was a kindhearted old gentleman and really fond of the princess, had given way in the end.

Part IV
London and Lystria

CHAPTER XVIII

I find myself at last, to my own great satisfaction, able to return to a part of the story in which I myself bore a part. I am no longer writing hearsay, but narrating what I actually saw and heard.

The scene of Lord Edmund Troyte's library in Grosvenor street, when Lord Norheys and his bride walked in, remains vividly pictured in my mind. Troyte sat bolt upright on the edge of a deep chair in which he had been lounging. At his elbow was a little table with the empty coffee cups and the liqueurs on it. Behind it sat Procopius Cable, staring at Norheys with an expression of angry amazement on his face. Half way between the door and the fireplace stood Norheys and his bride. I had never before seen Viola Temple off the stage, and her appearance surprised me. I expected her to be pretty, of course. I did not expect her to look gentle, shy and even timid. A girl who has faced huge audiences hundreds of times would not, one might suppose, be frightened of three old gentlemen sitting round a fire. But she was. Norheys' attitude was protective. He held one of her hands, and kept her close beside him.

The library in Troyte's house in Grosvenor street is a comfortable, and, I think, a beautiful room. There are a couple of good pictures, but for the most part the walls are covered with bookcases. Troyte has spent a great deal on books during his life, rare books, exquisite examples of printing and books which have fine bindings. I do not know that he, or indeed any one, ever reads books of that kind. It is generally easier, and pleasanter, to buy a modern edition of an old author if you want to read him at all. But there is no doubt that the presence in a room of good books, good from a bibliophile's point of view, creates an atmosphere which is very agreeable, especially after dinner.

A Persian carpet, one of the best I have ever seen, covers the floor of the library. Some good chairs, Chinese Chippendale, stand with their backs against the bookcases. But Troyte is too sensible a man to sacrifice comfort to artistic feeling. Round the fire he had deep leather-covered chairs of thoroughly satisfactory late Victorian design.

I, the fifth person present, and by far the least important, leaned back in my chair and giggled feebly.

"Unless it's Emily's curate who's gone to Lystria," I repeated, "I don't know who it can be."

Procopius Cable turned and glared at me with ferocity and contempt. I had been guilty of an ill-timed attempt at a joke in the middle of a very serious crisis. I stopped giggling abruptly and murmured an apology. After that, for a while, nobody spoke.

Troyte was the first to recover his self-possession. He rose from his chair and walked over to where Norheys and his bride were standing.

"My dear Viola," he said, "that stupid husband of yours has never introduced me to you, so I must introduçe myself as your uncle. Won't you come over to the fire and sit down?"

He took her by the hand and led her to his own chair. He set her in it and placed a footstool at her feet. The recognition had been a little long in coming, but there were excuses to be made for the delay. Nothing could have been more courteous than Troyte's manner when he got over the shock of her sudden appearance and made up his mind to accept the inevitable. The girl looked up at him with timid gratitude and blushed in the most charming manner.

"Good old Uncle Ned," said Norheys, "I knew you'd take it like a man. What I always said to Viola was this: Uncle Ned may be a member of parliament and a cabinet minister and all that, but he's still a gentleman."

Cable, his hands thrust deep into his trousers pockets, stood scowling.

"What's happened in Lystria?" he said.

"It seems to me," said Norheys, "that some other blighter has chipped in."

Cable strode over to Troyte's writing table, seized a pen and began to scribble at a terrific pace, faster than any one I've ever seen write, except on the stage. He talked while he wrote, another thing which reminded me of the theater.

"I shall wire to Berlin at once. Casimir is still in Berlin. I shall wire to King Wladislaws. I shall wire to the patriarch in Lystria."

"Seems a pity, doesn't it?" said Norheys, "to butt in like that. What I always say is: If a thing's done, then it is done, even if it happens to be the thing which a fellow would rather wasn't done."

Troyte passed his hand over his forehead anxiously.

"There'll be trouble in the Balkans," he said. "I don't see how this business can end without fresh trouble in the Balkans."

"The marriage has probably not taken place yet," said Cable. "We may be in time to stop it."

"Even if we do," said Troyte, "there'll be trouble.'

"I don't see why," said Norheys. "Of course I'm only an outsider and this is your job, Uncle Ned. But I don't see why. It seems to me things ought to settle down. These mountainy fellows in what-you-call the place—"

"Lystria," I prompted.

"The good old Lystrians," said Norheys, "wanted a king, and they've got one. That dusky queen of yours, Uncle Ned, wanted a husband and she's got one, or will very soon if we don't interfere. He may be a wrong 'un. Seems rather as if he is, but if she's satisfied I don't see that it matters to us. The great thing is not to start interfering with other people's business. That never does any good."

Troyte, who was seriously troubled, murmured something about a war in the Balkans which it might be impossible to localize. Cable crossed the room from the writing table with three sheets of note paper in his hand.

"This," he said, holding out one of them, "is a telegram to Casimir. The other two are to the king and to the patriarch. Can you get them sent off at once, Lord Edmund?"

"I think so," said Troyte. "I can send them round to the Foreign office, and they'll get them off for me. But I doubt if there'll be any operators on duty at this hour in the postoffices abroad. I shall have to write some telegrams myself. I must communicate at once with our ambassador in Berlin, and with our ministers in Prague and Bukarest and—"

"Seems a pity, doesn't it?" said Norheys. "After all, Uncle Ned, that fellow, whoever he is, evidently wants a princess. And what I always say is: Why shouldn't he have her if he does?"

"The patriarch will probably have him shot out of hand when he gets my telegram," said Cable bitterly.

"I hope not," said Norheys. "He may be quite a decent fellow, not a wrong 'un at all. And it isn't every one who'd take on that princess of yours, Uncle Ned. Lots of men don't like it."

"I've told you all along," I said, "that the princess Calypso is as white as you are."

"Still, there's always a risk," said Norheys. "A throw-back, don't you know. What scientific Johnnies call atavism. You never can tell when a perfectly coal-black baby might turn up. Horrid things, black babies. What I always say is that if a fellow is prepared to take the risk, why not let him? No particular business of ours, is it, if the babies turn out to be black, or even brown?"

Troyte was attending to Viola, taking her coat from her, offering her cushions, trying to induce her to drink champagne. Cable grew impatient.

"Perhaps," he said, "you will phone these telegrams through to the Foreign office, or would you rather I sent a messenger with them?"

Troyte got up and went to the telephone. Norheys talked on, addressing no one in particular.

"What I can't see," he said, "is why we should butt in. So far as I can make out, I'm the only one of us with a shadow of a grievance, and I don't want to trot it out. I can't well take an action for breach of promise against an Indian queen. I'd look such an ass, wouldn't I, Uncle Bill?"

He turned to me because Troyte was at the telephone and Cable had turned his back on us.

"I know you'll say she's not an Indian," said Norheys, "but Persians seem to me just as bad."

"She's not Persian, either," I said

Celibates by Choice

I think that it is true there are men and women who wisely realize that having reached the approach of middle age, it is better to remain unmarried rather than marry from any but the most serious reasons.

Marriages made in middle age may be extremely happy. But there are women, as there are men, who have through experience, through adversity through the need of self-dependence attained so great a degree of individuality that they feel that in marriage, with its enormous need of adaptability they would become lost.

We ought not to dismiss such people as necessarily selfish and self-centered. Probably they know that their capacity for friendship, their ability to be of real service to many widely differing types of human nature, their wider leisure, makes it possible for them to express themselves more generously as unmarried people.—Exchange.

Queer "Felicitation"

Ignorant of English, a Frenchman wished to telegraph his congratulations to an English friend on his marriage.

He wrestled wtih the dictionary until the happy couple were fairly on their honeymoon, and by that time he had evolved the following: "May you be very happy in the workhouse!"

His friend was about to demand an explanation, when it dawned upon him that what was meant was: "May you be happy in the union." [For the benefit of American readers it should be stated that all English workhouses (or institutions for the poor) are known as union workhouses.]

Old Wedding Customs Have Kindly Meaning

The throwing of rice as the happy couple who have just been married emerge from the church, or set out on their honeymoon journey, has almost given way to the throwing of the more harmless confetti.

The custom of throwing rice probably came from the East, where rice is the staple food and where plenty of rice means comfort and prosperity. Thus, to throw rice means: "May you never lack a good meal!" or, in other words, "May your married life be prosperous!"

The Romans used to scatter corn in a bride's path, and in Poland the neighbors throw handfuls of wheat, barley, oats, or even beans, at the bride's door. In Italy nuts take the place of cereals, and one can imagine that the Italian children have a happy time picking them up, just as German children, in country places, pick up the cakes and tiny buns flung from cottage windows at a passing bride.

Snow Reef in Mountains

One of the few snow reefs to be found in all the Rocky mountain range, is on "Snow Reef Top" in Glacier National park. This snow reef is there the year round and is much raved over by landscape painters and camera artists. In some parts of this reef, which forms a crescent near the mountain peak, the snow is drifted 100 feet high.

Helpful Habit

A Chicago newspaper writer went out to investigate Hollywood. She was greatly surprised when she discovered how many of the picture people were happily married, had children in the public schools, and were active in building up the community.

"I always thought," she confided, "that marriage was supposed to interfere with art, but this does not seem to be the case at all."

"It doesn't interefere at all," replied a Los Angeles writer, "if you marry often enough."—Los Angeles Times.

Those Jolly Deer

The fresh-air children in Center Hall were entertained at a dinner and supper on Thursday at Sunset clubhouse. Most of them saw from one to four deer, and it appears the little animals came out especially on dress parade for the benefit of the new invaders of their fields of sport, for they blinked their eyes until the children clapped their hands and waved an adieu with their bushy tails.—Center Hall Reporter.

A Lady of Distinction

Is recognized by the delicate, fascinating influence of the perfume she uses. A bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water to thoroughly cleanse the pores followed by a dusting with Cuticura Talcum powder usually means a clear, sweet, healthy skin.—Advertisement.

Mother of nine convinced. One dose of Beecham's Pills are the remedy for sick headaches and constipation.

"Your pills certainly have done 'Wonders' for me. I am thirty-eight years of age, been married thirteen years and am the mother of nine children.

"I was suffering from headaches and constipation for nearly fifteen years when I happened to read one of your 'ads' in the paper. Having a headache that day I went to the druggist and bought a box of Beecham's Pills. I took a dose. That dose was a 'life-saver' to me. Since then I have had no more headaches, and my health is good. I recommend them to whomever I meet."

service to industries

Dependable railroad service is vital to the success of industrial operations.

New industries prefer a location on the New York Central because of the assurance this gives of dependable railroad service day after day.

New York Central Lines, because they are always building for the greater traffic of the future, have a transportation reserve to meet the demands of peak traffic, just as they had in 1918 when called upon to serve the Nation in the war emergency.

A location on the New York Central Lines is a business asset.

A journal in Marblehead, Massachusetts is opposed to the much talked-of income tax provision which it calls a "snooper's law" The average American does not like to have folks snoopidg around to find out what they can about his private affairs. This species of a law is a misnomer and a nuisance and will drive millions of hard American capital into hiding.

Hillsdale now has a lawyer named Prettie. Most of the lawyers in Hillsdale are pretty (stiff) anyhow. That is they are perfect Adonis' when it comes to expense. Most of the lawyers are handsome men but they never solicit business on that basis. We glean from the Hillsdale Daily that Mr. Prettie is a graduate of Ann Arbor,, so of course handsome is as handsome does and he has a beautiful Alma-mater, He is credited with a pretty record for raising money which will be a handsome revelation to Hillsdale. We have pretty optimistic hopes that Mr. Prettie will find a pretty good clientelle in his beautiful new location, which is stuck full as a pin-cushion of handsome College co-eds and "Willie" boys. This we mention casually—not as a matter of gossip. We note this item is pretty rotten and we are pretty glad to shut up and quit.

Death of Adam Sindecuse

Adam Sindecuse, an old resident of this township, passed away at his home on Saturday evening Oct. 17th after having been slightly ailing for several years but ill only a short time.

He was a highly respected gentleman, a good citizen and for many years strawberry culturist. He was born in the Empire state near Bennington Sept. 15, 1850 and resided here 49 years. He leaves three children, James of Fort Wayne, Frank at home and Mrs. Jennie Daniels of the vicinity and 8 grandchildren. Funeral services were held Tuesday Oct 20, and burial in the Kirby cemetery. He was a kind father and his going will swell the numbers in the realms where trouble cometh not and every prospect pleases. We had an acquaintance with Mr. Sindecuse and in fact we admired his frankness. "[illegible] the midst of life we are but on the edge of death."

Rev. M. W. Duffey of Albion, the new superintendent of Albion district, will preach at the Methodist church in North Adams next Sunday evening Nov. 8th, at seven o"clock. He will hold the First Quarterly Conference the following day, probably at 6:30 p. m. though this hour may be changed, in which case later notice will be given.

Forrest Marvin, son of Mrs. Wyman Stott, was suddenly stricken with paralysis Thursday of last week as he was driving with his mother east of this village. Mrs. Stott noticed that her son was unable to handle the steering wheel and promptly shut off the power herself. The young man was taken to a near-by house and Dr. McFarland was called. Later the doctor brought the patient home. The entire right side is perfectly helpless although the young man is able to converse. He is an ex-service man and was gassed while in the service. At present his condition remains about the same.

The address on "Outlawing War" given by Prof. Roberts of Hillsdale College at the Methodist church Sunday evening was deserving of much favorable comment which has been given it. As a student of History the speaker showed how the world has come to outlaw early forms of warfare, dwelling etc. and how just as disagreements between individuals are settled by courts so national and international troubles may be adjusted. He brought out the fact that in all wars no nation has been wholly in the wrong and none wholly in the right and showed by historical references that all our great wars arose from causes which might easily have been settled in other ways. The saloon, slavery and some other things are illegal because they have been lawed out but war yet is not illegal, therefore we must make it so. It is useless to try to compute the cost of the late war but it has been estimated that if the whole United States had been sunk in the ocean the world would not have lost as much as the expense of the World war. Let us talk against war, act against war, and vote to make this cause of the world illegal.

Obituary

Delia Almira Giddings, eldest child of Nathan and Frances Giddings was born September 13, 1872 and departed this life October 28, 1925 aged 53 years, 1 month and 15 days.

She was married to Bert Trumble of Wheatland December 6, 1893. To this union six children were born: Mrs. Glenn Mercer and Ralph Trumble of North Adams, Mrs. Frank Laverty and Mrs. Walter Reed of Jackson; and Ross and Eleanor at home. Besides the husband and children, to mourn their loss she leaves a mother Mrs. Quincy Farmer of Wheatland, a sister Mrs. Bertha Hudnutt of Jackson, six grandchildren, and numerous relatives and friends.

Whose love can equal the love of a mother?
Whose the devotion
so loyal and true?
Who suffers so much
with such joy for another,
Who works with such pleasure
as mother for you!
You hail with delight
the friendship of others,
You revel in love of the sweetheart you've won,
Yet where do you find a friendship like Mother's,
Unbroken till death calls, and life's work is done.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend thanks to the W. C. T. U. and the M. E. ladies aid of North Adams and all friends for the beautiful flowers sent, to Rev. Wylie for his words of comfort, and to the choir for the music during the burial of our loved one.

The Cause

The entire Brown family was attacked by ptomaine poisoning. The family doctor was called, and as soon as emergency treatment had been administered he tried to find the source of the trouble.

"Did you all eat something that had been left standing in tin?" he asked.

Mr. Brown thought hard for a moment. "By gosh, doc," he cried, "that's just what we did. We had a picnic yesterday and we left the lunch in the car all morning!"—Judge.

The earliest recorded eclipse of the sun occurred in 2137 B. C. It was visible in China and is recorded in the Chinese classic, the Shu Ching.

Free Farm Building Helps

"Concrete Around the Home" tells in everyday language how to use concrete for building drives, walks, steps, porches, and other permanent improvements which every home needs. Complete instructions make it easy to estimate the materials and to mix, place, and finish the concrete for these improvements.

"Permanent Repairs on the Farm" tells you how to repair old buildings quickly and easily, and at low cost. The information on Concrete Barn Floors and Feeding Floors will help you add many a dollar to your net profits.

"Plans for Concrete Farm Buildings" contains supplies of blue prints, and shows you, step by step, how to put up Concrete Silos, Dairy Barns, Hog Houses, Milk Houses and many other forms of Concrete Construction.

Whether you are going to build a new building, or repair an old building, these free booklets will show you how to do the job for all time. Send for them today.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

War Between Bulgaria and Greece Is Prevented by the League's Council.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONCE more the League of Nations has justified its existence. Functioning promptly and firmly, the league council last week compelled Greece and Bulgaria to refrain from warfare, to withdraw the forces that had invaded each other's territory and to leave to the league for settlement the frontier quarrel that had brought them to actual blows and threatened to start another serious Balkan war.

When the council met in Paris with M. Briand as president no time was lost in informing the two small powers that they must submit to its dictation, and a short time limit was set for obeyance. The Greeks were sulky and inclined to quibble, seeking to present their case at once to the council and to justify their attack on Petrich and other Bulgarian towns. But Briand and his colleagues silenced them and declared the council's ultimatum meant just what it said. There was the plain intimation that disobedience would be followed by a naval blockade of Greek ports. So the representatives from Athens were authorized by their government to promise full compliance with the orders. Bulgaria had given that pledge already. Investigators were sent at once by the council to the frontier to see that the promises were kept, and an inquiry was begun into the causes of the quarrel by a mixed commission under the auspices of the league.

THOUGH the French in Syria speedily suppressed the revolt in Damascus promoted by the Druses, as previously recounted, the circumstances of that suppression have brought forth angry protests from other Christian nations and have aroused the Moslem world almost to the point of starting a general racial and religious war. General Sarrail's troops relentlessly shelled the ancient city, destroying the Mohammedan sections and much of the Jewish section that lay between them. Between two and three thousand persons were killed, many of them being Christians and Jews, for according to the protests of the consulates no warning of the bombardment was given except to the French. One tank, it is said, traversed the Christian part of the famous Street Called Straight, killing and wounding many before the officer in charge found out that he was on the wrong thoroughfare. British and American claims against France will be heavy. In Paris there is strong pressure on the government to compel the recall of General Sarrail, who is high commissioner in Syria.

For the present Damascus itself is cowed, but the Druse rebellion is strengthened by the accession of swarms of Mohammedans who fled from the city and by the continual raids by Bedouin bandits. It assumes importance as a part of the great Pan-Islam movement that is giving the Christian powers serious anxiety.

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL'S trial by court martial for his criticisms of the army and navy air services opened in Washington with all due ceremony, and the abandoned census bureau building in which the proceedings are being held was crowded with a fashionable throng that made the affair look like a society function. Congressman Reid of Illinois was Mitchell's civilian counsel, and at the outset he sprung a surprise by challenging three members of the court on the ground that they were unfitted by "prejudice, hostility, bias and animosity to the accused" fairly and justly to try the colonel. Brig. Gen. A. J. Bowley and Maj. Gen. F. W. Sladen first were removed from the bench, their brother officers sustaining the challenges. Then Mr. Reid demanded that Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall, president of the court, should be withdrawn, asserting that he was prejudiced because Mitchell in 1923 in an official report had severely criticized his (Summerall's) handling of affairs in the Hawaiian department. General Summerall, flushed with anger, said:

"In view of the bitter personal hostility of Colonel Mitchell toward me which I here have learned of for the first time, I cannot consent to sit on this court."

The court sustained this challenge, as it had the others, and Maj. Gen. R. L. Howze succeeded to the presidency.

Mr. Reid then, contesting the court's jurisdiction and protesting that Mitchell should not be tried on the charges brought, disclosed that the defense would be based on the claim that the colonel in making his criticisms had committed no offense against army and navy discipline; that he incited no soldier to mutiny, slandered no individual and named no individuals in his charges, and that he had a perfect right to talk as he did. The lawyer then quoted this from President Coolidge's address to the cadets at Annapolis last June:

"The officers of the navy are given the fullest latitude in expressing their views before their fellow citizens, subject, of course, to the requirements of not betraying those confidential affairs which would be detrimental to the service. It seems to me perfectly proper for anyone, on any suitable occasion, to advocate the maintenance of a navy in keeping with the greatness and dignity of our country."

Reed's contention was not sustained and the trial continued.

LIEUT. JAMES H. DOOLITTLE, with a little black Curtiss racer, won new honors for the navy and the country in the air races at Baltimore. First he succeeded in keeping the Jacques Schneider seaplane trophy in the United States, making the 100 kilometers in the new speed record for the contest of 234.772 miles an hour. A British entry was second and one from Italy third. Doolittle's plane was the same one which, as a land plane, won the Pulitzer trophy when piloted by Lieutenant Bettis. Next day Lieutenant Doolittle took the air again in the same ship and drove it over a three kilometer course in the fastest time ever made by a seaplane—243.713 miles an hour—though the conditions were unfavorable.

JOSEPH CAILLAUX'S financial program for France was so bitterly opposed that the cabinet declined to accept it and he was urged to give up his portfolio as minister of finance. This he refused to do, whereupon Premier Painleve and the entire cabinet resigned. The main reason for rejection of Caillaux's program was his opposition to a capital levy. President Doumergue asked Painleve to form another ministry, which he did Thursday. He continues as premier and also takes the finance portfolio. Briand remains as minister of foreign affairs and Georges Bonnot is given a new portfolio, that of minister of budget. This new cabinet tends more to the left than the former ministry. The premier tried to induce M. Herriot, his predecessor, to form the cabinet or at least to take a place in it, but the Socialist leader declined.

CONSERVATIVES regained control of the government of Nicaragua last week when Gen. Emiliano Chamarro, former president, seized the fortress La Loma, commanding Managua, without opposition, being joined by the garrison. He and his associates in the coup then sent to President Solorzano a demand that he dismiss the liberal members of his cabinet and restore the liberal party to power. At first the liberals were disposed to resist and there was some street fighting, but Solorzano soon yielded in order to avoid further bloodshed. He himself was protected by constabulary commanded by Major Carter of the American marines. The conservatives claim they lost the presidential election in October, 1924, by fraud.

GOVERNORS of a number of states appeared before the house ways and means committee in behalf of the repeal of the federal estate tax. This, said a White House spokesman, was especially pleasing to the President, who believes that by withdrawing from the field of inheritance taxation, the federal government will help make it possible for the states to have their own sources of revenue. Mr. Coolidge thinks there has been too much centralization of authority in Washington and cites as an instance the matter of federal aid for road construction. He would not cut off this aid entirely, but have it limited as nearly as possible to the building of main highways. Several witnesses representing great interests sought the repeal of the capital stock tax. This was opposed by Undersecretary of the Treasury Winston. Indeed, repeal of nearly every tax in the present law is asked by someone, so it is plain that the committee cannot please all.

IT IS no surprise to find that all those predictions of huge grain exports from Russia due to immense crops had no foundation save the wild talk of Soviet officials, and instead of sending grain to other countries, Russia is practically sure to go hungry again this winter. The Soviet government committee to prevent famine is busy in Moscow and has decided to lend seed, grain and flour to eight districts which report crop failure.

The Moscow Economic Life—the official Soviet economics journal—reports the complete collapse of the selling organization of the Soviet government, formed last summer to buy grain from the peasants. In the Odessa, Ekaterinoslav and Nicholaiev districts, where seven organizations purchased grain before the war, Economic Life reports, today there are 170 government agencies competing on the local markets, forcing prices up. Today, according to the paper, the peasants are demanding prices only $2 a ton below the Chicago grain exchange.

In connection with the grain purchasing campaign, scores of "reliable communists" have been arrested, the paper continues, reporting that grain bribery is rampant and the government is losing huge sums through the poorly organized and inefficient grain purchasing department.

ITALY'S mission is now in Washington for the purpose of funding the Italian war debt to the United States, which amounts to $2,000,000,000. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and the other members of the American debt commission have made a careful study of Italy's financial and economic condition to help in reaching a conclusion as to her capacity to pay.

Concerning the French debt, Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee writes to the president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association saying that without specific authorization from the American people, congress has no right to "unload" the foreign war debts on the taxpayers of the United States. He says the money loaned to France was obtained from the American people under a very specific pledge that the loans would be "repaid with reasonable interest."

CHARLES P. TAFT II of Cincinnati, son of the former President and present chief justice of the United States, was elected permanent chairman of the International Young Men's Christian association convention in Washington. He is a lawyer and only twenty-eight years old, the youngest man ever chosen for the position. President Coolidge opened the convention with an address, and Herbert Hoover and other notables were among the speakers it heard. The secretary of commerce struck a rather doleful note in asserting that by-products of the war and results of our great prosperity are "a weakening of moral fibre, loosening of family and home ties, youthful criminality, the easy breaking of law by adults, the growing intolerance, a leaning upon the state without a corresponding willingness to bear its burdens, waste, and extravagance."

WHEN the International court of justice at The Hague took up the dispute between Great Britain and Turkey over Mosul, the Turkish government sent a telegram declining to present its case because it would not submit to arbitration of the matter by the League of Nations council if the court should so direct. The Turks insist the question is political and so not properly before the court. The case for Great Britain was presented by Attorney General Sir Douglas Hogg and other lawyers.

Crystal Gazer Sees Much Trouble Coming

Paris.—The year 1926 will be an eventful one, fraught with great world changes, if one can believe the annual forecast of Professor Raymond, widely known French crystal gazer.

Raymond has many followers in France, for it is claimed that he predicted the World war, America's entry into the war, the Lusitania disaster and the death of President Wilson.

Among the professor's predictions for 1926 are these: A terrible catastrophe to a transatlantic liner on the high seas bound for the United States.

The death of an American financier.

Greater American interest in European affairs, because of the personal sympathy of President Coolidge, and bankers in Southern and Eastern states.

Steadying of international exchange, France, the United States, Great Britain and Germany coming to an agreement which will stabilize the franc.

The professor's crystal also predicts that sugar, copper, platinum and steel will have a bull year.

England has a melancholy 12 months before her, says the professor, for revolution will break out in three of her dominions, and the armies will have to be mobilized to quell them. A great English author will be killed in a railroad accident.

The professor further foresees earthquakes in Italy and China, railroad accidents in France and the United States, a Bolshevik outbreak in the Balkans, and numberless dire events.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Owosso—With the remark, "I am so tired," George Baslett, 63 years old, dropped dead at the dinner table. Baslett had been ill for several days. Heart trouble was given as the cause.

Port Huron—The work of dredging a channel 25 feet deep from the Fort Gratiot lighthouse, at the mouth of St. Clair river, to a point a half mile north of the lightship of the Corsica Shoal is completed.

Grand Rapids—A rally of all engineers of the state at a spring meeting in Detroit is planned by the Michigan Engineering society, which held its annual meeting here. The society is considering a geographical survey of Michigan by the government, the state paying part of the expense.

Lansing—Two to five years in the Detroit house of correction was the sentence imposed upon Mrs. Gretchen Colt, former leader in Lansing club activities, and cashier of the Michigan Mortgage Investment company, after she had pleaded guilty to embezzling $25,000 from the investment concern.

Kalamazoo—International complications, including a direct appeal by British shipping interests to the American Department of State, and a controversy between Detroit and South Haven, have resulted from the arrival of the British freighter Errington Dunsford at South Haven with a cargo of English clay for the paper mills of the Kalamazoo valley.

Saginaw—The McClure company of Saginaw has orders for 600 sectional houses from the Miami, Fla., chamber of commerce. The houses are to be shipped, knocked down and will form the entire cargo of the steamship Raleigh, of the Saginaw, Bay City Steamship company. Negotiations are pending for 2,000 more houses to relieve conditions in the southern city.

Monroe—A delegation of residents of this city, and farmers living in Monroetown, south of here, called on the road commission recently and requested that Laplaisance road be improved to Otter Creek, a distance of five miles. The road runs along Bolles Harbor and Lake Erie and in the pioneer days was an Indian trail, used by the American forces in the war of 1812. The commission took the matter under advisement.

Lansing—Justice Joseph B. Moore, of the Michigan supreme court, has announced his intention to retire from the bench January 1, 1926, which will mark the completion of 30 years of service as a state supreme court judge. His term of office does not expire until January 1, 1930. Justice Moore will be 80 years old November 3 and will tender his resignation to Governor Alex J. Groesbeck about that time.

Cadillac—Fearing that many bushels of potatoes will be frosted because they cannot be dug on time, farmers in Wexford county have appealed to the business men to set a potato digging day to help with the work. With potatoes almost worth their weight in gold farmers feel that the prosperity of business depends to a large extent on the income from this year's potato crop, the most valuable since the war period.

Lansing—Scott Turner, recently appointed director of the Bureau of Mines, is the son of Mrs. Sophia W. Turner. After finishing a course in the Lansing high school he graduated from the engineering department of the University of Michigan and completed his training in the Michigan College of Mines at Houghton. As mining engineer he was connected with several big concerns. At one time he maintained an office in London.

Pontiac—That the Grand Trunk railroad will spend $1,400,000 in Pontiac next year in the replacement of its present round house and in the building of a machine shop on property it already owns in the western part of the city, was the announcement made here by C. Bowker, general manager of the central division of the Grand Trunk. Mr. Bowker said that increased facilities are needed here because of additions that have been made in automobile factories.

Port Huron—A decision of the Supreme Court gives C. R. Champion, president of the Algonac Savings bank, undisputed possession of one and one-half miles of river frontage on Dickinson's Island. The title of the property has been in question for a number of years. The late Sidney C. McLouth and others, of Marine City, opposed Mr. Champion's title. Judge Harvey Tappan in 1923 gave a decision in favor of Mr. Champion and the Supreme Court sustained the ruling. The property is valued at $100,000.

Ann Arbor—The cast for the twentieth annual Michigan Union opera, "Tambourine," has been announced by E. Mortimer Shuter, director. The cast numbers 10 men as follows: Russell Gohring, of Toledo; Daniel Warner, of Pontiac; Barre Hill, of Reading; Robert Henderson, of Ann Arbor; Stanley Lewy, and Gordon Ibbotsin, of Chicago; Otto Koch and Neal Nyland, of Grand Haven; Valentine Davies, of New York; Richard Lutes, of Duluth, and Walker Everett of Holland. Davies and Everett are the authors of the play.

Ludington—Fifteen thousand bushels of apples still are hanging on trees of members of the Mason County Fruit and Produce Exchange, according to Louis Hawley, manager. Of these, a large proportion will be lost from frost, it is said. The unharvested varieties include the best apples. One member of the association reports a loss of $2,000 in his orchard. The potato situation here is not alarming. While only 50 per cent of the potato crop in Mason County has been dug, the ground is not frozen and no damage has resulted.

C.A.DUNNING – Premier of Saskatchewan

The Living Proof
That Canada Makes Good

CANADA is the Land of Promise to-day. Canada promises prosperity, health and happiness to those who come prepared and determined to work. And, on her promises, Canada makes good. If you are strong and willing, you can make yourself independent in Canada, no matter if your cash capital is small.

Take the Case of C. A. Dunning

C. A. Dunning came to the Province of Saskatchewan in 1903. He was an immigrant boy from England, only seventeen years old, not over strong, no money, no knowledge of agriculture. But he wanted to work and he was looking for a job in Saskatchewan, as a start. He was determined to make good.

He got the job. It was on a new farm in Saskatchewan, thirty miles from the end of the railway. His pay was $10.00 per month and board. He lived in a sod shack and slept on the floor. To-day, Charles A Dunning is Premier of Saskatchewan, Chief Executive and Leader of the Provincial Government, and one of the most successful farmers in Canada.

A Great Country

Canada is a great, rich, varied country with the glorious power and vitality of youth. She is already the greatest exporter of wheat in the world, although only about one-fifth of her good farm land has as yet been brought under cultivation. Canada's wheat crop in 1924 was 262,000,000 bushels; in 1925 it is officially estimated at 391,000,000 bushels—an increase of 129,000,000 bushels. Other branches of farming—dairying, stock-raising, etc.—are increasing proportionately. Canada is increasingly rich in beef and dairy cattle, in horses and sheep, and in poultry. C. A. Dunning has shared in this development and prospered accordingly.

C. A. Dunning's story of success on the farm can be multiplied thousands of times in the different Provinces of Canada. Do YOU want to get ahead? Do YOU want to succeed and make a home for yourself on a low-cost farm where you can prosper and be independent? Come to Canada, the land of bigger crops and cheaper, richer land. Officers of the Canadian Government will help you, free of charge, to get suitably located; if desired they will supervise your start and give you all the help and counsel you may ask. Good land near the railroads sells at from $15.00 to $20.00 per acre. Free homesteads farther back. Full particulars will be found in the Canada Books issued by the Government. Send for one today. They're free. Use this coupon. Opportunity is knocking at your door.

The Modern Salvager

Electricity is an efficient salvager. Electric cranes equipped with electromagnets handle great quantities of metal junk at the nation's 3,000 scrap yards. The larger sections of scrap are chewed up in enormous electric shears or smashed with a tremendous electric "skull-cracker." Nearly half the manufactured steel of the country comes from reclaimed iron and steel junk.

WHY SHOULD ANYONE SUFFER WITH INDIGESTION OR ANY STOMACH MISERY?

If you want to fix up your dyspeptic, out of order stomach so that you can relish what you eat with not the least bit of after distress, do what tens of thousands of people have already done.

Getting rid of gas, bloating, belching, heaviness and that feeling of near suffocation isn't such a hard matter as you may think—You've been getting hold of the wrong medicine—that's all.

But better late than never—ask your druggist for a bottle of Dare's Mentha Pepsin—a real stomach medicine and a very pleasant one. For acute indigestion one or two doses is enough, but when the trouble is chronic, two or three bottles may be needed to put your disordered stomach in good healthy condition and make life worth living.

Making a start is the main thing, so why not get one bottle today with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't help you the purchase price will be returned.

In Shabbytown

IN Shabbytown they do not care if things look seedy everywhere. They have no pep, they've lost their grip, they simply sit around and yip, in envy's tones, of Glossyville, the shining village on the hill. Oh, Shabbytown is punk and gray, and it shows symptoms of decay, and strangers passing through remark, "It surely dates back to the Ark." "Clean Up and Paint Up" makes men frown along the streets of Shabbytown. A can of paint makes no appeal to this bum village, down at heel; the people think there is no sense in going to so much expense; so things are always going down, and getting worse in Shabbytown. It always gives my soul a thrill when I arrive in Glossyville. The town looks like a blooming bride; the people take a hearty pride in making things look clean and bright, and in their labors take delight. They're lavish with the helpful paint, selecting colors chaste or quaint, and decorating every shack; thus warding off decay's attack, and making all the buildings look like buildings read of in a book. And strangers, when they see the town, say, "Here we'll come and settle down, and raise us nineteen kids apiece, and live and die as slick as grease." This happy burg goes right ahead, while Shabbytown is prone and dead.

Cow Testing Association

Duncan Randall owns the high herd in butterfat production in Hillsdale No. 1. Cow Testing Association. His herd of eight grade Jerseys averaged 935 pounds milk and 42.05 pounds of butterfat.

The high cow in butterfat production is a grade Holstein owned by Henry VanDusen. She produced 59.5 pounds of butterfat and 1566 pounds of milk. The months high milk cow produced 1668 pounds. She is owned by Fred Lawrence of Hudson.

The average cow produced 536 pounds of milk and 21.7 pounds of butterfat.

Of the 273 cows on test, 70 were dry, 11 cows produced above 50 pounds of fat and 24 made 40-50 pounds of butterfat, 7 produced above 1250 pounds of milk, one cow produced 5c above feed cost in the month.

Seven separators were tested for efficiency and 5 tests were made of milk going to the condensary, All but 7 members have silos and all but 2 fed grain last month.

Another Cow Testing Association is being started in Hillsdale County. Six new members are needed to insure this Association for the County. Cow testing Associations are much less expensive than official testing and their value is being realized by the statistics which show that in August 1922 there were 18 in Michigan while in August 1925 there were 103 Associations in the state. In that period of time the number of cows tested increased from 3,690 to 25,268.

The high herd averages in Hillsdale No. 1. C. T. A. in butterfat production for October are owned by D. Randall, J. L. Beal, J. North Walkup Brothers, R. Snow, E. Hinkle, W. Case, M. Monroe, C. Ames, and L. Salisbury.

Three of the ten highest cows in butterfat production are owned by Jay North. Two are owned by J. L. Beal and the others by H. VanDusen, I. Maystead, R. Snow and B. Nachtrieb.

He Had Reasons

In a crowded bus a stout lady vainly endeavored to get her fare out of the pocket of her coat, which was tightly buttoned as a protection to pickpockets. After she had been trying without effect for some minutes, a gentleman on her right said:

"Please, allow me to pay your fare." The lady declined with some anger and renewed her attacks on the pocket. After some little time the gentleman again said:

"You really must let me pay your fare. You have already unbuttoned my suspenders three times, and I can't stand it any longer!"

Some Sense In This Nonsense

There was an old geezer and he had a lot of sense.
He started up a business
on a dollar and eighty cents.
The dollar went for stock and the eighty for an ad
That brought in three dollars
the first day, by dad!

Well, he bought more goods and a little more space,
And he played that system
with a smile on his face.
The customers flocked to his little two-by-four
And he soon had to rustle for a regular store.

Up on the square,
where all the people pass,
He grabbed up a corner
that was all plate glass.
He fixed up his windows with the best that he had,
And he told all about it in the half-page ad.

He soon had them coming,
but he never, never quit;
And he wouldn't cut down
on his ads one bit,
And has kept things humping
in the town ever since,
And everyone is calling him
"The Merchant Prince."

New York Central Drives Against Accidents

The New York Central lines are putting a special train over the road called the "safety special" It is now making a tour of the lines east of Buffalo as an intensive drive to reduce accidents on the road by means of example to the men.

Since the company began their educational campaign for safety, they have been much gratified to find a decrease in the number of accidents on the road.

The "Safety Special" left Grand Central Terminal, New York, at 10:30 a. m., October 21, after brief but impressive ceremonies in the presence of a large number of officers and other prominent men.

Vice President Ira Place, General Safety Agent, Chas. Hill and Barron Collier gave addresses and Rev. Dr. Sockman, pastor of the Madison Avenue Methodist church invoked the Divine blessing on the work of the "Safety Special" The New York Police band furnished music for the occasion.

This train consists of a private car, a club car and a coach of the latest model which is used as a meeting place when the weather is sour. Deacon's Johnson's famous colored quartet accompanies the safety special to put "pep" into programs.

It will require three weeks for this train to cover the lines east of Buffalo. At each meeting the audience will pay homage to the dead employees who lost their lives on duty, by standing with bowed uncovered heads for a moment. This serves as a reminder to employees and the public of the importance of "safety first."

It is more than probable that a small number only of the patrons of the New York Central lines bere realize what it costs the company to put across such special work for the upbuilding of a morale among its help, and though the returns in dollars and cents are not visible, yet the officials feel that with all the enormous dividends which the road has piled up during a decade from the patronage of the people of these middle western states it would not be unseemly if the lines should expend a few thousands to protect the lives of its passengers and the property of shippers.

Detroit, which is reputed to be one of the most lusty young growing infants of the American states has doubled its population each ten years for several moons. It is claimed the population to-day is 1,242,044 souls and at the present rate of growth, by 1930 the next census will show more than two million in the metropolis of Michigan. The city of straits apparently has got the better of Chicago and some other cities in the country in rapidity of growth. The Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroad Systems, main links between the east and west, are awakening to the possibilities and are now planning a tremendous terminal on the river front somewhere near the site of the old 3rd Street Michigan Central depot. This will admit of ocean going steamers docking near the tracks and unloading cargoes from Europe right into the train sheds, as is being done in New York, Boston and Seattle. It is significant that an International steamship line has signed up for 1926 to start ten steamers running direct from Detroit to European ports. The day is almost here! We never expected to see it, but next summer Detroit is to become an Atlantic Ocean port with all the chances of becoming one of the world's maritime cities. All the glowing panorama in colors and divers' tongues of the Orient will be at our gates. Michigan history is due for a change; the geogrbphy of thirty years hence is going to say that Michigan is the great summer resort state of the Union and contains Detroit the largest port on the Great Lakes, a city that enjoys the largest maritime trade known with European ports. The other day a tramp steamer loaded with paper pulp docked at a Lake Michigan port; it came from Norway.

Off Seasons

Never in the history of this state has the climate at this particular time of year been so confounded peculiar as this fall. We note many funny things in regard to the weather. Instead of receiving a gradual tightening up of the temperature we have suddenly passed as it were from summer climate into freezing weather over night.

Ten years ago we used to notice along in September the grass and vegetation dried up and became totally dead. There was nary a live spear of grass or a leaf worthy of mention by the last of October but this season behold! The November month brings radically different conditions than it used to do. The grass is as green as it ordinarily should be in June, the maple foliage did not ripen as it should and turn golden yellow along by the middle of October but remained green as in summer up to the heavy freeze. Now as much as a month later than common the yellow leaves are sticking like a burr on the maples. It is true soft maples shed their clothing at the first days of October but they didn't act natural. In the gardens potatoes are lying in the ground because the precipitation of rainfall has interfered with drying them also apparently has refused to ripen them properly. Most of the tubers are green and watery. The plums and late small fruits this season refused to ripen properly and many trees of excellent plums simply stood inanimate until the fruit dried up and instead of developing a rich taste remained sour as vinegar and unfit for use. What is the matter with the season in Michigan? Nobody knows but the deduction is that some of the machinery of the planets has slipped a cog and thrown the seasons gears out of time. Second crops of raspberries (sour and flavorless) are reported all over the country. Dandelions and some other small flowers were yet being picked in out of-the-way places where the cold blast did not reach. The robins and other summer bird are still with us. Very few wild geese and crows or black birds have congregated in the woodlands for the southern pilgrimage this fall. In fact we have not seen a single flock of geese that we remember of. Where are all these flying creatures?

Champion Wrestler Tells What to Eat

Johnny Meyers.

Johnny Meyers, middleweight wrestling champion of the world, is strongly in favor of the use of scientifically prepared foods. He prefers to know that the food he is eating is pure and wholesome rather than to take a chance with any kind of food poisoning by eating food from an unknown source. In a recent interview on the eve of his match with Lou Talaber, from whom he won his crown, he said: "I expect to win the crown from Talaber. He is a fine wrestler and uses more science than any man of the mat today. However, I feel sure that my superior physical condition will prevail and that I will emerge victorious and the champion of my division. Diet is a very important part of my program in training for a match. The system that I use is really very simple, involving only good judgment and caution in the selection of food. I prefer to eat scientifically prepared foods whenever possible and I never eat anything to which is attached the slightest doubt of its purity. I eat a great deal of canned foods because I am sure that they are pure and will have no ill effects on my digestive system. Take just as an example of what food can do for the body—milk. It is the greatest of body builders and a very important part of any man's diet. But is sometimes impure or contaminated and may be the source of illness if used Because of this fact, I use evaporated milk entirely and find it very satisfactory. I know that it is pure and that I will not suffer from its use. I know that it is a great body builder because the concentration of it gives it such food value. I know that it is easily digested, more so than market milk, in fact, because I drink it before going to bed and feel no effects of it in the morning. This is usually hard to do with ordinary market milk. This plan, in substance, is the same one that I use regarding other foods. If there is any chance or suspicion of impurity or low food value, I use something else.

"And if a man is so situated that it is impossible for him to get the proper amount of exercise, he must be doubly cautious not to partake of any but the purest food. On the whole, if a man eats with wisdom and observes the fundamental rules for good health, there is no reason why he should ever have a sick or uncomfortable day."

Master of Grange Likes Electricity

Permanent good is sure to come of the present co-operative investigations of the use of electricity on the farm, according to L. T. Taber, master of the National Grange. Mr. Taber, in an interview just published, says:

"A generation ago it would have been supposed that electrical development and the use of electrical energy was of little concern to the farmer; that those in cities and towns were more vitally interested in this mighty and mysterious power than those who till the soil.

"The last decade has seen a transformation along the lines of the use of electricity in farm homes and farm work. The farm electrical plant has been most valuable. The farmer in many sections will be vitally concerned in the development of high tension power lines and proper transmission of electrical current for rural uses.

"It is probable that we are yet in infancy in the use of electricity. This is obviously true as applied to agriculture. Any organization that directs its attention toward a better understanding of the relation of electricity to rural life will perform an invaluable service."

Health and Home

ICED DRINKS IN THE SUMMER

On a warm and sultry summer day, there is nothing more refreshing to the mind and to the body than an iced drink. Of course, when such drinks are being used, moderation should be practiced, because if taken in excess or too rapidly, they are liable to be injurious to the stomach. However, when taken in a sensible manner, they are refreshing and beneficial to the fatigued. In the manufacture of these drinks, care should be taken to avoid any combination that may be indigestible or hard to assimilate. The drink should be consumed in a slow and leisurely manner.

The greatest danger present in the use of iced drinks is the one that involves the use of ingredients that are possibly impure or contaminated in any way. This is very liable to happen if the juices that are used are allowed to stand until they become soured and unfit for use, or if the milk or other ingredient used is not strictly fresh. The predisposition of milk to spoil quickly at summer temperatures makes it ofttimes necessary to use evaporated milk, which after all is just pure fresh milk with more than half the water taken away. It is sterile and, therefore, always safe. For use in iced drinks, it is ideal.

Following are several formulas used in the manufacture of iced beverages. If these formulas are followed religiously, the results will be found to be very satisfactory.

Chocolate Malted Milk.

1 cup evaporated milk	3 teaspoonfuls cocoa
1 cup water	2 teaspoonfuls malted milk

Mix cocoa with water until syrup is obtained. Put all ingredients in Mason jar and shake thoroughly and serve with chipped ice.

Milk Punch.

1 cup evaporated milk	2 tbsp. orange juice
Sugar to suit taste	½ cup water
	Small stick cinnamon
1 cup tea
2 tbsp. lemon juice	½ cup fruit juice (currant or berry preferred)

Boil slowly the cinnamon, a lemon rind and orange rind in water for ten minutes. Strain and when cool add the other ingredients. Place in a Mason fruit jar and shake well. Serve in tall glasses with chopped ice.

Egg Nog.

1 egg	1½ tbsp. powdered sugar
Pinch salt
½ cup cold evaporated milk	2 tbsp. fruit juice
	Nutmeg gratings
½ cup ice water

Add salt to egg white and beat to a stiff froth. Add the sugar, the well beaten yolk of the egg and the fruit juice and nutmeg. Fill glass with milk and cold water. Sprinkle top with chopped nuts.

CALLS IT OBLIGATION

Young Says Electrical Industry Must Solve Rural Problem as Matter of Duty.

Farm electrification is not a business opening as much as it is a social obligation, in the opinion of Owen D. Young, a farm owner and with a farm boyhood behind him, now chairman of the board of directors of the General Electric Company. The obligation, in Mr. Young's opinion, rests with the electrical industry.

In an interview which Mr. Young has just granted to the New York Times, he says: "It is the electrical industry's job to make its contribution to adequacy and economy in farm production. Otherwise, the electrical industry will be found wanting. And it must accept a problem of this magnitude and character as presenting a duty rather than a new market.

"The question is, how can a business of this size and importance be developed in such a way that the electrical industry can sell its service for what the purchasers can afford to pay? Anybody can produce goods at such a price that no one can afford to buy them. Business demands that the price shall be within reach of the potential customer, and that there shall be a fair return to the producer.

A Job to Be Worked Out

"It is incumbent upon the manufacturing branch of the electrical industry to meet this problem. It must make and develop the necessary machinery. It can be done. The manufacturing branch supplied the textile field, it provided the machinery for the mine and the railroad, for the steel mill and the bakery.

"We can make farming attractive, comfortable and profitable. Electricity can lighten farm labors and increase farm profits. It will check the exodus of the better type of citizens from the farm. It will make the farmhouse the most delightful home we have in this country."

Mr. Young added that it was hardly to be expected that the isolated electric light and power company, having no inter-connection of power lines with any other utility company, could go out and serve the farmer at a distinct loss. But the opportunity came, he pointed out, when fifteen or twenty such isolated utilities were tied together into a single system with one large power plant, and a system of distribution lines, thereby accomplishing economies which each of the single isolated plants could not work out.

Electricity Their Steed

Part of the world, at least, moves by electricity. The passengers carried in one year by the electric railways of just one state—Ohio—would make a line of people, shoulder to shoulder, that would stretch five times around the earth.

MORTGAGE SALE

Defaulthaving been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March. A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savings Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty four hundred dollars ($2,400.00)and of interest thereon, amountingto two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610) and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy ths amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage providsd. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N, Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 169 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 26 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

BORN TAILORS GUILD

The Story of Wool

WHEN your tailor draws out a bolt of cloth for your consideration you feel the material between your fingers in a manner which you hope is convincing and stamps you as a real judge, but do you really know how to tell pure wool from the inferior and cotton-mixed goods?

Considering that no less than 640 different grades of wool are recognized by American dealers today, you need not feel chagrined, if you don't. These various grades are determined by the type of the sheep, whether bred chiefly for its fleece or for mutton, with the fleece as a by-product. The climate has a great deal to do with the quality of the fleece, a raw climate promoting especially heavy growth.

Fleece is sorted also according to the parts of the sheep from which it is clipped, the shoulders and sides giving the best quality. Then, there is pulled wool, made from fleece taken from the slaughtered animal, and shoddy, which is old cloth with all the chemicals and foreign matter removed and the wool fibers reweven. Virgin wool is that which has never been woven before; strictly speaking, the wool of the lamb the first time it is sheared, but the term is often used to denote wool.

From this it will be seen that a salesman may truthfully represent a piece of goods as being "all wool" without its being the best quality. Price is a fairly good gauge to the quality of wool. You cannot expect to buy the finest quality of wool without paying the price it commands.

The Day Dedicated To Peace

President Coolidge has, with general approval, called Armistice Day "the day dedicated to peace." In his Armistice Day letter last year addressed to the National Commander of the American Legion, while giving full justice to the noble dead, the President placed his emphasis, as Lincoln did in the great Gettysburg address, on the cause for which the sacrifice was made:

"The growth of sentiment for the outlawry of war from this earth has been an impressive fact of recent time. Men and women everywhere have been giving their best thought to bring this end into full realization. We shall make our greatest contribution to human welfare if we shall on this international anniversary of peace restored turn our thoughts and endeavors to the ideal of peace perpetuated, assured, and established as a universal benison."

To perpetuate, assure, and establish the ideal of peace is essentially a practical task to be achieved by proven and well-established methods; but we in our time are just beginning to realize that it is the ideal that is practical and that it is spiritual forces that are the mighty forces.

How does a New England village prevent war? For the settlement of its disputes it has a court and a town meeting. Both succeed because they are supported by an ever-active public opinion grounded in good will. One or two policemen express the public opinion in an emergency.

How does our nation prevent war between the states? Through a court and a representative meeting, both supported by public opinion grounded in good will and there are potential policemen for the enforcement of the national will upon a state, although it is inconceivable that ever again the states would resort to war.

How will the world prevent war? There is no guesswork in the answer. That which has worked in villages, states and in every nation under the sun will work between the nations. There must be a world court to settle the world's legal disputes. There must be a representative meeting of the world to settle the rest. Neither will work effectively until public opinion has been built adequate to support these institutions as the accepted method of settling disputes. Good will must be taught and forced to hate propaganda. Finally the nations will cling to a measure of armed force until they are sure that security has been achieved the other way.

The entry of the United States into the World Court with the Hughes-Coolidge reservations—and no others—has the endorsement of practically the entire peace sentiment of the nation. December 17 is the day when the Senate will begin consideration of this long delayed measure. It should be urged earnestly by all Christian men and women as the first step towards national security for all on a permanent foundation.

The President commends the recent rapid growth of sentiment for the outlawry of war. This has emphatically not come to itself. It has come through the preaching of the outlawry of war in season and out of season by men and women of vision and conviction. The time is ripe for the fulfilment of the ancient prophecies of Micah and Isaiah that "swords shall be beaten into ploughshares." The Christian Church must no longer undermine the work of its missionaries by betrayal of the ideals of the Prince of Peace. In every community Christian men and women must talk, talk, talk peace and the way to peace, talk with facts as hard as bullets, talk with the vision of prophets. This is a spiritual universe and machinery is a dead thing until the living force of public opinion flows through the machinery to give it life and power.

Good will must be the solid rock on which our machinery is established. We have been teaching hate in the schools of the world. The educators of forty nations met this summer at Edinburgh to consider how the schools may promote understanding and friendship in the place of hate. The churches in the war too frequently preached hate. That evil legacy still curses us. Neither a nation nor a world can stand upon so unstable a foundation.

When Jesus predicted that Jerusalem would fall and not one stone be left upon another in it, he did not see this written in the sky. He saw it written in the unrighteousness, oppression and hatred of the men about him.

He was like the architect who sees that too much sand is going into a building and not enough cement, and cries out that the building, however fair its exterior, cannot stand. So Jesus cried regarding the Jerusalem of his day: "It cannot stand! There is too much sand in it and not enough cement!"

What would he say today? Hatred between races! Hatred between nations! Hatred between classes! Hatred between religions! Hatred even within the same religious groups! On such a foundation nothing can stand. He would say, "There is too much sand here. There is not enough cement!"

Christians that are real Christians are cement. When it rocks they hold the structure together by their cohesive powers. We need in every church, in every community, in every nation, good cement. That there shall be more of such cement is our hope of salvation.—The Adult Bible Class Magazine.

The Phonograph And Its History

That wonderful little device present today in practically every home in the broad land came into being many years ago in the work shop of Thomas Edison at East Orange, New Jersey in a quiet way. Edison had already gained a wonderful notoriety with his fertile brain and was working upon loud speaking telephones when the first inkling of a phonograph occurred to him. He had been using a diaphragm for sound and he noted the vibrations produced by the sounds which is sufficient to cause considerable jarring. He had constructed a set of paper dolls and was edified to watch them dance on the diaphragm. After a while it came to him that if this diaphragm was set in motion by the sounds of the human voice there was no reason why it would not when set in motion again give up its voice in the same manner. He thought and thought and the more he thought the more he believed on the idea. So one day he drew a picture of the machine he wanted and handed it to his foreman with instructions to make one. It was simply a roller covered with tin foil and a needle attached to a very sensitive diaphragm. The workman asked Mr. Edison what he intended to do with such a strange contraption and Mr. Edison jokingly remarked he was going to manufacture a machine which would "talk." The inconsistency of such a statement tickled the employees of the plant immensely, and all day they laughed and ridiculed the remark.

After a time the roller was finished and brought to Mr. Edison. He turned the crank and spoke "Mary's Little Lamb" into the horn then he turned again and to his surprise "Mary's Lamb" came out again in his own words. The news leaked out at once and Edison took the device under his arm and went over to the office of the Scientific American where he gave an exhibition and everybody went crazy about it.

While Edison was exhibiting his new invention in a private residence he received a call from President Hayes to come with it to the White House and there in the presence of the President and Cabinet members the first crude phonograph was shown up. For ten years after this the scheme was apparently dead as Mr. Edison could think of no particular use for the toy. But erelong it occurred to him amusement might be gained and results have proved his guess correct, as at present they claim 10,000,000 phonographs are in use in the United States to say nothing of the foreign countries. Just how much Mr. Edison's royalties amount to on this invention it is not possible to estimate but no doubt a tidy sum.

Farm Women Plan Big State Program

A more complete and satisfactory life in thousands of Michigan rural homes is expected to result from plans made at a big meeting of state home demonstration leaders, held at the M. S. C. on Friday, October 30.

There were 500 women in conference at the meeting, representing the local leadership of many counties of the state. These women under the general direction of the home economics specialists on the college extension staff, are responsible for the homemakers extension work in the state.

Speakers of both state and national prominence addressed the assembled delegates, pointing out the importance of the "better homes" work being done and laying plans for future programs in the state. Miss Florence Ward, U. S. department of agriculture, Washington; Miss Fannie Buchanan, music specialist from Camden, N. J.; Mrs. Dora Stockman, member of the state board of agriculture; R. J. Baldwin, director of Michigan extension work; and Dean R. S. Shaw, of the agricultural division at the M. S. C., were leading speakers. Mrs. Louise H. Campbell, state leader of home demonstration work under the college extension division, presided.

Counties represented by especially large delegations were: Kent Livingston, Genesee, Monroe, Wayne, Oakland, Lenawee, Eaton Jackson, Allegan and Kalamazoo.

More complete coverage of the state with the educational work in homemaking of Michigan, is expected to follow the meeting. It was the first annual "rally day" for the home economics leaders.

Hens Break State Production Marks

Both pen and individual records for the International egg laying contests held each year at the M. S. C. were broken here this week at the conclusion of the 1924 25 competition.

A pen of white leghorns, entered by the Royal Hatchery, Zeeland, Michigan, finished first in the year's egg marathon, nosing out Rhode Island reds from the Huntington, Long Island, by 27 eggs. The Royal Hatchery entry totaled 2,412 eggs for the year, while the Long Island candidates stopped with a total of 2,385.

Other high pens included: St. Johns Poultry Farm, Oronogo, Mo. third; John P. Gasson, Versailles, Ohio, fourth; the Bangor, Michigan, high school, fifth; and Geo. B. Ferris, Grand Rapids, sixth.

One hundred pens of ten birds each were entered in the contest, which started on Nov. 1, 1924 and finished last week. The entries came from 17 different states and Canadian provinces, and included eight different breeds.

All individual records for Michigan were broken when a white leghorn entered by Seidel and Buhren of Toledo, Ohio finished the contest with 308 eggs for the year, a figure approaching the world's production record. Another white leghorn, from the pen of Geo. B. Ferris, of Grand Rapids, was second with 293 eggs. A Rhode Island red from the pen of John Parks, Coopersville, Michigan, and a leghorn from the Royal Hatchery pen were tied for third at 286.

The fourth international contest started at the college on Sunday, Nov. 1. It will run for one year.

The amount of wild game such as rabbits, pheasants, etc., gathered in since the law opened in Michigan, has not proved so large as was anticipated previously, on account of the antagonism of the farmers, but enough has been taken to justify the statement that ten years hence there won't be as much as one chipmunk roaming the woods.

THE BANKER-EDUCATOR PLAN TO PROMOTE BETTER AGRICULTURE

By D. H. OTIS,

Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

D. H. Otis

Whenever bankers desire to promote actively agricultural improvement in their communities, the state agricultural colleges stand ready to show them the way and to give expert assistance. The purpose of this article is to illustrate the way in which the colleges are getting in contact with the banks, and the kind of assistance they render.

As soon as the college has a list of the banks in the state desiring to adopt plans to aid agriculture as indicated by project blanks sent out to all the banks in the state, by the State Bankers Association Agricultural Committee, it gives practical suggestions to each banker on the list as to what he can do to stimulate, organize, and conduct the work in the particular project he has selected. Then either a department specialist from the college or the county agent gets in personal touch with the banker to assist him in an advisory capacity.

College Provides Expert Advisers

In counties with no county agent a list of the banks desiring to carry on a project is sent to a specialist at the state college, according to the project listed. For instance, the banks desiring to carry on the farm accounts project are assigned to the farm management specialist, those desiring to carry on the legume project to the agronomy specialist, those interested in boys' and girls' club work to the junior extension specialist, and so forth.

In counties that do have a county agent a list of the banks and the projects in which each is interested is sent to him with a request that he get in touch with the bankers and help them in regard to the various projects.

The next step by the college is to write to each banker on the list sending him project outlines and informing him that the county agent or a specialist from the college will get in touch with him. If there is no agent in the county this letter reads as follows:

Union State Bank,
Bankville.

Gentlemen—You will find enclosed a brief outline of the farm accounts project in which you have indicated your interest to your State Agricultural Committee and to the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association.

I am sure that the specialist from the agricultural college will be pleased to assist you in carrying out the suggestions indicated. We have asked him to get in touch with you.

Director, Agricultural Extension.

The letter to bankers in counties that do have a county agent informs them that he will get in touch with them.

Suggests Things the Banker Can Do

The project outlines sent to each banker give specific suggestions as to the things he can do to organize the work in his project, and the part he can take in carrying out the work. The more simple and concrete these suggestions are the more valuable they are to the banker. Following are samples of such project outlines:

Farm Accounts Project

1. Banker can select group of farmers who can and should undertake the work of farm accounts.
2. Arrange with county agent or specialist from agricultural college for first meeting of the group and select an account book.
3. Assist individuals at their request with information relative to entering accounts and other data properly.
4. Act as or select leader for the group.
5. Assist in checking inventories as a means of securing individual financial statement at close of the year.

Boys' and Girls' Club Work

1. The banker can arrange with the county agent or the specialist of the agricultural college for organizing a club.
2. Plan to present various types of club work at the next meeting and perfect the organization of a local club.
3. Banker may act as local leader of the club.
4. Cooperate with county agent or specialist in annual "Achievement Day."
5. Banker may offer prizes for club work or otherwise assist in financing same.

Legume Project

1. The banker can get information from county agent or specialist from the agricultural college on the value of alfalfa, soy bean, or sweet clover crops to farmers of the community.
2. Arrange for meeting of interested farmers with county agent or specialist.
3. At this meeting county agents, specialists, or others will discuss:
   (a) Value of crop.
   (b) Seed supply and varieties.
   (c) Methods of handling the crop.
   (d) Use and disposition of crop.
4. Plan with county agent or specialist meetings and demonstrations on plots or fields.
5. Secure exhibits for community or county fair.

Cow Testing Associations

1. The banker can arrange with county agent or specialist from agricultural college for meeting of interested group of farmers in the community for the purpose of organizing a cow testing association.
2. Banker may act as leader, and with county agent or specialist plan to visit prospective farmers who may join the association.
3. Organize for work and assist in securing testing equipment and other materials whenever necessary.
4. Call meetings periodically to discuss association business and hold picnics or tours.
5. Banker with county agent or specialist may arrange for C. T. A. booth at community or county fair giving testing demonstrations and explaining work of association.

This constitutes the preliminary work by the college which paves the way for constructive work by the bankers in banker-farmer projects.

Frederic Massas, the Spanish portrait painter, said in Los Angeles:

"People told me your young movie stars weren't cultured."

Mr. Massas chuckled and went on in his excellent English:

"I dined at the Montmartre with a beautiful movie star the other night, and we plunged into literature straight off. She began to crack up Arlen, but I interrupted her.

"'I suppose you're pretty well acquainted with Shakespeare?' I said.

"She laughed and flicked a bread pellet at me.

"'No, you don't!' she said. 'You can't string me! Shakespeare's dead.'"

—25—

"All Asia Minor is more or less Persian," said Norheys, "and, anyway, I don't want to take an action against her. I don't believe I could even if I wanted to, on account of having got married myself before she did. So that's that; and there's no use worrying."

Troyte was talking fast to someone in the foreign office.

"There'll be the devil of a fuss," said Norheys, "if Uncle Ned stirs up all those ambassadors and people. And they won't like it. Nobody would like it. I say, Uncle Ned!"

Troyte, working steadily through Cable's telegrams, waved an impatient hand at Norheys.

"It's all very fine," said Norheys to me. "Uncle Ned may say what he likes, but they won't like it. No ambassador would like being pulled out of his bed at this hour of the night and set on to chase a princess up and down the Himalaya mountains, as if she was a goat or a chamois or something of that kind. And what I always say is: If nobody wants a thing done, why do it? There are lots of unpleasant things every fellow has to do. Why chip in with unnecessary ones and make everyone uncomfortable?"

"Notify the legations at Sophia," said Troyte into the telephone, "and Prague and Bukarest, and Warsaw, and Budapest, and Belgrade—"

"Just listen to him," said Norheys. "Jolly glad I didn't go into the diplomatic service. They wanted me to. You remember that, Uncle Bill? But I was firm about that. 'Not my line at all,' I said. 'Hate complications and always did.' Now I see I was quite right. I simply couldn't stand being set on to persecute some poor girl who'd run off with the chauffeur. And I expect that's what's happened. Looks like it anyhow. What I always say is: If a girl wants to marry a chauffeur, let her, and be jolly thankful it's no worse."

Cable had edged over to the table at which Troyte was sitting at the telephone.

"Tell them," he said, "to engage places for us in the Warsaw express. We must go tomorrow."

"I suppose we must," said Troyte with a sigh.

"Of course we must," said Cable. "Heaven knows what muddle there'll be if we're not there. It's a complicated business and you and I are the only two people who understand the whole of it. Tell them to book two sleepers for us."

"I say," said Norheys. "I say, Uncle Ned, are you really going off to this what-you-call-'em place to see the princess?"

Troyte took no notice of this, so I answered for him.

"He must," I said. "As minister for Balkan affairs, it's his duty to have his hand on the helm when the ship is in the rapids."

Norheys turned to his wife, who had been sitting quietly and very comfortably where Troyte left her.

"I say, Vi, old thing, what about it?"

She understood him at once, though I confess that I did not.

"I should simply love it," she said, "and you promised that we should have a honeymoon."

"Righto," said Norheys. "I say, Uncle Ned, tell him to book four sleepers, will you. Vi and I are going to trot along with you."

Troyte very nearly dropped the receiver in his astonishment. I was a little startled myself. The very last place a man ought to take his wife for a honeymoon is into the middle of a Balkan war, and that, if I could trust Troyte's judgment, was just what there was going to be.

"You can't go with us," said Troyte.

"I'm d—d if you do," said Cable.

"You ought to be pleased to have us," said Norheys. "We'd cheer you up and all that when you're feeling a bit down and out."

"You've done mischief enough already," said Cable. "You sha'n't go near Lystria if I can stop you."

"I don't suppose you can stop us," said Norheys. "I say, Uncle Ned, do book those sleepers. I promised Vi that she should see the black princess, and she wants to, don't you, Vi?"

"I should like to see Lystria," she said.

"So there you are, Uncle Ned," said Norheys. "You can't go back on Vi when she comes rushing home all the way from Paris just to tell you that she'd married me. Very few girls would have done that."

"I protest strongly—" said Cable.

"That's no use," said Norheys. "If Uncle Ned won't book the sleepers for us we'll have to go without them. I've got my passport all right. You gave it to me yourself, Uncle Ned, and I'll manage to slip Viola through somehow. You generally can, you know, if you tip the right man. Besides, I might come in useful. You never know. That princess has run off with the chauffeur and the Lystrians may not want him for a king. It's a bit awkward for them. A fellow who's touching his hat to you one day and you have to take yours off to him the next day. Nobody likes to be let in for that sort of thing. Well, you know, if the worst comes to the worst and they still want a king, I'll be there."

Cable, who had been drumming impatiently with his fingers on the table, moved over suddenly and looked at Norheys. I do not know whether he actually thought that it might still be possible to make Norheys king of Lystria. If the thing were possible, it would certainly be a way out of a nasty situation. Even the Balkan war might be averted.

"I always said," said Norheys, "that I'd no objection to being a king, so long as I didn't have to marry that princess. Well, that part of the program is off now. But if the Lystrians don't care for the chauffeur, why not pop me and Viola on to a couple of thrones? Not that we want to hoof out the princess. We don't. Only just if she happens to have done herself in by skipping off with the chauffeur. And that's the sort of thing it takes a girl a long time to get over—specially if she happens to be a princess—why, in that case what I say is: Why not us?"

Cable is an adventurer with no sense of responsibility and little regard for convention. He may have seriously contemplated financing another revolution in Lystria and setting up Norheys as a king at the end of it. But Troyte is a serious statesman. He could not possibly have regarded Norheys' plan as worthy of consideration. Nevertheless, he agreed to take the young couple to Lystria. It was Viola who persuaded him.

She left her seat, went over to him in the prettiest possible manner, put one arm round his neck and set her cheek quite close to his. "Do take us," she said. "We want to go most awfully, and I ought to have a honeymoon, oughtn't I?"

Troyte picked up the telephone receiver again.

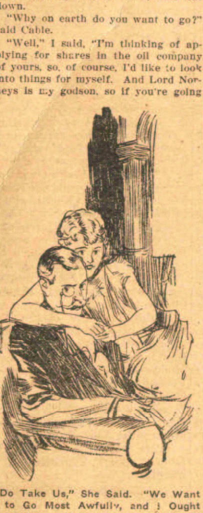
"Hullo!" he said. "Yes, Foreign office. Lord Edmund Troyte speaking again. Did I say two sleepers on the Warsaw express? Well, four will be wanted. Engage four."

"Say five," I said; "I'd rather like to go, too."

Troyte took no notice of me. He laid down the receiver, crossed the room holding Viola's hand, and sat down.

"Why on earth do you want to go?" said Cable.

"Well," I said, "I'm thinking of applying for shares in the oil company of yours, so, of course, I'd like to look into things for myself. And Lord Norheys is my godson, so if you're going to make him a king, I ought to be there to help to crown him. Godparents have duties as well as rights. And, besides, I want to find out who that princess has run away with. I believe myself that my sister Emily's curate has got her, and that Janet Church has gone along with them to be bridesmaid."



"Do Take Us," She Said. "We Want to Go Most Awfully, and I Ought to Have a Honeymoon, Oughtn't I?"

I picked up the telephone receiver, and asked for the Foreign office. Cable growled. Troyte lit a cigarette and poured himself out a glass of brandy. Norheys clapped me on the back.

"Good old Uncle Bill!" he said. "I always knew you were a sport. Tell us all about that curate, won't you?"

"That the Foreign office?" I shouted down the telephone. "Yes. I'm speaking for Lord Edmund Troyte. Please engage five sleepers in the Warsaw express tomorrow instead of four. If they haven't that number vacant tell them to put on another coach. Yes. A whole coach. Never mind about the expense. Mr. Cable will settle that whatever it is."

CHAPTER XIX

I did not enjoy the first part of the journey to Lystria, for I was left almost entirely alone. That is always disagreeable to me, for I am a man of sociable disposition with a very strongly formed habit of conversation. I could not blame Norheys and his wife for deserting us. They were on a honeymoon and it was natural enough that they should shut themselves up together in their own compartment. I did not see them, except at meals in the restaurant car. Troyte and Cable ignored me. Cable resented my being with the party at all and kept Troyte to himself in another compartment on pretense of talking business. They could not talk business in any useful way because they did not know what had happened in Lystria. All they could do was to speculate, and I might have been useful to them there. In fact, my guess about Emily's curate was the only good guess any of them made.

Casimir, Count Istvan, who lives somewhere in that neighborhood, got into the train at Charlottenberg station, just outside Berlin. King Wladislaws joined us at the Friedrichstrasse station farther on. There is not enough room for four people to be comfortable in a wagon-lit's compartment, so Cable, who does not care what he spends, engaged an ordinary first-class compartment farther down the train. There the four, Troyte, Cable, Casimir and the king, settled down. I was not invited to join the party.

Neither the king nor Casimir could cross the frontier into Megalia, but they were willing to go as far as Breslau and tell all they knew about what had happened. Unfortunately, they did not know very much.

Casimir explained that he had all along believed Tommy to be the Lord Norheys. He had regarded the "Reverend Thomas A. Norreys'" passport as a clever trick intended to deceive Von Steinveldt and the Germans while conveying to him the news that Lord Norheys had arrived in Berlin. That would have been an ingenious plan, much more ingenious than anything Troyte or Cable had thought of. It did make Casimir certain that Lord Norheys had arrived. It would, apparently, have deceived Von Steinveldt and his police if their suspicions had not been awakened by what happened in the Mascotte the night after Tommy's arrival. Von Steinveldt heard all about that from one of his spy waiters.

The king also believed that Tommy was Lord Norheys; but he understood the passport differently. His view was that Norheys pretended to be a curate in order to clear himself of the charge of being entangled with Miss Temple. Here he expressed the greatest desire to see Viola, and it was with the utmost difficulty that Troyte kept him from wandering along the train to look for Norheys' compartment. He said that he had particularly admired the way in which Lord Norheys had kept up his pretense even acting the part of a curate when there was no real need for it.

Then came the question of who Rev Thomas A. Norreys really was. The king did not know. Nor did Casimir. Casimir could tell exactly what was on the passport, and the king repeated all that Tommy had said about himself. But that got them no further. They had to send for me. Cable was unwilling to do so; but Troyte insisted. Cable remembered that I had said something about a curate.

When I heard the story told by the king and Casimir, I saw at once that my guess was very likely to be right.

"My sister Emily lost a curate early last week," I said. "He was last heard of at the Adlon hotel in Berlin where he stayed two nights and then disappeared. The dates—"

We discussed the dates and they fitted in with each other very well. I could not help looking at Cable with an expression of satisfaction. The man had been abominably rude to me since we left London and had snubbed me pitilessly. I did not actually say "I told you so." But I looked as if I thought it.

"Anyhow," said Cable, "no curate would dare to marry the princess."

Like many successful business men, Cable underestimates the courage and ability of the clergy. In all probability he never speaks to a clergyman at all and only sees one once in two years or so clad in a surplice, at some wedding or funeral which he's obliged to attend. A curate in a surplice looks innocent and mild, not at all the kind of a man who would seize a vacant European throne. The same curate on the golf links is a very different person. Besides, Tommy was an exceptional curate. I told them what Emily and Canon Pyke had said about him.

Facts About Compass

The angle between the true north and the magnetic north is called the "magnetic variation," and has to be allowed for in navigation. Thus, when the song say "True as the compass to the star," it is talking nonsense because, although the star is fixed, the compass is not. Nevertheless, its variations are well known, so that the compass remains the seaman's most valuable possession.

Wampum Accepted as Currency by Indians

The ruins of an early wampum mint with its ingenious machinery and many examples of its coinage have been unearthed in Bergen county, New Jersey, within a few miles of New York, Francis Collins writes in the New York Herald and Tribune. From the earliest days the white settlers manufactured Indian money, but in the New Jersey mint they introduced methods of high finance with surprising effects upon the native currency.

Labor-saving machinery was operated by water power for turning out wampum wholesale. It was freely accepted by the Indians throughout the country, who refused to use the counterfeit wampum, however cleverly imitated with glass or composition. One of the proprietors of the old wampum mint claimed that the first John Jacob Astor laid the foundation of his great fortune by buying this wampum and exchanging it with the Indians for furs.

Bird's Color Varies

Canaries were first brought to Europe in the early part of the Sixteenth century. In its wild state the canary is green, or greenish yellow tinged with brown. The wild birds have louder and clearer notes than the tame varieties.

Conquer Constipation with Yeast Foam!

For constipation try this: drop a cake of Yeast Foam in a glass of water; let stand for five minutes; stir with spoon; let settle and drink the milky water, including the white precipitate.

Do this regularly and your constipation—no matter of how long standing—will be a thing of the past! Yeast Foam is equally effective for indigestion, boils, pimples, lack of weight and strength.

Or, if you prefer, eat the yeast with a cracker or a piece of butter.

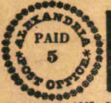
Search Your Attic For Old Stamps

Fortunes Have Been Found on Old Envelopes

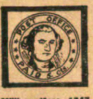
Many old stamps, both U. S. and Confederate, are worth from $50 to $5,000. The hobby of stamp collecting is of far greater importance nowadays than in times past when it was generally considered as a pastime for schoolboys only. Today collectors eagerly seek out and pay huge prices for those stamps which are scarce to the point of being worth hundreds or even thousands of dollars. Last year in Paris at a stamp sale one stamp of British Guiana was sold for $32,500—this being the highest price ever paid for a single stamp. People who make a bonfire of "grandfather's letters" do not realize they may be burning rare stamps, which if sold might make them rich.

Make a thorough search through attics and storerooms for old letters mailed from 1845 to 1870. Keep the letters if you wish, but send the envelopes (or folded letters) to Mr. Harold C. Brooks, Box 321, Marshall, Michigan. Mr. Brooks, who is mayor of his city, is a private collector and is said to pay better prices than a dealer. During the past twelve years he has paid thousands of dollars for envelopes bearing old stamps. He specializes in United States and Confederate stamps, but also collects Canadian and other foreign issues, provided they are on the original envelopes and mailed not later than 1870. Loose stamps he does not buy except very old issues unused or mounted collections formed before 1880. Revenue stamps such as found on old photographs, mortgages, deeds, etc., are not wanted. Other things like old coins, Confederate money, old relics, may have value, but he is not interested in these.

Shown below are illustrations of a few rare stamps and the amounts Mr. Brooks agrees to pay to anyone who may find them. Beside these are many others of equal value.



Alexandria, Va., 1845
$5000.00



Millbury, Mass., 1847

ATHENS GA.

Athens, Ga., 1861 (Red)
$400.00

Beside the rarities, Mr. Brooks buys many of the commoner stamps, so nothing should be thrown away even though many stamps appear to be exact duplicates. Stamps should not be cut off as any stamp on the original envelope is worth more, collectors being interested in the postmark as well as the stamp. Nothing should be written on the face of the envelope. When making up a bunch of envelopes, be sure they are well wrapped and protected with cardboard to prevent their becoming wrinkled in transit. If you have reason to believe your envelopes are of special value send them by registered or insured mail. The advertising manager of this paper has known Mr. Brooks for many years, and you may place fullest confidence in his integrity. On receipt of envelopes he will examine them and report promptly their value. If they are not purchased, he guarantees to return them in good order.

If you have no old letters written during or before the Civil War, show this notice to your friends—especially those whose families have lived in the same house for several generations. Many old families, old banks and law firms still have stored away hundreds of letters, waiting either to be burned or sold for large sums. Before destroying such envelopes or folded letters investigate their value. Mr. Brooks' address is as follows:

Mushrooms Are Deceitful Food

There have been no casualties from toadstool poisoning in this county recently that we know of, but the danger often lurks in this form of vegetable, since one species of mushroom closely resembles the common toadstool which is seen in all woodlots, and in fact any place where old decayed logs or stumps abound. The food value of the mushroom is quite as high as good wholesome meat, and although we have never been able to secure enough of the succulent vegetable fungus for a full meal, we are positive the taste and smell are both appetizing.

In Hillsdale recently a farmer displayed the biggest mushroom ever known in this county. It measured 51 inches one way and 41 inches the other, in circumference and it weighed 14 pounds and one ounce. The finder failed to relate where he found the mushroom—as he no doubt wanted the information for himself alone.

Death of Joseph Harwood

Joseph Harwood of Moscow, a veteran of the Civil War, and formerly a resident of this village, passed away at his home Tuesday morning at 8:45, after an illness of six months. He was 80 years of age and had resided in Moscow about 12 years.

Mr. Harwood is survived by the wife and son Adelbert, of Moscow. Deceased was born in Allen, Alleghany county, New York in 1844 and came to Michigan at the age of 19 years at the close of the Civil war. He resided on a farm in Moscow township for many years, afterward removing to North Adams, and later to his present home.

Funeral services will be held at the late home at 1:00 p. m. to-day (Friday) and interment will be in North Adams cemetery.

What might have been a serious accident occurred on Wednesday afternoon in the east end of North Adams. Lawyer Charles Shepard of Hillsdale was driving east in a Chevrolet car at the village limits and turned around on the corner. A sedan coming at a rapid rate from the west, was directly behind, and in order to avoid a collision with the Shepard car, smashed into a telephone pole in front of George Walworth's residence. The sedan, which by the way, was a very large powerful car. was badly damaged and considerable fireworks followed. We did not learn the name of the owner of tne sedan.

On Tuesday a gang of hunters from this vicinity started for the Northern Peninsula to hunt deer as follows: Floyd Daniels, John Williams, Frank Hancock, Clifford Hitchcock, John Crapser, and Ralph Taylor. They went by auto. Jay Knowles left for the same region later by train.

J. Q. Roode and wife of Berkley, Michigan were in North Adams on Saturday having drove a distance of 160 miles the day before. They visited Alfred Haight and wife here and william wells and wife at Pittsford. Mr. Roode is Superintendent of Schools at Berkley which by the way is practically a suburb of Detroit.

J. P. Speer who has resided here since two years ago left on Wednesday for Tampa Florida by the over land route. He drove the big Pierce Arrow bus and was accompanied by C. W. Bleech, two real estate men from Jackson, a man from Somerset and some others. The party included six or seven men and Jay expects to remain in Florida the winter through if he strikes a job which he thinks very likely.

On Monday we had the pleasure of viewing some of the best thoroughbred Poland Chinas on the farm of Matthew Havens that we have seen for some time. There were forty in the bunch and not much difference in size. Mr. Havens specializes in thoroughbred Polands and has a large type of stock hog with all the ear marks of the best. These forty will be sold at once and show what a farmer can do by hogging down corn. They have been instrumental in converting eight acres of corn into hog. The weight is estimated around 4,000 pounds which at the regular price of hogs will bring a tidy sum. Hillsdale county is fast becoming noted through the country for its pedigreed stock, especially hogs, sheep and cattle. Horses are a thing of the past and no one pretends to know anything about them here. But at both State Fair and International Stock Show at Chicago this country has shown up exceedingly well. As we understand it hogs will be exhibited from this county in Chicago the coming season Nov. 28th to Dec. 5th, 1925.

Prof. Trout of Hillsdale College gave a fine address at the Congregational church on Sunday morning last to a fair attendance. In the evening as per announcement a moving picture was given. Owing to some miscalculations on the part of the film company "Christopher Columbus" was not available and instead "To Him That Hath" was furnished. It appeared during the early hours of the evening that no electric light would be forthcoming, but at 7:30 the current began coming strong from Hudson and the picture was run off. We hear much praise concerning the film, which dealt with city life and the ups and downs of a Mission. Philip Morton in charge of this wonderful work of saving the wayward souls of the slummers of a great city proved rather a hypocrite to his trust as was shown by later history. He called in a friend of his and remarked that if anything should happen to him the responsibility was to be turned over to David who was familiar with the combination of the office safe. Philip Morton passed away and David in investigating his affairs finds he has been accepting hush money from the dive keeper of the district. David is shocked and to cover the shortcomings of his friend crucifies his own character with the officials of the Mission. He serves a term in the penitentiary for theft and is cast out into the cold unfeeling world jobless and hungry. He roams the streets in search of work but finds it not. He sinks to the lowest depths, but is rescued by his former fellow mission worker. He writes a book on the social life of the city and its needs, and becomes a successful author.

Lewis Meeks reports he has around 1700 bushels of potatoes this season which at better than two dollars per bushel will figure up a tidy sum. We are very glad that potato raisers are at last going to get their own in the business. For some time past the price has been so low on tubers that profits were seriously interfered with. The only raiser who makes good is the man who stays with the business year after year. Michigan's enviable reputation as a potato state is being upheld right vigorously. It is expected that her potato exhibit at the International will be a hummer.

Death of Arthur Westcott

Arthur Westcott who has been ill for some time, passed away at his home on Town Line Thursday at the age of 60 years. He is survived by the wife, two brothers, Randell of the vicinity, Fred of Hanover, two sisters, Mrs. Bertha Young of this village and Mrs. Earl Rush of Pittsford, besides a number of nephews and nieces.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home Saturday at 1:00 p. m. Rev. Wylie officiating, and interment will be in Pease cemetery.

The Big Boy of Them All

You will want to visit Chicago during the great Live Stock Show from Novemver 28th to Dec. 5th, and if we mistake not you will enjoy the exhibition of stock from all parts of the world. Horses that tip the scales at a ton and a quarter are always worth looking at, and then there are so many other thinge you want to see in Chicago outside the stock yards. Art Museum, Field Museum, the municipal docks, Lincoln Park Zoo, the Chicago River with its multi-colored shipping, the subways under the city, the foreign quarter, where you suddenly leave America and plunge into Little Italy and Little Russia, Little Poland, the Ghetto and a hundred and one other curious and interesting localities. Michigan is going to put up a hard struggle for recognition of her thoroughbred stock at Chicago and the state should be well represented in attendance.

This Grade Cow More than Doubled her Milk Yield in 2 Years!

Early in August, 1921, a grade Holstein was received at the Larro Research Farm, and given a number—158.

In 270 days, which constituted her first milking period, she produced 5,651.2 lbs. of milk.

And in the first 270 days of her third milking period she gave 13,157.1 lbs.

Think of it—an increase of 130% in milk production in two years! And during her first two years on the Larro Farm her weight increased from 843 lbs. to 1226 lbs.—or 45%.

There is real profit in such a cow as No. 158 is today. Yet it does not cost much more to feed and maintain her now than it did when her production was less than half what it is.

The important point to you is that many of your own cows may show equally satisfactory results with the same management and care—plus Larro.

You can easily prove that Larro is a money-maker by trying it on your herd and keeping records of milk produced per dollar spent for feed.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Walker's Election as Mayor of New York Is Big Triumph for Gov. Al Smith.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NATIONAL interest in last week's elections centered mainly on New York city where "Jimmy" Walker, the Tammany-Smith candidate for mayor, was pitted against Frank D. Waterman, millionaire Republican nominee. Little doubt of Walker's victory had existed, but the size of the plurality—more than 401,000—caused something of a sensation. Actually it was a spectacular triumph for Gov. Al Smith and fixes him in his place as the foremost figure in the Democratic party. He says he will retire from politics at the end of his term, but if he wishes it he is assured of the support of the Eastern "wet" delegations for the Presidential nomination in the next Democratic national convention. That of course doesn't mean that he could be nominated, for the Southern and Western Democrats are still dry in the main.

In addition to putting over his gubernatorial candidate, Smith won a big victory in the state, for the four amendments to the state constitution which he warmly supported all carried, despite the fight on three of them made by the Republicans under the direction of Senator Wadsworth, Representative Ogden Mills and State Chairman Morris. These leaders of the G. O. P. in the state suffered considerable loss of prestige, for they are accused of bungling the fight on the amendments. The only one the Republicans supported provides for a reform of the judiciary.

Democrats scored another victory in New Jersey, where the issue was clearly prohibition and their candidate for governor, A. Harry Moore, wet, defeated Arthur Whitney, dry, Republican and indorsed by the Anti-Saloon league, by a plurality of about 40,000. Immediately after learning of his election Mr. Moore announced that as soon as he was inaugurated he would begin a movement to have congress modify the Volstead law so as to permit the manufacture and sale of beers and light wines.

Municipal elections in Indiana resulted in victories for the Republicans in Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Lafayette, Peru, Elkhart, Crawfordsville, and several other cities; with the exception of Indianapolis, all these had been governed by the Democrats for four years. Among the Hoosier cities won by the Democrats were South Bend, Marion and Richmond.

In a nominally non-partisan election Boston, which has been controlled by the Democrats for sixteen years, was captured by the Republicans, who elected Malcolm E. Nichols mayor.

The Ku Klux Klan figured prominently in two elections, and broke even. It supported J. R. Duvall, who was elected mayor of Indianapolis; but Charles Bowles, its candidate for mayor of Detroit, was decisively beaten by John W. Smith, the present executive.

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL'S court martial now promises to be a long drawn out affair. On Monday of last week the prosecution completed its presentation of proof that the colonel had said the things he is accused of saying, and the defense, in cross questioning the witnesses, was in the main satisfied to elicit admissions from army officers that Mitchell's statements had not caused insubordination or lack of discipline so far as they knew. Then the prosecution rested its case, and next day the defense asked and obtained adjournment to the following Monday in order that it might have opportunity to confer with the prosecution as to what witnesses the prosecution would agree that the defense might summon. General Howze, presiding, was indignant at the delay and scored the prosecution for it, but could not deny the request for adjournment.

Colonel Mitchell and Congressman Reid, his chief counsel, spent the remainder of the week preparing a new list of charges and criticisms which the colonel will make and a tremendously long recital of details with which he will attempt to sustain them. Colonel Mitchell wants to call 71 witnesses, including admirals, generals, technicians, flyers, and members of congress, the secretaries of war, navy, and agriculture, Maj. Eddie Rickenbacker, Lowell Smith, Reed Landis of Chicago, Donald MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, Admiral Sims, and Mrs. Lansdowne.

"The whole defense," said Mr. Reid, "will be that Colonel Mitchell spoke for the good of the country and with pure intent. That it was necessary that he speak we shall prove by the conditions which we shall uncover in detail. We shall not withdraw a hair's breadth from our position that all Colonel Mitchell said was and is true, and that more which he now is going to say was and is true."

NATIONAL COMMANDER McQUIGG of the American Legion presented to President Coolidge that organization's national legislative program, which includes provision for a universal draft of all the country's man power and resources in time of war. The legislation asked would give the President control of transportation materials together with farm products and their prices. It would provide that there would be no slackers and no profiteers in case of another war.

Other legislative recommendations include provision for medical treatment and adjusted compensation for certain classes of disabled men now excluded under the law; the creation of a medical corps in the veterans' bureau and construction of 2,000 additional beds in veterans' fireproof hospitals.

ITALY'S debt funding mission arrived in Washington and at the first meeting with the American commission Count Volpi set forth his country's sacrifices in the war and her present financial troubles. Subcommittees are studying Italy's capacity to pay and an early agreement on the terms for settlement of the $2,138,000,000 debt is expected.

Resumption of negotiations concerning the French debt was promised by Premier Painleve in a ministerial declaration, but as his government was likely to be upset at any time because of Socialist defection there is some doubt about the debt matter. If the new Painleve cabinet does not fall it is believed Senator Henri Beranger will come to Washington to try to succeed where M. Caillaux failed. The Painleve ministry obtained a vote of confidence at the opening session of the chamber of deputies by the narrow margin of 221 to 189, the 103 Socialists refraining from voting and a number of the premier's political foes supporting him only temporarily.

FRANCE'S troubles in Syria are increasing, for though the Druses were defeated at Damascus and elsewhere, the Bedouin bandits are growing more active. One of their leaders, Bakry Bey, has proclaimed a Syrian republic, with himself as president, and is said to be trying to capture the city of Homs in order to establish a provisional government which can appeal to the League of Nations. Damascus is full of French troops and guns and is thoroughly barricaded, and thousands of its residents are fleeing. Last week American Consul Knabenshue at Beirut summoned to that port the two American destroyers that were at Alexandria, although he said there was no immediate danger to Americans there or in Damascus.

RIZA KHAN, who had been premier and dictator of Persia for two years, now sits on the throne of that country as King Pahlavi, having yielded to the requests of leaders of all parties, big land owners and certain ecclesiastics. Thereupon the mejliss or parliament formally deposed Ahmed Mirza, the shah, and abolished the Kadjar dynasty, which had ruled over Persia since 1779. The crown was made elective and Riza promised to call a constitutional assembly to make the necessary changes in the basic law. His first acts were to liberate all political prisoners and to grant amnesty to the dethroned shah and all members of his family and his household. He also ordered the price of bread reduced through government subsidy. There was only slight opposition to the accession of Riza, and the crown prince left the country.

So much information is given in censored dispatches from Teheran. But from other sources it is gathered that Riza's coup d'etat was inspired by British influence and that he forced the parliament to take the action detailed above, after which the legislators were compelled to flee for their lives by Riza's hired gunmen. Shah Ahmed Mirza, who has been spending most of his time in Paris, was in the hands of a party in Persia that was in close touch with the Russian bolshevists, while Riza has been friendly with the British. The whole affair is really a development of the struggle between Russia and England for control over the oil fields of Persia and the routes to the Far East. The new government indorses the American financial mission headed by Dr. Arthur Millspaugh.

DRYS from all parts of the country gathered in Chicago for the biennial convention of the Anti-Saloon league. Wayne B. Wheeler, chief counsel, in his report said in substance: "Prohibition enforcement has raised scores of puzzling problems. We have helped solve them. The wets have blasted leak after leak in the prohibition dam. We have helped close them and to mop up the puddles they created.

"We have given our aid to the adoption of new laws, the securing of court decisions and the support of administrative action in doing these things.

"It has been an uphill fight but the fight has been less significant than the fact that we have moved up the hill steadily. No similar policy of government has ever shown a more continuous, constructive gain.

"The active opposition of the wets is significant testimony that the law is far from being a dead letter. Instead it is a red letter law."

Mr. Wheeler outlined three measures which would be urged on congress. One is placing all prohibition agents under civil service; the second is increasing the penalties for violation of the national prohibition law; the third is for deportation of aliens convicted of violating the prohibition or narcotic acts.

Among the speakers at the convention were Andrew J. Volstead, who called attention to certain provisions in the law that are overlooked by the courts and enforcement officers, and Rear Admiral Billard, who told about the coast guard's warfare on the rum fleets and smugglers.

AGREEMENTS under which the conductors and trainmen are working expire on December 31, and it seems likely that the two brotherhoods will demand a return to the war time scale of wages, or an increase of 7 per cent over present rates. The grand lodge officers and general chairmen representing the men on Western roads already have approved such a demand, and those of the Eastern and Southern lines are expected to take the same action.

TARIFF autonomy for China was accepted in principle by the international customs conference in Peking, and the American delegation offered a plan for putting the principle into effect not later than January 1, 1929. Dr. C. T. Wang for China pledged the abolition of the likin or tax on interprovincial commerce before that date. A committee of the conference is now framing interim measures.

THE house committee on ways and means closed the hearings on tax reduction and is now busy determining the total amount of the cut—probably $300,000,000—and drafting the new law. One of the last witnesses heard was Gen. L. C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement. He asked that the alcohol tax rate be cut in half to kill the illicit alcohol market, and that a special levy be imposed on cereal beverages so that the enforcement unit would have the right to supervise the breweries and stop the wholesale flood of illegal beer.

The committee voted to increase the exemption for single persons from $1,000 to $1,500, and that for heads of families from $2,500 to $3,500. The 40 per cent surtax rate is to be cut to 20 per cent.

Want United States to Lead in Aviation

Washington.—Creation of a bureau of civil aeronautics in the Department of Commerce with powers to regulate and promote all civil and commercial flying in the United States forms the central recommendation of the committee on civil aviation, which was appointed by the department and the American engineering council last June to study the question.

The committee, of which J. Walter Drake, assistant secretary of commerce, is chairman, declares that the possibilities which it sees for the development of commercial aviation in the United States can be realized through a definite and continuing program of government assistance for the industry. The lack of these and of a definite legal status and government control for the industry, it found, have been the chief causes for its failure to keep pace with development in Europe.

In addition to its function of regulating air navigation, including licensing of pilots and inspection of planes, the proposed bureau would be authorized to "develop, establish, or take over and maintain air routes and air navigation facilities."

Summarizing conditions in the industry, the report declared that "notwithstanding past and present handicaps, the industry has survived and made progress creditable under the adverse conditions it has encountered. There is no doubt," it added, "that under really favorable conditions its great possibilities will be realized."

Irish Fight Vaccination

Vaccination is compulsory in the Irish Free State, but during the troubles of the last few years the enforcement of the law has been allowed to lapse. In many places the children have not been vaccinated for ten years. The government is now urging the local boards of health to insist on vaccination and to prosecute defaulters. But a feeling has grown up against vaccination and in Wexford the local authorities have refused to obey the government's instructions. The provision in the English law exempting from vaccination conscientious objectors to it does not apply to Ireland.

The best revenge is to forget it.

How Robert M. Koenig Found Remedy for Pimply Skin

For years my skin would break out every once in a while—and ointments did very little to help me.

I read a doctor's article stating that pimply skin usually comes from the stomach—and bowels not getting rid of the poisons.

I tried Carter's Little Liver Pills for a few days—and since that time my skin is smooth and clear. Now I tell my friends the right way of getting rid of a broken out skin—and also of steering clear of upset stomach and sick headache. Carter's are all you claim for them.

Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, the founder of the card index system, was talking about New York hotel prices the other day.

"New York hotel prices," he said, "always remind me of a foreigner's visit to Chicago the year after the World's fair.

"'Who is the owner of that palatial marble home?' the foreigner asked his guide.

"'Pete Malvoglio,' the guide answered. 'He brought a ham to the World's fair and cut it up into sandwiches.'"

STATE NEWS

Bay City—The plant of the Michigan Chemical company, Essexville, has been sold to New York parties and shortly will resume the manufacture of alcohol, according to a statement made to Village President Garber.

Ann Arbor—Senator Woodbridge N. Ferris will speak at the annual public speaking banquet to be held at the Michigian Union, Nov. 19. Prof. Oscar J. Campbell, of the English department, will be toastmaster.

Lansing—Adoption of voting machines for all precincts of the city was forecast here following the test given the devices at four precincts. At all of the precincts where the machines had been installed the complete returns were available within 15 minutes after the close of the polls.

Lansing—A grade separation between the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad and trunk line M-65 in Monroe county, has been authorized by the State Administrative Board. A communication from the Ford interests, owners of the D., T. and I., expressed a willingness to pay half the cost, or $60,000.

Sturgis — Schools, churches, libraries, theaters and all places of meeting have been closed at Colon near here by the board of education and the board of public health in an effort to check a scarlet fever epidemic. Three new cases have been reported this week, two are seriously ill, with recovery doubtful.

Saginaw — "Uncle Joe" Fordney, former member of congress from the Eighth Michigan district and joint writer of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, celebrated his seventy-second birthday Thursday, surrounded by his family. He left that night for his annual deer hunting outing in the wilds of the upper peninsula. He is feeling fine.

Sault Ste. Marie—Freight totalling 71,627,729 tons has passed the Government locks here up to Nov. 1, a gain of 7,888,331 tons over the same period of last year, according to the official canal report for October. The tonnage for October was 11,637,192, as compared with 10,328,369 last year. Vessel passages numbered 2,945 as compared with 2,493 in October, 1924.

Lansing—The Securities Commission's move to revoke the real estate license of the Southern Land & Homes Co., of Detroit, and of Pierre C. Allers, general sales agent for the company, ended in a compromise when attorneys came here and promised that the Southern Land & Homes Co. would reorganize as a corporation and would discontinue the use of the so-called Florida contract which the commission had declared to be objectionable.

Adrian—The delegates to the forty-first meeting of the Detroit conference of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church re-elected Mrs. Carl W. Holmes, of Detroit, to the presidency at the second session of the district convention. The roll call showed 91 visiting delegates present, including 41 from Detroit, 32 from Ann Arbor, and 7 from Flint. Twenty-five delegates arrived from the northern Michigan districts.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, will give the first address on the second radio program which will be broadcast Tuesday evening, Nov. 10, from 9 to 10 p. m. Other speakers include Dean Henry M. Bates and Prof. Ralph W. Aigler, of the law school, and Prof. William J. Hussey, of the astronomy department. Musical numbers by the 'varsity band and members of the school of music will be included on the program.

Monroe—Harold Emmons, former president of the Detroit Board of Commerce, gave the principal address following the mid-day luncheon of the Monroe Exchange club here last Thursday. Emmons during his address gave a vivid account of his eight months' trip through Africa, the customs of the people and his experience with elephants in the jungle along the river Nile. He said he killed one elephant which weighed five tons, one forefoot having been 55 inches in circumference.

East Lansing—The World Court and the Republican party's peace program were indorsed by former Justice John H. Clark, of the United States Supreme Court in an address before the students at Michigan State College recently. Justice Clark is a Democrat and was appointed to the Supreme bench by Woodrow Wilson. He told the students that he resigned his appointment in order to spend the remainder of his life fighting the evils of war and attempting to bring about permanent peace.

Lansing—Plans have been virtually completed for the leasing by the city of Kalamazoo of 42 acres of unused state land adjacent to the grounds of the Kalamazoo State Hospital. Following a conference between Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck and Charles A. Blaney, of Kalamazoo, it was announced that the Attorney General will draw up a long-term lease whereby the city may pay the state a nominal rental and make use of the 42-acre tract as a playground for school children. Mr. Blaney declared the city will build a stadium.

Lansing—The State Administrative Board has taken the control of the Michigan State Fair Grounds into its own hands with the passage of a resolution declaring that the grounds shall be immediately opened to the public. This action followed the reading of a report from the business committee of the board of managers of the fair in which delay in opening the grounds was advised. The committee report was brought forth by the Administrative Board's resolution two weeks ago in which the board favored opening the grounds.

No more RHEUMATISM

But rheumatism will bring pain and misery to your joints and muscles just as long as you are without plenty of rich, red blood in your system.

It's the red-blood-cells that S. S. S. helps Nature build that drive out of your system the impurities that cause rheumatism. And until you do build up your blood to where it is pure and rich and red, you simply can't get rid of rheumatism.

And S. S. S. is the thing. Red blood conquers rheumatism. Everybody knows that.

S. S. S. means millions of red-blood-cells—means health all over. No more rheumatism. Nights of rest—days of joy, filled with the happiness of accomplishment — made possible by a body brimful of red blooded life, energy and vitality.

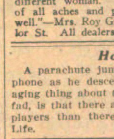
Women, Don't Suffer!



Kokomo, Ind.—"I was suffering with all kinds of aches and pains—head, back and side, dizzy spells and nervousness. The doctors tried to help me and I tried all kinds of remedies but got little relief. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I hesitated on account of the failure of other treatments, but at last I tried it. One bottle helped me so much I got two more, and by the time I had taken them I was feeling like a different woman. It had relieved me of all aches and pains and made me well."—Mrs. Roy Griffey, 1225 W. Taylor St. All dealers.

In Shabbytown

IN Shabbytown they do not care if things look seedy everywhere. They have no pep, they've lost their grip, they simply sit around and yip, in envy's tones, of Glossyville, the shining village on the hill. Oh, Shabbytown is punk and gray, and it shows symptoms of decay, and strangers passing through remark, "It surely dates back to the Ark." "Clean Up and Paint Up" makes men frown along the streets of Shabbytown. A can of paint makes no appeal to this bum village, down at heel; the people think there is no sense in going to so much expense; so things are always going down, and getting worse in Shabbytown. It always gives my soul a thrill when I arrive in Glossyville. The town looks like a blooming bride; the people take a hearty pride in making things look clean and bright, and in their labors take delight. They're lavish with the helpful paint, selecting colors chaste or quaint, and decorating every shack; thus warding off decay's attack, and making all the buildings look like buildings read of in a book. And strangers, when they see the town, say, "Here we'll come and settle down, and raise us nineteen kids apiece, and live and die as slick as grease." This happy burg goes right ahead, while Shabbytown is prone and dead.

Michigan's Health Brigade

Michigan's 2,000 health officers and public health nurses will answer to roll call at the Fifth Annual Conference of Health Officers and Public Health Nurses to be held in Lansing November 18, 19 and 20, by reporting the number of children in their communities protected against diphtheria by toxin-antitoxin.

"For four years,". says Dr. R. M. Olin, Commissioner of Health, "we have emphasized diphtheria more than any other single communicable disease. Toxin-antitoxin has been furnished free by the state since 1921. In the first ten months of 1924, we sent out 166, 630 c c. of toxin-antitoxin, During the ten months of 1925 we have mailed 317,210 c c. No better proof could be given of what Michigan parents, school and health authorities are doing to safeguard their children, but we want to hear from the health officers and nurses themselves how diphtheria is being made ancient history in Michigan."

In eight counties, Ionia, Cass, Washtenaw, Presque Isle, Ogemaw Montcalm, Alger and Baraga, 18, 111 individuals have been given toxin-antitoxin by physicians from the Michigen Department ot Health assisted by local doctors. Reports coming in to the Department show similar campaigns in practically every section of the state, carried on by local authorities. It is predicted by state health authorities that the number of children reported at the Conference as protected against diphtheria will total close to 100,000. We rather like the way Michigan is going after Diphtheria and the other dangerous diseases with toxins and virus and if we mistake not another 10 years will find these diseases pretty nearly obliterated or so inactive not much apprehension will be felt. Right in our own community there have been outbreaks of Diptheria and scarletina, typhoid and small pox years ago which removed whole families and aside from the health menace of the neighborhood, the horror of the thing got on our nerves. When but a lad we well remember the family doctor relating the awful conditions in a home where the daughter expired from this dread disease in agony unspeakable, and no one would go near the stricken one to minister or sooth the dying hour. In one other case the family of five children were wiped out and parents only recovered by a miracle. The corpses were taken at midnight from the home and interred by lantern light. It was considered little short of heroic to take care of these patients. Toxins not then discovered, vaccination and virus were then used only occasionally and were not effectual. In Hillsdale a few years ago it was fully understood that every season brought its diphtheria outbreak, and more than one life usually was surrendered. Such conditions are happily a thing of the past.

Farmers Frolic At Harvest Home Meet

Members of the Michigan Crops Improvement Association and their friends and relatives gathered at the M. S. C. on Nov. 6 and 7 for the first annual fall Harvest Home meeting of the association.

While exhibits and inspection trips played their part in program, chief emphasis during the two day meeting was placed on the entertainment and picnic side of the gathering.

A typical old-time harvest party was staged in the new college Union Building on Friday evening. Following a banquet, guests all joined in the big party, which combined Halloween features with the harvest festival side.

Husking and potato peeling contests were mixed in with old time square dances and other stunts which made the evening one long to be remembered. It is understood that the Harvest Home meeting will be made an annual event.

Farmers Week To Be Held February 1-5

Farmers Week, the annual conference of agricultural interests at the M. S. C., will be held from February 1 to 5 this year, according to announcement made here this week.

The general plan of the week will be the same as in years past, with certain new features added to the program. Leading agricultural associations of the state will hold their annual meetings during the week as usual, while exhibit and meeting plans will follow similar lines. Details of program are to be announced later.

State Police For Highway Work

While at times the tide of "yellow journalism" from the objectors to our state police system has been running strong, yet the State Troopers are with us and we hope will be with us until we die—as a commonwealth.

The work of catching criminals so well performed by this army of officers cannot be too highly commended. Bank robbers and murderers, bigamists and white slavers have suffered terribly from the corrective work of the force, but unless we are misinformed, all these malefactors will be merely subsidiary to the plucking which the rum runners and bootleg dispensers have coming to them. Cost something? Sure! But brother, can you better afford to have your daughter waylaid on her way to school and debauched by some degenerate? Would you prefer that a drunken driver crowd you off the concrete and wreck your machine? Of course you would not. Not a small part of our state police duties at present are guarding convicts on the road building job. Since Governor Groesbeck got his new schemes for road building in operation there have been few idle hours for the Troopers, but the major task has been patrolling the state highways, mulling speeders, arresting drunks and picking up vagabonds of all kinds in the auto-mobile class

It is with pleasure the statistically inclined will read the results of the past year's police work. Millions of gallons of liquid hell taken from rum runners near the borders ought to convince the most skeptical that the State Police are a profitable institution. Perhaps you don't realize what the removal of all this booze means to our general welfare. But it means this great artificial lake is poured in the sewer instead of a human cesspool,

A proposal is now before state officials to take over the control of the Troopers as regular official guards of the highways, each with his regular mileage to be covered every day. We don't know just how the thing will figure out, but we do believe this arm of the commonwealth can use the Troopers to advantage. The ideal duties of an ideal police force should be the safeguarding of transportation, and with the force trained to these duties, Michigan should be a top-liner in the list of law and order communities

The officials tell us that to accomplish this it will be necessary to gather in a bunch of recruits and put them through the paces at once.

A little more money must be appropriated at Lansing to carry on, and the matter is now pending.

Michigan plans to build hundreds of miles of macadamized and concrete highways during the next few years, and conditions are such that all classes of criminals travel both night and day. Automobile bandits equipped with high powered cars pull up at most any country-side town bank at mid-day, loot the institution, may hap kill the clerks or citizens, and make their get-away almost before the public knows what has happened.

Of course it is dollars to doughnuts the telephone or radio may beat the crooks to the city, bnt increasing the state police is the only solution of the trouble. Guard the roads with military precision.

This May Be True And Again It May Not

The Broadcasting from Chicago has this to say regarding the change of seasons which we were remarking about recently.

"Snows that lay on the ground months on end, skating that began in November and lasted until March snow drifts that reached almost any height one might mention, were the exceptional occurrences in grandfather's day as they are today, the Broadcast declares. "One mild winter starts the rumor that overcoat manufacturers had better go into the Palm Beach suit business, while an extremely cold winter if dubbed as a good old fashioned winter. One explanation for this is that memory is tricky and recalls the exceptional rather than the average. Another is that modern living has taken the edge off the extreme weather. A snowfall that our forefathers would have trodden under foot for days now is shovelled away before we get up in the morning. Better heating, too, makes us feel the low temperature less, and ice refrigerating plants and electric fans makes the extremes of heat more endurable."

We don't quite agree with the above statement. In the first place the faulty conception which they are trying to cram down people's throats is this: Trying to carry the idea that the modern inventions have done away with the discomforts of hard winters. To some extent this is true, but not fully. Speaking of the methods of taking care of snow etc., reminds us of a winter in Southern Michigan along in 1884 or thereabouts when it could hardly be said the snow scraper and the hot air furnace would make all right. There came a terrific snow storm continued for an entire day and a night as we remember it. And snow was estimated as two feet deep on the average. On top of this deep snow came a warm wave which sent rain gradually growing colder until the sleet froze as it fell. The result was a surface over the tops of fences and buildings frozen hard as iron and glary ice which remained for a considerable length of time. The country highways were filled from fence to fence and drifted. The only method of getting a road was simply to dig it out with shovels and the farmers of the districts turned out with sleighs and shovels and worked valiantly to cut tunnels through the snow. We imagine that snowfall would have been rather a Waterloo for the modern motor scraper as nothing short of a Juggernaut could push through the sodden mass. Railroads experienced the worst trouble of years, and it was a common occurrence to derail the light locomotives of the day as if they were toys. At times the temperature went down to 20 below zero any unless a person fully protected ears and face they certainly froze then and there. There has been a change in the seasons without doubt probably due to some planetary movement, and we defie anyone to prove otherwise and winters in the north central states are not what they were 40 years ago. The swivel chair scientists in Chicago who attempt to twist facts and administer this mess in liberal doses over the Radio are extremely hard pressed for material when such things are put out. They had much better turn their attention to curtailing the booze output or something which stands out prominently before us as hard cold quantities. When you get right down to brass tacks the whole business from the penny ante mail order house is simply a great big hoax to get somebody's ear for advertising. We doubt not but open mouthed thousands "listen in" and drink this class of drivel every day for a stomach tonic.

What Makes 17,591,981 Motorists Mad

"Tax-Ridden" motorists all over the country have been mobilized to make a united drive for liberation from the lingering war impost on automobiles, and have already voiced their grievances to the House Ways and Means Committee In a statement broadcast from the national headquarters of the American Automobile Association, attention is called to the fact that there are four times as many people paying excise taxes on automobiles and parts as there are people paying income taxes, and the owners of the 17,591,981 motor vehicles registered in the country are called upon to get behind the Association's program. Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A., is thus quoted in the New York Herald Tribune:

"With a surplus of $350,000,000 in sight for the fiscal year 1926, it stands to reason that the special tax imposed on motorists as a class by the Government can be removed without risking a deficit in Federal finances."

We often wonder if there is any thing about the machine which has not been singled out for special taxing; if such part exists we should delight to be shown. Among the many faults of our government this is one of the worst. It is not sound judgment or sense to tax the automobile as is done when the very commercial life of this nation depends upon it. Remove the motor bus, the motor truck and passengar car and what would become of business? For instance the Literary Digest states that if a man breaks an axle on his car he must pay to the government a sum larger than the entire cost of the axle and its installation, for taxes alone. This is adding insult to injury.

consult a distant authority, and he cannot keep a herd of sick steers waiting while he wades through a maze of many pamphlets to find the particular treatment needed. Time and availability are the very essence of his situation. By giving the farmer what he wants just when he wants it broadcasting will widely extend the emergency services of the various agencies which the Government has created to help him, and to support which he pays taxes.

But in the long run, perhaps the greatest utility of radio to the farmer is in tying in with the extension work of various agricultural colleges and schools, as well as the various state organizations devoted to improvement of farm methods. Today but a relatively small number of farms benefit from such instruction. But in some sections of the country this class of broadcasting is being served to farm listeners, and in time it will be generally available. With 31,000,000 people living on our farms, the agricultural colleges of the country enroll but 150,000 students. Here is an opportunity, vast in its possibilities, to extend the scope of agricultural education. Radio should bring the advantages of scientific schooling to millions of farmers. It will enable the student, whose college course has been interrupted, to continue it often under the same instructors. With practical men in charge of such instruction the potentialities in this line are without limit.

Provides Sermons and Lectures

The cultural and spiritual possibilities of radio can not be measured by comparison with any other agency. It can bring to country schools in remote districts the lectures, the music, the addresses of prominent men and specialists in every field, as well as the education methods of the metropolis. It means instruction for the pupils and professional stimulation for the teachers. Radio draws no line between fundamentalist and modernist, and sermons are available every Sunday from the lips of America's most eminent divines. This means much to remote small communities unable to support a pastor, or whose only chance of worship is one or two Sundays a month. Radio worshippers may begin with early sermons to the East and, following the course of the sun, benefit by services extending from Plymouth Rock to the Golden Gate.

System of "Pick-ups" Spreading

It is too trite to tell you that play is needed to keep Jack from being a dull boy, and it is unnecessary to linger on the entertainment features of radio. In covering the field of harmony from the "canned music" of phonograph and automatic piano to flesh and blood talent, the broadcast studio has had difficulty to find material for its programs. The trend of the time is that, instead of waiting for talent to come to the studio, the program manager is now searching for attractive material. The leading broadcasting stations have developed a system of "pick-ups" extending to various sources of entertainment, by which attractive program features are picked up and carried by wire to the broadcasting station where they are sent out in the same way as ordinary studio performances. This service is steadily improving. Technical developments are overcoming distortion, and the losses formerly experienced in passing sound values over the pick-up wires. Some of the best features of latter-day broadcasting come through the pick-up system. The farmer may enjoy his evening meal with dinner music from the Rose room of the Waldorf. When he is smoking his after-dinner pipe he attends the banquet of a prominent society at which the spokesman may be no less a man than the President of the United States, or at least some gentleman who wishes he were President. Cloyed with oratory, he may yet follow with the thrills of a boxing contest. Still later he may enjoy the music, while far from the Great White Way.

This pick-up system enables the same program to be given over a broad expanse of territory. In the case of the Radio Corporation and its associated companies, for example, we very often pick up a program in Washington and broadcast it simultaneously from the WJZ station in New York City, and the WGY station in Schenectady. Wonderful radio plays produced by the WGY Players are likewise transmitted from WGY and our other New York station, WJY.

Its Greatest Application to the Farm

I believe that radio has greater application to the farm and to farm life than to any other phase of our national life. The urban citizen was the earliest to benefit from this invention, but the farmer will ultimately derive from it the greatest real profit and enjoyment. No other invention since the steam locomotive is destined to have such widespread influence upon rural life, because no other has carried so much comfort, enjoyment and potential prosperity to the farm.

Of all that may be said of radio in its various relations, the best is that it will tend to keep the young people on the farm. There is the true independence; there is the real throne of the American sovereign. Entertainment and culture and the throbbing life of the metropolis carried to the farm by radio, helping to make rural life more attractive and desirable will sustain that class which in ours, as in all other free countries, is the very backbone of our national existence.

Myself a son of the soil, it will be a great satisfaction to my later years if, through radio, I can in some measure pay the debt I owe to a farmer ancestry and my heritage of health and to the simple life which was all that my boyhood knew.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 13th day of March, A. D., 1919 executed by George B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savings Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161 of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty-four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amounting to two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610) and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars ($30) as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage provided. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one-half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four [24] Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Dated September 3rd, 1925.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 29th day of December, 1923, executed by Howard N. Maloney and Lila M. Maloney as parties of the first part, mortgagors, unto Hudson State Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan, a body corporate, existing and doing business under the laws of the state of Michigan, mortgagee, as party of the second part, which said mortgage was, on the 31st day of December, 1923, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, State of Michigan, in Liber 160 of Mortgages, on Page 541; which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make payments on the principal sum as provided in said mortgage, and also in the failure of the mortgagors to pay interest in manner and time as provided in said mortgage, which said default has existed for a period of more than thirty days, and the said mortgagee has exercised the option contained in said mortgage to declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be due and payable forthwith, and does hereby declare the whole amount of the principal and interest unpaid on said mortgage to be now due and payable, as was provided in said mortgage that the said mortgagee might do in the case of default of said mortgagors to pay said principal or interest, or any part thereof, as provided in said mortgage, and that if the same remained unpaid for the period of thirty days that then the whole amount of said principal with arrearages of interest should at the option of said mortgagee become due and payable immediately thereafter.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage for principal and interest at this date the sum of Three Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Eight Dollars and Thirty Two Cents ($3398.32), and also an attorney's fee as provided by statute, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount nor any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, that the undersigned will on the 9th day of November 1925, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day Central Standard time, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Hillsdale, county of Hillsdale and state of Michigan, (said court house being the place for holding said court for said county) sell at public auction or vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, together with the interest thereon, and the costs and expenses of said sale, and attorney's fee provided by statute. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows; All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Wheatland, county of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan, to-wit, the north one half of the southeast quarter of Section 28 in Township 6 south, Range 1 west, containing eighty acres of land more or less.

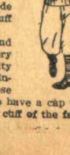
Sports Clothes

DO YOU remember the days when you saved all your old clothes to play golf or tennis in? "Anything's good enough for the links," you said. It isn't that way today. The baggy old trousers and sweater are about as much out of date as mother's old pongee duster and long-flowing motor veil she wore in 1905.

The keynotes for the up-to-date sports outfit are comfort, durability and a certain air of careless elegance. The so-called golf suit is the ideal outfit for almost all sports. It consists of knickers and loose-fitting coats with inverted plaits at the back to permit an easy swing of club or racket. Tweeds are the most popular materials with flannels and homespuns not far behind.



One very practical suit is a four-piece, consisting of coat, vest, trousers and knickers, combining in one suit all the essentials for sports and business. Knickers are being made with knitted cuffs, which, being close-fitting, allow the cuff of the golf hose to cover them and show to advantage.

Sweaters are being worn in every conceivable pattern and color, the gayer the better. The high "turtle" collars are very popular. Wool hose and sweater have struck up an affinity and are purchased in sets to match. The cap is trying to intrude itself as a triangle to the situation, but where the hose and sweaters match it is better, in the interests of variety, to have a cap that tones with, but does not match, the rest of the costume. The cuff of the fancy hose must be plain for good taste.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

What Shall We Say About War?

Is War in Harmony with the doctrine of the New Testament? Dare we be Christians and apply the principles of Jesus to the dealings of one nation with another?

Let us be perfectly frank. Our motives are not entirely disinterested. Self interest has a large part in the present reaction against all war. Fear, as always, is proving to be a mighty motive. We see now that war ends nothing evil; that it destroys only what is good. We see now that civilization itself will be destroyed unless Christianity rises up and puts an end to war. The pomp and glamour of war have gone forever. The naked savagery and coarse brutality of it all have been brought home to every human heart.

During the World War the United States alone spent for two years more than a million dollars an hour day and night, in the work of destruction and death. And it has been estimated that the total loss in human lives, directly and indirectly due to the war, mounted up to the appalling figure of 40,000,000 The World War was the greatest calamity that ever befell the human race. And it grew naturally and inevitably out of the pagan principles which universally had been adopted by so-called Christian nations.

The loss in wealth and the losses in human lives brought about by the great World War have been appalling beyond words to express. But there are worse losses than men and money. Not since the barbarian invasion and the collapse of Roman civilization has there been such a loss in moral values and spiritual ideals. Systematically and scientifically men were stirred up to hate men. Men do not naturally hate each other. Nations are not naturally enemies. Therefore, a campaign of hatred was put on everywhere. Epithets were coined to appeal to the imagination. "Bosche" and "Hun" were words often on Christian lips.

Even from Christian pulpits in some places sounded forth the horrible Mohammedan doctrine that the soldier killed in battle would pass directly into Paradise! And what a breakdown in morals has the world witnessed! We were fighting to protect womanhood, and the war has degraded womanhood everywhere, while such pagan standards of morals in reference to the relation of women to men have been propagated as English speaking peoples never tolerated before. Crime waves and general lawlessness naturally followed the greatest crime in human history—the great World War.

We had hoped that having learned to work together during the period of the war, the churches in America would henceforth see and know the value of a closer co-operation. But, alas! even the churches turned against each other and there is such strife and confusion, such charges of infidelity and heresy as we have not known in our lifetime nor in the lifetime of fathers, while epithets are bandied about, and devout and sincere followers of Jesus find themselves labelled and ostracised by fellow Christians because forsooth their tongue slips just a little when they attempt to pronounce the word "shibboleth."

War destroys civilization. War destroy the very foundations upon which civilization rests. Nothing destroys like war. What is war but utter and desolating waste of every thing that man and God hold dear?

Above the noise and din of battle and far above all the waste and confusion and hatreds of these post-war days, we hear once more the word of the ancient prophet: "His name shall be called the "Prince of Peace."

We must outlaw war. That is certain. For if private and individual murder is wrong, public and national murder is wrong also. And just as private murder has been outlawed, just as the duel is now relegated to the discarded customs of an outgrown past, even so must we now go on to declare war a criminal and an outlaw.

We must do more than this. As Christians and as patriotic citizens we must do all we can do to remove the causes of war. We must cast off the provincial mind and become citizens of the world. We must labor toward a mutual understanding between all races and all nations. We must religiously give ourselves to the cultivation of interracial and international goodwill. We must come to see that America cannot stand apart from the rest of the world in times of peace any more than she did in the time of war. We should recognize that the League of Nations is a going concern and should come in at the front door and not attempt to slip in at the back door. We should call upon all men of goodwill everywhere to arise for the salvation of the world.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

The editor of the Hudson Post throws a fit because the famous Governor of Kentucky was guilty of trekking across Michigan the other day and through some misque was wrecked in a collision on M-14 south of Hudson Saturday, Oct 31. Whether he had a load of "Old Kaintuck Rye" tradition does not say, but anyhow his big Packard collided with a Ford car driven by a young lad. It is said His Excellency was in a jocund mood and asked some of the bystanders if there were any Democrats in that neck of the woods. They were bashful about talking to so important a personage but finally somebody weakly enunciated that there was—Frank Nevin—the only Democrat he knew. Investigation disclosed that the Governor just like any common man had been up in God's Country to attend the Ann Arbor Football game and was headed for home. His name is William J. Fields and he was elected on the Democrat ticket.

What looks like a revolution in automobile building is near at hand Ransom Y. Bovee, inventor of the newest automobile drive which does away with the drive shaft, floating axle, brake, starter and the present type of rear springs, all expensive and complicated parts, is about to establish a plant in Detroit for the manufacture of this device. The principle is hydraulic—oil being used and forced by means of a powerful pump to two individual motors built in to the rear wheels. The entire system of speed changes and control is so simple that one lever controls the whole thing. This invention is the talk of the town among experts and automobile engineers, who are taking it up in all quarters. Mr. Bovee will incorporate a company as soon as he can interest the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, which can be done as soon as he can build a new car equipped with his invention for test purposes. Several tests have already been made in the most severe manner and it is said a very favorable impression is the result. It ought to cheapen the price of automobiles considerably, since it eliminates many hundred expensively machined parts, carries no water or batteries to freeze in cold weather, and never has to be "warmed up" to start.

Hod Greeley As A Speculator

Horace Greeley the philosopher politician, and publisher, was at times somewhat erratic, notwithstanding his greatness, and he like others of the great and near-great, had his hobbies, expensive though they at times proved.

Among Mr. Greeley's adventures good, bad and indifferent, we note that he decided to invest some of his hard earned dollars in a colonizing scheme in the wilds of Pennsylvania. A stock company was formed including many of the prominent people of the day, with Mr. Greeley himself the leading stockholder. Ten thousand dollars, an enormous sum for that day—was the capital invested.

They went into the rattlesnake country on the Lackawaxen River commonly known by the Indians as "Swift Waters." This was in 1842 while Horace was editor of the New York Tribune. He wanted to benefit mankind in some way but owing to bad management or no management at all the scheme gang aft agley.

Here the rattlesnakes were so numerous that hunts were staged to take care of them and the foreman of the wagon shop made a pair of slippers from the skins and presented them to Mr. Greeley.

Large commodious wood buildings were erected, mills, shops and factories put into running order. Matters began to look up and the wagon and shoe factories began to supply a demand, but erelong labor troubles started to develop and there did not seem to be enough laborers to keep things running. Certain of the stock-holders had wayward sons whom they thought to subordinate by banishing them to the colony. They proved to be very undesirable citizens and poor workers. Thus matters went from bad to worse, but they stuck to it and more land was cleared and a heavy crop planted. This might have been a good year but on the 4th day of July a heavy frost made its appearance and everything they had planted, was killed. That settled the fate of the community. A general exodus followed and the whole project went up in smoke.

A mortgage on the property of $3,000 was foreclosed and they had to give it up. Horace Greeley was the heaviest loser. To-day the site of the colony is bare, the buildings have disappeared and for aught we know the rattlesnakes and gophers are in full possession.

Find Use For Old Farm Straw Stack

Use of Michigan's straw stac as valuable sources of fertilizer is promised as a result of work being done by the soils men at the M. S. C.

During a visit to the famous Rothamsted experiment station in England last summer, Dr. M M. McCool, head of the college soils division, learned the methods of procedure followed in Europe and saw the materials which were being produced. That the results there were very satisfactory was shown by doubled yields of potatoes and other crops where the artificial "straw stack" manure was used. Fine results were also reported on truck crops.

That these old world practices may find a place in Michigan agriculture is indicated by the work being done at East Lansing.

"The soils sections of the college is making use of straw stacks by adding water, fertilizer, and lime and permitting the stack of materialto form valuable fertilizer", says Dr. McCool, in discussing the practice. "When ammonium sulphate, phosphates, and carbonate of lime are added to the straw and the mass moistened, fermentation takes place rapidly.

"If the work is done properly, the resulting mass is brownish black and finely divided, and is ready to use within three or four months. It appears to be very prommising for use by vegetable growers, florists, and as a substitute for other top dressing materials on golf courses."

There have been many false reports circulated in this vicinity as to the law concerning hunting on the lands of any farmer. The other day a case came up at Marshall where a man went onto another farmer's land and shot pheasants. The justice held the man justifiable and decided there was no cause for action as we suppose the farm was not posted with "No Hunting" signs However the action was against the law as it now stands. Any man who enters a man's farm for any purpose whatever is a trespasser whether the farm is posted or not and the trespasser is subject to prosecution if damages can be proved If "No Hunting" signs are displayed and a trespasser enters and shoots game he is liable to fine and imprisonment as prescribed in the law. Any justice who would otherwise construe the law is full of wool and either don't know law or else he's drunk.

More per Cow Rather than More Cows Says U. S. Bureau Chief

MILK COWS - NUMBER AND VALUE ON FARMS - U.S.
JAN. 1, 1910-24

© Underwood & Underwood

Dr. C. W. Larson keeps track of milk cows on farms of the country, and how much milk they give.

In a Chicago address, recently, Dr. C. W. Larson, Chief of the United States Bureau of Dairying, made a plea for greater production per cow rather than an increase in the number of cows.

The average cow in the United States yields annually only about 4,000 pounds of milk of which 2.7% is butterfat.

Careful breeding and elimination by test in the milk herd makes an increase to 8,000 pounds of milk annually per cow not impossible with the average dairyman. This would net the milk produced $75.00 above feed cost per cow as compared with the present average of only $26.00.

Membership in a cow-testing association and the maintenance of herd records are extremely desirable. The system of records should at least include an identification record, an account of production for each cow—the amount of feed given and breeding dates. For a grade dairy herd, the record system may be quite simple.

Cow-testing associations promote a more faithful follow-through of the rudiments of dairying. Among them are intelligent feeding, proper stabling, regular milking, thorough grooming, periodical clipping of the long hair from flanks, udder and underline and other attendant precautions against the presence of bacteria in the milk.

In cow-testing associations, records of the milk and butterfat production of pure bred cows are made under the supervision of the association and are given official recognition.

"And I think," I said, "that you scarcely do justice to the courage which our younger clergy undoubtedly possess. A man who would face a Mothers' union two days in a week and would take charge of a Girls' Friendly society for an outing in the country, must be daring enough for any adventure."

"No curate," said Cable sullenly, "would venture to marry a princess."

"Do you happen to know our patriarch?" said the king. "No, I thought not. You wouldn't talk that way about curates if you did. I assure you, Mr. Cable, that our patriarch would do anything. Wouldn't he, Casimir?"

"He 'dares do all that may become a man,'" said Casimir. "'Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear, the armed rhinoceros, or—'"

"Your patriarch," said Cable, "isn't a curate."

"But he was once," said the king. "He mus have been, though before my time, of course. They all begin by being curates. And I assure you he wouldn't have hesitated—except for moral reasons, of course—to marry two or three princesses, and their mothers, who would be queens, if he'd wanted to. When I tell you that our patriarch has often gone for me without a sign of nervousness, and used language you'd scarcely believe over some trumpery little affair about a girl—and that was when I was a king, an absolute monarch, remember, with an army and all that sort of thing. No, there's no use saying that the clergy daren't do things."

The discussion was degenerating into a wrangle of purely academic interest. It was Troyte who brought us all back to the business on hand.

"The real question," he said, "is not what a curate or a bishop might do, but what has actually happened since the—er—the fugitives reached Lystria. I sent a telegram to the patriarch saying that the man was an impostor. He surely wouldn't go on with the marriage after that."

"Curate or no," said Cable, "I hope the patriarch has shot him."

"He lies," said Casimir, "in durance vile. This very morning I received from the patriarch a telegram—"

He produced it from his pocket. The king translated it for us. It told us that Tommy had been put under arrest.

"That is perhaps the best thing which could have happened," said Troyte.

But it was, even on his showing, a very bad best. The situation in Lystria was extremely critical. A revolution, carefully planned and organized, had actually taken place. The patriarch and the nobles, the only people who counted in Lystria, were perfectly determined to have a king of their own seated on the historic throne of Wladislaws the Hunter, the founder of the Lystrian dynasty, famous a thousand years ago for his skill in killing boars. They wanted to place on somebody's head the silver-gilt fillet which that monarch had bequeathed to his successors. But if they did anything of the sort every Balkan state would mobilize at once and nothing could avert a war unless England recognized the new king and declared herself ready to support him. That, and the benevolent neutrality of France, might save the situation. But how could England recognize a revolution which had either put no king on the throne or set up some impossible person like Emily's curate?

Troyte explained all that to us, slowly and carefully.

"But I thought," said Cable, "that you'd squared the League of Nations and all that lot."

Troyte objected to the word "squared." I dare say the League of Nations would have objected to it too. What he had done, so he said, was to create an atmosphere favorable to the consideration of the claims of an English king to the Lystrian throne.

"Meaning Lord Norheys?" said Cable.

Troyte nodded. He certainly had not meant his "atmosphere" to envelop Emily's curate.

"In my opinion," said the king, "the best thing for us to do is to leave things as they are."

"Surely," I said, "not exactly as they are. That curate belongs more or less to my sister Emily and she's bent on finding him. There'll be a frightful row if she discovers him lying in a dungeon in Lystria."

"Nobody need ever know," said Cable.

"The English lady who accompanied them," said the king, "must be aware of the facts, and if I judge her character correctly, she will certainly tell what she knows."

"What English lady?" said Cable.

"Her name," said the king, "is Church, Miss Church, and unless I'm mistaken about her—"

"If Janet Church is there," I said, "she's certain to have telegraphed to every ambassador in Europe and also to the prime minister and the leader of the Labor party and all the different Liberal parties there are, demanding the instant release of Emily's curate."

"What I want to know," said Cable, "is what's going to happen about my oil concession?"

Nobody could give him any information about that. It had not been granted by the Megalian government. Indeed, it had not been granted by anybody. All Cable really had in writing was a promise that it would be granted by the king of Lystria when he was safe on the throne.

"That," said King Wladislaws, "is why I say that things had better be left as they are."

"But they can't," I said. "Emily's curate can't be left in prison. You don't know my sister Emily or you wouldn't suggest it. Besides, there's Janet Church to be reckoned with."

"I think," said the king, "that by this time the young man has probably been released, perhaps married, possibly even crowned."

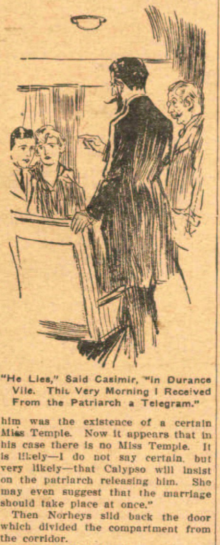
"Good G—d!" said Troyte. "You don't mean to say you actually think—"

The king waved his hand cheerfully.

"The patriarch," he said, "is a man of unbounded patriotism, devoted to the cause of Lystrian independence. And he dislikes, intensely dislikes, the archimandrite of Megalia. The Lystrian nobility wish for a king, an English king, a sportsman."

"Emily's curate seems to be that," I said.

"My daughter—" said the king. "I am now speaking very confidentially—my daughter rather liked that young man. I liked him myself. Casimir liked him. Everyone liked him. My daughter's only objection to marrying him was the existence of a certain Miss Temple. Now it appears that in his case there is no Miss Temple. It is likely—I do not say certain, but very likely—that Calypso will insist on the patriarch releasing him. She may even suggest that the marriage should take place at once."



"He Lies," Said Casimir, "in Durance Vile. This Very Morning I Received From the Patriarch a Telegram."

Then Norheys slid back the door which divided the compartment from the corridor.

"Thought I'd look in," he said, "just to see how you're getting on. Viola has dropped off into a doze, and I was feeling a bit hipped with no one to talk to."

He looked around with an amiable smile, as if he were sure of a warm welcome. He got nothing of the sort. Troyte and Cable scowled at him. The king regarded him as an inconvenient outsider. I looked the other way. Casimir was the only one who spoke. He quoted Shakespeare in allusion to Lady Norheys' doze:

> Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleave > of care.

"Hit it in one," said Norheys, settling down between Cable and the king. "Well, Uncle Ned, settled up the affairs of eastern Europe?"

"No," said Troyte.

"Well," said Norheys. "I don't want to chip in, don't you know. I hate fellows who shove their oars in when not asked. Still, what I always say is this: An ordinary sort of fellow with no particular brains and that kind of thing often gets there, though you don't expect him to. That's why I'm offering to help. It seems to me the position is this—you'll pick me up if I'm wrong about facts, won't you, Uncle Ned? I'm often a bit weak on facts."

"Facts in this case," I said, "are much more like fancies."

"That's just where I come in," said Norheys. "A fact might have knocked me out, but when it comes to fancies, I'm there all the time. Well now, these Lystrian johnnies seem to want a king. Don't see why they do myself; but there it is. They've got a princess, but that doesn't satisfy them."

"It doesn't satisfy the League of Nations," said the king, "or the Entente powers. That's where the trouble is. The Lystrians would be quite satisfied with Calypso. In fact, they'd be very glad to have me back again, all of them except the patriarch. But the Entente powers simply won't stand me."

"That comes to exactly the same thing as what I said," said Norheys. "Well, along comes some fellow we don't know, dropping like what-d'you-call-him from the thing-a-me-bob. What?"

"A deus ex machina," I suggested.

"That's not what I meant," said Norheys. "I meant a jolly old bolt from the blue. But whatever we call him, thunderbolt or little tin god there he is, quite ready to take on the job, princess and all. That's the way things stand, isn't it, Uncle Ned?"

Troyte was looking out of the window. Casimir murmured something about a Daniel coming to judgment. Norheys went on:

"Well, then, why not let him? That's what I always say: If there's a fellow who'll buck in where wanted, then let him buck in; so long as he doesn't interfere with us."

"Unfortunately," said Troyte coldly, "you've left out of consideration the League of Nations and the treaty of Versailles, and the policy of the Allied Powers."

"What I say about all that," said Norheys, "is this: What did we fight the war for? I don't know, of course, not so to speak out of my own inside. I just fought because all the other fellows I knew did too. But I do know what you said at the time, Uncle Ned, and it's no use your saying you didn't, for you did. What we fought for was the self-determination of small nationalities. Well, there you are, and you can't go back on it now. Lystria is a small nationality, isn't it?"

"Two and a half millions before the war," said the king. "Probably about two millions now."

"Couldn't possibly have a smaller nationality," said Norheys, "and what I always say is this, Uncle Ned: If you've said a thing, you've jolly well got to stick to it, even if you wish you'd said something else, which of course everybody generally does."

I felt quite sorry for Troyte. He really did talk about small nationalities and self-determination several times during the later years of the war. I dare say he deserved to be twitted with it. But I felt I must speak a word for him.

"You forget," I said to Norheys, "that you also fought to make the world safe for democracy. Setting up an absolute monarch in Lystria is not democracy."

"When I talk about democracy," said Norheys, "or rather when other fellows like you, Uncle Bill, talk about democracy—for it's a thing I never mention myself either in a club or anywhere else—I always say that the first thing is to settle: What is democracy?"

We all felt, I think, that Norheys had better be left to answer his own question. Troyte, I know, distrusts the American formula—"By, with, for, to, at, in, the people." None of the rest of us had a formula at all.

"Democracy," said Norheys, "simply means being able to say, 'You go to h—l' to any fellow who tries to come it over on you. That's my idea of democracy, and you may say what you like, Uncle Bill, that's what most of us jolly well fought for. Though what I always say is this: We were rather let down in the end. Still there is, don't you know, a sacred principle and all that, the sort of thing no decent fellow ever goes back on."

"The Lystrians," I said, "are evidently out-and-out democrats. 'You go to h—l' seems exactly to describe their attitude toward the rest of Europe."

"Well, then, there you are," said Norheys. "And if y[illegible] there, what's the use of worrying?"

The attendant from the restaurant car came along and told us that luncheon was served. Norheys rushed off to waken Viola. The rest of us staggered along the swaying corridor. Troyte's forehead was lined with a deep frown, always a sign that he was engaged in serious thought. I remembered exactly the same wrinkles when he was bothered over the writing of Greek iambics at school, which were considered in our day a necessary part of the education of an English gentleman.

Scholars on Strike

Strikes are not a modern trouble. One of the earliest and oddest strikes on record is that which took place in Oxford, England, in 1209, when, in consequence of a peculiarly outrageous aggression of town upon gown, masters and scholars to the number of 3,000 "downed tools" and retired in high dudgeon to adjacent centers of learning. The schools were closed, the city was laid under an interdict, and the trouble only ended five years later—in the complete humiliation of the erring burgesses, who were compelled to do public penance and to accord large privileges to the university. When the offended clerks finally condescended to return, these "blacklegs," who had continued to lecture in defiance of the will of the majority were punished by three years' suspension.

Made Use of Physical Deformity for Profit

There is at Ripon, in Yorkshire, England, an old hostelry, the Unicorn, at which is preserved an etching of a character who once was "boots" there.

"Old Boots," as he was familiarly known to many who never knew him by any other title, flourished from about the middle of the Eighteenth century, and now lies somewhere in the yard of Ripon minster. He was endowed by nature with a nose and chin so inordinately long and so tending to embrace each other that at length he acquired the power of holding a piece of money between them. Thus he was able to turn his deformity to commercial account.

It was a part of his duty to wait upon travelers arriving at the inn, to assist them in removing their boots; and he usually introduced himself carrying a pair of slippers in one hand and a bootjack in the other, and we are told that the company generally were so diverted by his appearance that frequently they would give him a piece of money on condition that he held it between his nose and chin.

Other times, other tastes, and it seems hardly possible that modern travelers would lend themselves to such an exhibition.

For automobile tourists an inventor has combined a spare tire and tool carrier, camp table and lunch kit.

HOW TWO WOMEN AVOIDED OPERATIONS

The Following Letters of Mrs. Thurston and Mrs. Beard Carry an Encouraging Message to Other Sick Women

MRS. ETHEL THURSTON
324 N. PINE STREET, LIMA, OHIO

Lima, Ohio.—"I want to tell you how your medicine has helped me. For weeks I suffered with awful pains from inflammation and I was in such misery that I had to bend double to get relief. I could not be touched or jarred, had awful pain all over my abdomen and could not touch my feet to the floor. It was impossible for me to straighten up and the pains never ceased. I took treatments for some time and finally was told I would have to have an operation. I do not believe in operations, and I had read so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I told my husband I would try it before I gave up. I soon began to feel that it was doing me good. The awful misery began to leave me, also the backache. I have a good appetite and am gaining in weight. Taking the medicine was the best thing I ever did. I feel like it has saved my life and I do not hesitate to say so to my friends. At least it saved me from a dreaded operation and I am still taking it. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Ethel Thurston, 324 North Pine Street, Lima, Ohio.

Mrs. Beard's Letter

Eddy, Texas.—"I will write you a few words, thinking it will do some one else good. Two doctors said I would have to be operated on because for nearly twelve months I suffered from a weakness from which I could get no relief. I was restless and nervous and was not able to walk across the house. They said it was the Change of Life. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers, and as I could not get any help from doctors I thought I would give that a trial. I began with the liquid and it helped me some, then you advised me to take the tablet form and I began to improve rapidly. I have gained in weight from 105 to 170 pounds. I recommend it to all women with this trouble."—Mrs. M. E. Beard, R. No. 1, Box 143, Eddy, Texas.

And this is how Prof. Evvard would give the pigs the "running start:" "Put the sows on full feed, giving them all the corn they will eat two or three times daily. If shelled corn is available, put it in a self-feeder for them, allowing a few days to put them on the full feed. Give them also as much oats preferably ground, as they care to eat of the self feeder. In addition allow them tankage in the self feeder. A good mineral mixture should likewise be allowed, self fed as the tankage. Even better results may be made by using a mixture of tankage, linseed oil meal and alfalfa meal in place of the straight tankage in the self feeder. This mixture will give somewhat better results than the straight tankage, particularly when the pastures get dry and hard. The alfalfa meal is of importance in that it helps to provide some of the missing vitamines. The linseed oil meal tankage and alfalfa meal combination is especially good because it provides a "good quality" protein mixture for balancing the farm grown corn and oats. Four or five pounds of skim or butter milk instead of the each pound of corn feed."

PROPER FOOD FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

The age during which children are attending school may aptly be called "The Dangerous Age." It is the period of rapid growth and every care should be taken to insure the child of a normal and healthy body. The idea of eating only fit and wholesome foods should be early impressed on the younger members of every family in order to protect them against later ill health and its accompanying unhappiness. If the utmost care is not taken in the diet that is used by children, cases of food poisoning, indigestion and kindred ailments may result.

And milk, being the chief item in the diets of most children, should be carefully guarded. It is, because of its nature, prone to infection if exposed to germs and may soon become unfit for use. Wherever there is the slightest reason for doubt as to its purity and food value, steps should be taken to insure the sterility and the fitness of milk intended for consumption by children. Many mothers have adopted the excellent practice of using milk that is absolutely pure and sterile and free from any germs or bacteria. The most satisfactory, as well as the safest milk used in preparing food for the growing child is evaporated milk.

It is sterile, and therefore safe. It is more digestible than market milk.

Its uniformity, convenience and cost are qualities that recommend it.

The following dishes are well suited to the needs of the growing child; they are easily digested and very nourishing:

Caramel Custard.

- 1 cup evaporated milk diluted with
- 1 cup water
- 3 eggs
- ¼ cup sugar (caramelized)
- 2 tbsp. sugar
- ⅛ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. vanilla

Scald the diluted milk. Caramelize the sugar and add to milk to dissolve. Beat eggs slightly, add sugar, salt, and flavoring and combine with scalded milk. Pour into custard cups and set in a pan of hot water and cook in a moderate oven. When done, a knife blade run in the center will come out clean.

Fish Chowder.

- 1 pint raw fish cut in 1-inch dice
- 6 small potatoes, sliced
- 2 onions chopped fine
- ¼ pound fat salt pork, sliced
- 3 cups boiling water
- 1 cup evaporated milk diluted with
- 1 cup water
- 6 crackers

Fry out the salt pork. When brown, remove pieces of pork and put fish, potatoes, and onions in kettle. Cover with boiling water. Simmer until potatoes are tender. Add the milk and cook 5 minutes longer. Season with salt and pepper. Just before serving add the crackers.

Members of the Gladue Concert Co. 2nd number on the High School Lecture Course entertained a not very large audience on Monday evening. The vaudeville features of the program were well appreciated and the songs and instrumental work seemed to call forth the appreciation of the crowd as expected. Mr. Gladue as the negro was extremely well made up and his rendering of the colored people's songs was a feature of the entertainment. The technique of the violinist of the troupe is certainly high grade. Altogether the concert gave fair satisfaction. We are of the opinion that this repertoire in entertainment is slightly overworked and if a few snappy original elocutionary or impersonation features were added it would give zest to the show.

Gigantic Strength of Insects

Did you ever experience the delightful feeling of an inch-long pinch bug holding your finger in his pincers? He usually hangs right on and you raise him to any height. The strength of that bug if it could be applied to the human family would mean that when you run your automobile weighing 3800 pounds into the ditch wrong side up, you would single handed easily lift it out of the mud and turn it right side up with care on the highway. If you knew what tremendous weights comparatively some insects could raise you would be dumbfounded.

Take for instance the common black ant. A healthy black ant will lift easily eight times it own weight A man as strong as this would lift a medium sized horse onto his back and trot off with him. If you had as much strength in proportion to your size as the bug you would drag a freight train of 100 tons along the track. Now the lowly flea seems diminutive yet he can leap 12 inches high. What would this mean to a man of six feet in height. It means the man would leap with ease right over the tops of the tallest skyscrapers in Chicago without batting an eye. A threaded waist wasp (the common variety) will spring upon a caterpillar and by stinging the worm paralyze him so completely that he is helpless. Then Mr. Wasp will lug him away to his den which means the human kind could easily raise a 2,000 pound ox on a barn door and carry him to town. Without setting the burden down. Looks fishy, don't it? But its a fact.

Fifteen members of the Friendship Chapter, order of DeMolay, of Jonesville attended services at the Methodist church last Sunday night, notwithstanding the storm. Music fitting the occasion was rendered by Prof. Perkins and the Junior choir. A brief service of petition in behalf of their fathers and mothers and aged people of the parent order, conducted by the young men, following the sermon by the pastor, was especially beautiful and impressive. These young men will be welcomed whenever, in the future. they may see fit to worship with the church.

H. R. Smith and Colonel E. H. Kerr are shipping to Hillsdale county a car load of high grade Holsteins from Wisconsin. These cows are of a high producing milk strain of Holsteins and are for use on the Smith farm in Somerset and for distribution to other farmers who desire them. The heavy demand for high class milkers for eastern shipment has greatly depleted the good herds in the county. Eastern buyers have paid as high as $150 per cow to farmers in Somerset and Wheatland townships for extra good milkers. The advertising which has been given to the testing of Hillsdale county cattle has brought buyers here so we in turn, must buy from accredited areas further west.

Fatal Accident at Michigan City

Kenneth C. Durbin grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gamble of this vicinity came to a sudden and disasterous death on last week Thursday evening at Michigan City Ind., when by some accident his foot slipped and he fell in contact with live wires of the Southern Electric Co. He was found grasping one wire, and it was sometime before he could be removed.

He was born in Jackson Michigan August 23, 19 4, spent sometime with his grand-parents previous to his marriage which took place March 22, 1923 to Miss Ethel Caskey daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Caskey who survives him. He is also survived by his father Charles Durbin of Danville Illinois, a half brother Donald Holder and the grandparents.

Funeral services were conducted at Miner's Undertaking Parlors in Hillsdale Sunday November 15th, at 2 o'clock. Rev. Virgil Hunt of the North Adams Congregational church officiating. Mrs. Hunt sang. Burial was in North Adams cemetery.

Music was furnished by the orchestra; paper, "Moral Education of the Child" Mrs. Mary Wertz: paper, "Praise vs. Criticism" Supt. R. C. Young, which by the way was the same as given by him at the teacher's meeting; piano duet, Lois and Muriel Holcomb: the very interesting program was closed by singing "America" A committee consisting of Mrs. Gertrude Young and Miss Genivieve Evens were appointed as a program committee for the December meeting.

Cider Was The Cause

A lot of our citizens doubtless have wondered why the electric current we are supposed to get from Hudson petered out so suddenly Sunday night on Nov. 8th, and remained so for the better part of a half hour. The Hudson Post explains it as follows:

"Electric light people usually have all sorts of excuses why the light went out; especially on Sunday evening just as the services were about to start. It is a saying in some big towns that they keep a staff of artists on hand just to think up unusual stories that will appease the people and still get past.

However, the story of why the lights went out on Sunday evening is not only an unusual one, but is moreover strictly true. The Southern Michigan Light & Power Co, have been buying their current from the Adrian plant, transferring it to Hudson by means of high voltage wires. Saturday night it rained with the result that creeks and streams were swollen and the Raisin river which passes through Adrian near the plant of the Adrian company, brought down a lot of cider pumice from some cider mill up stream. The refuse, together with leaves and other debris, backed up into the condensers of the plant and threw them out of commission. Officials of the Hudson company immediately endeavored to get in touch with Morenci and hook up with the current purchased from Toledo, but were unable to do so for something over a half hour."

So that's it. Just as we expected! The condensers got a jag on. and on Sunday night too! Horror of horrors! That's what ailed our transformer at the east corporation line all the time and we didn't mistrust it at al., though several passers-by have reported an odor of raisins and rainwater.

Why the Sheetrock way is the quickest way

QUICK construction is one of the important advantages you get in using Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard.

For Sheetrock comes all ready to use. You simply nail the wide, ceiling-high sheets to the supports. The trim and decoration can follow without waiting for the walls to dry.

Besides being ready for immediate decoration, Sheetrock walls are proof against cold and damp, fire and sound. They are non-warping, non-buckling and permanent.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Features of Tax Reduction Bill as Completed by the House Committee.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE house ways and means committee last week completed its draft of the tax reduction measure which will be put forward by the administration in the next session of congress, and as it will have the support of the conservative Democrats its passage is virtually assured. Aggregate reductions of income and other taxes are estimated at $308,372,709. There will be no decrease in surtaxes on incomes between $10,000 and $45,000 because it was found such decrease would result in too great loss of revenue; but those incomes get the benefit of increased exemptions and decreases in the normal rates. Accepting the advice of the treasury experts, the committee rescinded its previous action extending the $400 exemption for each child below eighteen years of age so as to include those up to twenty-one years when still in school. Administrative difficulties made this extension undesirable.

In the measure adopted the surtax schedule starts at one per cent upon net incomes in excess of $10,000 and not in excess of $14,000, as provided in the present law. One per cent is added, as in the present law, for each additional $2,000 up to $30,000. A ten per cent rate is reached, as at present, on the amount of net income in excess of $30,000 and not in excess of $34,000. Eleven per cent applies between $34,000 and $36,000, 12 per cent between $36,000 and $38,000, and 13 per cent between $38,000 and $42,000. The existing act has a rate of 14 per cent between $42,000 and $44,000, but the new schedule extends the 14 per cent rate up to $46,000.

Under the new schedule there is a surtax of 15 per cent between $46,000 and $50,000, 16 per cent between $50,000 and $60,000, 17 per cent between $60,000 and $70,000, 18 per cent between $70,000 and $80,000, 19 per cent between $80,000 and $100,000, and 20 per cent on that portion of net income in excess of $100,000. The 40 per cent maximum of the present law applies above $500,000, while the 20 per cent rate of the present law is reached at $56,000.

With every disposition to be liberal, the committee still found it wise to reject a number of proposals that would be likely to cut down too far the government's revenue. Among these was an amendment under which small corporations and partnerships might have the option of filing returns as corporations or partnerships, thus electing whether to be taxed at a flat 12½ per cent or to be subject to surtaxes. Another was the elimination of the present 12½ per cent limitation on taxes and deductions for capital gains and losses. A 10 per cent tax on pistols and revolvers was retained.

Income taxes	$193,574,546
Gift tax	1,000,000
Cigars and tobacco	12,000,000
Alcohol	4,000,000
Excise taxes	84,367,163
Occupational taxes	11,431,000
Stamp taxes	2,000,000

In considering proposals for the reorganization of the board of tax appeals the committee tentatively approved a permanent board of 16 members with either long terms or life tenures, subject to removal for malfeasance in office; an increase in salary from $7,000 to $9,000, a prohibition against practice before the board at any time by members who are removed and a ban against practice within four years by members resigning.

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL started out to make good on his promise to sustain his many charges against the air service, and his witnesses, one after another, confirmed his accusations of maladministration by the army and navy officials. The law officer of the trial board, Col. Blanton Winship, gave him a free rein. Maj. Carl Spatz, chief of the tactical unit of the training division of the air service, gave various instances of alleged mismanagement by the War department and declared he believed the development of aviation was being retarded by the department's attitude. Asked his opinion of the knowledge of the general staff in aviation, he replied:

"It is the knowledge of men who have not been trained in aviation. With the exception of Maj. M. F. Harmon and Maj. G. C. Brandt, no officers of the general staff have had the air service training that comes of having been in command of tactical units."

Capt. Robert Oldys, who has supervision of defense projects in the overseas possessions, said his recommendations in many instances had not been followed and he was not given sufficient equipment or personnel to carry out the plans that were approved.

To support Mitchell's accusation that high ranking officers had made false and misleading statements to boards of investigation, General Fries, head of the chemical warfare service, was called. His testimony was contradictory to the statement made by General Drum, assistant chief of staff, that it would take 3,439,000 pounds of mustard gas to render the District of Columbia unoccupiable and that 2,000 planes would be needed to carry the gas. General Fries said the job could be done with 960 planes each carrying a 1,000-pound gas bomb.

On Thursday five officers of long experience in the air service told the court of deaths, delays and damages which they attributed to the shortcomings of the department, of neglected training and recommendations ignored; and on following days the testimony along this line was piled up by the defense.

Mrs. Lansdowne's charges that naval officials attempted to dictate her testimony before the naval court inquiry on the destruction of the Shenandoah were repeated by her at the Mitchell trial, and are to be thoroughly investigated by the Navy department. Mrs. Lansdowne asserts that Capt. Paul Foley, judge advocate of the naval court, called at her home and questioned her, and that later she was given a letter purporting to come from Foley, containing a statement for her to use in testifying before the court.

FORCED to a showdown by the demands of the council of ambassadors on the subject of disarmament, the German government has yielded on all points, and as a result it is expected that the evacuation of the Cologne area will begin on December 1. Little or nothing of Germany's military glory will remain. Here are the main changes to be made by Berlin:

General von Seeckt, commander of the reichswehr, is to be replaced by a civilian holding a political office, and the corps commanders will be responsible to him. The general staff will be liquidated. The security police will be recruited on a basis of life-long service and all military titles in it will be abolished. The big guns yet remaining in the fortress of Koenigsberg will be destroyed. The German government undertakes to prevent military training of the German youth.

These concessions by the government, it is predicted, will make impossible the ratification of the Locarno pacts before December 1. Consequently it is likely the treaties will be signed by Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann under special authorization of President von Hindenburg, based on an article of the constitution.

KING TUTANKHAMEN, who had lain undisturbed in his tomb at Luxor, Egypt, since 1348 B. C., was lifted from his coffin Thursday by Howard Carter and propped up against a wall. There the scientists of the expedition submitted the mummy to an X-ray examination, and they hope to determine thus whether the pharaoh died of tuberculosis, as some Egyptologists think, or was murdered, as Mr. Carter suspects. Tut's internal organs, which were found in jars, will be analyzed for possible traces of poison. Mr. Carter has a theory that the king was slain by General Horemheb, who usurped the throne. The mummy was incased in three golden inner coffins which are said to be wonderfully decorated. Carter's operations are surrounded with extraordinary secrecy.

NEWS from China was exciting last week—if you can get excited over news from China. For several weeks the forces in opposition to Marshal Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian, had been gathering strength, and finally they drove him and his troops northward and threatened to cut off his retreat. Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang assumed full control at Peking, where the government officials were virtual prisoners, and on Thursday word came via Hawaii indicating that martial law had been proclaimed and that President Tuan Chi-jui had resigned. Members of the cabinet and other officials who supported Chang already had thrown up their jobs and fled. Gen. Sun Chuan-Fang, governor of Chekiang, it is said, is planning to attack Manchuria with troops that are being embarked at Shanghai and Haichow.

MUSSOLINI emerges stronger than ever from the rumpus caused by the recent plot to assassinate him. The plan, according to official investigators, was first to kill the premier and then to overthrow the government by an armed revolt. The chief conspirators, presumably, are under arrest and will be punished, but the dictator wisely restrained his Fascist hosts from exacting promiscuous vengeance. Socialist organizations are being suppressed.

Another ruler, King Ferdinand of Rumania, escaped assassination which was plotted by Communists.

REFUNDING of Italy's debt to the United States was concluded on generous terms to the debtor. It is unnecessary to give the details of the settlement. In the words of the American debt commission: "Under this arrangement the total annual payments begin at $5,000,000 and reach $80,000,000 in the last year. For an original debt of $1,648,000,000 the United States will receive during the period of the agreement (62 years) a total of $2,407,000,000.

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE HOOVER, acting on the advice of the fourth national radio conference in Washington, announces that no additional licenses for operation of broadcasting stations will be issued until the present congested condition of the air is cleared up. The conference favored limiting the number of stations and restricting broadcasting on a basis of service to listeners. It voted that direct advertising should be eliminated. Most important of the actions of the conference was the adoption of a legislative program which will be presented to congress. The principles of this program are:

Free speech shall be upheld.

While broadcasting stations shall not be regarded as public utilities, permits to go on the air shall be issued only to those who will render a benefit to the public.

The President shall have power to commandeer stations in period of war.

No monopoly in radio communication shall be permitted.

Appeal from decisions of the secretary of commerce may be made to appropriate courts.

The secretary shall have power to classify all stations, fix and assign call letters, wave length, power, location, time of operation, character of emission and duration of license.

Permits for the construction of broadcasting stations must be secured before construction.

Stations must respect distress signals.

The secretary shall have power of revocation of licenses for failure to comply with the law, regulations of the department or terms of the license.

Existing stations will be given a reasonable length of time to comply with the terms of the new legislation when enacted.

Rebroadcasting shall be prohibited without the consent of the originating station.

Licenses will be granted for a period of five years, renewable for like periods.

Call letters represent a property right during the life of a license and the secretary shall not change wavelength power, time of operation, nor character of emission without the consent of the licensee, unless public necessity demands such changes.

Move to Honor Wilson Runs Into Two Snags

Washington.—The Woodrow Wilson Memorial association, organized here recently by a small group of government employees and others to raise funds for a Woodrow Wilson memorial university, has encountered the withdrawal of Secretary Wilbur as an honorary vice president and open disapproval of its method of organization by a former member of the cabinet under the war President.

After calling on Mrs. Woodrow Wilson here, Josephus Daniels, who served as secretary of the navy in the Wilson cabinet, made this statement in regard to the memorial association:

"I do not think that a memorial university like this should be undertaken without first calling a conference of men who are known to have been close friends of Woodrow Wilson."

The manager and principal organizer of the association, A. W. Lowell, a former newspaper man, is charged in a lawsuit filed against him here with having given a worthless check for $100 to a hotel in Orkney Springs, Va.

R. Moulton Petty, an auditor in the internal revenue bureau, is president of the association, which was organized for the announced purpose of raising $5,500,000 for a memorial university near here on the Virginia side of the Potomac river.

Information that the closest friends of the war President did not look with favor on the project was given by Secretary Wilbur as the reason for his withdrawing his name.

MRS. WILHELMY SAVED BY FRIEND

Doctor Advised Operation Friend Said Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First

St. Paul, Minnesota.—"I was all rundown from overwork and worry, had no appetite, could not sleep at night, and looked like a corpse. I have six children (five boys and one girl) and did not get any strength after my last baby was born. I was getting worse and thinner every day. The doctor said I had to go to the Hospital but this I could not do on account of my family. So I went to a friend of mine and told her what the doctor had told me and she said, 'Now do as I tell you. Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I have done. It helped me.' So I started taking the Vegetable Compound and I noticed after the first few bottles that I felt considerably better. After taking 9 or 10 bottles I got over my fainting spells. Everybody who sees me now notices the great improvement in my health. I am gaining in weight and strength and am feeling fine. Eat well and sleep good nights. Any woman can write to me and I will answer her letter." — Mrs. MARY WILHELMY, 309 Duke Street, St. Paul, Minnesota.

A Michigan Case

Mrs. J. Wagar, Arcade St., Gladwin, Mich., says: "I suffered torture with pains through my back and when I bent over, sharp, knife-like pains darted across my kidneys. I was nervous and had constant headaches and frequent dizzy spells when my sight was blurred by black spots. My kidneys were weak and acted too often. After using one box of Doan's Pills, I was cured."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Mt. Pleasant—Central Michigan Normal's second annual Home coming will be held Friday and Saturday, Nov. 20 and 21.

Owosso—Fire early Thursday caused damage of $5,000 to the plant of the Owosso Baking company. Five thousand loaves of bread were burned. The plant will be shut down for several days as a result.

Holland—The entire freshman class of Hope college was suspended by Dr. E. D. Dimment, president, when 60 members of the class went to school in a body without caps or neckties, contrary to freshman rules. Arrangements are being made for their return to class.

Port Huron—Detroit doctors took up the larger part of the program of the Michigan State Medical society post graduate and clinical conference held at the Hotel Herrington here. Six physicians were on the program that extended from early morning until 6:15 p. m. at which time more than 50 doctors were present for the closing dinner.

Lansing—Plans to hold monthly meetings of the representatives of all the real estate boards in the state where efforts would be made to improve the standards of practice in the business were discussed here at a meeting of 100 representatives of Michigan boards. George C. Keller, of Flint, suggested the plan, which was received favorably.

Albion—Miss Mildred Mapley, formerly of Pontiac, employed in the office of the president of Albion college for the last four years, has been made business secretary of the college. In addition to her other work Miss Mapley will act as business manager until the appointment of a successor to Robert B. Stewart, who resigned to become controller of Purdue university.

Lansing—Mayor Sampel L. Shank, of Indianapolis is to be the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Lansing Association of Credit Men here November 16, it has been announced. The meeting is one of the most important in the business life of the city and draws about 300 business executives each year. Douglas Malloch, Chicago poet, also will be on the program.

Port Huron—Reports from "rum row" on the Canadian shore extending from Sarnia south to Port Lambton, are to the effect that the scows berthed along the river bank for the "export" trade are heavily stocked with liquors for the American Christmas trade. Carloads of liquor are arriving daily in the Sarnia railroad yards and are being quietly distributed to scows in the vicinity, all of which is lawful in Canada.

Grand Rapids—The purpose behind the purchase by Edgar R. Hill, of Chicago, of hundreds of acres of Wyoming township land apparently was disclosed recently when miners began sinking test holes on the property. As Hill is connected with the United States Gypsum company, it is indicated the test holes are to ascertain the amount of plaster rock below the surface, although residents in that vicinity say no gypsum has been struck to the depth they have bored their wells.

Muskegon—As theatre crowds passed the Rice clothing store in odwntown Muskegon, burglars were carrying away 60 suits valued at $3,000. Entrance was made through a rear door found ajar by Patrolman Frankowski, who entered the store as the marauders left by a basement entrance. As the John Strating family dined burglars entered an adjoining room and departed with the family's treasure box, containing a deed to their home, $130 and other valuables.

Pontiac—In an opinion handed down Thursday, Circuit Judge Glenn C. Gillespie set aside the half-million dollar assessment roll spread in 1924 in Royal Oak Township for the raising of money for the construction of drains. Former County Drain Commissioner Cassius J. Crawford was in charge of the work. One hundred and twenty property owners protested against the payment of the assessments, charging they were unequal. They sued the Auditor-General to stop the collection of the tax.

Ann Arbor—Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer, who is now engaged in the Sweet trial in Detroit, will speak to students of the University of Michigan on "Crime, Its Causes and Treatment," in Hill auditorium some time next week. Although the lecture was orginally planned for Wednesday, it is expected that change of date will be necessary to conform more fully with other university plans. Mr. Darrow will be brought to Ann Arbor under the auspices of the lecture committee of the Michigan Union.

Kalamazoo—Suffering from exhaustion after a tramp of 25 miles and his clothing drenched by the downpour of rain, Stanley Roberts, 28 years of age, shell-shocked veteran of the World War, was found wandering eight miles west of here Thursday and brought to the county jail. Roberts had escaped from the Veterans hospital at Camp Custer and was returned there tonight. He was identified as a hospital patient by marks on a towel he had wrapped about his head. Hospital authorities said Robert's home was in Detroit.

Kalamazoo—Frank E. Fry, 60 years old, was killed instantly at Comstock when he drove his automobile onto the Michigan Central railroad tracks directly in front of eastbound train No. 22, known as the "Wolverine." His body, entangled in wreckage of his car was carried on the pilot of the locomotive a third of a mile before the train was brought to a stop. The crossing where the accident occurred is guarded by a watchman. It was believed that rain on the windshield of Fry's automobile obscured his view of the tracks.

REPAID THIS MAN A DOZEN TIMES

"I have been repaid a dozen times over in improved health for every dollar I spent for Tanlac, and the medicine is still building me up every day," is the striking statement of Joseph DeSarne.

"Tanlac has driven pains from my body that had troubled me for ten years. Besides backache, which almost killed me at times, I had rheumatic pain and swelling in my hands and legs, my circulation was poor, feet always cold, nerves undone, my stomach didn't feel right, I had regular headaches and I was a discouraged man.

"I have never seen the equal of Tanlac in my life. It has more than doubled my appetite, my stomach feels great and my general health is so improved that I can not praise Tanlac enough for what it has done and is still doing for me."

What Tanlac has done for others, it can do for you.

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 millions of bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation; made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

WHY SUFFER ANOTHER DAY WITH INDIGESTION?

The big seller today for acute and chronic stomach misery is Dare's Mentha Pepsin and it is such a fine, pleasant and supremely good medicine that if the first bottle you buy doesn't help you—your druggist will return the purchase price.

One man writes, "I Cannot understand why any person will continue to suffer from gastritis or indigestion when Dare's Mentha Pepsin is available."

And tens of thousands of people—many of whom almost died with stomach agony—think the same way.

It's the right medicine for any person who suffers from bad digestion, gas, heaviness and that feeling of suffocation which is always dangerous.

For gastritis, indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach agony—acute or chronic, keep Dare's Mentha Pepsin in mind.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Musterole relieves the congestion and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Rub it on with your finger-tips. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Why The Automobile Driver Should Not Use Alcoholic Liquors

The following paragraphs are selected from papers written on this subject by pupils in the fifth and sixth grades in the annual prize essay contests conducted by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, 1924, 1925.

The paragraphs reveal the fact that some school children are learning why alcohol is out of place in our modern transportation systems.

The daily record in our newspapers of the loss of lives by automobile accidents is alarming. In tracing the causes of these accidents it is found that a great number are caused by the driver being under the influence of alcoholic liquors.

Alcohol is a poison which injures the body, the mind and the morals. Alcohol especially effects the brain and nerves. The automobile is a powerful machine which needs a driver with a perfectly clear brain. Alcohol confuses the brain so that the powers are not under control The cells become so numbed they can not give the right orders.

A driver who has a perfectly steady hand is needed. Alcohol gives him a shaky, trembly, uncertain hand not fit to guide a machine, with its load of precious lives. A moment's slip and there may be loss of life,

The driver needs to think quickly and to act quickly. But even a single drink of alcoholic liquor affects the quickness of a man's nerves, and the accuracy of his actions. He is a bit slow and a bit clumsy.

Alcohol also effects his moral sense. The will power is weakened and there is loss of self control. He loses self respect and forgets his duty to others. He takes the whole road without regarding other people's rights. None are safe on the public highway. Accidents occur and the innocent suffer.

Thus we see the effects of alcoholic liquors upon the body, mind and morals of the automobile driver They prevent a clear brain, a steady hand, power to think quickly, and to act quickly, and interfere with his duty to others. These are good reasons why a driver should not use alcoholic liquors.

—Ruth McBurney, Guernsey Co., Ohio.

In the morning paper there was an account of an accident, which furnishes a good lesson for every automobile driver. Yesterday afternoon a man was speeding down Cliff Drive. On one side of the street was a great embankment. The driver was under the influence of liquor. He was driving along the side of the embankment when suddenly he lost control of the wheel and the car went into the ditch. He was killed instantly and the car was torn to pieces. There are many such accidents each day caused by men who use alcoholic liquors. An automobile driver particularly should let these poisonous drugs alone.

—Beulah Lay, St. Louis School for the Blind, St. Louis, Mo,

There are many ways that alcoholic drink harms the body. One is that it harms the driver himself. It affects his brain. Drinking harms his business. The public will soon find out those who drink, and will not trust themselves with half drunken drivers. People are not willing to take any chances with reckless driving. A drinking driver is likely to have accidents because he can't tell the difference between colors. It is hard for him to get the signal quick enough to avoid having a wreck, thus endangering the lives of those in his car, as well as those he happens to meet or pass.

The automobile drivers require strong, healthy bodies, clear minds and eyesight, with self control. There is no place for alcohol in the serious business of driving a car.

—Elizabeth Hopkins, West Point, Miss.

A man who drives a car should never use alcoholic drink. It affects especially, his brain and nervous system.

Many of our automobile accidents are due to drinking on the part of drivers and chaffeurs.

In the hospitals are often to be found innocent persons who have been injured by the drinking habits of others. A large number of children are killed on the streets when some driver that has been drinking comes along. Many men that are intoxicated with alcohol and drive an automobile meet with very severe accidents. Sometimes when men are hurt or crippled for life, they leave a wife and children who will have to do the best they can to support themselves, or starve.

The people who know the dangers of alcohol have formed anti-alcohol leagues and societies and are educating people by means of newspapers, lectures, magazines, and statistical charts showing the effects upon the community and nation.

—Pearl Thayer, Gibson City, Ford County, Illinois.

There are fifteen million automobiles on the streets and highways in the United States, so we must have careful drivers in the crowded streets. A driver must be able to act and think quickly. A British doctor experimented and found that for an hour after a man had had a drink of beer, he is clumsy in doing work that needs well controlled muscles. Especially bus or cab drivers should not drink beer for they not only put their own lives in danger, but also the lives of those who are in the car with them.

A drinker may act quickly but he may act wrong, as blowing a horn quickly at a child. The child may get frightened and run the wrong way. A driver never knows what a small child will do. A child may run out into the street for no reason at all. An American experimenter found that one quart of light beer interfered with steering. Alcohol slows man's ability to act in response to signals. A man was driving along a street when a small child ran into the street after her ball. That small child was the signal to act, to act quickly, and act right. The man swerved the car and missed the child. Every driver must imagine that every child on the street or on the sidewalk is bent on committing suicide under the wheels of his car. Alcohol dulls judgment and makes a man reckless, dulls his judgment of distance * * *. You wouldn't drive a car that is out of order, why trust it to a man woh is out of order?

—Nameless paper from Nebraska.

We have known for many hundreds of years that alcoholic drinks are very injurious. At tho present time we need men more than ever before who are strong in body and clear in mind. One of the greatest conveniences of the present time is the automobile. It is a blessing to all of us if properly handled, but when put into the hands of those who have not control of their nerves, and are not quick to act, it becomes a dangerous thing.

Any person who uses alcohol should never be trusted with an automobile. He is not only in danger himself but everyone he meets is also in danger. It is not always the drunken man who is the greatest source of distress, for the man who uses alcohol moderately may be so affected that he is daring, thoughtless, careless and consequently dangerous.

—Nameless paper from Eureka, Illinois.—The Union Signal.

State Farmers Win Honors With Swine

Eighteen litters of Michigan pigs reached their goal of one ton weight at six months of age in the state "ton litter" contest held during the past summer, according to figures released here this week by the animal husbandry department at the M. S. C.

The winning litter, in fact, passed the 3,000 pound mark. Hugh Ward, of Fowlerville, checked in a litter of 13 O. I. C. pigs for a total weight of 3,025 pounds when they were 180 days old, for first place in the test. Chester Whites entered by W. R. Kirk, of Fairgrove, finished second with a weight of 2,880 pounds for the 12 in the litter; while third honors in the state contest went to E. E. Cribbs, of Three Rivers, when his litter of 15 Hampshires weighed in at 2,825.

Others among the 18 farmers who piloted litters into the select "ton litter" class were, in the order named: Cleveland Neal, Akron Harry Ward, McBain; Perry Tift, Montgomery; Wm. O'Brien, Constantine; R. J. Davis, Tekonska; Jay Pinckney and Son, McBain; M. J. Withington, Fremont, Ind., Rank Wickham, Potterville; Seymour Hesche, Lowell; Geo. C. Gordon, Quincy; Thos. Sansen, Silverwood; Francis J. Snell, Bad Axe; Ed. Coupar, Marlette; and Ira Hammond, Springport.

The ton litter contest is held each year, under the auspices of Verne H. Freeman, extension specialist at the M. S. C. Valuable prizes, in addition to the honor of qualifying for the ton litter medals are awarded the high pens in each contest. The basic purpose of the contests is said to be stimulation of interest in more efficient pork production in the state.

M. S. C. To Exhibit At Chicago Shows

Livestock from the herds of the M. S. C. will be entered in the competitive classes at the International Livestock Show in Chicago the last of the month, along with entries from Michigan farmers and from other states.

Many blue ribbons have been brought back from the International in former years by the college animals, and it is expected that the prestige of Michigan will be upheld again this fall. In addition to M. S. C.'s star string of horses, beef cattle, swine, and sheep will be entered in the various classes.

Prominent Michigan breeders will also have entries in the competitive classes at the livestock show, giving the state full representation.

Signal triumphs scored by Michigan farmers in the competition of the International Hay and Grain Show in former years will be repeated this fall if predictions are carried out. The state's best growers of field crops have prepared their entries for the Chicago test. A special educational exhibit, featuring the agricultural opportunities of Michigan, will be shown at the Hay and Grain Show by the college, along with similar displays from other states.

Problems of Michigan's fruit crop will be discussed by the state horticultural society during its annual meeting, to be held at Grand Rapids from December 1-3. Leading fruit growers of the state, members of the horticultural staff and students at the M. S. C., and prominent speakers from outside the state are included on the announced program for the three day meeting There will also be special exhibits of nursery products, spray machinery, insecticides, etc., according to H. D. Hootman, extension specialist at M. S. C. and secretary of the society.

IT is the spirit of the Northland, imprisoned by a magician of the pen and made manifest in a great human drama enacted in the unmapped region below the Arctic. An epic of the fur trade into which is entwined vivid personalities and intense emotions, strong loves and bitter hatreds. Amazingly real and swift in action. It is the best story yet written by George Marsh, novelist of superior talent, who selects his scenes from the great white places and his characters from the dwellers therein.

They Won't Be Missed

The Swigart Land Co., of Chicago have decided it is too warm for them in Michigan and have gone to greener pastures—in other words they have withdrawn from the Wolverine state on account of stringent rulings passed by the Michigan Securities Commission. After due consideration it has been found the Swigart Company have been doing crooked business in land and have sold farms in this state to negroes, which upon investigation have been utterly worthless for agricultural purposes. This is probably not the first Land company who have done that trick but more than likely they have gone at it so brazenly and so absolutely care-free the Commission could not well avoid pinching them. You will find the advertising of Swigart in pretty nearly every big paper which comes out of Chicago, telling of the fair land of Michigan where golden dollars grow on bushes and you have only to pluck them. Most of the land handled by these companies is in northern counties adjacent to Lake Michigan and while highly recommended for peach and fruit culture will not on the average support common weeds. It is a fact that not even beans can be raised there. A good deal of the country is simply ex-sand dunes blown up from the lake's bottom which are as devoid of humus as the bed of a stone quarry and worth on the average about 50 to 75 cents per acre.

City dwellers who have never in their lives been outside of Chicago often suppose that most any land in Michigan will grow large luxurient peaches such as they are accustomed to eat, but after losing their hard-earned dollars in such worthless speculation awake too late to climb out of it. It is too bad that hanging in Michigan is not permissible. If it were and could be applied to a few land sharks the country would be much relieved. We are not supposing the Swigart's entire stock in trade is this kind of property. It is probable they have some decent city lots which they would sell for a fortune, but their dealings with classes of people who would not know a fertile square inch of soil from a lake or a stone quarry, should be kiboshed.

New York Central Ready For Heavy Winter Traffic

With the season for track work drawing to a close the New York Central Railroad reports its lines in perfect condition for heavy winter traffic.

Some idea of the immense amount of work required to maintain a great railroad continuously in first-class condition may be gained from the fact that the New York Central Railroad used 1,320,000 ties for replacement on the Lines East of Buffalo, embracing 8,136 miles of track in 3,111 miles of line, during the season now drawing to a close. At the New York Central standard of 3,200 ties to the mile this quantity would have laid a continuous line of track from Grand Central Terminal in New York City to Corfu, New York, 25 miles East of Buffalo. Part of these ties were hardwood from the Adirondacks, the rest were pine from Cadada, Nova Scotia, Georgia and Alabama. All were creosoted, for ties are now so expensive that it pays to take good care of them.

Other items required for the maintenance of this part of the New York Central system for one year included 55,000 tons of steel rails, which would have laid 344 miles of continuous track. The greater part of these rails were open hearth, 105 pounds to the yard; but 3,000 tons were 127 pounds to the yard, 7 inches high, which is to be the standard for the main line. One thousand tons of the total was of manganese steel which has five to seven times the wearing quality of open hearth steel, for use in sharp curves where the wear is heavy.

The 20,350 switches in this territory also wear out and have to be renewed at the rate of 1,500 a year

To prolong the life of rails, angle bars, bolts, spikes and switch points they are oiled once a year with 90 gallons of oil per mile. The oil is applied from a tank car drawn by a locomotive at the rate of 20 miles an hour while the oil is forced out by compressed air at 75 pounds pressure against the web, ball and flange of the rail. This checks rust due to exposure and brine drippings from the refrigerator cars, greatly prolongs the life of the metal and makes handling of nuts, bolts and spikes easier for section men.

To do all this required an average force of 3,000 men throughout the season from April to December in addition to the regular force of section men. The season was not unusual but, on the contrary, was about the usual routine of continuous rebuilding, for a railroad, like woman's work, is never done.

Annual Y. W. C. A. Report

To meet a steadily developing program of activities in Hillsdale county, the County Young Woman's Christian Association is seeking this month to secure support that will be more nearly adequate. The record of work which the Association offers the county has been steadily developing since three years ago.

The local work in various committees includes; Girl Reserve work among girls in the High School; grammar school and some open county district schools, and club work and classes among young women stressing especially handcraft, gymnasium, discussions and recreation. During the past year there have been six high school reserve clubs in Allen, Frontier, Hillsdale, Hudson, Pittsford and Reading; grade school clubs in Hillsdale and Hudson and an open county group taking in girls from the Hoxie, Nethaway, Mud Lake and Bross school districts- Activities among young women have included business girls' groups in Hillsdale and Hudson; basketry classes in Cambria township and Nethaway school district; gymnasium classes in Hillsdale and Hudson.

District-wide work during the past year included two membership meetings when women and girls assembled from all over the district. The program of the annual meeiing in January included demonstration of work done thruout the district, an address by a National secretary of the association and a significant membership ceremoniel service. The spring meeting at Cambria was addressed by a Russian born association secretary recently returned from Esthonia. To the girls of the district one of the most significant district wide meetings was the two-day spring conference in Reading. The theme of this conference was vocations for girls and specialists in the occupations of Business, Home Economics, Journalism, Nursing, Recreation. Social Service and Teaching, gave to the girls talks, Demonstrations and personal conferences. A Vocational Guidance expert summarized the discussions and gave a very helpful talk on "How to choose your vocation."

Girls who attended the summer camps for High School and grade school girls and their families and friends are very sure that has been the most worth while part of the Association program. There with every minute of every day filled with a balanced, attractive program and with a camp staff of leaders, which included a trained nurse three young women who have specialized in physical education. a nature study enthusiast, a dietician and an excellent cook, all of whom were willing and able to bend their energies to the creation of an ideal Christian community in Camp Namroun, the "Village of Light" with this equipment; the "best camp ever" was realized.

Probably as a result of the success of many pieces of work last year, the fall of 1925 has brought to the headquarters office in Hillsdale many more requests. The present outlook for the year shows a prospect of new work in every direction. New handicraft classes have been started in the Hoxie school district, Frontier and Hudson, and the Phoenix club of Cambria are also receiving instruction from the Y. W. C. A. High School Girl Reserve Clubs have been started at Prattville and Waldron and one in the process of mobilization in Jonesville: Three other requests have come from High Schools in the county but work probably cannot be started there before the first of the new year.

Support for the work of the Association has never been adequately given by the county outside of Hillsdale, sometimes because there was not local work in a particular town and sometimes because there were not local workers to raise the needed funds. This year with the outlook of growing work there is a greater need than ever before for such support. The District Board have been very fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. E. S. Hadley from the headquarters of the organization who will have charge of the campaign in the county.

The budget of $3,700.00 has been assigned to the three units of the organization. To Hillsdale $2,000; to Hudson $700.00; and to the other towns of Hillsdale county $1,000. The program as outlined. shows more than half the work being done in these smaller towns and neighborhoods of the county and the cost at less than one-third of the total. Beyond the general assignment of $1,000 to the county no quota will be assigned the various towns. It is expected that the county as one family. will support the work for the family, those who are most able, carrying the share of those who are less able and together realizing the family fellowship. The items of the budget include the salary of the secretary, expense to the car, supplies, telephone, program helps and support of the National and world work of the Association.

During this week there will he many group meetings of women throughout the county to consider the work of the Association and devise plans for doing their share of the work. These plans will be brought to a focus on Saturday morning of this week at a meeting of county women which will be held at the College Baptist church in Hillsdale at ten o'clock in the morning. Final arrangements will be made for a united drive the following week. Following this meeting the workers will have a potluck dinner together and in the afternoon they will participate in a membership meeting at which Miss Katherine Vaughn of Canton China will speak of the work of the Association on the other side of the world.

Chance To Win 50 Dollars

Has Hillsdale County a boy radio genius? Well, here is a chance to find out. If there is a juvenile radio builder in this county, he has now an opportunity to vie with the other youthful students of radio in connection with the Chicago Radio Show to be held in the Coliseum November 17 to 22.

With the idea of getting the best ideas in radio and to encourage the youth of the nation to use their ingenuity and technical knowledge to produce something new, the Stewart Warner Speedometer Corporation, one of the country's largest manufacturers of radio sets, announced today that a prize of fifty dollars would be awarded to the boy who is the constructor of the best "home made" radio set submitted. The products of the minds of the boy radio builders should be sent to the Chicago Radio Show, coliseum, Chicago, where a committee of experts will examine the sets of the young radio wizards and select the winner of the contest.

Some of the best ideas which have helped build this infant industry have come from the students of technical high schools. At the various radio shows of the country the school boy has exhibited radio sets which have received the commendation of the experts at these expositions, and it is with the hope of finding a boy radio genius, whose work might otherwise never receive the attention of the world, that prompted this manufacturing concern to offer this prize at the Chicago show.

Here Is Where You May Not Help

Here is a little philosophy put up by a woman lawyer in Indiana and while it rings of right motives the outcome and results would be far from desirable if put into actual practice. She says: "Because the family becomes the unit of the government, the government has an interest in mating every man and woman. To preserve a virile nation states have said that the insane shall not marry and propagate their kind that the feeble minded shall not marry; members of the same family shall not marry. But when we have safe-guarded all such marriages there are still other problems before us. Your sister may be of high mentality but too young to marry; your daughter may want to marry one who is of sufficient age but has a transmissable disease; your friend may want to marry one who is old enough and in excellent health but a moral leper; here is where you may help." This sounds very much like feminine philosophy but as a practice it would ruin the community mighty quick. In the first place there are large numbers of young penple who will marry and are doing so in every community but they are are not crying it from the house tops nor are they asking the permission of every old fizzle top who happens to be in office. A large percent of young folks probably are not really fit for propagation but how are you going to avoid trouble and keep these young folks where they belong? It cannot be done and any official who is sane enough to hold an office (if he or she will consider the whole matter) must of necessity admit defeat. Did it occur to the lady lawyer that this world would be a "hell" if celibacy were forced upon the thousands? Probably not—or if it did, she ignored the stubborn facts simply to make good her argument. If the celibacy of all who are unfit were enforced at once, a crime wave would sweep over this land and prisons and jails would not be sufficient to hold the offenders.

ROAD LIGHTING HELPS

May Be Means of Extending Power Supply for Benefit of Farmers in Vicinity

Forty-eight per cent of the people of the United States live in the country, in communities of 250 and less. Excluding the small farm lighting sets, there remains almost half of the total population who are unable to avail themselves of the service which electricity can render mankind.

Why has electricity been halted at the city limits? The answer is simple. The first central station companies were lighting companies and negotiated contracts for lighting city streets. Later they were granted franchises to operate in whole communities. This admitted of a financial return which warranted the erection of pole lines.

Thus the fundamentals were established for the distribution of energy for purposes other than lighting. But it stopped at the outskirts, chiefly because of the apparent lack of sufficient "business" beyond these limits to warrant the erecting of rural distribution lines.

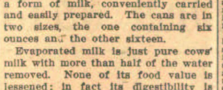
Farmers have been unfortunate in the matter of electrical conveniences from the very fact of their being farmers. They are compelled to make their living in isolated sections. Their isolation has been their handicap.

Lighted Highways Mean Power

Yet this need not be. Highway lighting, say engineers of the General Electric Company, will function as well for the rural districts as street lighting has functioned for the cities, and with the necessary lines in operation across rural districts, lighting up the highways, other electrical conveniences will follow as surely as night follows day. Installed highway lighting systems are but forerunners —they are but a hint—of the broader service of bringing electric light and power to the farmer.

Yet a lighted highway, as such, is not without great intrinsic value to the farmer. Farmers go to market early and often return home late. A lighted highway enables the farmer to make the journey with facility and without fear of collision such as often happens when the farm vehicle is lighted only by a lantern on the axle or dashboard. A lighted highway relieves the farmers of eye-strain. It enables the farmer to perform certain duties around the place which formerly had to be performed either with an oil lantern or not performed at all.

Highway lighting units, stretched along the road in front of a farmhouse, obviate the necessity of stepping out into complete darkness—and the more cheerful outlook which the farmer enjoys from his front windows reacts pleasurably upon him with a pronounced psychological effect. Life to the farmer becomes less of a burden and more of a joy.



FOOD FOR CHILDREN WHO TRAVEL

Many times, and especially during the summer months, mothers are forced to take their children on trips with them. During these trips, the parent is forced to contend with that ever-present and serious problem of food for the child.

As in almost every other case, the chief source of worry, during these periods, is the milk supply, its source, its purity and its food value. It is not always convenient to get market milk of dependable quality for, in many sections of the country, adequate facilities for its care are not provided. To meet the needs of mothers in these trying situations, science has provided a form of milk, conveniently carried and easily prepared. The cans are in two sizes, the one containing six ounces and the other sixteen.

Evaporated milk is just pure cows' milk with more than half of the water removed. None of its food value is lessened; in fact its digestibility is improved. It is easily mixed with water and is, undoubtedly, the most practical form of milk for use as a food for children. Some of the country's leading pediatricians recommend its use, employing the following formula:

From Sixth Week to Third Month.

Milk, evaporated	6 ounces
Lime water	8 ounces
Milk sugar	2 ounces

CHAPTER XX

The king and Casimir left us at Breslau. There was no help for that. Neither one nor other of them would have been allowed to cross the frontier. The Megalian government was determined not to have Wladislaws on the throne of Lystria again. And they knew Casimir for a persistent plotter.

They said good-by to us with regret which was quite unfeigned. It must have been intensely annoying to Casimir to miss the last scene of the drama he had planned. It was not working out exactly as he planned it, which made the end all the more exciting for him. What should we find at the Schloss Amberg when we got there? What would Casimir have found if he could have been with us? A wedding and a coronation? The public execution of a pretender to the throne? A counter-revolution, with the Megalian troops in possession of the schloss? A patriarch prime minister under a new monarchy, or—such things have happened in Russia, which is not very far away—a martyred archbishop?

For King Wladislaws the turn of events was even more thrilling. He had developed a personal liking for Tommy, and, in his own way, he was really fond of Calypso. For all he knew when he said good-by to us at Breslau she might be a queen, a prisoner of state, a fugitive among the mountains, a widow, a bride, or an exceedingly indignant young woman anxious for vengeance on everyone concerned in the trick which had been played on her.

I felt very sorry for the king when he had to say good-by to us at Breslau. He is the only king I ever met personally and I liked him. I do not wonder that there is a strong monarchical reaction in Europe at present. If there are many kings like Wladislaws, it is natural enough that their people should want to have them back. Democratic institutions are all very well in their way, but they invariably end in elected presidents. Presidents—I have known three or four in my time—are stodgy compared to King Wladislaws, and Europe does nowadays want a little brightness.

Europe has so long been used to the pomp and pageantry of monarchy that it is hard for the people to accustom themselves to the simplicity of republics. Of course the socialistic element is perfectly satisfied, or at least that wing of the socialists that is not looking for something more radical than republics and seeking communistic forms of government, but there are but few of that class in Lystria.

The next part of our journey was accomplished in much faster time than Tommy and the princess had done it in. We crossed the frontier in a train, for we had no fear of being stopped, and did not feel, as they did, the necessity for keeping off the main traffic routes. We had only twenty-five miles to go by motor. I fancy that we had the same car and the same driver that Tommy did; though I cannot be sure about this. Men of the bearded brigand type are common enough in Lystria and many of them may be chauffeurs. If I kept a car in London—a thing which I cannot afford to do—I should try to persuade the Lystrian chauffeur to come home with me. He would give an air of aristocratic distinction to any car.

But I was not so concerned about the air of distinction just at that time. I wanted to reach the frontier, I wanted to be where I could feel that we were safe, and I was not feeling that way with that brigand-looking individual at the wheel. He would be all right in London where there was a bobby on every corner to offer protection if it were needed, but it was different on the lonely roads we were traveling.

If I had time and aptitude for the literary guidebook style of writing, I should describe our journey through that beautiful and little-known part of Europe. I am sure that people would like to read about the mountains, torrents, villages, long-horned oxen, ruined fortresses and so forth. However, the thing will be done, far more competently than I could hope to do it. Cable has conceived the idea of developing Lystria as a tourist resort as soon as he has the oil industry in working order. He intends to hire a couple of our best-known literary men—he even mentioned the names of those he had in mind—to write the country up. "Lotus Eating in Lystria," I suppose, "with Six Colored Illustrations"; and perhaps "The Beautiful Bypaths Series. Lystria, by— With ten photographs of the author." Cable is extraordinarily thorough. He is writing to an American literary paper for the name of the best-known poetess "raised on their side." He means to commission her to do some Lystrian Lyrics. It is plainly no use my entering into competition with such people by describing the scenery, manners, costumes, customs and morals of the Lystrians.

They are a nice people, and they have a beautiful country, but my only interest just then was to get through it as fast as possible. I was not specially enjoying the scenery, was not noticing the mountains, the torrents, the villages, the pastoral scenes or the ruined fortresses except to note the speed at which we passed them. The quicker we could get by it, all the better pleased I would be. At another time I might return to admire the scenery.

We caught our first glimpse of the Schloss Amberg just as Tommy did, from the top of the hill on the other side of the valley. It was decked with flags. They hung out of every window, fluttered from every flagstaff—there were a good many flagstaffs—and were festooned along the walls.

"I wonder what that means," said Troyte.

"Looks like a king's birthday show," said Norheys. "Wladislaws might have told us what to expect."

"Much more likely to be the princess' wedding," said Cable.

"Perhaps," I said, "it may be a public rejoicing at the death of Emily's curate. I shall be sorry if they've executed him."

The car slid down toward the valley and the stream that ran through it. It was going at a comfortable pace—comfortable because it was rapid. The chauffeur was missing the bumps, and the speed at which we were traveling did not seem to be as fast as it actually was, because of the quality of his driving.

The car crossed the bridge and began to climb up the twisty road to the gate of the schloss. Suddenly a salute was fired by the guns on the walls. They did not all go off at once, and they were not very big guns, but they made quite an impressive amount of noise. Every rifle about the place was shot off at or about the same time, adding a clatter to the din. Our bearded chauffeur, who had been getting more and more excited since we saw the flags, lost control of himself altogether when he heard the guns. He stood up, waved his arms wildly and shouted. There are nasty steep banks on each side of the road. If Norheys, who was sitting in front of the car, had not grabbed the steering wheel, we should certainly have left the road and gone rolling over and over till we reached the river in the valley. In that case we should none of us have heard what had happened about the princess and Tommy. I should have been sorry, for I was full of curiosity.

We left the car at the gate of the schloss and passed into the courtyard. It was half full of soldiers. I fancy that the whole Lystrian army was drawn up there in a square. Many of them were still firing off their rifles. The officers were waving their swords.

Something unusual was happening, but what? All the excitement portended some great event, something in which the entire populace of Lystria was intensely interested. In what way did it concern us, if at all?

We were just in time. Through the door of the chapel at the opposite side of the courtyard came the sound of the wedding march, played on the organ. Tommy, with the princess on his arm, walked out amid deafening cheers. Immediately behind them came Janet Church, a solitary and most unattractive-looking bridesmaid. Behind her thronged the Lystrian nobility. All the Count Casimirs were there, except Istvan. The half-dozen or so nobles with other names were also there. Janet, in an old gray tweed dress, and our party in our traveling clothes were the only commonplace people. The princess was splendid in a dress much finer, also much longer, than the one she had worn when she danced at the Mascotte. Tommy had been fitted out by Count Albert Casimir in a very handsome crimson silk suit with a jacket laced, hussar fashion, with gold. I noticed that he wore one of his own clerical collars round his neck. Perhaps that was his idea of full dress for a ceremonial occasion. Perhaps he did it to please the patriarch. The nobles were gorgeous. No one who has not seen the Lystrian nobility in their best clothes has any idea how magnificent clothes can be. People who understand dressing-up as the Lystrians do ought to have a king of their own. They would be wasted in the drab monotony of a republic. I think Troyte felt this as he looked at the magnificent scene before us. Fortunately, the sun shone brightly. Every color had its full value. Everything that could glitter glittered brilliantly.

Last of all, attended by an amazing number of clergy, the patriarch came from the chapel choir. He wore—but I am not well up in the language of ecclesiastical millinery. His garments may have been copes, chasubles, dalmatics or albs. Whatever they were, they seemed to me to be made of shimmering gold. If they ever disestablish and disendow the church in Lystria, the sale of the patriarch's vestments will go a long way toward paying off the national debt.

The procession moved slowly across the square until Tommy caught sight of us. The moment he did he stopped, and of course everyone else stopped too. He had never seen any of us before, and though we knew who he must be, he could only guess who we were. He turned to Janet Church for help.

Janet knew me and introduced me. I presented the rest of the party. At least, I began the presentation. I had only got as far as Norheys when the princess interrupted me. She rushed forward, threw her arms around Viola's neck and kissed her heartily on both cheeks.

"I know you're Miss Temple," she said.

"Lady Norheys," I corrected.

"You may call her Viola Temple if you like," said Norheys. "What I always say is: When anybody has a name which everybody else knows them by, why not call them it? That's what I said when fellows began to stop calling me Bunny, after I became Norheys, don't you know? I dare say now," he said to Tommy, "that you've often heard of me as Bunny Troyte, and scarcely know me as Norheys. It's just the same with Viola, only, of course, more so, on account of her being much more famous than any of the rest of us."

He was undoubtedly right concerning the "fame" which Miss Viola Temple, as one of the most popular stage dancers of the British metropolis, had enjoyed. That fact had been at the bottom of Lord Troyte's scheme of the Lystrian marriage. With the cool, far-seeing wisdom for which he was noted he had seen in the union a double purpose, the saving of his nephew from an undesirable alliance with a dancer who did not happen to be a princess, and the exploitation of the Lystrian oil fields in the interests of England. He had once remarked to me, when we both felt that we must "save" Norheys from Viola Temple:

"If England is to hold her place in the van of the world's progress she must control an adequate supply of oil. With an English king on the throne of Lystria and an English company at work in the oil fields—"

Troyte is a great statesman. Only a great statesman could or would say a thing like that. Only a sincerely patriotic man could have conceived such a scheme.

The princess, one arm still around Viola's neck, cooed into her ear:

"I'm so glad you've got him safe. I wouldn't have taken him from you for anything. And now I'm married, too. Isn't it splendid? And only for your beautiful letter perhaps neither ever would have been."

"I should like," said Troyte with dignity, "to have some conversation with the patriarch."

The patriarch, it seemed, wanted to have some conversation with Troyte. He had been pushing his way through the excited nobles while the princess was kissing Viola. As soon as he had secured a place for himself in the front row, he made a speech.

Beauty at Least Had Her Interest Aroused

They were dancing lightly and he held her tightly in his manly arms. He closed his eyes for a time and danced here and there in ecstasy. She looked up into his face and suddenly his eyes opened. The music stopped.

"Come, let's go out on the porch," he muttered thickly. He stole a glance at his partner. Never had he seen so ravishing a beauty. He could resist no longer. He took her in his arms.

"Oh, darling, I love you so. Say you will be mine." She looked again into his eyes.

"I'm not rich like Jawn Brown, and I haven't a car, or home, or cellar like his, but I do love you and want you terribly."

Two soft, snow-white arms reached around his neck, and two ruby lips whispered in his ear: "Where is this man Brown?"—Boston Beanpot.

Where Wives Are Boss

What a visiting sea captain calls "he harems" are to be found among the Marquesas islands of the South seas. The bulky, brown Amazonian women are unspoilt by association with oriental ideas, and collect half a dozen husbands or more. The collection is done by the simple expedient of driving the man with a bamboo pole into the harem, thrashing him well to make him thoroughly understand who is in command—and setting him to work on the coconut plantation or at the housework. These conditions only obtain in the islands that are unvisited by steamships. The windjammer trader is the only white man who finds the natives in their primitive condition.

Dancers Occupy Stage for but Few Minutes

A team of dancers who appear nightly in one of the most popular supper clubs on Broadway received a letter from a Park avenue woman, asking them to dance at one of her parties.

The manager of the dancers replied to the letter, stating that the team would be very glad to appear and that their fee was $600.

This brought forth another letter from the matron, who protested that the fee was too high, for the reason that she only wanted the dancers for 15 minutes.

It was this point of view that got a rise out of the two dancers.

"Do you know how many dances we could do in 15 minutes?" asked the feminine portion of the team, who discussed the matter with me. "We could do ten dances—just twice as many as we do nightly in the supper club. Do you realize that it only takes a minute and a half to do each one of our numbers? Even with our pauses between dances and the applause, our whole performance lasts less than ten minutes. And then somebody wants us at cut rates to appear only 15 minutes! It is a laugh, isn't it?"—New York Evening World.

LeRoy, Mich.—"I was troubled with a pain in my right side and in the small of my back. I could not sleep soundly and had no appetite—it seemed that nothing looked good to eat. I was so weak I could scarcely do any work. I wrote to Dr. Pierce, and, upon his advice, took three bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' two of 'Favorite Prescription,' and two of the 'Anuric Tablets,' and occasionally a 'Pleasant Pellet' at bedtime, and I gained nine pounds."—Mrs. Arthur Ruppert, Route 1, Box 15a.

Rural Lodge I. O. O. F. of this village entertained the Jackson Lodge who put on Degree work on Saturday evening last at Fraternal Hall. Members were present from Jackson, Jerome, Hillsdale, Frontier, Addison and one member was taken in. A fine banquet was served in which 125 participated and all returned home feeling the occasion had been well observed.

Fred Rock of this village celebrated his 74th birthday on Sunday And just to help him enjoy the stunt he was given a party in honor of the event. Those present were as follows: Mrs. Robertson of New York City and Miss Mildred Rock of Jackson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Rock; Darrel Rock and family of Pontiac, Carl Rock and family sons, Will Snyder and family all of Jonesville, and two brothers of Mr. Rock, Charles and Ed Rock and their families of Toledo. Notwithstanding the stormy weather the day was very pleasantly passed and a sumptuous dinner served. Another son, George Rock and family of Chicago expected to be present but a sudden change of plans hindered the last from being there.

The terrific snow storm of Sunday closed up all kinds of business and traffic was very limited. The farmers in this section are still hoping for a warmer spell of weather wherein they may be able to husk out the excellent corn crop and take care of the fodder, the largest share of which is still in the field and unhusked. We understand that some potatoes are still undug, taken all round the fall has been very unforunate for farming operations. Old wisacres are at it prognostigating a hard a hard cold winter and much snow, but there is one sure sign which does not indicate a hard winter. Wild geese have not journeyed north as yet—or if they have—must went in the small hours of the morning since no one remembers of seeing a single flock this season. Instinct teaches these birds that the weather is about to change and always they will be seen in hundreds. No one can explain why they have not migrated this season.

Mr and Mrs. E. S. Knowles celebrated their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary at their home here on Sunday, Nov. 15th. Notwithstanding the stormy day 39 were present to help remember the occasion which was a surprise to the couple. A splendid social time was enjoyed and a potluck dinner was served. Those present were: The son Jay Knowles and family and grandson Ralph Knowles and family all of Moscow township, the daughter, Mrs. Clara Culver and family of Jackson, Vern Winfield and family of Albion, Elmer Winfield and family of Scipio, Lewis Miller and family of Litchfield, Ralph Strait and Levi Strait and families of Hanover Frank Wyllis and family of this vicinity, Thomas Caldwell and wife of Springport, and Lew Eggleston and family of this village, all relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Knowles. Mrs. Knowles will be 82 years of age at Christmas time add Mr. Knowles is now 82. The date of their anniversary is really Nov. 19th but for the sake of convenience was observed Sunday.

NEW ERA FOR AGRICULTURE

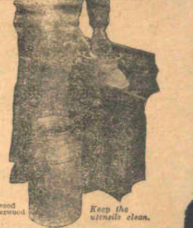
New York.—A new era lies ahead for agriculture because it now commands the best economic thought of the business world directed on its prime requirements of better distribution and marketing, President W C Gordon of the State Bank Division American Bankers Association, declares in a recent communication to the thirteen thousand members of the division. He seeks to enlist their interest in the work of improving the marketing of farm products.

"The farmer today finds himself far removed from his consumer-customer by a long line of intermediate agencies, which often leave him in a position of disadvantage as an individual producer," Mr. Gordon says. "It is, therefore, not strange that he should seek to apply to agriculture those principles of production and distribution found successful in industry. His rightful ambition is to make, where feasible, a general application of successful business experience to the marketing of agricultural products. Commanding the best economic thought of the business world, agriculture undoubtedly stands on the threshold of a new era. In lieu of fantastic panaceas, agricultural welfare—which, after all, is the Nation's welfare—has need of a sane, long range program that is at once practical, constructive and economically sound."

He goes on to call attention to the "long view program suggested for agricultural distribution" at Washington by the Agricultural Conference, urging study of it.

Dairy Cow Efficient Food Producer

Properly built stalls cut down work and bacteria.



© Underwood & Underwood

Keep the utensils clean.

With increasing rentals and values of farm lands, dairy farming is rapidly replacing other types of live stock farming. A dairy cow producing 8,000 pounds of milk a year furnishes 1,000 pounds of dry matter, all of which is edible and digestible. A two year old steer weighing between 1,200 and 1,300 pounds furnishes about 550 pounds of dry matter, not all of which can be used for food. In other words a fairly good producing dairy cow furnishes twice as much edible dry matter in one year as a good two year old steer when he is killed for meat. A cow can be kept for additional years of service, while to replace the steer, another animal must be fed for a period of two years.

The United States consumption of milk per capita has increased from 42 gallons of whole milk in 1918 to more than 54 gallons in 1925.

With growing acceptance of milk as a food has come an increasing knowledge of the proper care of milk on the farm. Because odors from foods and animals in the cow stable are easily taken up by milk, injuring its flavor, they must not come in contact with the milk. Removal of the milk from the stable as soon as possible reduces the amount of dust and dirt entering it and keeps down the bacterial growth in the milk.

Bacteria increase rapidly in warm milk causing it to sour quickly. Removal of the animal heat from freshly drawn milk by lowering the temperature to that of cold well water (approximately 60° F.), greatly aids in preventing bacterial growth. A well lighted, well ventilated milk house, not too close to the stable, is also very helpful.

Cleanliness in the stable is vitally necessary. The stall platform should be just long enough for the cow to stand comfortably without room to spare; otherwise, the cow will become dirty from droppings when she lies down. The gutter should be wide and deep. A good gutter is 16 inches to 18 inches in width and 9 or 10 inches below the platform. Bedding should be clean and plenteous.

Long hair on the flanks, udders and tail above the switch of the dairy cow should be removed at regular intervals. Removing this long hair removes the clinging places of dirt which otherwise will fall into the milk pail in quantities. Keeping the hair short on these parts of the cow permits cleaning in much less time and more thoroughly. Brushing should never be neglected. It removes loose particles sticking to the body. When the hair is short, wiping the udders with a damp cloth just before milking, is an easy and important aid in securing clean milk.

It is generally recognized that most of the bacteria found in milk finds its source in dirt clinging to the cow and dropping into the pail during milking time. Simple precautions will practically eliminate this source of bacterial growth and dairymen find themselves well repaid for the little time necessary in taking such precautions.

The New Bus Line

Mr. Wildman has started his bus line from Hillsdale to Jackson via North Adams, having been running from Hillsdale to Albion for some time. We understand the bus through our village began Monday morning making regular schedules, and residents of this vicinity will be more than pleased to learn that we now have four buses per day, and if we can get the ear of the proprietor some of these days we shall endeavor to interest him in his own business sufficiently to keep a schedule of his time running in the Advocate Mr. Wildman probably does not as yet know there is a paper in this town, or he may be a non-believer in publicity. We understand the single trip fare to Jackson is 75c, round trip $1.40. Fare to Hillsdale 25c.

Why the Sheetrock way is the quickest way

QUICK construction is one of the important advantages you get in using Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard.

For Sheetrock comes all ready to use. You simply nail the wide, ceiling-high sheets to the supports. The trim and decoration can follow without waiting for the walls to dry.

Besides being ready for immediate decoration, Sheetrock walls are proof against cold and damp, fire and sound. They are non-warping, non-buckling and permanent.

AILMENTS OF YOUNG GIRLS

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound School Teacher's Experience

Evanston, Wyoming.—"A few years ago I had troubles every month such as girls often have, and would suffer awfully every time. I was teaching school and it made it hard for me as I had to go to bed for two or three days. One day my mother suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it did wonders for me. In the course of a year I married and after my first baby was born I got up too soon and it caused a displacement. This troubled me so that I could hardly walk or do my housework. I knew what the Vegetable Compound did for me before so I took it again. It strengthened me and now I have five little kiddies. The eldest is six, the baby is five months old and I have twin boys three years old and a boy of five years. I do all my own housework, washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I owe my health to your wonderful medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. VERBENA CARPENTER, 127 2nd Avenue, Evanston, Wyoming.

Very Pointed

The French foreign minister, M. Briand, tells an excellent story of how a friend with a somewhat vitriolic wit scored over a political opponent.

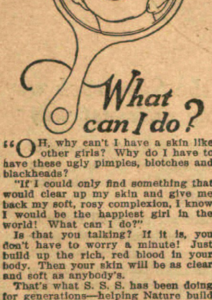
The opponent was criticizing in the chamber of deputies, a bill brought in by Briand's friend.

"When," he declared, "I first read the text of the ridiculous and impossible measure I thought I was becoming mad."

"Becoming!" interjected the wit. "Becoming, indeed! How fond the honorable member is of adding unnecessary words."

MOTHER GRAY'S POWDERS BENEFIT MANY CHILDREN

Thousands of mothers have found Mother Gray's Sweet Powders an excellent remedy for children complaining of Headaches, Colds, Feverishness, Worms, Stomach Troubles and other irregularities from which children suffer these days and excellent results are accomplished by its use. They break up colds and regulate the bowels. Used and recommended by Mothers for over 30 years. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Trial package FREE. Address, Mother Gray Co., Le Roy, N. Y.



Pimples

What can I do?

"OH, why can't I have a skin like other girls? Why do I have to have these ugly pimples, blotches and blackheads?

"If I could only find something that would clear up my skin and give me back my soft, rosy complexion, I know I would be the happiest girl in the world! What can I do?"

Is that you talking? If it is, you don't have to worry a minute! Just build up the rich, red blood in your body. Then your skin will be as clear and soft as anybody's.

That's what S. S. S. has been doing for generations—helping Nature build rich, red blood! You can build red-blood-cells so fast that the impurities that cause breaking out on the skin hardly get into the system before the pure blood annihilates them—kills them right out—stops them from breaking out through the skin.

And then this rich, red, pure blood feeds and nourishes the tissues of the skin and keeps it looking healthy.

S.S.S.

That's all there is to it. Healthy, vigorous, red blood such as S. S. S. helps Nature build, makes you healthy all over. It beautifies your skin—drives away pimples, blackheads, blotches, rash, boils and eczema—gives you back your appetite—builds firm, plump flesh and fills you full of new life and energy.

It was partly in Lystrian and partly in German. Troyte understands neither language. He turned to me to interpret for him.

"What's he saying?" he asked.

My German is rusty through long disuse, and I never knew any Lystrian. However, I think I picked up the main thing the patriarch wanted to say.

"As far as I can make out," I said, "he's trying to tell you that one Lord Norheys will do quite as well as another. The coronation is to be this afternoon."

"But," said Troyte, "this young man isn't Lord Norheys. Tell him that."

I told him. After I had finished, Janet Church told him again, in much better German than mine. We did not make much impression on the patriarch. All he said in reply was that if the Lystrians could not have Graf Bunny Norheys, they would be perfectly satisfied with Graf Tommy.

"Tell him," said Troyte, "that this young man isn't a count and isn't Norheys at all."

Then Tommy joined in.

"There's no use saying I'm not Norheys when I am," he said, "though I spell my name with two 'r's' instead of an 'rh,' which strikes me as a more sensible way of doing it. As for my not being a count, if you can get that into the patriarch's head, you'll do more than I can. I've been at him all morning and so has Miss Church. We've assured him over and over again that I'm not a count. But he can't be got to understand. Not that I care what he calls me, only I didn't want any irregularity about the marriage, which there might have been if I was married under a wrong name."

"The confusion," I said, "in the patriarch's mind probably arises from the custom, prevalent all over Europe, of every member of a titled family using the title. Take the Casimirs, for instance. I don't know how many Casimirs there are—"

"They're all Casimirs," said Tommy, waving his hand toward a group of Lystrian nobles. "All except seven."

"And I'm sure," I said, "that they're all counts."

"Every single one of them," said Tommy.

"So you see," I said to Troyte, "how the patriarch's mistake arose. He naturally thought that everyone called Norheys must be a marquis."

"But he isn't," said Troyte.

"Is it worth while," I said, "correcting the mistake now?"

Apparently Troyte thought it was. He insisted on having what he called a conference with the patriarch. I do not think the patriarch liked it, for there was a wedding feast waiting to be eaten in the great hall of the castle. But Troyte was firm. He and the patriarch and Cable went off, taking Janet with them to act as interpreter. The princess and Lady Norheys went away together, their arms round each other. Poor Lady Norheys had been traveling fast for days. I think she wanted a bath and some clothes before she sat down to the banquet amid the magnificent nobles of Lystria.

While I had no doubts at the time that Tommy would make quite as acceptable a king of Lystria, as would Lord Norheys, I also had no doubt that Lady Norheys would have been a much more attractive queen consort than the somewhat plain Calypso. That matter, however, had been ended, and Tommy evidently was more than satisfied with the turn of events. As for Lord Norheys, I remembered a remark he had once made to me:

"I'm not a prejudiced sort of fellow. What I always say about things is this: A fellow may not have been at a decent school, but he may be quite a decent sort of fellow. It's the same with girls."

And he had won the girl of his choice. The loss of the throne of Lystria he viewed with the utmost equanimity.

I could not feel that I had been a great help, either to Troyte, Lord Norheys, or my sister Emily, in the whole matter, though it is worthy of record that Norheys still calls me "Uncle Bill" and comes to me for advice when he is in trouble, which is more or less frequently. He never by any chance takes my advice, however. I dare say he would get into worse trouble if he did.

On this occasion I was not asked for advice. My nephew and his charming bride evidently had a perfect understanding as to their future participation in Lystrian affairs.

I gathered that when Norheys took Tommy by the arm and spoke to him confidentially.

"I say, you know, about your being king instead of me and all that. I'm jolly glad. Never really wanted the job a bit. Only promised to take it on to please Uncle Ned. All the same, don't you know, I think you owe me a good turn. Only for my sticking to Viola through thick and thin in spite of everything that everybody said, you wouldn't be here, would you?"

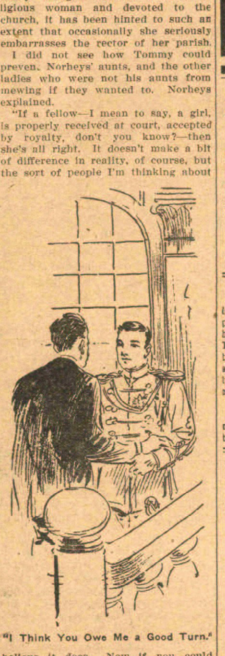
"If there's any mortal thing I can do for you in any way," said Tommy, "just tell me what it is."

"Thanks," said Norheys. "Well, I've married Viola, you know, and of course she's a marchioness of Norheys and all that, which ought to be good enough and is good enough. All the same, the world's full of old cats. I'm not talking of Uncle Ned now. But there are cats, aunts, you know, and lots more who aren't even aunts. They'll be inclined to sniff a bit at Viola, on account of her being a dancer on the stage and that sort of thing. Now, what I always say is this: I don't care a d—n what a girl was, dancer or anything else. No more do you. No more does any sensible man. But if there are cats in the world—and there's no use denying that—what I say is, that it's better to have them purring than mewing."

Norheys' idea, no doubt, was fundamentally sound, but I had my misgivings as to the amount of purring my sister Emily would do when she heard of his marriage to a young lady who had become prominent as a public dancer. Emily has her own ideas on many subjects, and her views are not easily changed. She is a most religious woman and devoted to the church, it has been hinted to such an extent that occasionally she seriously embarrasses the rector of her parish.

I did not see how Tommy could prevent Norheys' aunts, and the other ladies who were not his aunts from mewing if they wanted to. Norheys explained.

"If a fellow—I mean to say, a girl, is properly received at court, accepted by royalty, don't you know?—then she's all right. It doesn't make a bit of difference in reality, of course, but the sort of people I'm thinking about believe it does. Now if you could see your way—you and Calypso—when you're king and queen—if you'd take Viola into the royal circle, why nobody could say a word after that, could they?"



"I Think You Owe Me a Good Turn."

I saw Norheys' point at last. In the days of King Wladislaws a lady's reputation might not have been established by the fact that she was a favorite at the Lystrian court. But things would be quite different when Tommy reigned.

"Whatever we can do," said Tommy heartily, "will be done at once. Lady of the Bedchamber now? or Keeper of the Royal Robes? I don't know much about these jobs. But the best of them, whatever it is, will be Lady Norheys' this evening. And if I have an Order to bestow—I haven't inquired yet, but I suppose I have—"

"There's the Golden Adder of Lystria," I said. "Very few people outside the royal family have it."

"It shall be yours," said Tommy to Norheys, "the very minute I can lay my hands on it."

[THE END]

No Real Meaning to "Voices" of Insects

The "voices" of insects always have been of peculiar interest to mankind. Many naturalists and entomologists have sought to interpret these sounds, and some have claimed to be able to distinguish between the battle cry of a cricket, say, and its love song, according to the New York World.

Now comes Dr. Frank Lutz, curator of insects in the American Museum of Natural History, New York city, to assert his belief that the sounds of insects mean nothing—even to the insects themselves.

Insects squeak, buzz or hum because their body conformation is such that they cannot help making a noise when they move, he thinks. The sounds they make, he says, probably are often embarrassing to them, just as the rattling of the armor of knights of old often betrayed their presence to their enemies.

Autos Not Castles

The Supreme court holds that a man's automobile is not his castle, and many a man realizes that his automobile isn't even his vehicle. It's the rusty old machine which hurts the pride of members of the family who use it while pater familias digs up the scads for gas and garage bills.—Louisville Times.

New Town on Suez

A new town, known as Port Faud, is to be built on the Suez canal, opposite Port Said. Several hundred houses have already been erected. The town will be placed administratively under the governor of the canal and the government has reserved for its own use 15,000 square meters out of a total of 210,000.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Battle Creek—The school board has decided to put to the voters on Dec. 7 the question of whether $450,000 in bonds shall be issued for a new junior high school building here.

Hubbell—Henry Opal, founder and president of the Hubbell National Bank, and pioneer resident and business man of the district, died at his home here last week following an illness extending over more than a year and a half.

Algonac — Mayor Hoyt Townsend has re-considered his resignation at the request of the council and will continue in office. Mayor Townsend gave ill health as his reason for resigning, but says his health has improved in the past two weeks.

Marquette—For the first time since the State undertook the enlargement of the Marquette Branch Prison, the institution is housing more convicts than it has cells for. A recent count showed a population of 752. More than 30 men are sleeping on cots placed in cell block corridors.

Mt. Clemens—It is announced by members of the Halfway Commission that Detroit water mains will be laid into the village by December. With extension of Mt. Clemens gas mains to the village, it is said Halfway will have the same modern conveniences as the other parts of the metropolitan area.

Lansing—A hearing on the petition of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad for permission to discontinue passenger service from Flat Rock to Wyandotte and Detroit and to install passenger service on its shorter line running from Flat Rock to River Rouge, was held by the State Public Utilities Commission recently. Members indicated the request would be granted.

Mt. Clemens—Four new Curtiss Hawk pursuit planes will be brought to Selfridge Field within the next few day by fliers of the First Pursuit Group who left the field for New York where the ships have recently been completed by the Curtiss Airplane & Motor Co. With the arrival of the new machines, the plane complement at Selfridge will be 18 ships suitable for combat duty.

Ann Arbor—Donald B. MacMillan, Arctic explorer and lecturer, will speak in the Hill Auditorium here Nov. 30, under the auspices of the Kiwnais Club. The funds obtained from this lecture will be used in recreational work for the crippled children at the University Hospital. Dr. Walter N. Koelz, of the Bureau of Fisheries, who accompanied the explorer on his recent trip in the north, will introduce Mr. MacMillan.

Ann Arbor—Will Rogers, actor and humorist, will appear in the Hill Auditorium here next Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Ann Arbor branch of the American Association of University Women. He is to be assisted in this program by the De Reske Singers. Mr. Rogers has chosen for his part of the program the following subjects: "All I know Is What I Read in the Newspapers" and "Great Men I Have Met at the Stage Door."

Lansing—Failure of the highway commission and the Grand Trunk to agree on the details of the project caused the State Public Utilities Commission to order another hearing on the proposed Twenty-fourth street grade separation at Port Huron. The hearing will be held Dec. 1. It was said that Highway Commissioner Frank F. Rogers modified his original plans for the separation and the railroad has failed to approve the changes.

Flint—No more prosecutions will be started in Genesee County under the State law requiring registration of all firearms under 30 inches. This announcement was made at the prosecuting attorney's office here after Circuit Court Judge James S. Parker had declared the law unconstitutional and dismissed a case against John Carlisle. Judge Parker ruled the law was invalid because it did not become effective until Aug. 27, while it required all registrations to be completed by July 1, last.

Jackson—About 200 members of trade unions and their guests from Detroit, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek and Lansing, attended a banquet of the American Federation of Labor here Friday. H. H. Broach, of Washington, D. C., an officer of the Electrical Workers' Union, addressed the meeting. He said the only progress in society for the laborer can come through organized labor. William Collins, representative of the federation in Detroit, said that the trouble in America is not over-production but under-consumption.

Grand Rapids—A 13-story town hall, to cost $3,000,000 and to provide accomodations for the Second Scientist Church, the Peninsular Club, a theater, and the Young and Chaffee Furniture Store, is a proposal to be placed before each of these organizations at once, it was said recently. The church organization, composed of those who withdrew from the First Scientist Church a few years ago, has called a conference on the subject with city officials for Dec. 1. Miss Jessie Bonstelle, Detroit theater owner, has been invited to attend.

Lansing—Farmers have the right, under the State laws, to prohibit hunters from trespassing on their land, the Attorney-General ruled recently. The Michigan State Farm Bureau requested an opinion relative to the case of Glen Peck, Calhoun County farmer, who started a trespass suit against George Burrows, of Battle Creek. Peck had his farm posted, Burrows, hunted on it without permission. The Calhoun prosecutor dismissed the suit on the ground that the statute does not authorize farmers to keep hunters off posted land.

The Right Breed

This summer, for the first time, Ellen lived on a farm. The rest of her four years had been spent in an Indianapolis flat.

Naturally, she was much interested in the farm animals, especially the cows. So, when some Holsteins which her father had just purchased came slowly down the lane one evening, Ellen watched them almost breathlessly. As the last one passed, she jumped and exclaimed ecstatically: "Oh, mamma! Every last one of those new cows had a cross-word puzzle on her."

"Yes, Billie, and I felt old. No appetite, couldn't sleep nights—one day just like another, and none of them any good. I knew constipation was at the bottom of it, but it seemed the more laxatives I took the worse I got. Then one day I saw Nell giving Nujol to my little grandson. The doctor had prescribed it for the baby, but I found out it's just the thing for old fellows like me, too.

"I tell you, Billie, it keeps me feeling fine all the time. My appetite's back and I sleep like a child. If I look any younger, Nujol gets the credit."

Nujol helps Nature in Nature's own way

Middle age brings on a decrease in the natural lubricating secretions in the intestine. Then you need Nujol. It supplies the deficiency of the natural lubricant. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is gentle, safe and natural in its action.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. Nujol simply softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. It is not a medicine.

You can take Nujol for any length of time without ill effects. It should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

UNEARNED CRITICISM

By FRANCIS H. SISSON

Chairman, Public Relations Commission American Bankers Association

Francis H. Sisson

There has been some disposition to criticize the administration of the country's banking system for the sudden collapse of prices and curtailment of credits in 1920 and 1921, and the subsequent financial difficulties of the farmers. As a matter of fact whatever blame may attach to bankers must be for the too generous financing, in many cases, of speculative investment in farm property during the period of inflation. If any just criticism could be directed at the manner in which the Federal Reserve System functioned in this situation in the opinion of many it would be that the Reserve banks delayed too long in raising the rediscount rates. An earlier effort might have stayed the process of inflation.

The collapse of 1920 was by no means confined to agriculture, and was the inevitable sequel to the inflation period. All branches of business suffered in this period of reaction and perhaps none more than banking against which this criticism has been levelled. The financial situation of the farmers was greatly aggravated by the fact that the high land values and high prices of agricultural products had led many farmers to incur obligations based on the inflated values. If the farmer was victimized at all, indeed he was the victim of too much rather than too little consideration. The real progress which has been achieved in agricultural finance in recent years lies more in the intelligent distribution of farm credit than in volume.

With agencies now functioning for the provision of ample credits for the American farmer, his enduring success depends upon the wisdom and foresight with which he meets the problems of production and marketing. More than ever before, his activities must be regulated with reference to world conditions and his profits, like those of the manufacturer or merchant will reflect the measure of his success in adjusting his activities to these conditions.

The adult who has narrowed his choice of food to a few stereotyped articles, or who boasts that he can "eat anything" may not manifest any of the more definite symptoms of dietary disturbance, but nevertheless the bad results of an ill-chosen diet are bound to manifest themselves sooner or later in decreased resistance and in general inefficiencies. "There may be normal nutrition without health," said the late Dr. L. Emmett Holt, "but there cannot be health without normal nutrition."

The Covered Wagon—At the time this picture was filmed there was published in the humane and general press, statements that the author of the historical novel, Mr. Hough, on which the scenario is founded had protested against needless cruelty to animals in the picture—horses, cattle and buffalo—and had been denied admission to the grounds where the picture was taken. Reports were later published containing a statement from his secretary denying that Mr. Hough ever made such complaint. The Humane Record of Chattanooga, Tenn., prints following sworn statement of Ellis Soper which is reproduced from the Christian Science Monitor, of Boston. "About six months before his death, Emerson Hough spent an evening at the apartment of the writer at 41 West Fifty-second Street, New York, during which Mr. Hough related several of his experiences. Naturally the subject of the 'Covered Wagon' arose, and Mr. Hough made the statement at that time that he very much objected to the maiming and killing of the animals during the filming of the picture, and because of his objection he was refused admittance to the lot during the filming of some of the scenes."

Over at River Rouge a suburb of Detroit, Henry Ford is just putting the finishing touches on his half million horse power turbo-generating plant for electricity. It is already in operation. Ford engineers have determined that the steam turbine is the most economical form of power known to science, and most of Henry's modern plants are equipped with this form of engine. The boilers are built for burning soft coal dust. This is bituminous coal ground to powder and blown into the furnace under a heavy air pressure. The result is a maximum heat production and little if any waste in the form of smoke or gases; everything is consumed and although the 333 feet stacks pierce the heavens, at no time can any smoke be seen issuing from them. We are of the opinion that Mr. Ford can see a little further ahead than most of the common people in the state, and he is building against the time when the St Lawrence Waterway will open a way to the ocean, and Detroit will undoubtedly become the metropolis of the middle west. The next census in 1930 is going to show a population of more than 2,000,000 souls in Detroit.

Fort Wayne Will Be No More

Old Fort Wayne at the bend of the Detroit River, is to be abandoned says the Hudson Post and we suppose converted into a public park. The matter has been hanging fire for some time as we heard reports of this a year ago. This was a fort garrisoned against a possible British or Indian invasion in territorial days, but it was a long time under construction, being unfinished as late as 1851. Originally it must have been a rather formidable place. Square bastioned with sand embankments, it was surmounted with "red cedar scrap with embrasures of oak." Three hundred workers were required to bring cedar from Kelley's Island, and it was fervently hoped no redskin or red coat would be able to bombard or storm these sturdy palisades. Along in the '60's the condition of the wooden defense occasioned worry, and the wall was replaced with brickwork seven and one-half feet thick and twenty-two feet high, with a brick facing of about eighteen inches, back of which is six feet of concrete and so it was hoped the destructive effect of solid shot would no longer be felt.

No British bullet has ever flicked a speck of dust from Fort Wayne. History has proved that the expense of upkeep, and the expense of construction which was over $25,000 was more foolish and useless, if possible than anything else the government undertook. We used to think it necessary to maintain a young navy on the border lakes, but time has proved the nonsensical feature of it all. Common sense and diplomacy always have and always will we trust, settle all disputes between Canada and the United States. Fort Wayne aside from its history, has little value, and a casual glance would reveal the necessity of a conversion into a business district.

Killing The Farmer's Friend—A rural mail carrier shot a hawk on the road the other day and when he went to pick it up, the supposed dead bird took a peck that put out his eye—for which no one can blame the hawk, says the Salem, Oregon, Capital Journal, this federal employee broke several laws and regulations. It is against rules to carry a gun on duty, while delivering mail. It is a violation of the state law to shoot on a public highway. A hawk is one of the most beneficial of birds and one of the farmer's best friends, daily destroys its weight in vermin, and as it is useless as food, there is no justification for its slaughter. As a result of similar wanton slaughter of eagles, hawks and owls, all birds that justify their existence, the balance of nature has been destroyed and a great increase in rabbits, diggers, gophers and mice is causing and is causing an economic loss to every farmer in the land. All of these birds should be protected by law to prevent their extermination, which is now threatened.

Will Ask War-time Wages

The latest thing to be announced throughout the country is a pending strike among railroad employees because they have not been granted sufficient wages. They are now asking for a raise and one that will bring the total up about as high as in war times. The Brotherhood of Trainmen are now working on this idea and will bring it to a focus soon. A contemporary editorial remarks as follows: "It looks as if this were the beginning of a very serious campaign. It is to be hoped that railroad employees will have the sense to eliminate a possible strike from all consideration in connection with their demands. It is high time that the people of the United States were considered in such disputes."

Well, we should say it is high time somebody was severely punished. If that is all the poor editorialist can get off he may as well go out in the woodland and try hitting his head against a sturdy black oak. He will finally arrive at the conclusion the oak is hard—but beyond that nothing tangible. After butting against these numerous strikes such as the coal strike, and a few others which have to do with the necessities of life, we have decided the world is full of incongruity. Not only the people should be consulted but likewise the whole consuming class also. The anthracite coal miners have chosen a time when the innocent public is the hardest hit to bring about their disturbance. Precious little good will it do to prate about the people being consulted. What we need is a solid army of armed men to march to Washington and demand that something be done to jar these strikers into a realization that they are law breakers. Another army should take care of the operators—millionaires who take this form of procedure to fill their dishonest coffers—and raise the price of coal. Its little these operators care if the mines are silent the winter through—since every day they lie idle means a jump in the price of coal. We hear occasionally about boycotting the coal mines and burning wood. All the small consumers in the U. S. who can do without coal don't amount to a continental to the coal mine operator, as he can do without their patronage, but the mills, power plants, factories and gas plants must have his coal and like Shylock of old, the operator will carve his pound of flesh. The proper authority at Washington could abate the nuisance right speedily but Alas and Alack! Honest "Cal" don't feel that he can do much to compel the strike settlement. Perhaps Mr. Coolidge has pipe dreams of great victories at the polls, and 300,000 votes are reaching toward him the terribly swift sword of repudiation—at any rate your Uncle "Cal" is loath to offend even the least of these.

This talk about the "people being consulted" put up by bashful editors who are so nervous about saying anything that the go in the cellar and pull down the blinds to cover conscience, makes us tired—in view of the fact that some of the leading non-controlled writers have thundered this stuff for the past two years, intermittantly.

Evergreens Suffer From Worm Attack

Evergreen trees in resort districts of northern Michigan suffered considerable damage last summer when parasites which normally control a certain measuring worm failed temporarily as a check upon the pests, according to Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology at the M. S. C.

The attacks reported by Professor Pettit occurred in the northwestern section of the lower peninsula, and touched eight or ten counties, Antrim, Leelanau, Grand Traverse and Emmet counties showed the most serious infestation.

Hemlocks seemed to be the first choice of the worms for plant food although the following were used freely wherever they occurred with hemlocks: balsam fir, arbor vitae, white pine, white birch, soft maple and beech. Other trees sometimes accepted as food were: Norway pine, willow, tag elder, and American elm.

Injury was sufficient in heavily infested sections to cause death of many hemlocks and balsams, while the white cedars suffered defoliation in many instances. The loss is said to exceed that of the timber alone, however, as these trees add much to the beauty of the resort country in which the outbreaks occurred.

Proper spraying will control the worms, although such practice would not be praticable on large areas of forest trees. Near cottages and resort property, the spraying is said to be entirely feasible.

"The insect causing all this trouble is a native geometrid which is always with us", says Professor Pettit. "Usually its numbers are small, but for some unexplained reason the parasities which normally keep it in check are for a time failing to control. It is to be confidently expected, however, that in the course of a few years at most the balance between the pests and their parasities will be established again, and that this enemy of our conifers will again become inconspicuous."

State Corn Entries Refused At Chicago

No corn entries from Michigan will be accepted at this year's International Hay and Grain Show, which is to be held in Chicago the first week of December in connection with the annual International Livestock Exposition.

Fearing spread of the dread European corn borer to new sections, the Illinois state department of agriculture has announced a bar against entries from Michigan Ohio, Ontario and other districts where corn borer infestations are present. The action is said to be in line with the precautionary steps being taken in all sections where the corn borer is feared.

Michigan growers have won a generous share of the corn awards at the International in recent years and many farmers have ning to exhibit this fall. the ban is being spread state crop improvement tion, the M. A. C., and oth cies in an effort to prevent pointment for corn growers last moment.

The quarantine will not other grain or hay entries, hundreds of samples from M igan's best farms will compete these classes. In some divisio the local growers will be e against contestants fro ern group of states, w they will match the against the entire coun ada.

George Huxtler, of South itou Island, winner of the G Championship in rye at the In national for three of the last f years, is to attend the show in pe son for the first time this year, adding a touch of feature interest to the Michigan entries. In making his sensational winnings, Mr. Hux tler has had to compete agains best rye of the United States Canada.

HASKINS NAMED TO FAIR BOARD

(By Ed A. Nowack)

Lansing—James B. Haskins, of Howard City, publisher, postmaster, former field director of The Michigan Press Association, an indefatigable worker for betterment of newspaper conditions in Michigan, and one of the most widely known publishers in the state, will be reappointed next April to the five-year term on the Board of Managers of State Fairs. This is the information that is picked up at the capitol. Mr. Haskins on Nov. 12 was appointed to the board to fill the unexpired term of H. H. Halladay. Coincident with the announcement of his appointment came the information he had been named chairman of the public relations committee of the board.

JAMES B. HASKINS

Newspapermen and men in public life in Lansing and elsewhere see in the appointment of Jim Haskins the much desired inauguration of a modern, competent and thoroughly sympathetic relationship between the fair board on the one hand and the public and the press on the other. These latter two have suffered in the past from devious handling and horseplay by the former management of the fair board. Appointment of Haskins will put an end to the practice the former management frequently exercised by infliction of petty penalities upon the press and public where honest differences of opinion prevailed. Gone, also, will be the alleged dictatorial and autocratic methods frequently employed in the past. The press and the public will be treated fairly, Mr. Haskins says.

Those facts are insured by the first piece of work performed by Mr. Haskins and contained in a statement, issued in conjunction with an invitation to 89 Michigan organizations to attend a future meeting of the board of managers. In this connection Mr. Haskins says:

"In order to make it clear at the outset that the Michigan State Fair is a state institution and shall in the future be such in fact as well as name, a special committee of which I was chairman prepared and issued the following statement of policy at the first meeting of the new board held at Lansing, Nov. 13, after such report received the unanimous sanction of the Board of Managers. This report follows:

"Answering the call of its chairman, the Honorable L. Whitney Watkins, the members of the Board of Managers of State Fairs have met for the purpose of placing the affairs of the State Fair in order so that it will truly represent the agricultural, industrial, educational, public health and other major enterprises of this state and after an investigation of conditions at the State Fair, it is the unanimous sense of this board that a thorough and complete reorganization is necessary and that a very drastic change in policy is the paramount duty confronting the Board.

"It is our opinion that an institution such as the State Fair should first of all be made truly representative of the agricultural, industrial and educational interests of the state. The Fair is located in an ideal locality. Every agency of the state has

"Handy Andy on the Farm" Now Works on the Air

"HANDY ANDY," genial genius of Farm Mechanics magazine, drops in every Wednesday noon at WLS, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural 'oundation station, Chicago, and tells his farm audience all about work-speeding and labor-saving devices. He gives a word picture on the air, even explaining how to make them. One day he bobs up with an idea to take rudgery out of scrubbing the floor; again he describes a device to help father ome one of his jobs more easily. "Handy Andy" is a cheerful and helpful lways springing something on the farm folks in the way of simple cs for lessening farm and household work. Some Points To Remember

Alcoholic fermentation changes good foods into injurious drinks.

Even moderate amounts of beer wine, or other alcoholic drinks have been found to impair ability to do good work.

Alcohol reduces endurance for sports or hard work.

Alcohol impairs the skill and precision required in doing fine work.

The drinker's power of self control is diminished by alcohol.

Alcohol makes the drinker more reckless in taking chances involving danger.

Beer may disorder a man's thinking or acting without making him drunk.

The normal man thinks before he acts. The man with alcohol in his brain is likely to act before he thinks.

Even a moderate amount of alcohol impairs the drinker's ability to judge correctly the quality of his own work.

Alcohol is not a stimulant but a narcotic.

A man doing hard work needs good food, hot or nourishing drinks not beer.

Alcoholic drink is dangerous to one exposed to cold.

Wounds heal less rapidly in the average habitual drinker than in an abstainer.

Alcohol impairs the qualities constantly needed by the driver of an automobile such as steadiness, caution, ability to recognize danger, and to act correctly and quickly.

Modern high power machinery cannot be safely managed by a brain even slightly dulled by alcohol.

Alcohol is a habit forming drug which has the power of setting up a craving which makes the drunkard.

The drinker is more liable to have infectious diseases because alcohol lessens the power of the body to kill germs.

Life insurance companies have found that the average insured person who is an abstainer from alcoholic liquors lives longer than one who drinks any alcoholic liquor even moderately.

The man who spends for drink, money needed by his wife and children for food, diminishes their chances for good health.

The drinker brings injury upon others as well as upon himself.—The Union Signal.

Electricity In The Home

Electricity has become the silent partner in the modern home, taking the place of servants, at greatly reduced cost, Miss Margaret Hartnacke, director of home service, Consumers Power Company, Grand Rapids, told members of the Hillsdale County Federation of Women's Clubs at Montgomery last Friday Nov. 20.

"Several years ago—not so many at that—skilled labor was considered a person or persons who could do the work in the home rapidly and skillfully," said Miss Hartnacke. "During the last few years, the meaning of skilled labor has changed, and now refers to utilitarian machinery and appliances.

"We measure the comfort of our home by its convenience. In these days convenience is, in a large part, a matter of electrical service, and the effectiveness of this service depends on the completeness of the wiring system, not only on the proper size of wire but also on the number of convenience outlets."

Lighting in the home is an important matter, she declared, for it affects not only our personal convenience and happiness, but also our eyesight and health. Insufficient lighting may cause eyestrain, which in turn causes headaches. Miss Hartnache urged the use of frosted electric lights of sufficient size, properly shaded. Glaring lights are also to be avoided.

"Glare", she said, "is hostile and piercing. It is not the effect of too much light that tires and bothers, but rather the glare and excessive brightness. Glare can be overcome by the use of frosted bulbs carefully shaded, so that the eyes cannot see the bright filament that provides the light."

The electric iron saves many steps, according to Miss Hartnacke. With old fashioned sad irons—a very fitting name—it was necessary to carry irons weighing from seven to ten pounds back and forth from the hot coal stove to the ironing board. Electric ironing machines now are made which will iron 95 per cent of the family washing. The ironing machine is an especial "wife saver" on the bed spreads, sheets and tablecloths. It will even iron men's shirts, she said. The electric washing machine eliminates the back breaking rubbing, and hand wringing. The machine not only saves hard work, but does the work better in half the time.

"This enables the housewife to take in an afternoon tea, matinee or club meeting", she said. "Blue Mondays are done away with altogether by this method."

The tramping in of dirt, mud and grit no longer worries the modern housewife, according to Miss Hartnacke. The vacuum cleaner will "whiz" away the dirt with very little effort on the part of the housewife, and at small cost. She mentioned the attachments for cleaning lampshades, draperies, bedding registers and automobile upholstery.

The electric refrigerator does away with the cleaning up of the ice chamber and the floor about the unit, she said. It also does away with the annoyance of the ice man, and with the danger of running out of ice on Sundays and holidays.

"Faithfully, silently, automatically, the electric refrigerator insures a cool, dry atmosphere, which effects the best preservation of foodstuffs, keeping them fresh, cool and crisp," said Miss Hartnacke. "This protects the most important factor of life—health. When entertaining company did you ever put chipped ice in your beverages, or on your salads, and after it had melted were embarrassed by finding splinters or settlings? Ice cubes made from pure drinking water are always available when an electric refrigerator is on the job."

With an electric range, Miss Hartnacke said the expression "I'd rather eat than sleep" would become a household by-word. She mentioned the advantages of the automatic time control, "which enables you to attend club meetings, afternoon teas and matinees while your meals are being prepared."

"Where there is eating there is dish-washing," she said. "How much greater would be the appetite of the cook if she knew that she did not have to wash or wipe the dishes after each meal. The electric dish washer not only washes, but scalds and drys as well, without it being necessary to even put the hands into the water."

The electric sewing machine not only saves the labor of treadling, but, through its ease of operation, makes more pleasant the sewing of dresses which otherwise would be purchased ready-made, thereby saving considerable money.

The electric percolator, waffle iron, grill and toaster make better easier prepared breakfasts.

"If we start out in good humor in the morning with a well prepared and appetizing breakfast we are bound to keep up our spirits throughout the day."

The electric heating pad is recommended by all doctors, she said as it keeps a dry even temperature at all times, doing away with the leaky hot water bottle.

Miss Hartnacke stressed the importance of securing of standard make appliances.

"You can always be sure of the service of electricity to run these appliances. It must be adequate at all times. The grocer or the druggist can tell a customer that he is out a certain article, but will have more in a few days. But can an electric company say, 'Sorry, but we're out of electricity, we shall have some more in a couple of days.' Indeed they cannot."

Women have found that electricity is not a luxury but a necessity she said. It has been proved that women spend more for powder, rouge and other cosmetics in one month than they do for electricity.

Instructions in reading the electric meter and in replacing fuses were given by Miss Hartnacke.

"I wish I could wake up some morning and be told that each and every home was electrically equipped," she said. "I am now speaking in particular of the farm homes Men are working night and day, companies are spending thousands of dollars, for the improvement of methods for rural electrification. We shall have it very soon."

Fifty Years Service On The Road

E. H. Yerrick of Fort Wayne Indiana, was highly honored by members of the railroad force at Hillsdale on Sunday last his termination of a long and efficient service on the New York Central Lines The G. A. R. Hall at Hillsdale was the place chosen for the meeting and fifty of the New York Central employees were present at the depot when Mr. Yerrick's engine pulled in from his last trip. The engine was decorated with flags and bunting and Mr. Yerrick was escorted to the hall where a banquet was served and he was presented with an all leather chair and floor lamp. A program was given by sons and daughters of the engineers of the division.

Mr. Yerrick had run on nearly every branch out of Hillsdale and it will be remembered he drove the engine of the Detroit Flyer through North Adams at the time a man's body was struck and thrown into the ditch in the cut northeast of the village in the night. The victim's head was severed from the body but no indications were present of the accident on the engine. It appeared the man had been murdered near the spot, his head severed and the body placed on the track by unknown parties. Mr Yerrick being called to the stand gave his testimony in a matter of fact way and stated that he had examined his engine upon arrival in Hillsdale and found no traces of the accident. He entered the service of the road in 1875.

Old Shot Tower

Mrs. W. R. Painter of Carrollton, chairman of the committee on historic sites for the Daughters of 1812, is carrying on negotiations with a big lead smelting company for the acquisition of the old "shot tower" at Herculaneum, Jefferson county, Mo., overlooking the Mississippi river. From a cliff 150 feet high at this point, says the Kansas City Star, bullets were molded for use in the War of 1812 by dropping the hot pellets of lead. A painting of the "shot tower" is among the historical pictures on the walls of the state capitol. Mrs. Painter will ask that the "shot tower" be given the Daughters of 1812 to be preserved as a historic site.

The Obscure Point

"Yes," he exclaimed dramatically, "it was in the dead of night. Outside was a roving elephant bent on destruction. I crept out and shot it dead in my pajamas."

"But, colonel, how did the thing get into your pajamas?" drawled one of his listeners.—London Weekly Telegraph.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mrs. Lansdowne's Charges Sifted by the Shenandoah Board of Inquiry.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MRS. ZACHARY LANSDOWNE seemed to be having considerable difficulty last week in substantiating her charges that the Navy department, through Capt. Paul Foley, then judge advocate, sought to induce her to testify falsely before the Shenandoah court of inquiry. The widow of the airship's commander repeated her story of Captain Foley's call on her and his sending of an outline of what she should say, and in a general way all this was corroborated by others. But it was brought out that it was part of the judge advocate's duty to interview prospective witnesses, and Mrs. George W. Steele, who carried the Foley memorandum to Mrs. Lansdowne, said that on reading it "she manifested no indignation and said nothing whatever about any sinister purpose, nothing indicating any idea that the memorandum represented any attempt to influence her testimony."

A copy of the memorandum was produced by the judge advocate. It reads:

"Immediately subsequent to the loss of the U. S. S. Shenandoah I felt it my duty to say for my husband things which he was no longer in a position to say for himself; that he was opposed to sending the Shenandoah on the midwestern flight during the thunderstorm period and had protested so doing to the Navy department. My husband regarded the Shenandoah as a man of war. He was ready at all times to take the ship out for military maneuvers, but was opposed to using her for nonmilitary duty.

"Had I known at the time I accepted the invitation of the court to appear before it that the correspondence in the case would have been introduced into the record of the court as it since has I would not have accepted the invitation of the court to appear.

"As things now are I am not only willing but would prefer to leave the entire matter to the judgment of the court in which I have every confidence."

Mrs. Lansdowne admitted that the only statement in this memorandum to which she took exception is that "her husband was ready at all times to take the ship out for military maneuvers but was opposed to using her for nonmilitary duty." She said if she had given such testimony she would have made her husband out an ignorant fool. Even on military maneuvers he was not ready to go at all times, regardless of the weather, and the use of the phrase "nonmilitary duty," she said, was camouflage for "political flights."

Efforts to involve Secretary Wilbur, made by Mrs. Lansdowne and her uncle, Dr. W. B. Mason, were not impressive.

Joseph E. Davies, late of Wisconsin, was counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne and he created a tumult by insisting loudly on his right to be present and to advise his client in court. He was ejected once but crept back in and caused more disturbance. Captain Foley took the stand in his own defense, and denied that he had tried to influence Mrs. Lansdowne's testimony.

TESTIMONY for the defense in the Mitchell court-martial was completed and arguments were begun. A number of aviators were called to tell of unwarranted hazards in night flying and bombing tests, and then Admiral William S. Sims, retired, was called. He told the court that many of the higherups in the navy never had attended the naval war college at Newport and consequently were "hidebound, ignorant and uneducated." He asserted the capital ship of the future is the swift airplane carrier and that an adequate air force would be the salvation of the country in case of attack by sea.

Concerning the Shenandoah, Admiral Sims said: "If the motive of a flight is all military—if, for example the navy says, 'We want you to go out and get storm risk data'—that is all right," the admiral testified. "If the motive is to pass over fair grounds, it is all wrong."

"In view of the loss of the Shenandoah, what is your view of the motive in that case?" he was asked.

"It did not seem to me correct at all."

Capt. Anton Heinen, the Zeppelin expert from Germany, was asked about the reduction of the Shenandoah's automatic safey valves from 18 to 10, and replied: "If I had known that before the Shenandoah made her fatal flight everybody may rest assured that I would have kicked up a hell of a row. The effect of the reduction of the valves was to reduce the safety of the ship from 100 per cent to zero. It made the Shenandoah absolutely unsafe."

PREMIER MUSSOLINI, now more than ever the master of Italy, opened the new session of parliament with a remarkable address in which he presented his budget of new laws which, he frankly declared, were intended to do away with the present parliamentary form of government, "inadequate for modern life," and to replace it with Fascism. He said it was impossible to hinder Fascism from the interior, and he warned all other nations that if menaces to his planned regime came from abroad the Italian nation would arise as one man. The deputies were given the tip not to waste much time in discussing the proposition because Fascist discipline would not tolerate it.

Chief of Mussolini's new measures are these:

1. A law to establish the ancient podesto instead of mayors, which gives the central government control even of the local political machines.

2. A law increasing the powers of the premier not only over every department of the government, but even not allowing the order of the day to be discussed in the chamber without his approval.

3. A law providing for confiscation of property and deprivation of the citizenship for Italians abroad "calumnizing" Italy or its government.

4. A law creating co-operative boards of arbitration between capital and labor.

The premier also has called on all the Italian people to subscribe toward the payment of the debt to the United States, the funding arrangement for which was signed in Washington.

American bankers evidently approve of Italy's condition and prospects, for a group of them, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., last week arranged a loan to the Italian government of $100,000,000 to assist in the restoration of the gold standard and to retire the $50,000,000 credit extended by Morgan to three Italian banks of issue last June for stabilization of the lira. The loan will take the form of bonds bearing interest at the rate of 7 per cent.

CONDITIONS in Syria are going from bad to worse, from the French standpoint, for the rebellious Druses are growing in strength and last week shifted the scene of their greatest activity to the Lebanon region. The French had armed a large body of Christian volunteers there, but these were badly defeated by the Druses, who captured a number of towns and a vast amount of loot. Sidon, on the Syrian coast, was threatened and the American missionaries there asked that a warship be sent from Beirut.

PRACTICALLY without opposition the British house of commons ratified the Locarno treaties. Mr. Chamberlain, in opening the perfunctory debate, dissipated the fear that Great Britain would be committed by the pacts to go to war against its wishes. Replying to the charge that Russia had not been brought into the League of Nations at Locarno, he said the fault, if any, lay with Russia and not with the western powers. "The Russian government," he continued, "is not prepared to join the league on any terms whatever, its fundamental objection being that the league is a society of nations based on a system which is not compatible with the view of the soviet government of what the world should be."

INVESTIGATION by government agents of the alleged national beer syndicate, the Chicago end of which is alleged to have been doing a business of $800,000 a month, resulted last week in the indictment of the Boston & Maine railway and 24 individuals. This, according to the district attorney at Chicago, is merely the "first batch." Among the individuals named are two policemen, several traffic managers, three prohibition agents, a number of brewery managers and employees and David J. Allen, former purchasing agent of the Atlanta penitentiary, who has been mixed up in other liquor scandals. Allen is described as the leader of the entire conspiracy, and it is said he has fled to Europe.

The treasury last Wednesday revoked, effective December 31, every outstanding alcohol permit issued under the national prohibition law and an investigation was started to determine whether any of them should be renewed. The news of this action created consternation among the numerous concerns that have been drawing out alcohol vastly in excess of their normal and legal needs.

The house ways and means committee, following the advice of General Andrews, voted to impose a new tax of one-tenth of one cent a gallon on near beer and other cereal beverages, as a means of providing for inspection of all breweries.

OVER the protests of Chairman Green and most of the Democratic members, the ways and means committee voted retroactive repeal of increases in estate tax rates of the 1924 revenue act, effective on estates of all persons dying since that law became effective on June 2, 1924. If this feature of the new law is accepted by congress the government will have to refund millions of dollars already collected.

GOVERNOR SORLIE of North Dakota has appointed George E. Nye to be United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of E. F. Ladd. But as Mr. Nye was a supporter of the La Follette ticket in the last Presidential campaign and might be expected to line up with the senate radicals, it is predicted that his seating will be fought by the regular Republican senators. The opposition will be based on a precedent established early in the Wilson administration when the senate refused to seat Frank P. Glass, appointed by the governor of Alabama to fill a vacancy, because Alabama's laws fail to provide specifically for such an appointment. The North Dakota statute authorizes the governor to fill vacancies in state offices, but fails to mention the office of senator.

WHAT might have been a terrible tragedy was narrowly averted when the Clyde liner Lenape caught fire at sea off the Delaware coast. After a thirty-mile dash, she steamed into the harbor at Lewes, surrounded by other boats, and 367 persons, comprising all but one of her passengers and the entire crew, were taken off in safety and just in the nick of time. One man had jumped overboard and was drowned.

Damage estimated at $3,000,000 was done by a conflagration that swept the Mississippi river docks at New Orleans. Great quantities of merchandise were consumed and for a time the wholesale business district of the city was threatened.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, addressing the New York State Chamber of Commerce, outlined his program of economic developments, including inland waterways, railroad consolidations, further economy and efficiency in government departments, further extension of electrification, and elimination of waste in industry and commerce. He also urged that America join the World court.

HERE are a few brief items worthy to be recorded:

D. C. Stephenson, former Klan dragon of Indiana, was sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in the death of Madge Oberholtzer.

George H. Jones, who started in business as office boy, was elected chairman of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

General Feng and Marshal Chang of China signed a peace agreement.

Twelve soviet officials were sentenced to death at Moscow for graft.

Failure of Jeanette Impulse to Amundsen

Seattle, Wash.—Arctic navigators returning here from their summer incursions into the North by way of Bering strait recall that the wreck of the Jeanette originated the inspiration for the latest attempt of Capt. Roald Amundsen to float a vessel across, or near, the North pole.

Commanded by St. George Washington de Long, U. S. N., the Jeanette moved into the Arctic through Bering strait in 1879, and after passing Wrangell island was locked in ice. She crumpled and sank June 13, 1881, after 22 months in the pack.

Part of her crew perished in struggling over the ice to the mouth of the Lena river, in Siberia, and more died in trying to find a human habitation.

Three years after the crumpling, casks from the Jeanette were found on the coast of Greenland, giving evidence they had passed across the Arctic ocean.

Amundsen's first drifting exploit was in the Gjoa to make the westward passage of the Arctic above North America. He completed the voyage in 1906. Next, in the Fram, he went to the other end of the earth, and succeeded in discovering the South pole, December 16, 1911.

On May 21, 1925, Amundsen and five others hopped off in two planes from the Spitzbergen islands to fly over the pole. The six returned June 18 in one of the planes, the other having been wrecked 150 miles from the pole.

First Crop Paid for His Land

"IN 1920," says Mr. Adolph Bellard, of St. Paul de Metis, a district in Alberta, Canada, "I had twenty-five acres of wheat, which yielded forty bushels per acre."

Forty bushels per acre!

With wheat at, say, $1.50 per bushel, forty bushels give a return of $60.00 per acre.

Yet, you can buy land in Canada capable of growing the best wheat in the world for $15.00 to $20.00 per acre!

Started With $1,500.00
Now Worth $20,000.00

Adolph Bellard came to Canada from Rice Lake, Wisconsin, in 1911, with $1,500.00 capital. He settled in the "park" country of Central Alberta—mixed prairie and woodland. To-day, he is worth $20,000.00, owns a half section of fine, rich land, with good buildings and all the necessary livestock and equipment. "This is a splendid country," says he, "with plenty of water, trees and shelter for cattle, which run out all Winter."

There is a New Opportunity
For You in Canada

Canada, your great and busy neighbor, offers you a new opportunity such as is not to be found in older lands. Canada, with its rich, low-priced lands and bigger crops at lower cost, is a country of real opportunity. Think of the advantages for your boys and girls to grow up where fertile farms of their own may be had at low cost.

Canada, your near neighbor, just across an imaginary line, offers you this chance; friendly folk, thrifty, law-abiding and industrious. You will enjoy free political institutions, free public schools, and an ordered Government, based on the free will of a free people.

Canada has great areas of rich, fertile, virgin land awaiting improvement along the railroads, at prices ranging from $15.00 to $20.00 per acre. Fully improved farms at somewhat higher prices, with long terms of payment if desired. Free homesteads, farther back, for pioneers. This is the supreme chance of the present generation. Spilt Milk Costs Uncle Sam $77,399,685.00 Annually

It takes a herd of 667,-997 cows each giving 5000 lbs. of milk yearly to supply the milk wasted annually in the U. S.

According to a schedule showing the division of dairy products, published by the United States Department of Agriculture, the annual cost of wasted milk in our nation would make a happy pay day for the army and navy and still leave an appropriation sufficient to build enough combat planes to satisfy even the militant Mitchell.

The amount of milk spilt, soured, rejected and otherwise wasted annually, is 3,339,936,000 pounds. This at $2.25 per hundred would approximate annually the stupendous amount of $77,399,685.

However, a cheerful note rings through this tale of economic loss to a nation. The same report shows a 1924 increase of 108 pounds of milk per cow over 1923 production. Deducting this from the figure previously given, leaves a loss through waste of only $13,607,325, a mere bagatelle, compared with our national debt of more than twenty billions of dollars.

The increased yield per cow is due to heightened efficiency on the farm; and future years promise even greater increases.

Dairymen have discovered the futility of feeding non-paying members of their milk herds. They have learned that losses lurk in insanitary milk production. They have discovered the advantages that lie in swatting the bacteria that hide in unclean stables, unclipped, unbrushed flanks and udders of milk cows and unsterilized utensils. As time goes on, the unavoidable waste of milk will be more than offset by intelligent feeding, complete sanitation and more efficient herd management.

Generally speaking, it seems that American colleges and universities of the present day are places where professors poison the minds of young people, as has been pointed out by Dr. Riley pastor of the large First Baptist church of Minneapolis. In addition the professors dare not tell the truth concerning the subjects of politics, economics and social problems because the trustees of the institutions of higher learning usually discharge a professor who dares to be honest. There are, it appears three subjects of great importance in the universities today, namely, football, cheating and suppression of honest thinking.

Farm Home Needs Electric Help Too

Rural homes have suffered somewhat in plans discussed for farm electrification, in the opinion of the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, D. C. The greater emphasis has been placed on applying electric power to farm operations, according to the belief of the Institution. The great social issue of a home-like farm home has been comparatively neglected.

"On the average farm," says the Smithsonian Institution, "the use of either electric power or of mechanical equipment for replacing animal and human muscular labor in the fields, around the barns, and on the road is growing. The man's effective work by this multiplication of muscular effort is greatly increased, his working hours lessened and the tedium of his labor reduced.

"Usually with the rural woman it has not been thus. She still frequently uses coal oil lamps. By muscle's brawn she still wields the broom, treads the sewing machine, rubs the clothes on a wash-board or hand-operated washing machine, turns the clothes wringer and churn; washes the dishes, carries out the refuse and fetches the water and fuel.

"The house where the wife and mother are drudges can never be a home in the highest sense.

"The only open question in this matter are how the rural consumer can meet the installation costs of the electric equipment and the operating costs of the service; and whether it is better to extend high tension lines or generate electric current on the farm in a small isolated plant."

William Borton of Waldron is in the other world as the result of drinking too much "oh-be-joyful" in the shape of home brew. He went to the barn on Thanksgiving morning to finish the work and did not return. Later the family went out to find him as supposed, fast asleep, and threw an overcoat over him. They went to investigate again and found the man cold in death. It is said Borton had been drinking heavily of the deadly stuff the day previously. The amatuer brewers of this country do not understand the process of removing fusel oil and other impurities from their product, hence the sad results. An inebriate who is desperate enough to indulge in these poisonous compounds certainly deserves his fate. Large numbers of drinkers become stone blind, others become insane and finish their days in an asylum.

NEARLY INSANE AT TIMES

Mrs. Saunders Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Troubles of Change of Life

Knoxville, Tenn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while going through the Change of Life. I was very nervous, could not sleep and had melancholy spells. In fact, I was nearly insane at times and my memory was almost a blank. I was so weak I could not do my housework half of the time and suffered dreadfully with my back. My doctor said I would have to worry it out and I went through this for three years before I began taking the Vegetable Compound which I saw advertised. I think it was eight bottles that I took. It has been two years since I took any and I haven't had a doctor since for that trouble. I do all my washing and ironing and I have gained from 116 to 138 pounds. I feel so well I think I do not need any medicine now, but I advise all women who suffer physically and mentally as I did to give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. I hope it will do as much for them as it did for me."—Mrs. T. A. SAUNDERS, 711 E. Depot Street, Knoxville, Tenn.

Is Your Work Hard?

Is your work wearing you out? Are you tortured with throbbing backache—feel tired, weak and worn out? Then look to your kidneys! Many occupations tend to weaken the kidneys. Constant backache, headaches, dizziness and rheumatic pains result. One suffers annoying kidney irregularities; feels nervous, irritable and worn out. Don't wait! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Workers everywhere recommend Doan's. They should help you, too. Ask your neighbor!

A Raw, Sore Throat

Eases Quickly When You Apply a Little Musterole

Musterole won't blister like the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Spread it on with your fingers. It penetrates to the sore spot with a gentle tingle, loosens the congestion and draws out the soreness and pain.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. Brings quick relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds on the chest. Keep it handy for instant use.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

WHY SHOULD ANYONE SUFFER WITH INDIGESTION OR ANY STOMACH MISERY?

If you want to fix up your dyspeptic, out of order stomach so that you can relish what you eat with not the least bit of after distress, do what tens of thousands of people have already done.

Getting rid of gas, bloating, belching, heaviness and that feeling of near suffocation isn't such a hard matter as you may think—You've been getting hold of the wrong medicine—that's all.

But better late than never—ask your druggist for a bottle of Dare's Mentha Pepsin—a real stomach medicine and a very pleasant one. For acute indigestion one or two doses is enough, but when the trouble is chronic, two or three bottles may be needed to put your disordered stomach in good healthy condition and make life worth living.

Making a start is the main thing, so why not get one bottle today with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't help you the purchase price will be returned.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mississippi Valley States Demand Completion of Waterway Projects.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, in his address before the New York state chamber of commerce, put development of the country's waterways in the forefront of his program. And last week the Mississippi Valley association, in session in St. Louis, elaborated on this with the utmost enthusiasm. The delegates, who comprised the leading men of the Middle West, served notice on congress that they have ceased to beg from it for the carrying out of such great projects as the Chicago-to-the-Gulf waterway. Now they are demanding, and demanding loudly, conclusive action on the funds necessary to carry out the inland waterway plans, a fixed policy for their completion within five years, and a national plan by which such a policy could not be thwarted by any bureau or department. The association put itself on record to that effect, and in discussion of the last clause some of the delegates took occasion to say some very severe things about the director of the budget. President James E. Smith in his annual address said some of these things, and so did Senator James Reed and Roy Miller, vice president of the Intra Costal Canal Association of Louisiana and Texas.

The congressmen from the 26 states represented in the convention were asked to urge the President to put waterways completion in his annual message. The association also decided to put on a campaign for the purpose of showing to the public the practical benefits of waterways and to urge cooperation with the railways. Division of rates is desired, but not railroad ownership of the water lines.

Chicago's right to divert water from Lake Michigan came to the front and was warmly defended by Congressman Newton of St. Louis, though he based it on the needs of navigation rather than of sanitation. He declared a permanent flow of 10,000 cubic feet a minute through the Chicago river and the drainage canal was virtually needed to raise the levels of the Mississippi, and he told the delegates the 26 states must get behind Chicago in this battle for their own salvation. He asserted that there is no longer a lake level problem involved, for the lowering of that level is now complete.

Later in his lively address Mr. Newton said:

"The bulk of protest in this country comes from representatives of cities located upon the Great Lakes, who insist that the depths of their harbors are being impaired and the most ferocious protest comes from Milwaukee.

"It is interesting to note that when diversion began at Chicago the harbor at Milwaukee was approximately five feet deep, while today it is more than twenty-one feet. This increase in depth was made at the expense of the whole country from funds appropriated by congress.

"I find that many who are most strenuously opposed to the diversion at Chicago have no qualms of conscience about advocating far more extensive diversion from Niagara Falls for the manufacture of electricity to be used by Canadian and American power interests.

"The impression is made that Chicago is violating sacred treaty obligations between the United States and Canada. The truth is we have perfect understanding with Canada regarding diversion, and I am fully persuaded that no protest would ever have been raised had it not been for the big power interests who want to use this water at Niagara and down the St. Lawrence."

President Smith was re-elected by the association, and Thomas F. Cunningham of New Orleans was made vice president at large.

COL. WILLIAM MITCHELL took the stand in his own defense in his court-martial trial and reiterated his accusations against the air services, elaborating on the statements he has made frequently in articles and speeches. In the expansion of his charge that the War department's administration of the national defense was "almost treasonable," Colonel Mitchell said:

"There are two definitions of treason—the one in the Constitution, which defines it as levying war against the country and giving aid and comfort to its enemies, and the other definition of it as the giving up or betrayal of a trust or confidence. I believe the department's system is almost treasonable, because it does not give its proper place to air power in the defense of this country. It's a question of the system, not of individuals."

He repeated his charges that high ranking officers of the army and navy have given false or misleading information to investigating committees, and insisted that the D H planes still in use are "flaming coffins." Major Gullion, assistant judge advocate, cross-examined the colonel and there were frequent hot exchanges between him and the witness and also with the latter's counsel, Congressman Reid.

Next day Mitchell was led to admit that many of his sensational charges were based on hearsay and general belief. Major Gullion undertook to show that page after page in the colonel's book, "Winged Defense," was cribbed from other writers, but the court refused to go into charges of plagiarism. Representative Perkins of New Jersey, who examined the witnesses before the Lampert aircraft investigating committee last spring, said that three navy lieutenants who were before him for preliminary examination said that if called they would not tell what they knew because "it's a long way to Guam." Then the defense came to the subject of "propaganda." It submitted a copy of an official letter, dated March 21, 1925, concerning the navy education film, "The Eyes of the Fleet," on which was this indorsement:

"The object of this film is to combat the effect of General Mitchell's testimony (meaning his testimony before the Lampert committee) and to belittle the value of the airplane in war. It is to be spread by the navy recruiting service—probably this summer and fall, before congress meets."

One of the marginal notes was: "Battleship bombing: Prints made of pictures showing misses only are to be used for this."

James T. Mitchell, Jr., editor of the Boston American, testified that accounts of the Mitchell trial, prepared by the War department and containing editorial comment unfavorable to Mitchell were "available to the press."

FRANCE is undergoing another of her frequent ministerial crises and at this writing the outcome is in doubt. Premier Painleve put his financial program before the chamber of deputies and at a critical moment enough of the Communists deserted him to cause his defeat by a margin of three votes on a single item—a plan for consolidation of treasury bonds amounting to a moratorium. The premier and his ministers promptly resigned, and President Doumergues was advised to ask Aristide Briand, seven times premier, to take the office for the eighth time. He consented provisionally, but soon found he could not be assured of a majority in the chamber and so abandoned the attempt to form a ministry.

Paul Doumer and Former Premier Herriot in turn tried, and gave up, and at this writing Briand is again making the endeavor. The extremists, of both the right and the left, are talking openly of a dictatorship.

GERMANY'S reichstag has voted its ratification of the Locarno treaties by a goodly majority, despite the die-hard opposition of the Nationalists, Communists and so-called Fascists. Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann put the pacts up to the reichstag strongly as the one way of securing peace and safety. Both denied that, in ratifying the treaties Germany was entering an alliance against Russia. Stresemann said: "We have so often declared our peaceful intentions toward Russia that it is time to close the question. On the other hand, it is high time that Russia declares its peaceful intentions toward the rest of Europe."

When later he exclaimed: "We have confidence in France. We are not dealing with the France of Poincare," the chamber and galleries cheered for France!

Herr Wels, leader of the Socialists, declared Germany had only two roads before it—European peace based on the Locarno treaties, or an alliance with Russia, which must lead to war. He solemnly warned Russia to amend its ways, end its voluntary isolation, take up the road to the League of Nations and finally give up its system of political terror.

The Russophiles in America and elsewhere who have condemned the Locarno treaties because soviet Russia was not included and taken into the League of Nations can cease their wails, for one of the highest officials of the Moscow government has just declared Russia has no intention or desire to join the league, and stands aloof so far as the pacts are concerned.

SETTLEMENT of the Tacna-Arica dispute by the commission headed by General Pershing is not proceeding well. Senor Edwards, Chile's representative on the plebiscite commission, withdrew from its negotiations; the Chileans are angry because the commission called for control of the residents in the plebiscitary area; and former President Alessandri of Chile in a speech accused the Americans of stirring up "conflict, discord and hatred" between Chile and Peru instead of trying to solve the dispute. The United States cruiser Denver has been sent from Balboa to Arica.

COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE BLAIR last week revoked all exemptions under which householders have been permitted to make not to exceed 200 gallons of homemade wine without payment of tax. General Andrews, the Treasury department's prohibition enforcer, found there were hundreds of thousands of these permits outstanding and that much of the wine made under them found its way into bootleg channels.

Results of enforcement of the Volstead act since its passage five and one-half years ago—154,772 convictions in which fines aggregating $29,033,659 and jail sentences totaling nearly 12,000 years were imposed—are summed up in a Department of Justice report to Attorney General Sargent.

At the end of the same period, June 30, 1925, there were 24,684 cases pending in federal courts throughout the country, 30,213 cases had been dismissed and 7,414 violators had been acquitted. An increase of 4,865 in the last fiscal year over the record of the previous year is shown. The average jail sentence has increased from 21 days in 1923 and 34 days in 1924 to 43 days in 1925, an increase of 25 per cent in the last year. The average fine for 1925 was $200.

GOVERNOR MIRIAM FERGUSON of Texas is having a hard row to hoe these days and the threat of impeachment is growing more menacing. Enough members of the legislature to demand an extra session have made that demand, and they announced that unless the governor issued the call the speaker would be petitioned to do so. The worst of "Ma's" troubles are concerned with the highway contracts. Recently the American Road company confessed $600,000 judgment for excess profits on 1,000 miles of road surfacing contracts and there are suits against another road construction company. The governor demanded and obtained the resignation of Chairman F. V. Lanham of the state highway commission and of Joe Burkett, a member; but the leaders of the fight against her administration declared this action would not deter them in their plans.

ALL Great Britain was in mourning last week because of the death of Dowager Queen Alexandra, for she was deeply loved by the people. The body lay in state for some days in the little church of Sandringham and then was borne on the gun carriage used for Queen Victoria to Westminster Abbey where the funeral service was conducted by the archbishop of Canterbury.

Pacific Mail Line Ends Its Existence

San Francisco.—On a November day 77 years ago, a great side-wheel steamer, its decks teeming with hungry, unkempt, but riotously joyous gold seekers, many of them haggard from tropical fever, came through the Golden gate and anchored in the stream, the first steam vessel to enter this roadstead.

On a fall day in 1925, a trim freight craft loaded to the Plimsoll mark with a rich cargo, was warped in to a towering dock on the San Francisco water front and spun down the famous house flag from its main truck, for the last time.

These two events marked the beginning and the end of the Pacific Mail Steamship company, once credited with being the greatest of the world's ocean transportation companies.

The Pacific Mail, established in 1847 in New York by William H. Aspinwall and associates, was formed to give monthly mail service to the new territory opened up by the treaty of peace between Mexico and the United States of April 13, 1848, and vast unexplored Oregon lands made available by the Anglo-American treaty of the same period.

In 18[illegible] the company by a master stroke broke the English and French monoply of eastern Asiatic trade by starting a line between San Francisco and Hongkong by way of the Hawaiian islands and Japan. By 1887 the company had a fleet of twenty-five big steamers.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Allegan—Elmer Hayes is held in the county jail in default of $500 bail to appear for examination on a charge of wife desertion. He was arrested at the home of his father, near Bellaire, by Sheriff Ben Lugten.

Bay City—Andrew Lapinski, 77 years old, dropped dead while attending mass at St. Stanislaus church here Thanksgiving day. Coroner H. M. Simon said that heart disease was the cause of the death. Lapinski leaves his widow and four sons.

Kalamazoo—J. M. Bigelow, 69 years old, well known farmer residing near Bangor, was brought to a hospital here suffering from a fractured skull, broken nose and jaw, as a result of being kicked by a horse. It is feared his injuries will prove fatal.

Rockford—A proposal to bond $21,000 for installation of a new water works system here lost by two-thirds of a vote. There were 445 votes cast out of a possible 650 or 700 the proposal polled 296 of the 445 but needed 296 2-3 to make the necessary two-thirds vote to carry it.

Marquette—For the first time since the State undertook the enlargement of the Marquette Branch Prison, the institution is housing more convicts than it has cells for. A recent count showed a population of 752. More than 30 men are sleeping on cots placed in cell block corridors.

Cassopolis—A reward of $1,500 is being offered here for the capture and conviction of the five armed bandits who escaped last week, after unseccessfully trying to crack the safe in te First National bank here. Of that amount $1,000 is offered by the bank and the remainder by Sheriff Earl Sill, of Cass county.

Vassar—Mr. and Mrs. Chap S. Cottrell, Tuscola township, celebrated their golden wedding recently at the home of their oldest daughter, Mrs. Norman Blaylock, of Tuscola township. They were married on Cottrell's birthday and he was 76 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Cottrell have lived on the same farm 42 years.

Albion—County School Commissioner Deland Davis, who is also county agent for corrections and charities, will give a talk on "Juvenile Delinquency," before the Albion Boosters and Knockers. Harry D. Morse will be the chairman. The program has been arranged by Superintendent of Schools Don Harrington.

Grand Rapids—James M. Travis, 82 years old, one of the few survivors possessing personal and intimate memories of Abraham Lincoln, died at Reeds Lake Sanitarium recently, after a residence of Grand Rapids of 55 years. As a boy, Travis frequently saw Lincoln as a guest in the home of his father, John W. Travis, in Paris, Ill., and delighted in telling anecdotes of the great man.

Monroe—It is expected that the viaduct over the Pere Marquette tracks north of here, used in connection with road M-10, better known as the new Dixie highway, will be finished by the end of the week, the bridge across the River Raisin and race adjoining being near completion. Traffic between Toledo, Monroe, Dearborn and Detroit probably will be opened at the end of next week.

Grand Rapids—Little hope is held for the recovery of Mrs. Edna Keen, 23 years old, wife of Cecil Keen, who is said to have taken poison following an argument with her husband about a dog. She is being treated at the Butterworth Hospital. According to the police, Keen disposed of the dog Thursday afternoon. During the evening his wife sent him on an errand to a nearby store. She swallowed the poison during his absence he said.

Ionia—Taxpayers again will have the opportunity to swell the coffers with winter tax money about December 10. Mrs. Bessie M. Gallaway, county treasurer, has added the amounts of taxes to be collected and notified the township treasurer of the collections to be made. The total taxes to be collected this year for all funds is $316,078.20, or $102,357.44 below 1924-25. The total for all sources last year was $418,435.64 and in 1922-23, was $446,970.07.

Marshall—Albert M. Smith, Jr., of Kalamazoo, was successful in the civil service examination held in the third congressional district for appointment of United States military academy at West Point, and Ronald D. Salmon, of Pittsford, for appointment to the United States naval academy at Annapolis, according to announcement made by United States Representative Joseph L. Hooper. The alternates to West Point are Mills H. Sampey, of Osseo, first, and William G. Foard, Jr., of Kalamazoo, second.

Grand Rapids—Miss Betty Quinlan, 16 years old, daughter of Senator James C. Quinlan, was injured severely and two other young persons were hurt when an automobile in which they were riding slid from the road near Ada and rolled over. Miss Quinlan was taken to Blodgett Memorial hospital and recovered consciousness two hours later. Charles McDermott, 17 years old, junior college football player, driver of the car, suffered a fracture of the leg and Miss Dorothy Brechting, 16 years old, suffered from the shock.

Lansing—Lansing was host Friday to 2,400 boys who attended the twenty-third annual older boys' conference here Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Some fear felt earlier in the week that sufficient accommodation could not be found for the visitors was laid when it was announced that practically the entire number of rooms sought had been pledged. Friday morning was devoted to registration and the assigning of visitors to their rooms. At the first session Friday afternoon, officers were elected and the conference organized.

Battle Creek—The school board has decided to put to the voters on Dec. 7 the question of whether $450,000 in bonds shall be issued for a new junior high school building here.

Elmer Hayes is held in the county jail in default of $500 bail to appear for examination on a charge of wife desertion. He was arrested at the home of his father, near Bellaire, by Sheriff Ben Lugten.

Port Huron—Charles L. Stecher, 48 years old, a veteran Grand Trunk car inspector, died in an I. O. O. F. lodge meeting last week. Heart trouble brought on by climbing two flights of stairs was responsible.

Jackson—Value of farm lands and buildings in Jackson county shows a decline of more than $6,000,000 during the five year period between 1920 and 1925, according to a report of the department of commerce of the government, following the census of the farms of the county.

Mt. Clemens—It is announced by members of the Halfway Commission that Detroit water mains will be laid into the village by December. With extension of Mt. Clemens gas mains to the village, it is said Halfway will have the same modern conveniences as the other parts of the metropolitan area.

Ionia—Thanksgiving will be a day of rest and recreation for the inmates of the Michigan reformatory, who number more than 1,600. A special dinner will be provided and a movie program will be given in the auditorium during the day. Rev. J. H. Green, pastor of the Ionia Presbyterian church, will deliver the Thanksgiving sermon.

Grand Rapids—Responding to widespread protest against continuance of Eastern standard time in Grand Rapids throughout the winter months, the city commission this week probably will reconsider its former action and vote on a resolution which would return the municipality to Central standard time next Saturday night at midnight.

Saginaw—Patrick Kain, 74 years old, chief of police here for many years prior to his retirement in 1919 and one of the veteran officers of the country, is dead after an illness of more than a year. Chief Kain started his career in the lumber days when the patrol wagon was a wheelbarrow and lumberjacks were hauled through the street in that manner.

Lansing—Fears that Lansing will fail in its efforts to obtain accommodations for the 2,400 delegates to the Older Boys' conference here the latter part of the week was expressed by the committee in charge. About 500 boys are yet to be accommodated. A house to house canvass is to be started if sufficient rooms have not been promised before that time.

Jackson—Patrons of music in Jackson will have the opportunity of hearing Cecilia Hansen, the Russian violinist, who comes here under the auspices of the Jackson Civic Music association, the evening of December 3. Miss Hansen has been playing in the United States for the last two seasons and has won ovations in New York, Chicago, Syracuse and many other music centers.

Lansing—Sale of the Y. M. C. A. property at 210 South Capitol avenue to the First Presbyterian church is being considered by the association as the result of an offer submitted by a church committee recently. The church offers $60,000 for the property. The church made the offer after a meeting of its congregation. The building would be used to house the Sunday school, Boy Scouts and other organizations.

Ironwood—A searching party is combing the woods in the vicinity of Lake Gogebic in search of Bert and William Jacisin, of Ironwood, brothers, who have been lost since Sunday. They were hunting deer in the vicinity of the lake. The temperature dropped to almost zero last night and it is feared they suffered from exposure to the cold. Neither of the boys is an experienced hunter. They are 18 and 20 years old.

Muskegon—The two-masted schooner, Our Son, Capt. F. Nelson commanding, has arrived here after a battle with a storm on Lake Michigan, while two other ships bringing pulp wood for the Central Paper Co., of Muskegon, are still battling their way down the lake. The two ships still out are the Mueller and Zillah, both steamers. They are enroute from Duluth. The arrival of the ships here will close navigation between the northern points and Muskegon.

Menominee—The mystery of the disappearance of Eleanor Anderson, of Gwinn, Mich., and Lina Moilainen of White Pine, Mich., was solved when the girls reported that they had been involuntary passengers on an Ann Arbor car ferry over the week end. The girls boarded the car ferry here to sell magazine subscriptions and failed to go ashore before the boat left. They made the trip across the lake to Frankfort and back while Menominee police searched for them.

Lansing—Details of plans suggested to induce new factories to locate here were discussed at a joint meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Lansing Real Estate board. The real estate board here had been active for some weeks in an endeavor to obtain new factories for the city so that Lansing's industries may be diversified. The chamber of commerce also has investigated a number of factory propositions, but so far no new plants have been obtained by either organization.

Ann Arbor—Increasing the hospital facilities at the University of Michigan, the Old University hospital which before the erection of the new $3,000,000 structure which was dedicated last week, housed all the patients, will be re-opened on the first of the New Year, according to Dr. Harley A. Haynes, director of the hospital. The re-opening of the old structure, which for the past several months has been under repair, will add approximately 300 beds. Overcrowded conditions in the new hospital have made this step necessary.

Just Another Story About the Goodness of PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Anna Linder, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 44, Dassel, Meeker County, Minn., writes: "For two years I suffered with that terrible disease, chronic catarrh. Fortunately I saw your advertisement and took Pe-ru-na. Now I am well and the mother of two children. I owe it all to Pe-ru-na. I would not be without that great remedy for twice its cost, for I am well and strong now. I cannot speak in too high terms of its value as a medicine."

For more than half a century Dr. Hartman's Pe-ru-na has been performing just such wonderwork as this.

Pe-ru-na is sold everywhere in both tablet and liquid form. Insist upon having genuine Pe-ru-na.

The VALLEY of VOICES

by GEORGE MARSH

AUTHOR OF
"TOILERS OF THE TRAIL"
"THE WHELPS OF THE WOLF"

COPYRIGHT by THE PENN PUBLISHING CO.

IT is the spirit of the Northland, imprisoned by a magician of the pen and made manifest in a great human drama enacted in the unmapped region below the Arctic. An epic of the fur trade into which is entwined vivid personalities and intense emotions, strong loves and bitter hatreds. Amazingly real and swift in action. It is the best story yet written by George Marsh, novelist of superior talent, who selects his scenes from the great white places and his characters from the dwellers therein.

Let Every Citizen Take Notice

We would like for every citizen of North Adams to note how efficient the powers that were three years age, have been in experimenting with our electric lighting system. We had some doubts as to the possible success of the scheme but doubt has changed to conviction, which soon after became down right disgust. So they found the village electric plant inadequate for its duty. It cost too much to run and pay the man who claimed to be running it, when as a matter of fact, he wasn't doing anything but starting and stopping the machinery and smoking his cigar. We claim that a man who runs a plant will literally see to it the books are kept, that the actual expenses and receipts are jotted down, the necessary supplies are bought when needed, and in fact he will manage both the machanical and business ends of the enterprise. This was never done by the hired man—but was supposed to be one of the little chores of the Council, but sad to relate, it wasn't looked after very efficiently, and that's why our municipal plant failed to pay out.

We were paying a large salary to a man to start and stop the machinery, and so we couldn't afford it. We abolished the nice little home plant which cost the tax-payers a large sum of hard-earned dollars, we sold the expensive machinery for one cent on the dollar, we rented our nice municipal building to a scavenger firm—it is plenty good enough we calculote, for junk storage; we previously decided the million dollar corporation known as the Southern Michigan Power Co. at Hudson needs a lift, so we bond the village for a few thousand dollars to build sixteen miles of No. 10 fence wire. perfectly bare, along the public highway where it is constantly menaced by the trees; and always will be, since the property holders won't allow the trees removed. Consequently we are paying Avis & Son around $200 per month for the lightning bug voltage we are getting over our line which we paid for but don't own. A while back Avis & Son offered to square away our remaining indebtedness if we would dicker to them the remainder of our electric system, which was very kind of them we are sure. And the Council we might say, came within two jumps of doing it.

We personally use this current at two places in the village and in all candor will say it would have been dubbed a failure in the dark ages. The lights have ague symptoms and they shake and flutter like the whiskers of a goat; they become constipated and die on first so to speak; they have a habit of winking and extinguishing when the daughter and her spark are alone in the parlor—and we won't have that at all. We pay the bill whether we get lights or we don't, but we get roiled at times. We peek about at fellow sufferers and we see them swallowing this awful dose without a whimper and wonder what they and us and the whole of us, are made of!

Night after night the lights get boozy and subside and these citizens pay their bills and say nary a word. Pretty expensive experiment is it not? You bet. Bill Sheldon used to say that the small burg must succumb to the big power line and Bill was right—anyhow we succumbed. Bill sang, whistled and cried over his maiden speech which he was to make at the mass meeting, and at last forgot part of it. It will be remembered we asked if the electrical wizards could guarantee to deliver a satisfactory current here, to which they answered they knew they could, and any one so simple as to put up any objections must be a moss-back.

So the experimenters went ahead and we are enjoying the experiment right now. Let's put in some more experimenters next spring.

He's A Homicider

We sometimes wonder if the automobile drivers of the country realize the tremendous responsibility resting on their shoulders the minute they take the wheel and pilot their machine on the highways of Michigan. Judging from the mod us operandi of some drivers they must be intoxicated with pleasure or satiated with self abandonment One neods but to pick up a paper and read the awful havoc wrought by care-free rouls who would make the motor vehicle the Juggernaut of modern times, wherein scores of innocent passengers meet an early and awful death. It is sickening to read the log of daily accidents through the country-side, when we consider the flexibility of the automobile and the abuse it will stand without giving up the ghost. Many a time the autoist is traveling at 40 to 50 miles an hour and is suddenly confronted with the necessity of applying brakes at some country cross road where he did not or would not look ahead, and the chances of avoiding an accident are meager— yet he does this very thing hundreds of times while the splendid mechanism of the car endures the strain and continues to serve him faithfully. It might be said thet the driver who could not manage the modern automobile without trouble these days, is pretty nearly a natural born fool—and such he often proves to be.

There are few excuses for the accidents we daily witness or read of in the country districts—and we believe the only possible remedy is punishment of the criminally negligent driver, in-so-much as the heiniousness of the crime demands In the crowded streets of our big cities accidents are often justifiable and unavoidable, but the simp who crashes into a machine on the open highway, what shall we do for him?

No other thing remains then to be done, than to shake up the laggard which Michigan state authorities are seekiug to do by using the State Police for watch dogs. Incompetent drivers made so by intoxication; or hoodlums rendered criminal by homicidal tendencies, will have to be looked after. There is a limit to all things, likewise an end to every career of recklessness and the Troopers will catch you if you don't watch out, sports!

The same spirit which makes a driver ruthlessly run down and slaughter the farmer's poultry and live stock on the highway, causes him to wink at helpless children and open the throttle a little wider These birds must be rounded up!

The investigations in air service planes which is going on at Washington has degenerated into a family row among the army set at the capitol. Col. Mitchell who is more than likely jealous of some of the powers vested in officials higher up is trying to convince a lot of civilians by his testimony that the air service of our navy and army is simply rotten. It is claimed the whole business has developed into a snubbing contest among the wives of army officers in Washington and since the Colonel has made it so hot for certain men in charge of that branch of the government, the wives of these officers have taken up the cudgel and will neither go to a function where the Mitchells are invited or have anything to do with the Mitchells. The Dearborn Independent, that magazine which is noted for telling the "untold truth" states there are so many investigations going on at Washington it will soon be be necessary to investigate the investigations, as much as to say that the whole court martial in the Mitchell case and most of the other scandals need an airing. There is so much personal jealousy and so much political quibbling among the leaders it is extremely hard to find why or who is really the worst "grafter" and that being the case no one is certain as to the permanency of his job or which side of the fence it is safe to remain on. We should say from a close observation that the lame duck who is a good straddler and can maintain his equilibrium on the exact centre is the boy who is due to win a case. "Go to it, Boys."

The people of this country are especially warned not to place too much credence in the prognostigations of certain sooth-sayers who want you to think right at the off set we are entering the edge of one of the coldest winters on record. These birds are always with us. Sometimes they represent the coal dealers association, at other times they represent the bug house contingent who want to say or do something which might stir people up and gain notoriety. The philosopher—and there are many such will simply decide that when the winter is past and gone he will then tell you what kind of a winter it is going to be, and that is the only absolutely reliable way of knowing. Time and again we have been scared into conniptions by some hot air shooter who claimed to be an authority, saying we must prepare for the worst—and when April rolled around he could jeer us for our gullibility, as it always turned out the other way. This species of pest is with us yet but we have pulled his teeth and his bark is a whale of a site worse than his bite.

The Shadow of The Beyond

It is possible some of our readers remember sometime ago of reading an advertisement for the literary works of O. Henry a talented writer in New York City whose fame had suddenly spread to the uttermost parts of the country. These sets of fiction were being sold at a fancy figure solely on the reputation of O. Henry. When we remember the pomp and circumstances surrounding this author's coming into the literary world we naturally associate his name with great riches and financial opulance when sad to relate the exact opposite is the facts. O. Henry, a sobriquet only, was a clever, impulsive easy-going well met fellow—in fact he was so impulsive that it is not strange his worldly possessions were little and his ambition not much above the ordinary good time through life.

His ability was such that the editors of New York City at once gave him authority to write any thing he wished and often his stories were paid for and the money spent before they were written. His style of prodigality can best be explained by his manner of leaving the bowling alleys of which he was a constant frequenter. After bowling for an entire evening O. Henry would reach in his pocket for a large handful of coins—no matter if they were silver dollars, or gold pieces,—little difference it made to him, and roll these coins down the alley for the pin boys as playfully as he would marbles, then he would repair to a cabaret for an orgy of spending. As a result of this kind of life he was constantly hard up; had no resources and when illness struck him down had to eke out a miserable existence. He spent a few months in a southern state in vain hope of improving, but eventually returned to the gay life of the "great white way." He was so pinched financially he had to ask for advance payments on his stories, in fact borrowed money to return to New York. Almost any novice would readily fore see the finish of such an existence O. Henry was suddenly stricken with a fatal malady, was taken to a hospital and died before his friends knew of his plight. His body was later identified in the morgue unknown to the hospital attaches or the undertaker,

You Can Afford It If You Believe So

The writer occasionally peruses the Literary Digest and is struck with the number of advertisements for foreign cruises therein, especially under the supervision of experts—men who have the world on their back, capable of directing the casual globe trotter to any land or any city in the world and telling you the street number as it were of every historically interesting thing across the Atlantic.

One can scarcely estimate the greater education or benefits which would accrue from visiting the ethereal blue Mediterranean and its world-famous ports, the sleepy Islands of the Ægean Sea, the buried cities under frowning Vesuvius and Etna, and then there is a voyage to the Holy Land in Palestine—the cradle of the human race. You will be surprised to learn that such a trip as second class or steerage—only costs from $400 to $600 and this includes your entire eating and lodging expenses while away. Seems to us that hundreds in ordinary circumstances would enjoy such an outing, not only as a pleasure jaunt but as a matter of education. Think of the wonderful places you can visit armed with a notebook and camera. There is ancient Rome with its classical ruins, the great Coliseum the great Roman Forum, Arch of Titus, Captoline Hill, the Catacombs, the Vatican where you can glimpse His Majesty the Pope of the world the Art Galleries, thence to Herculaneum and Pompeii the buried cities of the Plain, see the tomb of Rachel, Mt Calvary, Solomon's Temple, and a thousand other things which would appeal to the intelligent.

HASKINS NAMED TO FAIR BOARD

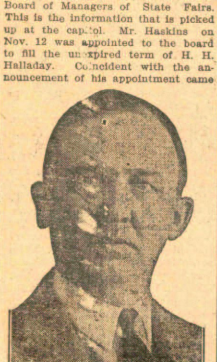
(By Ed A. Nowack)

Lansing—James B. Haskins, of Howard City, publisher, postmaster, former field director of The Michigan Press Association, an indefatigable worker for betterment of newspaper conditions in Michigan, and one of the most widely known publishers in the state, will be reappointed next April to the five-year term on the Board of Managers of State Fairs. This is the information that is picked up at the capitol. Mr. Haskins on Nov. 12 was appointed to the board to fill the unexpired term of H. H. Halladay. Coincident with the announcement of his appointment came the information he had been named chairman of the public relations committee of the board.



JAMES B. HASKINS

Newspapermen and men in public life in Lansing and elsewhere see in the appointment of Jim Haskins the much desired inauguration of a modern, competent and thoroughly sympathetic relationship between the fair board on the one hand and the public and the press on the other. These latter two have suffered in the past from devious handling and horseplay by the former management of the fair board. Appointment of Haskins will put an end to the practice the former management frequently exercised by infliction of petty penalities upon the press and public where honest differences of opinion prevailed. Gone, also, will be the alleged dictatorial and autocratic methods frequently employed in the past. The press and the public will be treated fairly, Mr. Haskins says.

Those facts are insured by the first piece of work performed by Mr. Haskins and contained in a statement, issued in conjunction with an invitation to 89 Michigan organizations to attend a future meeting of the board of managers. In this connection Mr. Haskins says:

"In order to make it clear at the outset that the Michigan State Fair is a state institution and shall in the future be such in fact as well as name, a special committee of which I was chairman prepared and issued the following statement of policy at the first meeting of the new board held at Lansing, Nov. 13, after such report received the unanimous sanction of the Board of Managers. This report follows:

"Answering the call of its chairman, the Honorable L. Whitney Watkins, the members of the Board of Managers of State Fairs have met for the purpose of placing the affairs of the State Fair in order so that it will truly represent the agricultural, industrial, educational, public health and other major enterprises of this state and after an investigation of conditions at the State Fair, it is the unanimous sense of this board that a thorough and complete reorganization is necessary and that a very drastic change in policy is the paramount duty confronting the Board.

"It is our opinion that an institution such as the State Fair should first of all be made truly representative of the agricultural, industrial and educational interests of the state. The Fair is located in an ideal locality. Every agency of the state has been tendered its management in order that it might attain a success commensurate with its possibilities and the diversified industries of the state. The possibilities that were open to its management have been sadly neglected with the result that the State Fair has wandered far away from the purposes for which it was originally intended. The State Fair should be made an institution that will reflect the highly organized agricultural and commercial development of the state. To accomplish and make effective the purposes for which it was organized, this Board will soon call together the various interested agencies and co-operate with them in establishing its future policies.

"In line with this suggestion and in the knowledge that these various agencies can assist very materially in bringing this important institution to the front rank of all state expositions of a similar character, it is the sense of this board that representatives of the following groups be invited to attend a future meeting.

"Agricultural organizations: County Fair Association, Michigan Farmers' Club, State Farm Bureau, Michigan State Grange, Michigan Gleaners' Association, Michigan Milk Producers' Association, Michigan Holstein Breeders' Association, Michigan Jersey Cattle Breeders' Association, Michigan Guernsey Association, Sheep Breeders' Association, Swine Breeders' Association, Horse Breeders' Association, Riding Horse Interests, Crop Improvements Association, Potato Growers' Exchange, Certified Seed Potato Growers, Dog and Rabbit Breeders, Poultry Producers' Association, State Horticulture Society, Bean Producers' Association, Bee Keepers' Association, State Department of Agriculture, Michigan State College, Smith-Hughes Agricultural Schools, County Agricultural Agents, Vocational Schools, Michigan Soil Improvements Association, Michigan Muck Growers' Association, Truck and Garden Crop Growers, State Florists' Association, Michigan Allied Dairy Association, Grain Dealers' Association, Elevator Exchange, Hay and Grain Association, Millers' Association, Bean Jobbers Association, Seed Dealers' Association, Beet Sugar Producers, Canners' Association, Implement Dealers' Association, Fertilizer Industries, Creamery Managers and Owners' Association, Ice Cream Manufacturers' Association.

"Commercial and Manufacturing Industries: Transportation Agencies, Michigan Manufacturers' Association, Automobile Manufacturers, Truck and Tractor Manufacturers, Makers of Home Conveniences, Food Products Manufacturers, Furniture Manufacturers, Household and Farm Equipment Manufacturers, Retailers' Association, Lumbering, Mining, Road Building.

"State Wide Organizations: Development Bureaus, Country Life Association, Boys' and Girls' Clubs, Boy and Girl Scouts, Automobile Association, Chamber of Commerce, Civic Organizations, Rotary Clubs, Kiwanis Clubs, Lions' Clubs, Exchange Clubs, American Legion, G. A. R., Veterans' of Foreign Wars, Aviation Association, Army and Navy Club, Fraternal Orders, Ministers' Association, Church Denominations, Historical Societies, Sporting Organizations, Tourists' Association, Isaac Walton League.

"Educational Societies: State Teachers' Association, Literary and Art Organization, Child Conservation League, Radio Association, Schools and Colleges, Dept. of Public Instruction, Automobile Clubs of America."

Future meetings of the Board will be open to the public. The Fair Grounds will continue open for park and recreational use. Following is a list of members of the new board:

Term Ending April 14, 1929:

Benjamin Gotfredson, Detroit; Thomas P. Henry, Detroit; Andrew J. Crawford, Detroit; George A. Kelly, Detroit; Clifford G. Olmsted, Midland.

The Valley of Voices

By GEORGE MARSH

This is a big story of a new north, a portion of the domains of the fur trade that never before has been the scene of a romance. It is almost equal to a vacation trip and a participation in the stirring life of the region—only, few of us would relish the hardships and the dangers which are a part of the daily routine. Most of us will be contented to travel via our arm chairs, view the natural wonders, thrill at the very absorbing mystery and be spectators of an intense human drama through the chapters of Mr. Marsh's exciting and realistic tale. This talented author brings the far north right to us. We live in the charm of its short but amazing summer and the magical fascination of its long winter, and we touch hands, as it were, with a new class of brave, rugged human beings. It is the very essence of romance and real adventure.

This familiar old-time dance calling is heard every Saturday night over WLS, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation station, during the National Barn Dance, which has become one of the most popular features of this station. Old-time fiddlers supply the music for these week-end dances and Tom Owen, who has achieved fame as a dance caller, guides the radio dancers in the farm communities in their steps and turns. Tom Dandurand, whose fiddle has made a reputation for him in the rural communities, is the chief barn-dance violinist. He is assisted by a banjoist, Bill Swarts. Most of the music consists of the old-time tunes used for the old-fashioned Virginia Reel, quadrilles and lancers. Out in the country every Saturday night community dances are held to the dance music of WLS. They are the typical old barn dances.

W. C. T. U. Column

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Some Meanings Of The Letters, W. C. T. U.

Many years ago a civic parade passed through the business streets of Macon, Georgia—streets where saloons were in the majority and on which not a few walked with uncertain steps.

A beautiful white float filled with white-robed women and children carrying American flags, came into view of spectators crowding Cherry Street. It was covered with white flowers and white-ribbon bows, and from its corners waved graceful white plumes.

"Oh, look at the lovely float of the Western Union Telegraph Company!" exclaimed several glancing at the letters, W. C. T. U.

"No, that isn't right", remarked a careful reader. "Guess again."

"Maybe the fellow who arranged those initials had had too many drinks, and got them mixed," some one suggested.

"What can they stand for?"

No one knew, until the puzzling question was answered by a shower of temperance leaflets from the flag-waving children.

"Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Huh! I didn't know they had an organization here."

"Just a handful of fanatics. The idea of refined women meddling with saloons. That's men's business Women would better attend to their home affairs."

"Why, said a traveling man, "that Woman's Continuous Troubling Union has caused saloons to close in the north and east." His "Better look out," evoked a few bits of sarcasm.

"I have heard of the W. C. T. U. Got all sorts of cranky notions. The letters might as well stand for 'We Come To Upset,' for that is what they are trying to do. Take the matter of revenue, for example. They want to do away with saloons. How could this city be run if it did not have the license money from saloons?" asked a city father.

"I reckon they would like to tell us, 'We Can't Tank Up;' " said a youth, stroking the down on his upper lip "Makes me thirsty. Come on, fellows. The drinks are on me."

"Heard one of 'em say, 'We'll C to U,' " sneered a white-aproned bar-keeper. "Good joke, ain't it?" he called back, as he followed the half-dozen high school boys behind his swinging doors.

The general laugh which followed proved that it was—then.

"The Woman's Christian Temperance Union means well, but it is visionary, and has undertaken an impossible task," was the last comment before attention centered on the next float.

ANOTHER PARADE

Among the thousands of Macon's loyal citizens taking part in the wonderful Parade of Organizations during the recent centennial celebrations, was a large company of Christian women from churches, schools, business concerns and homes, each carrying an American flag, and marching six abreast. On the broad white ribbon fastened from shoulder to waist of each were the magic letters, W. C. T. U.

On they moved down the paved streets. Evidences of prosperity were on every side—saloonless streets and no sign of intoxication in the multiplied thousands of onlookers.

"Here comes the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. God bless the white ribboners!" was often heard. Enthusiastic were the plaudits with which they were continually greeted.

"There wouldn't be many men in this parade if it had not been for your organization," shouted a bystander. "These one hundred percent men's organizations might have mustered as much as twenty five percent."

"Even then, some of those starting would have fallen out at the saloons which used to flourish along this route," added another.

"There would be more wabbling and stumbling than marching with military steps, if the W. C. T. U. hadn't helped turn this old corner grocery into a haber dashery," commented a man on a corner.

"Many of the dressed-up women and children wouldn't have had suitable clothes to parade in," quietly remarked an elderly lady.

"Keep up your work. Finish the job. We're for you, W. C. T. U.," was heard by the marchers as hats were lifted in respect.

"Look who's here! Yonder is my blessed grandmother in that pretty auto," boasted a bright eyed school girl, pointing to the automobile decorated in white heading the W. C. T. U. section and filled with pioneer white ribboners, one a sweet faced elderly lady whose efforts had accomplished "that where unto they were sent," and had changed her, the former "fanatic," into a heroine, and the idol of her grandchildren.

"That lady riding here is more blessed than you realize, child. I could tell of many a home blessed by her and the W. C. T. U.," said an old gentleman. "I have lived here many years and I've never seen anything better than ridding this town of saloons. Blind tigers will go in time, too."

"Hurrah for the W. C. T. U.! They're trying to fix it so Whisky Can't Take Us," sang out a sturdy youngster. "There's mother in the middle of the tenth row. Hey, Mother! Look this way, Mother! Hey!"

WELL COME TO US

Macon people know today that W. C. T. U. means Woman's Christian Temperance Union, while on occasion its activities have made it a Woman's Citizenship Training Union.

Members of the W. C. T. U. are still engaged in "dry cleaning," though in some places the cleaning activities warranted the announcement, Washing Contracts Taken Unconditionally.

The W. C. T. U. says to you: "We Come To Unite the women of the home, the church, the school and the industries in a progressive program for the protection of the home, the abolition of the illegal liquor traffic and the triumph of Christ's Golden Rule in custom and in law. Well Come To Us."—The Union Signal.

M. S. C. To Broadcast Farm Radio School

Five separate courses, each having its own night of the week, will be included in the farm radio school which is to be broadcast from the M. S. C., station WKAR beginning on Monday, January 11.

The school will run for twelve weeks, or throughout the months of best radio reception. Experience of the college radio school a year ago showed that farmers, as a rule are too busy with spring work after about April 1 to listen regularly to radio courses. This fact, together with the better reception conditions of the winter months, caused authorities at M. S. C. to book the school earlier this year.

The plan of the courses will be different from that of the first school last spring. Instead of devoting one or two weeks to each subject, individual courses will run through the entire twelve weeks, one night each week being allotted to each. This plan, it is felt, will serve better the needs of both listeners and broadcasters.

Subject matter for the five courses and their nights will be as follows: home economics, Mondays; animal husbandry, poultry and veterinary medicine, Tuesdays; gardening and horticulture, Wednesdays; and farm crops, Fridays. The lectures will begin at 7:15, eastern standard time, and continue until 8 o'clock. From two to four speakers will be scheduled for each night.

A radio school catalog, containing detailed schedules of all lectures, the subjects to be discussed, and information about registration is being mailed out to the hundreds who enrolled in last year's farm school and to others who are interested in agricultural radio courses.

Dr. Bailey To Be A Farm Week Speaker

Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey, former dean of agriculture at Cornell University, author, lecturer, and one of the world's leading figures in agriculture, will be a speaker at the annual Farmers Week to be held at the M. S. C. from February 1 to 5 this winter.

Although the list of speakers for the big rural conference is far from complete, several men of national prominence have already been announced. In addition to Dr. Bailey, C. W. Warburton, federal director of agricultural extension work at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, have accepted invitations to address the Farm Week crowds.

A score of other speakers, from both inside and outside the state, will be listed on the general programs for the week. Announcements will be made later, as these men are definitely scheduled.

Prominent among the many special exhibits for the week will be a crops show, featuring a state potato show, the competitive exhibits of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, and a special corn borer display. A poultry and egg show, and special horticultural displays in honor of the official opening of M. S. C.'s new horticultural building will also be of special interest.

A review of the entire field of agricultural marketing is given in a new book on the subject just written by Prof. J. T. Horner, of the M. S. C. economics department. While the book covers every thing from preparation for market to the final disposition of the product, it places special emphasis upon the production problems in relation to marketing, a phase of the subject given too little attention in the past. Standardization of product and care in producing and handling are brought out in special chapters.

Tuberculosis The Great White Plague

"You breed a nation of weaklings, interfere with the law of survival. The 50,000 lives you save annually are weak lives. I refuse to support anything that helps to keep alive the unfit." So writes the conscientious objector.

If he is right, the tuberculosis Christmas seal sale is wrong. In the primitive world, survival was the test of fitness. It is no longer. We upset that law during the World War when we sent our mental and physical best away to die. Eight millions of the best from all the nations engaged in that war died.

The war is over and done. Because we are applying intelligence to the matter of survival today we hoping that never again will there be such slaughter of the fit. In war we interfere blindly with the law of survival Today we are interfering with it in peace.

Ninety-eight percent of the civilized people of the world today have been infected with tuberculosis. Under primitive conditions they would be free from that infection as were the Indians, the Eskimos the South Sea Islanders. Conditions in America today are not primitive. We have an industrial civilization, where men are massed together and disease works havoc.

The greatest work of those who fight tuberculosis today is not curative work, but preventive. The aim today is to teach the fit to continue fit, and to make fit those who might be unfit. To make those who are mentally strong, physically strong as well. Because they were not physically fit tuberculosis carried to an untimely grave many of the intellectual giants of history Voltaire, Ruskin, Goethe, Schiller, Balzac, Keats, Shelley, Byron, Bronte'; and our own Emerson, Whitman, Lanier and Thoreau among them.

The cut in the tuberculosis death rate today is not caused by keeping alive the unfit, but by teaching the fit to continue fit. The little educator who teaches this is the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal.

You may postpone your funeral provided you wish to. Most accidents are preventable, most diseases preventable and curable. Ninety percent of all funerals, so the insurance companies tell us could be postponed.

The first way to postpone such an event, with your interesting self as principal in the act, is to use reasonable care in eating. You do not have to be a faddist. It is neither necessary to swallow your food whole nor chew each mouthful 35 times, to be strictly a carnivore nor a vegetarian. Lots of vegetables, particularly the green, leafy ones, plenty of water, a gallon or so a day, with not too much meat and eggs, variety in diet with reasonable chewing, covers the food program.

The next way to postpone the mournful gathering of relatives who will attend the reading of your will is to get sleep you need. Four hours may be enough for Edison, but you aren't Edison. You need eight or more hours. The insurance companies will tell you that, and they are just about the most interested persons in the world, when it comes to a matter of postponing funerals.

Cleanliness, inside and out, with fresh air, quantities of it, day and night, complete the prescription.

The best little health advertiser ever invented,—the tuberculosis Christmas seal—is on sale. The proceeds of the sale go to teach boys and girls, men and women how to live long and how they may postpone their funerals. You will be asked to buy Christmas seals. The need is great, the opportunity greater.

THE WINDIGO

You never saw a windigo; that's sure. The chances are that you never heard one. But have you ever heard a superstitious Indian or half-breed of the Canadian wilds tell of its horrors? He certainly makes a blood-curdling thing out of the windigo. Anyway, this is the story of a windigo that was real enough to leave tracks like those of a great bear and to kill a big bloodhound. It is also the story of a factor's daughter and an American naturalist. The girl is beautiful and educated and a wonderful violinist. The man is brave and strong. And when Brent Steele gets into the "Valley of Voices" and sees the charm of Denise St. Onge and realizes that the mysterious Windigo is working for her destruction—why, he drops everything else and starts in to solve the malign mystery. There's a fierce rivalry between trading posts—which complicates the situation. And Denise, to save her father, has been forced into a promise of marriage. So Brent Steele's job is a he-man's job. But he does the job—and gets his reward.

CHAPTER I

Steele stopped in his tracks. With his right hand he freed his ear from the head-piece of his tump-line and stood listening. Surely, he thought, those were the unmistakable notes of a violin, clear above the noise of the rapids. Curious, he continued up the steep portage; now convinced that faintly through the beat of broken waters, which the trail paralleled, floated eerie music, now doubting his senses. At length his alert ears failed to capture the strains of the magic violin and he dismissed his illusion as the vagary of nerves overtense from the toil of the trail over which he had come.

For a space he went on, engrossed in other thoughts, when through the roar of the waters a violin sobbed up to a wild crescendo . . . then ceased.

Easing the top bag to the ground, Steele swung the lower pack, with its attached tump-line, beside it, and waited. These were no fancied melodies of summer whitewaters. It was no wraith music which a shift in the August breeze had brought him—this mad playing.

Again the notes of the violin were audible; clearer now. Some magician out there on the neighboring shore was baring his soul. It was unbelievable—here, in this lost valley of the north—pure wizardry. Enchanted, Steele listened as the violin sang of yearning and despair, unutterable, which genius has voiced to the world through the magic of its strings. And as he listened he wondered what tragedy lay behind that playing, what trick of fate had buried this master of the bow in a fur-post on the Wailing river.

"W'at you hear, de Windigo seeng in de strong-water?"

Turning, Steele smiled at the blocky figure of the speaker standing in the trail, his head and shoulders bent under a canoe.

"No, David, but I've been listening to the violin of a shaman—a medicine man conjuring up the spirits of the rapids. Someone at this French post is a sorcerer."

"Maybe you hear Windigo all de same," dryly suggested the half-breed, easing the stern of the canoe to the trail to uncover a broad, swart face wrinkled with amusement. "Up at Fort Hope de peopl' scared of dis river for sure. Dey tell me de strong-water by de French post bad place for de devils an' de Windigo."

"Yes, I heard that too, the valley has a bad name on the Albany. Francois, at Martin's Falls, says it was called the Wailing river because of the moaning of the rapids here in winter. I told him it was only the wind, but he wouldn't have it—insisted that the place was 'bad country,' bewitched."

"Dey say plenty peopl' drown there, long tam ago," gravely added David.

"So old Pierre once told me, down at Henley house. He was traveling from Ogoke to the Albany one winter and struck this gorge about sunset. But the spirits scared him so with their wailing that he drove his dogs ten miles before he dared to make camp. I can't understand why the French built a place on a tabooed river. They must have known its reputation."

"Wal," replied David with a grimace, "I nevaire hear one of dese Windigo howl een de night, but eef I see him now I eat heem for sure. I call dis de Starvin' riviere."

Steele laughed loudly at the remark of his hard-headed companion, whose legacy of superstition from an Ojibway mother had been heavily diluted by the blood of a Scotch father.

"I could eat a caribou myself," he said, "but we'll have a big feed at the post tonight. You take the canoe over while I find out who's playing that violin. Who would guess that there was a man within a thousand miles of these bad-lands who could play like that?"

The half-breed started over the portage while Steele turned into the thick scrub toward the river. From the foot of the rapids the trail had swung away from the broken flanks of the gorge, but shortly Steele saw patches of foam through the spruce. He stopped to listen, and again the notes of the violin shrilled above the monotone of the broken waters. Slowly he worked his way along the shoulder of the shore, then, forced back to circle a gash in the eroded cliff, stumbled upon a trail, and following it a short distance, suddenly stiffened.

The path led to a huge, flat-topped bowlder thrusting out into the stream. On the rock, her dark head nestling a violin to her cheek, stood a woman.

Surprise held the man motionless. To eyes which for months had not looked upon a comely white woman, the picture of the lithe figure of the musician, a crown of dusky hair half masking the face turned to the river, was a delight he hesitated to cut short by a betrayal of his presence.

From the passionate hopelessness of Massenet's "Elegie" the violin swung into a deathless lament of Grieg, grim with the eternal tragedy of his own gray north sea. As she played, the girl turned, exposing her face. On her cheeks were tears. But she did not see the listener for her eyes were closed.

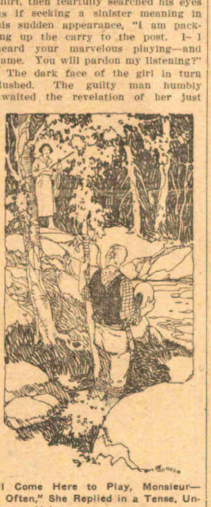
She ceased playing. With a sense of awe at having heard the cry of stark despair, the trespasser, conscious of sacrilege, had turned to retreat when he was stopped by:

"Qui vient la? Who is there?"

Caught, the eavesdropper faced about, hat in hand.

"Mademoiselle," he began, reddening under the questioning gaze which swept him from moccasins to tattered shirt, then fearfully searched his eyes as if seeking a sinister meaning in his sudden appearance, "I am packing up the carry to the post. I- I heard your marvelous playing—and came. You will pardon my listening?"

The dark face of the girl in turn flushed. The guilty man humbly awaited the revelation of her just anger. That meant for the forest and waters only—the naked anguish of a soul—a stranger had heard. It was right that he should pay.



"I Come Here to Play, Monsieur—Often," She Replied in a Tense, Uneven Voice.

"I come here to play—monsieur—often," she replied in a tense, uneven voice. "I was startled! We see no more—but the Indians. There is nothing—to pardon."

She spoke in English, with a flavor of accent which Steele had heard before, but not in French Canada.

Relieved at his reprieve, he hastened to explain his presence on that bush-grown portage of the Wailing river.

"My man David and I are bound from the Albany to Ogoke lake and the Nepigon. We've been in the bush since May," he laughed, painfully aware of a three-days' growth of beard, with a deprecatory gesture toward his frayed clothes, "and have some trading to do at the post, as you see. Is it far?"

"Only a short distance, monsieur. My father will welcome the sight of a white man; for him it is so lonely here."

"But surely," he protested, "it is more lonely for a woman." So she was the daughter of the French factor, and he wondered what force of circumstances had driven the father of this talented girl into the fur trade as an employee of the French company; this girl with the somber eyes who came to the white-waters with her violin—and her grief. Was it tragedy he had chanced upon, or mere loneliness?

"Lonely here for a woman? Surely, monsieur, you speak as a man of the world—with understanding." The sensitive mouth of the girl shaped a faint smile, but the dark eyes did not change as she continued: "Yet I have my father and my violin, while he—he has only his memories."

"But," he gallantly protested, "your father, mademoiselle, has the companionship of a very"—he hesitated and finished weakly—"his daughter."

She laughed in his face. "Ah, monsieur, you have French blood in your veins. But the very—his daughter," she mocked, "is a dull substitute for a 'world of men,' as your Browning says. My father will be much pleased at the coming to Wailing river of Monsieur—"

"Steele," he prompted, "my name is Brent Steele. I am in the field for the American Museum of Natural History."

She bowed low with mock gravity.

"Monsieur Steele, my father, Col. Hilaire St. Onge, will be honored in offering the poor hospitality of Wailing River to a learned American scientist."

Smilingly Steele raised protesting hands at her characterization. How charmingly, he thought, this strange girl, whose violin had sung so poignantly of despair, whose face had reflected fear of the stranger, now lapsed into raillery.

"Oh, pardon, monsieur," she went on, "I forgot myself; I am Denise St. Onge. Now that the conventions have been satisfied, will you follow me to our chateau—of logs?"

"Thank you!"

Her simple muslin gown and beaded moccasins seemed but to authenticate the stamp of race in the figure and carriage of the girl who led the curious man over the river trail to the carry. At the portage she stopped.

"My packs are below here, where I left them to follow the Lorelei of the Wailing," he said smiling.

Her face swiftly sobered.

"Ah, Monsieur," she replied almost inaudibly, "do not make jest of this terrible river." Then, with a shrug, as if ridding her mind of an oppressive weight, added, "I shall not wait for you, the post is very near," and walked swiftly up the portage, followed by the quizzical eyes of the man.

He stood in the trail watching the retreating figure of the girl until a bend shut it from sight.

What eyes and hair, he mused, and what playing! It was clear she was breaking her heart over something; the look in her eyes proved that. To think of such a glorious creature buried in this country! Her father probably was a retired French officer. Heaps of them marooned between Labrador and the Peace! But why, he asked himself, didn't they mention her over at Hope—this charming daughter of the factor at Wailing River?

Yes, he decided, she certainly had been frightened at his appearance—had looked him over as if he were a ghost. Then she had seemed superstitious; but she couldn't really believe in this tradition of the valley—this Windigo and spirit stuff. That was inconceivable. She was not afraid to come here alone and yet she called the river terrible. What had happened here anyway? Whom could she fear, and why?

Thus speculated the intrigued Steele. Then swinging his bags to his back, he started for the post known as Wailing River.

As Steele left the forest to cross the clearing the dogs of the post started the usual uproar. Half way to the group of log buildings he was met by an Indian, sent by the factor, and relieved of his packs.

> Evidently Wailing River has a mystery and one that challenges a brave man and the girl!

Nicotine in Tobacco

Nicotine is a colorless, intensely poisonous liquid. If exposed to the air, it absorbs oxygen and becomes brown and ultimately solid. The quantity of nicotine contained in tobacco varies from two to eight per cent, the coarser kinds containing the larger quantity, while the best Havana cigars seldom contain more than two per cent, and often less. Nicotine does not appear in tobacco smoke. It is split into pyridine and collodine. Of these, the latter is said to be the less active and to preponderate in cigar smoke, while the smoke from pipes contains a larger amount of pyridine.

Marvelous Precocity

The precocious infant was being submitted to the psychological tests in order to determine the degree of his genius. He had already picked out numbers, arranged blocks and distinguished colors. Then came the supreme test, the identification of various coins. The investigator tossed a nickel on the floor. The precocious infant bent over it while the proud parents held their breath.

Then the precocious infant winked at his dad and cried exultantly, "Heads!"—Pathfinder Magazine.

Piano Long in Favor With Lovers of Music

The first upright piano made in the United States was manufactured in the year 1800 by John Isaac Hawkins of Philadelphia, an Englishman by birth. The earliest piano made in the United States was that made by Joseph Hisky of Baltimore. His instruments quickly found favor and his establishment in Baltimore was the mecca of all lovers of good musical instruments. Johannes Francis Kahl, who was born in Germany, is credited with making the first piano made in Washington.

Jonas Chickering designed the first distinctly American pianoforte. His father was a blacksmith. The English owed their first piano to a Scotsman, John Broadwood. The English harpsichord, known to the Germans as the flugel because its shape somewhat resembled the wing of a bird, to the French as the clavecsin and to the Italians as the clavicembalo, was the immediate predecessor of the pianoforte.

Freddy Scored One

Bobby and Freddy were discussing the relative prowess of their two big brothers. Said Bobby: "My brother rows stroke on his college crew. I suppose you didn't know that?" Freddy was not much impressed. He replied promptly: "What of it? My brother is too big to get into the boat. I suppose you didn't know that?"

"But constipation is serious, Grace"

"Not so long ago I was like you—headaches a good deal of the time, sleeping badly, and the least bit of housework tired me out. My complexion too, was bad.

"Finally, I went to see Dr. Farman. He showed me that it was constipation that was back of my troubles. He said that it was a very serious thing because poisons from clogged waste matter were picked up by the blood and carried to every body organ. And if I didn't correct it in time I might become a victim of one of those terrible organic diseases.

"He made me drop laxatives altogether, changed my diet, and put me on Nujol. I don't think I've ever felt better. I sleep well, my headaches have disappeared, and you can see for yourself what an improvement there is in my skin. Nujol has done wonders for me."

Nujol Works Like Nature

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It is neither a food nor a medicine. It does not gripe. It is gentle and natural in its action and is prescribed by leading medical authorities.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency — temporary or chronic — in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly, in accordance with the directions on each bottle. As Nujol is not a laxative, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Nujol THE INTERNAL LUBRICANT For Constipation

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin the perfect health that is possible only when intestinal elimination is normal and regular.

Why have RHEUMATISM?

OH, what a wonderful feeling to be free from that miserable rheumatism. To know again the joy of limber joints and active muscles — freedom from that agonizing pain!

How often have you longed for some relief as you suffered torture from swollen, inflamed muscles and joints—how often have you said you would give anything in the World for a few hours comfort!

But you didn't know that all you had to do to get real relief from this nerve wracking misery was just to build rich, red blood, did you? You didn't know that rheumatism had to be stopped from the inside by destroying the impurities that cause it—by building millions of red cells in your poor, weak blood, did you?

Until you fill your system full of healthy, rich, red blood you will never end your rheumatism. S. S. S. will surely help you. That's because S.S.S. helps Nature build the red-blood-cells that fight off the impurities that cause rheumatism.

Conquer rheumatism! S. S. S. has shown the way. For generations S. S. S. has brought blessed relief and comfort to thousands of rheumatic sufferers.

When the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build goes coursing through your system, it purifies the blood in your body. The Valley of Voices

By GEORGE MARSH

This is a big story of a new north, a portion of the domains of the fur trade that never before has been the scene of a romance. It is almost equal to a vacation trip and a participation in the stirring life of the region—only, few of us would relish the hardships and the dangers which are a part of the daily routine. Most of us will be contented to travel via our arm chairs, view the natural wonders, thrill at the very absorbing mystery and be spectators of an intense human drama through the chapters of Mr. Marsh's exciting and realistic tale. This talented author brings the far north right to us. We live in the charm of its short but amazing summer and the magical fascination of its long winter, and we touch hands, as it were, with a new class of brave, rugged human beings. It is the very essence of romance and real adventure.

Tells Why He Can Now Eat Hearty

"A letter which I read in the paper about Carter's Little Liver Pills fitted my own case so closely that I could not help trying them and am very happy I did." So writes Mr. Frank J. Trumbull of Jersey City, N. J., whose letter goes on to say, "I had heard about Carter's Little Liver Pills for years but never knew they helped overcome poor appetite and sour stomach, until I read about another man in the same plight who took Carter's with good results. I tried them and can honestly say that they freed me of nasty gas on stomach, so that I can now eat without getting bilious, and they improved my appetite fully 100%. You can rest assured that from now on I will boost Carter's Little Liver Pills whenever I can."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Locarno Treaties Signed in London, Promising Peace for Western Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

"THIS is the most important step in the history of the modern world," said Premier Briand when he and the representatives of six other powers had attached their signatures to the Locarno treaties. "The peace of the world could not have been effected without some great demonstration of international good will, such as this ceremony today," he continued, "and the future of the world should be one of arbitration and collaboration between nations, where war and armament have no places."

The ceremony of signing the pacts took place in London and was carried out in a wonderful spirit of optimism. Arm in arm, Chancellor Luther of Germany, Premier Briand of France and Foreign Secretary Chamberlain of Great Britain entered the golden reception room of the foreign office. They were followed by the delegates of Italy, Belgium, Poland and Czechoslovakia, and then came Prime Minister Baldwin and his cabinet. Mr. Chamberlain, who had just received the Order of the Garter for his work on the treaties and therefore was addressed as "Sir Austen," opened the proceedings with a brief speech of welcome and told of the king's disappointment that his mother's death made rearrangement of the program of entertainment necessary. Chancellor Luther and the others expressed their pleasure at the conclusion of the pacts, and then one after another they signed their names to the fateful documents.

After a dinner given by Mr. Chamberlain the statesmen reached an agreement for speeding up the evacuation of the Cologne area by the allies. This operation will be completed by January 31, and the Belgian forces in the Rhineland will be reduced at once.

The Locarno treaties have been quite fully described heretofore. Suffice it to say that the chief one, known as the security pact, guarantees the inviolability of the German-French and German-Belgian frontiers as fixed by the Versailles peace treaty. Italy and Great Britain are the guarantors of the pact. Germany, France and Belgium promise never to trespass upon each other's territory, and Great Britain and Italy are pledged to come to the aid of the aggrieved nation, whether it be France, Belgium or Germany. All the parties agree to submit future disputes to judicial arbitration, with the League of Nations council sitting as high court.

The German-Polish and German-Czecho pacts are identical except that these signatories agree to arbitration of all future disputes by the arbitral tribune at The Hague or the world court. The French-Polish and French-Czecho special treaties are in effect France's guarantee of the German-Polish and German-Czech treaties.

The treaties are effective only after Germany joins the League of Nations, an event that is expected to take place as soon as possible. Already Germany has registered with the league at Geneva eleven international engagements which she has entered into with eight different powers. That Russia also will now come into the league was the expressed opinion of some of the statesmen gathered in London, and indeed Foreign Minister Tchitcherin of the Soviet government was expected in London this week to talk over this matter.

With few exceptions the nations of Europe look on the signing of the treaties as the birth of a new era of good will and peace. The nationalists of Germany still declare their belief that the pacts mean the ruin of their country, and may force the resignation of the Luther cabinet. Italy officially looks on the treaties rather skeptically. She intends to live up to the letter and spirit of her signature, but does not propose to be swept off her feet by idealistic sentimentality. As Mussolini said in his recent Armistice day address: "We look with one eye upon the dove of peace if it rises on the distant horizon, but with the other eye we look through the concrete necessities of right."

CONGRESS—the Sixty-ninth—is now in session and has heard the President's message, which was read to the senate and house. It was a cheerful but cautious document, expressing gratification at the general prosperity and progress in the country, and urging continued government economy and restraint in the assuming of new obligations unless they are reproductive capital investments or are absolutely necessary at this time. The President gave his approval in principle to the proposed tax-reduction measure. Concerning inland waterways he was not so emphatic as the people of the Middle West hoped he would be. In effect he said:

"For many years our country has been employed in plans and operations for the development of our intracoastal and inland waterways. This work along our coast is an important adjunct to our commerce. It will be carried on, together with the further opening up of our harbors, as our resources permit. Along with the development of navigation should go every possible encouragement for the development of our water power."

Of agriculture the message had this to say:

"No doubt the position of agriculture as a whole has very much improved since the depression of three and four years ago. But there are many localities and many groups of individuals, apparently through no fault of their own, sometimes due to climatic conditions and sometimes to the prevailing price of a certain crop, still in a distressing condition. This is probably temporary, but it is none the less acute. National government agencies, the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce, the farm loan board, the intermediate credit banks, and the federal reserve board are all co-operating to be of assistance and relief. On the other hand, there are localities and individuals who have had one of their most prosperous years. The general price level is fair, but here again there are exceptions both ways, some items being poor while others are excellent. In spite of a lessened production the farm income for this year will be about the same as last year and much above the three preceding years."

Mr. Coolidge had a few words in favor of American adhesion to the World court, and in speaking of our foreign relations he said: "It seems clear that it is the reduction of armies rather than of navies that is of first importance to the world at the present time." He gave praise to the army, navy, marine corps and National Guard and the reserves, and said that while we are not behind in the art of aviation, it is of so great importance that we ought to proceed in its improvement by the necessary experiment and investigation.

Deploring the perennial conflict in the coal industry, the message urged that authority be lodged with the President and the Departments of Commerce and Labor giving them power to deal with an emergency. Also it recommended that congress authorize a system of consolidations of the railroads.

GOVERNOR PINCHOT of Pennsylvania made another attempt last week to end the anthracite coal strike, submitting to both sides a compromise agreement. The representative of the miners accepted the plan as a basis of renewed discussion, but it was rejected entirely by the operators, because, as they said, it would repeat the Jacksonville bituminous agreement mistake of "endeavoring to maintain high prices to pay high wages through the simple formula of writing these terms into a contract." President Lewis of the miners said the operators' attitude "does not represent one whit of concession in the public interest to dispose of a situation that has become alarmingly acute."

REPUBLICAN leaders in the senate last week virtually abandoned all idea of questioning the Republicanism of Senator R. M. LaFollette of Wisconsin and of contesting the appointment of Gerald Nye of North Dakota, an avowed LaFollette supporter. In the house the Republicans decided to let the insurgents decide for themselves whether they wished to be considered as returning to the party fold.

Republicans, Democrats and Farmer-Laborites of South Dakota held their state conventions for congressional and state offices. The Republicans renominated Senator Peter Norbeck and Gov. Carl Gunderson. The Democrats indorsed C. J. Gunderson, a cousin of the governor, for United States senator and W. J. Bulow for governor. George Platt was nominated for the senate by the Farmer-Labor party.

UNCLE SAM is interested in the row in Texas over highway construction contracts, which is one of Gov. Miriam Ferguson's chief troubles just now. Representatives of the federal bureau of public roads are making an investigation and it was said that if irregularities are found in the handling of federal funds the government aid may be withdrawn. Last week "Ma" Ferguson demanded the resignation of Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth publisher, as chairman of the board of regents of the Texas Technological college, strongly intimating that he had violated the prohibition law and had himself been intoxicated. Mr. Carter refused to resign. Whether Speaker Satterwhite should call a special session of the lower house was not decided.

CHILE may yet carry the Tacna-Arica dispute before the League of Nations. Last week her minister to Switzerland laid before the secretary general of the league a memorandum complaining that General Pershing was persistently delaying the plebiscite, thereby playing the game of the Peruvians and frustrating the plan of President Coolidge to restore friendly relations between the two nations. In Santiago, however, the foreign ministry issued a communique which said:

"There is no reason for attributing to the arbiter or the United States government a predisposition against our rights in Tacna-Arica. On the contrary, if in Washington we found justice in making the award, we can have confidence in finding justice if we have to demand it again. The government has confidence that an adequate solution of the present difficulties can be found."

Of course if Chile should appeal to the league and that body should take action, any European intervention would be in direct conflict with the Monroe doctrine, and the result might be serious.

COMMISSIONER BLAIR and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews issued orders for revocation of all existing permits for sacramental wine, effective December 31, and gave out new restrictions on their reissuance. Only rabbis and ministers will get the permits for withdrawal of wine and they must deliver the wine directly to the worshiper. One gallon per year per adult is the maximum allowed unless it is clearly shown that a greater quantity is necessary. The rabbis must maintain storage places and keep accurate records of distribution.

AN AGREEMENT for funding Rumania's debt to the United States was reached in Washington. Payments will extend over 62 years and will be easy at first. Interest rate is 3 per cent for ten years and 3½ per cent thereafter. The total debt was fixed at $44,590,000.

France intends to resume debt negotiations, according to Louis Loucheur, who has become finance minister in the new government formed by Aristide Briand. He is waiting only to complete his financial program, but this is likely to give him a lot of trouble for it involves a currency inflation that is opposed by many in both wings of parliament.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S special aircraft board submitted its report but did not settle the controversy over aviation. Though it does not name Colonel Mitchell, the report advises against his plan for a separate air force co-ordinate with the army and the navy; but it declares the air services have been neglected and unduly subordinated and recommends additional assistant secretaries of the army and navy for military aviation. While some of Mitchell's more sensational charges are contradicted by the report, a good many of his allegations concerning the service are sustained.

City of Los Angeles Loses Two Landmarks

Los Angeles.—Los Angeles' Chinatown and celebrated plaza, each rich in colorful history of the early days, are facing destruction.

The two are within the forty blocks where $50,000,000 will be spent on a civic center and union railroad terminal.

It was on the plaza that the Mexican governor, Felipe De Neve, founded "El Pueblo De Neustra Senora De Reyno Le Los Angeles," September 4, 1781. It was the scene of the marriage of Pio Pico, California's famous Mexican governor.

Here it was the official document was read making Los Angeles, instead of Monterey, the state capital.

In 1849, a road-weary courier shouted from the plaza that gold had been discovered in northern California. Two days later, the dusty throat of Cahuenga pass was choked with wealth seekers, and only twelve persons were left here.

Life about the plaza has not always been happy. Eighteen Chinese were hanged here in 1871 during a race uprising.

Chinatown, adjoining the plaza, contains Ferguson's alley, Apablasa and Marchessault streets, where young Chinese trade with tourists and old men sit silently puffing at long-stemmed pipes.

Ten years will be required to complete the reconstruction program, but already demands are being made to save the plaza.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Owosso—A gift of $10,000 by C. E. Rigley, Sr., of this city, as a nucleus for a fund with which to build a nurses' home was announced recently by the trustees of the Memorial Hospital.

Marshall—Fire due to an over-heated stove destroyed the Pierce Rural school, a wooden building 36 by 42 feet, erected in 1880, in Marengo Township. Twelve students attended the school. The Marshall and Albion fire departments responded to calls and saved the woodshed.

Pontiac—According to an interview with E. Leroy Pelletier, Detroit, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker "is thinking seriously of building a factory in Pontiac" for the manufacture of airplanes. Pontiac Board of Commerce will name a committee to confer with the former World war flying ace.

Port Huron—Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, America's flying ace, of Detroit, in an address before the Lions club said that within 25 years commercial aviation will be one of the greatest industries in the world. Competition will force men into aviation, Rickenbacker said, on account of its ability to annihilate time and distance.

Port Huron—The will of Charles G. Young, who was last seen alive drifting out on Lake Huron in a small boat two weeks ago, was filed in the Probate Court Thursday. All hope has been abandoned of finding Young alive. His body has not been recovered. His estate which is listed at $1,000 personal and $1,000 real estate, is left to his widow.

Grand Rapids—With one exception all the officers of the Michigan State Horticultural Society were re-elected for the coming year at the 55th annual convention here. George Friday of Coloma is president, H. D. Hootman of East Lansing, secretary; J. P. Munson, of Grand Rapids, treasurer, and Carl Bushkirk, of Paw Paw, member of the executive committee.

Ann Arbor—More than half of the students of the University of Michigan are members of some church, the annual religious census of the univercity compiled by the Student Christian association shows. Of the 9,142 who indicated church membership or preference, 5,711 are members and an additional 1,472 indicated a preference for some one of the churches; 1,959 stated they did not have either membership or preference and on some of the cards information was not given.

East Lansing—East Lansing youths who have been in the habit of giving the co-eds at Michigan State College a lift from East Lansing to Lansing, will lose many of their patrons if the co-ed students heed the warning issued by Jean Krueger, dean of women, and the Student Women's Self-Government Association. She admitted that daylight rides to Lansing from the college were not so serious, and they have the advantage of quicker transportation, and are economical, but the night rides are another matter.

Lansing—John Baird, director of the Department of Conservation, has informed Frank Collins of Toledo that the State intends to condemn the Collins trout pools along the Pine River, in Lake County, and open them to the public. The announcement was in answer to the decision given this week by Circuit Judge Fred S. Lamb, of Cadillac, in the case of Collins vs. Gearhardt. Gideon Gearhardt, of Reed City, fished the Pine through Collins' holdings and a jury in Justice Court, and then a jury in Judge Lamb's court found him not guilty of trespassing.

Bay City — Insurance firms are blamed as partially responsible for the epidemic of fires in Bay City in a report to the city commission by Building Inspector James Douglas. The report is an answer of the building inspector, and concurred in by Fire Chief Charles S. Crampton, to A. W. Dorbert, representative of the New Zealand Fire Insurance company, who recently criticized these officials. Douglas says that the anxiety of insurance concerns for premiums causes them to write too high valuations on old inflammable buildings.

Lansing—Activities of the Groesbeck administration were both indorsed and condemned in resolutions adopted by delegates to the thirty-third annual meeting of Michigan Farm Clubs. The pro-Groesbeck resolution originally was framed as an anti-Groesbeck resolution; another of the same color was killed outright in the resolutions committee. C. B. Cook of Owosso, was elected president of the Association. Mr. Cook is a former president of the organization. Austin Cole, of Clinton County, was elected vice-president and Mrs. I. R. Johnson was elected for the eighth consecutive year as secretary-treasurer.

Owosso—Difficulty encountered by automobile drivers in the cities in finding places to park has resulted in an increase of 20 per cent in the number of fares paid on street railways in the past year, J. F. Collins, president of the Michigan Electric Railways company, stated before the chamber of commerce here. He predicted a come back by electric lines in 1926. Although his company's holdings are appraised at $33,000,000, the only ones making nay money out of the company were the employes. None of the investors are getting a nickle, he said.

Lansing—A new educational era in which development of eternal qualities, rather than production of freaks like "Red" Grange, will be the aim of universities, is foreseen by Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of University of Michigan. He expressed his view before the Federated State Farmers' Clubs here. Dr. Little urged that such luxuries as cosmetics and tobacco be taxed to support education, rather than real estate, as now. "The cost of education is small when compared with what women spend for powder and men for their smoking."

Monroe—Rosie Nidek, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Nidek, of Lambertville, near here, was killed instantly when a 12-gauge shotgun discharged after failing from a rack on the wall while the child was at play on the floor. The charge of shot hit the girl in the head.

Hastings—William Easy, 75 years old, a bachelor who had lived alone many years in a log cabin in Assyria township, was found dead in bed. Failing to see a light in the cabin window, neighbors investigated. Death was due to apoplexy, it is believed. Easy leaves a brother, who resides in Bedford.

Ionia—With Henry Ford's assistance, the Ionia Business and Professional Women's Club will sponsor an old-fashioned dancing party some time in February, the plans of which are now being completed. The club officers have received word from Mr Ford of his interest in such a party, and a book published by Mr. Ford which gives a list of the dances suitable for such an affair.

Ann Arbor—Criticising the board of governors of the University of Michigan Union and charging them wtih gross inefficiency, Albert Adams, a law junior student from Kansas City, Mo., president of the Union, circulated petitions to change the constitution of the club to give the students more power in the administration of the affairs of the organization and to give the student president more power than he now has.

Lansing—A two-day meeting of the Michigan State Association of Farmers' clubs opened here Tuesday with delegates from all parts of the state in attendance. Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, and Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of Michigan State college, have been asked to speak during the sessions. Banquets and various forms of entertainment have been arranged for the visitors.

Grand Rapids—Little hope is held for the recovery of Mrs. Edna Keen, 23 years old, wife of Cecil Keen, who is said to have taken poison following an argument with her husband about a dog. She is being treated at the Butterworth Hospital. According to the police, Keen disposed of the dog Thursday afternoon. During the evening his wife sent him on an errand to a nearby store. She swallowed the poison during his absence he said.

Sault Ste. Marie—Upper Peninsula deer totalling at least 2,500 were killed by Lower Michigan hunters, according to incomplete figures announced by officials of the State ferry at St. Ignace. It was said by ferry officials that more than 10,000 hunters from below the Straits came north. Some cars returning southward had as many as seven deer strapped to them. Nine bears killed in the Upper Peninsula were shipped across the Straits.

Ann Arbor—William E. Sweet, former governor of Colorado, spoke recently at the Hill Auditorium here on "America and the World Court, a reply to Senator Borah." Sweet's address was the principal event on the program of "International Week" sponsored by a number of campus organizations of the university. The former Colorado governor is making a tour of American colleges and universities on behalf of the world court on which he has long been a vigorous champion.

Hastings—Shot accidentally by a companion on a hunting trip Sunday afternoon, Roy Taffee, 40 years old, brother of Chief of Police Benjamin F. Taffee, of Kalamazoo, is lying in a serious condition in a hospital here. The sight of his right eye was destroyed by a shot which penetrated the ball. Tagee received in his right side the full charge of shot one of the party, William Gibson, fired at a rabbit as it jumped up between the huntsman and the brush behind which Taffee was crouching.

Mendon—Cracking open the vault in the Mendon postoffice, without breaking the inner safe, bandits recently escaped after inflicting damage amounting to about $600. They drove out of the village toward the north, as Sheriff Guy Clipfell and three deputies were driving in from the west. The bandits were frightened away when they saw Henry Hasseig, a merchant, enter the telephone exchange to summon the sheriff. There was only a small amount of money and stamps in the safe.

Mt. Clemens—The road construction program for next year is the most comprehensive ever undertaken in the county, according to Chairman Edward Schunemann, of the road commission, who announced that 50 miles of paved highway will be constructed under the Covert act, and state highways. The leading project under consideration is the Grand Trunk highway, which will parallel the Grand Trunk railway into Detroit, making the fifth paved road from this city into the state metropolis.

Ann Arbor—The new University Hospital was opened for inspection by the public Wednesday and Thursday of last week, according to an announcement by Director Harley A. Haynes. Guides were furnished to all those interested who took the guests through the entire plant. The dedication ceremonies, held Nov. 19, 20, and 21, were conducted chiefly by the medical profession, while the formal opening was intended to give others interested in the university an opportunity to inspect the new hospital.

Lansing—Announcement was made at the Lansing chamber of commerce that there is a possibility of Lansing obtaining a large airplane factory. Negotiations already are under way with one of the largest manufacturers of planes and if successfully carried out, the factory obtained will be one to be classed with the city's largest industries, Charles Davis, secretary of the chamber said. Davis' statement was made coincident with the announcement in Detroit that Lansing has been selected as one of the regular stops along the air route.

Pimples
What can I do?

"OH, why can't I have a skin like other girls? Why do I have to have these ugly pimples, blotches and blackheads?

"If I could only find something that would clear up my skin and give me back my soft, rosy complexion, I know I would be the happiest girl in the world! What can I do?"

Is that you talking? If it is, you don't have to worry a minute! Just build up the rich, red blood in your body. Then your skin will be as clear and soft as anybody's.

That's what S. S. S. has been doing for generations—helping Nature build rich, red blood! You can build red-blood-cells so fast that the impurities that cause breaking out on the skin hardly get into the system before the pure blood annihilates them—kills them right out—stops them from breaking out through the skin.

And then this rich, red, pure blood feeds and nourishes the tissues of the skin and keeps it looking healthy.

That's all there is to it. Healthy, vigorous, red blood such as S. S. S. helps Nature build, makes you healthy all over. It beautifies your skin—drives away pimples, blackheads, blotches, rash, boils and eczema—gives you back your appetite—builds firm, plump flesh and fills you full of new life and energy.

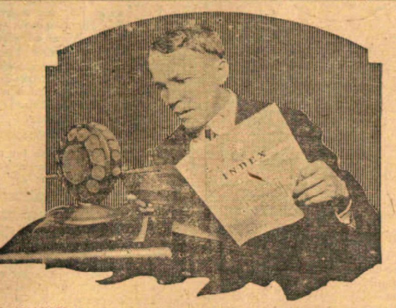
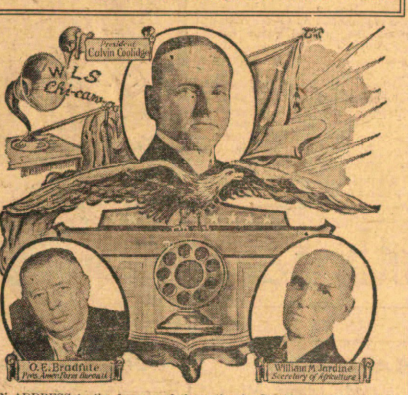
Covers Nation's Farms by Air



AN ANALYSIS of current agricultural conditions is being issued every month by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. This monthly review covers every section of the United States and is based on 3,900 separate reports furnished by the Foundation's field observers, who are all practical, thinking farmers. Working together for farm betterment, these observers reflect in a most practical way a cross-section of the farmer's mind. Each of the observers has been selected because of his ability to observe the application of economic principles to current agricultural problems. The status of agriculture each month is shown by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation Index.

As soon as issued the results of this agricultural review are broadcast over WLS, the Foundation's station, Chicago, by Perry V. Ewing, who is in charge of the work of the Foundation. Mr. Ewing has had years of experience in agricultural effort. For six years he conducted live stock investigations in Kansas, Georgia and Texas. He also is author of a dozen state and federal bulletins and scientific reports. He is a member of Sigma Xi, the highest honorary scientific fraternity.

Coolidge and Jardine Talk to U. S. Farmers Over WLS



AN ADDRESS to the farmers of the nation by President Calvin Coolidge will feature the Farm Bureau Broadcast from WLS, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation station at 11 a. m., December 7. The president's agricultural message will open the seventh annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago. At 8 o'clock, Tuesday evening, December 8, Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine will speak at the annual banquet of the federation, which also will be broadcast by WLS. O. E. Bradfute, president of the federation, has selected the other speakers for the convention to insure a complete presentation of the farm problems of every section of the United States. It is expected that President Coolidge, in his address, will enunciate the administration's agricultural policies and future programs at this important gathering of the nation's farm leaders, of whom it is expected more than 8,000 will be in attendance at the convention. WLS will broadcast the complete farm bureau convention proceedings, December 7, 8 and 9, inclusive.

A Good Accident Policy

No driver of a vehicle and more especially no driver of an automobile, should ever cross a railroad or interurban track without first looking in both directions to determine whether a train is approaching.

Where there are two or more tracks, never start across after a train has passed without waiting to see whether another train is approaching on another track. Let the first train get by at least 500 feet. If necessary to shift gears, do so not less than 50 feet before reaching track, lest auto stalls on the track.

At crossings protected by flagman, gates, bells or wig-wag, never attempt to cross while flagman is on the crossing, or gates are lowered or bells or wig-wags are in action, for this means that a train is closely approaching.

These are a few suggestions to drivers which occasion no inconvenience, and which if observed will prevent accidents at grade crossings, for a grade crossing is only dangerous when made so by careless driving. In fact, the danger is in the driving, not in the crossing.

Governor Groesbeck Shows A Hand

For at least five years back the Michigan State Fair has been run on a basis of "get all you can and get it quick" with George Dickinson at the helm. Mr. Dickinson has withdrawn most of his advertising in the small country weeklies and placed it in city dailies and as a consequence the State Fair has ceased to be the Farmer's fair but has entered the list of the city attractions mostly, and a dumping ground for the big manufacturers of Detroit and immediate vicinity to display their wares. While attendance up to last fall has been fairly good, the amount of money taken at the gates did not seem to come from the rural class. Dickinson has been accused of padding the attendance rolls and shortly after the Fair closed last fall it was discovered that Mr. Dickinson had been pandering to his own interests pretty heavily. Governor Groesbeck stepped in forthwith and demanded Dickinson's resignation. Some housecleaning is to be indulged in by the management and a new set of directors are to be appointed. It is hoped the new management will endeavor to undo some of the mischief and start the advertising of the fair in country weeklies where it belongs. The Fair is and should be an Agricultural institution for the benefit of the rural population instead of a display ground for rich automobile manufacturers and others with special privileges.

Tells Best Sizes of Lamps

The G-E Farm Book, which has been compiled by electrical experts who have carefully studied farmers' problems, recommends the following sizes of electric lamps on the farm:

Horse barn or cow stable, 25-watt Mazda lamps, behind each stall or not more than twelve feet apart.

Hay mow, a 100-watt Mazda lamp.

Silo and granary, a 75 or 100-watt Mazda lamp with a 25-watt lamp near the chute.

Dairy, garage or carpenter shop, a 75 or 100-watt lamp; if used infrequently, a 25-watt lamp.

Sheds or out-buildings, 25-watt lamps.

Arrivals At The Stock Show Nov. 29th

Maurene Taylor arrived in Chicago Sunday to join the 1200 other boys and girls who were here to attend the Fourth National Boys and Girls Club Congress during the International Live Stock Exposition last week. Maurene won her educational trip offered by Hillsdale County for excelling in Sewing project.

All of these boys and girls were looking forward with much enthusiasm to their first glimpse of Chicago and to meeting other winning club members who weee coming from forty two states of the Nation. These sturdy young blue bloods of the soil were entertained at a banquet every evening at which men and women of national note were speakers. The twelve hundred boys and girls gave their Club yells, sang their Club songs and had a good time generally. The Moses trophy was awarded at the December first Banqet to the boy who has shown the best leadership in his community. Another interesting feature of the banquet was the style show at which Club girls will model in dresses which they have made as a part of their Club Work during the year.

In order that all Club members might partially enjoy the benefits of the Club Congress, the banquets will be broadcast from Chicago to all parts of the United States by stations KLW, WLS and WMAQ, under auspices of the National Farm Radio Council.

Crazy Boys Nearly Wreck Train

The Engineers on the Lake Shore trains on the main line through Hillsdale will probably now feel considerably easier on the run through Pittsford since the mystery of attempted derail of trains last October has been solved. The officials have for some time suspected boys of the mischief but until recently have been absolutely unable to trace the crime. Four boys ranging in ages from 13 to 15 years have confessed to placing obstructions on the track near Pittsford and wiring them to the rail but as luck would have it on one or two occasions the train passed safely over without accident and in another case the obstacle was found and removed before any damage was done. It has been proved that films of daring train robberies and train wreckers have been shown at Pittsford and also that the lads in question have seen these films.

It would hardly seem possible for a lad of that age these days being so dense he could not comprehend the awful consequences of such a crime, and also one naturally conjectures what kind of parents he must have. More than likely his parents had no knowledge of the boy's disposition for crime and if they did had no desire to curb such instincts.

A degenerate might easily be associated with such work but a real decent well brought-up high school lad who had been taught respect for law and human life could not be suspected of anything of this nature.

Here is a real case for the juvenile court officers, and it is to be hoped the example will be a wholesome one to other lads in this country today. Not so long ago lads at a small district school were found guilty of the same offense.

Consolidated School Burns

The $200,000 Lincoln Consolidated school six miles south of Ypsilanti, completed last February, burned to the ground recently.

The fire was discovered in the upper part of the brick and steel building about 3:00 a. m. There was no water with which to fight the fire and not much could be done to subdue the flames which appeared to eat into the fire proof construction as fast as it would in a common building. After three hours the building was consumed.

This building was the equivocal center of 63 square miles of territory and was regarded as the best rural school in Michigan. As yet there is no clue to the cause of the fire but a basket ball game was indulged in the night previously and it possible some spectator may have thrown down a lighted cigarette, but this is hardly possible. One of the school board was first on the scene and he is of the opinion the fire originated in the gymnasium and then went through the roof.

Building and contents were insured for $190,000 and represented an investment of $244,000. There will be some salvage and the coal bunkers and heating plant in the rear annex, and about half the equipment is available.

Prof. Pittman of the Ypsilanti Normal, who helped establish the school, has reported that a better building would be erected within a year, so the festive students who are presumably figuring on an extended holiday, will find their hopes blasted in the bud.

Radio Tube Price Cut By DeForest

Retail price reductions on all lines of the DeForest radio receiving tubes, as a result of specialized manufacturing processes, increased production, and greater sales, are announced here today by DeForest Dealers upon receipt of telephoned instructions from the DeForest Radio Company offices at Jersey City, N. J.

Clyde S. Wertz, local representatives of the DeForest Radio Company in announcing the new schedule made public a copy of the following statement received from H. L. Lanphear an executive of the DeForest Company at Jersey City: "Our recently inaugurated policy of developing and producing a new and complete line of highly specialized receiving tubes has resulted in such increased sales throughout the country that we are now in the fortunate position of being able to announce forthwith a sweeping price reduction on all lines of our receiving tubes the DV-2 detector, the DV-5 for radio and audio frequency amplification, and the DV-3 and DV-3A, the DeForest specialized tubes for dry battery circuits.

"This tube development by DeForest Engineers has resulted in several points of tube superiority, namely, one the use of an isolantite base by which the electrical losses have been reduced from one eighth to one-fiftieth to those of porcelain, metal, rubber and bakelite. Two is uniformity in quality. Three is much higher vacuum through a new process of eliminating tube gasses by chemical exhaust. Four is prote

EASING THE BURDEN OF STATE TAXATION

Banker Points Cut Benefits of Community Property System in Some States.

Favorable aspects of tax systems are now among the most highly prized assets of our states, it is pointed out in the American Bankers Association Journal in connection with an article on how California, which has never had a state income tax, cuts state and Federal death taxes nearly in half by the "community property" system. L. H. Roseberry, Vice President Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, author of the article, says that a recent amendment to the tax law enables future residents of the state to take advantage of it. Reference is made to a former article by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Dewey, voicing the need for death tax reform and citing a hypothetical case involving California inheritance taxes which might have been levied in 1920. Since that time the laws have been changed, Mr. Roseberry declares, so that the figures then given do not correctly represent the present situation. He says:

"Ever since its admission California has had the 'community property system. Eight other states have a similar system. 'Community property' is property accumulated by married persons during their marriage except that which is acquired by gift, bequest or inheritance. Approximately 65 per cent of all property in the state is 'community property.' Such property in California enjoys the most favorable position in regard to death taxes, both state and Federal, of any state in the Union (excepting possibly the eight other states having a similar property system) including states boasting of no inheritance tax whatever. The California 'community property' system is recognized for the purpose of levying Federal estate taxes, and only one-half of it is now so taxed, while in Florida the whole estate of a decedent is subject to the Federal levy.

How the Law Works

"California's law expressly provides that upon the death of either husband or wife, testate, only one-half of their net 'community property' shall be subject to inheritance taxes. The same exemption applies upon the death of the husband, intestate, while the whole net 'community property' is totally exempt from all state inheritance taxation upon the death of the wife intestate. The Federal estate tax law now follows precisely the California law in this respect.

"As the result of an amendment made to the California inheritance tax law by the 1925 Legislature, this immunity from state inheritance taxes likewise now extends to 'community property' of non-resident married persons, who hereafter take up their legal residence in the state. This puts 'community property' in a more favorable position regarding death taxes than exists in any other state in the Union, with the possible exception of the other community property states. This extension of the exemption will add 15 per cent to property in the state coming under this definiton, which means that approximately 80 per cent of all property probated in California will enjoy the lightest death taxes in America.

"To illustrate, the following example of a man survived by a wife and two minor children is computed, the estate consisting of 'community property' all left by will to the wife and children. One-half of such property would go under the law to the wife without any death taxes, and the other half only would be subject to both state inheritance and Federal estate taxes.

"As a subject of comparison, take a state which has no inheritance tax, such as Florida. If the comparison were made with the states which impose inheritance taxes but do not have the 'community property' system, the advantage in favor of California would even be more striking.

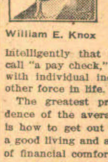
Estate of $100,000	Total Tax
California	None
Non-inheritance-tax state	$500
Advantage in favor of California	500
Estate of $200,000
California	905
No-inheritance-tax state	3,000
Advantage in favor of California	2,095
Estate of $400,000
California	5,779
Non-inheritance-tax state	13,000
Advantage in favor of California	7,220
Estate of $10,000,000
California	1,249,155
Non-inheritance-tax state	2,543,500
Advantage in favor of California	1,294,345

"If the two children were adults, the California tax would be increased only $280 in each case.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS ASSOCIATION

INDEPENDENCE OF THE FINANCIAL KIND

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President, American Bankers Association.



William E. Knox

The principle upon which America was founded was Independence. The primary duty of the pioneers of this country was to interpret independence in its political sense, but independence today has another special significance in its financial sense. The ability to apply the primary principles of personal economics, to use intelligently that common thing we call "a pay check," has as much to do with individual independence as any other force in life.

The greatest problem of independence of the average man or woman is how to get out of what they earn a good living and a reasonable degree of financial comforts in old age. We cannot maintain a high standard of national life without an intelligent management of the financial matters that constantly confront the average individual and family. In the accumulation of capital in the hands of the masses lies the hope of the true independence of a nation's people. The chief concern of wage earners is to get a reasonable degree of financial independence out of what they actually earn.

This question of how to attain personal financial independence has not been worked out on the principle of individual responsibility. The most important social needs today are a course of instruction in public education to give young people a practical notion of how to start life on a sound economic basis; and, secondly, a broad co-operative plan in American industry whereby men and women shall be helped to work out a personal financial program that will guide them toward a definite goal of financial independence. There ought to be a way for a man, for every dollar put aside each week now, to get back four or five dollars a week forty or fifty years later, regardless of where he works.

The present policy in American industry of helping employees is based on the assumption that they will ultimately become dependent. Old age pensions and other forms of char'table compensation are to be commended in lieu of a practical alternative, but in principle they are wrong and contrary to the purposes of democracy. What we want is an organized plan that will direct working people toward independence. No system can claim complete success that does not contemplate the financial independence of every employee, according to his ability to earn. It can be shown that American employees, with reasonable prudence on their own part, can reach a fair degree of independence while they are still working.

There must be injected into our industrial policy an additional economic element of mutual benefit and permanent value to both labor and capital, concerned not alone with the amount of wages and profits that are earned but with how these earnings shall be used. I am arguing for an industrial savings policy based upon the principle of independence. I am arguing for a new basis of co-operation in industry, for the elimination of poverty, and for a practical demonstration of economic democracy.

When public education teaches school students how to manage their personal affairs intelligently, and when the heads of firms make it a requirement that every young man and young woman who accepts a position shall be working toward a definite goal in saving money, then we will attack economic illiteracy at the source and begin to save men from the tragedy of financial dependency.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditio of a certain mortgage bearing date the (3 day of March, A. D., 1919 executed by Georg B. Hoffman and Jennie Hoffman, as parties of the first part to the Addison State Savings Bank, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Michigan, as party of the second part. Which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan on the 19th day of March 1919, in Liber 161; of Mortgages, on page 111, and at the same time the mortgage tax was paid thereon by the mortgagee. Which said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to make the payments of principal and interest as is provided in said mortgage.

And that there is now due and unpaid on said mortgage all of the principal sum thereof amounting to twenty four hundred dollars ($2,400.00) and of interest thereon, amounting to two hundred and ten dollars, making a total sum now due and unpaid on said mortgage of twenty-six hundred and ten dollars ($2610) and also an attorney fee of thirty dollars [$30] as is provided by statute and the terms of said mortgage and that no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been had to recover the foregoing amount or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and provided, the undersigned will on the 8th day of December 1925, at ten o'clock of the forenoon of that day, Central Standard time, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Hillsdale County of Hillsdale, and state of Michigan [said Courthouse being the place of holding court for said county] sell at Public Auction or Vendue to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage and the interest thereon, and the cost and expenses of this sale and an attorney fee in said mortgage provided. The premises described in said mortgage and which are to be sold by virtue of this notice are described as follows:

The north seventy [70] acres of the east one half [½] of the south-east one-fourth [¼] of Section twenty-four (24) Town six [6] South Range one, 1, West, excepting twenty-one, 21, acres off the North part thereof, also excepting ten 10, acres of land off the South part thereof.

Master of Grange Likes Electricity

Permanent good is sure to come of the present co-operative investigations of the use of electricity on the farm, according to L. T. Taber, master of the National Grange. Mr Taber, in an interview just published says:

"A generation ago it would have been supposed that electrical development and the use of electrical energy was of little concern to the farmer; that those in cities and towns were more vitally interested in this mighty and mysterious power than those who till the soil.

"The last decade has seen a transformation along the lines of the use of electricity in farm homes and farm work. The farm electrical plant has been most valuable. The farmer in many sections will be vitally concerned in the development of high tension power lines and proper transmission of electrical current for rural uses.

"It is probable that we are yet in infancy in the use of electricity. This is obviously true as applied to agriculture. Any organization that directs its attention toward a better understanding of the relation of electricity to rural life will perform an invaluable service."

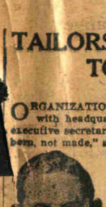
TAILORS' GUILD ORGANIZED TO UPLIFT THE PROFESSION

ORGANIZATION of the Born Tailors' Guild, an association of master tailors, with headquarters in Chicago, was announced today by W. A. Churchill, executive secretary of the new league. The slogan of the Guild is "Tailors are born, not made," and its two-fold object is to lift the tailoring trade to a higher plane of perfection in the art of making clothes for men and establish in the minds of men and boys a definite appreciation of style, fabric and tailorship in men's clothes, just as the Parisian designers have made every woman a connoisseur of feminine fashions. Wage scales, labor controversies and price fixing will have no place in the work of Born Tailors' Guild, according to Mr. Churchill.



W. A. Churchill.

"Our purpose in organizing this Guild," said Mr. Churchill, "is to bind together the master tailors of America, united in an effort of raising the standards of our trade. There is real artistry in the making of clothes and our idea is to place our trade in the class of art. Our objective is for the making of better clothes for men, the perfection of our trade to the very highest point possible."

Back to craft organization of early English times, Mr Churchill and his associates went to get a model for their association. In those times each craft had its own guild and received a charter from the king. Occasionally the kings were members of them. Guild members were bound by oath of brotherliness to uphold the standards of the profession and to pass down from generation to generation the treasured secrets of that craft. Before a man could become a master tailor he had to serve seven years as an apprentice, then as a journeyman for two years, during which time he was taught all the skill and secrets of the trade. After preparing an exceptionally fine piece of work, his masterpiece, which he submitted to the Guild Assembly, the journeyman became a master and was admitted to the Guild. The spirit of this ancient type of craft association has been made the background of the Born Tailors' Guild, according to Mr. Churchill.

Edgar R. Born.

"We seek to bring back into the tailoring craft some f the old-time romance and idealism of Tooley Street," he . "We want our master tailors to reassert their pride rfection of workmanship and to study men's dress ofession. Such an idea should mean better-dressed more economy throughout the industry."

st president of the Guild is Edgar R. Born, of the tailoring Born & Co., established fifty years ago. It was named in his

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Practical Talk To Practical People, On Law Observance And Law Enforcement

It is not the honor of my position, it is the responsibility of my position that I want you to think about and that I think about. I think you are all more interested in what I am trying to do in the matter of organization than in any thing else. I changed the organization that I found in the prohibition unit, but I did it for a very particular reason. I had the feeling that the men in the field to whom we looked for the enforcement of the law did not have sufficient responsibility. I couldn't find anyone that I could hold responsible for enforcement of the law. Everyone seemed to have a good excuse. So I felt that I must set up an organization in which the officer in charge in the field could honestly and reasonably be held responsible for responsible results in his territory. That meant decentralization. The next condition that I found is this: A policeman is not responsible for law enforcement. Law enforcement is a fruiton of the act of the policeman who arrests the criminal and the court which brings him to justice and punishes him. And there was not that co-operation between the Department of Justice and the prohibition unit that was absolutely essential if we were going to enforce the law. I had to set up machinery which would require co-operation—not only make it possible, but require it. So I took as the fundamental unit for organization the Federal judicial district because the United States is divided up into such districts already. In each Federal judicial district I proposed a group of prohibition agents, and I directed each member of that group to link himself closely with the Federal district attorney so that they shall plan their work together and get results. No one can handle these situations from Washington, so I put them into administrative groups which shall have more or less the same conditions to handle. That eliminates state lines and puts the organization on the basis of a working team with team captains. Now how are we going to get results? Every nation has learned how to get results in war. Business men are learning how to get results by saying to a subordinate, "There's your job. You've got the authority Go and do it," and holding that man responsible for what he accomplishes. So I have said to these administrators, "I give you all the powers of government. I give you an absolutely free hand in the selection of your personnel. Do your job." This I believe is sound and efficient organization. I want to be criticised. I want my administrators criticised. I have set up an organization so that you may criticise it. You can hold any administrator responsible so far as his powers go. You couldn't do it before. But today the administrator is instructed to build a machine in which every man is loyal to him. He has now the opportunity to gather together a group of young men filled with no other purpose than law enforcement. And if he doesn't do it, it is his fault and when I find out that he has not done it I will get a man that will do it. When we shall have that kind of an organization it will do away with much of the bribery and corruption that has been such a blemish in the past. If any man did this sort of thing in this organization his associates would know it and be the first to throw him out. We want to establish an esprit de corps in our organization. And it is in order that I might have that kind of an organization that I have made this change. I've picked all of my captains because I thought they had possibilities of leadership. Of course I will make mistakes. Of course they will make mistakes. The best of us make mistakes. But let us know our mistakes. Do not judge the man by his personality. Judge him by the results.

Another point bearing particularly on the enforcement of the prohibition law, is its effect upon business. We have to issue hundreds of thousands of permits in order that the normal business of the country may proceed, because alcohol in its various forms is essential in many of the products of industry, and I might say in matters of medicine and of religion. That is another reason for decentralization. Washington, in trying to decide whether a man should have his permit, has to decide it on written evidence, and often decides it incorrectly. I want the man in the field to make those decisions. They will be much more nearly true to the facts. If a man in the field judges a druggist unworthy of a whiskey permit, the chances are he knows. So I put that power concerning permits right out in the field. Furthermore, a decision made by the man in the field is often taken into court to be ruled on by a judge. I much prefer, if it has to go to court, that it go to a local court where the judge knows what is going on. And then in the promptness with which decisions can be made, it will be of great benefit to have these decisions made promptly as well as locally. I am not going to spend any time trying to justify the new organization. I will only say as you have been more or less patient five or six years, why not be patient two or three more months? We want to be judged by results. Interest yourself in results. See what we are doing, but give us time to get under way. Barely two weeks ago I finished my part of reorganization so far as the personnel is concerned. I don't think I would ever have taken the job if I had had any conception of what it meant. There are two kinds of valor and one of them is the valor of ignorance, and I believe that's mine. I turned my attention for the first time about two weeks ago to matters of regulations. It takes time, but I have it almost ready to give to the public. It will be in effect on the first of January and it will divert from the bootlegging industry, I should say at least seventy percent of the present supply of sacramental wine. I am finding easy means of regulation to correct several very wide leaks, so that I feel confident that within two or three weeks and without Congressional action my administrators will find themselves standing firmly on their feet, in a position to fight this thing through successfully. I want to take the advantages that the enemy has had and give them to my men. I have got to have Congressional action in order to put the cereal beverage trade under my supervision, and I find the Congressional committees willing to give me help.

Foreign Chickens Go On Egg Strike

That change of climate and change of food have disasterous effect upon the egg laying tendencies even of championship contestants is indicated by a review of pens entered in the international egg laying contest which started at M. S. C. on November 1.

Outstanding among illustrations of the need for adjustment to new conditions is the pen of ten "Barnvelder" hens entered by W. Middleman, of Barneveld, Holland. At the close of the first month of the contest, this pen had produced so few eggs as to rank nearly at the bottom of the list of 100 pens in the competition. The long journey across the Atlantic, the marked change in climate, and the food difference are given as explanations for this slow start.

Many of the pens entered from distant points in the United States also show inability to get away to a fast start in the egg marathon, probably for the "changed conditions" reason. Entries from Canada Delaware, New York, Pennsylvania Alabama and other distants points are late starters.

Just to prove that there are exceptions to all rules, however, a few of the pens from out of the state are starting remarkably well, while some of the Michigan entries, without any excuse at all, are making a bad start in the long contest.

The most striking illustration of this variation from the general tendency of the early weeks of the test is shown by the pen of white leghorns entered by the Handon Farm of Corvallis, Oregon, which was leading the entire centest at the end of the first month.

College Livestock Wins At Big Show

Thirty-four ribbons from the International Livestock show last week came back to Michigan when animals from the M. S. C. herds scored in practically all events where they were entered.

Competition in all classes at the big Chicago show was said to be even keener this year than in the past, the pick of leading herds from all over the United States and Canada being entered. The Michigan competitors against this field fared well, entries made by private exhibitors in the state scoring high, in addition to the long list of awards earned by the college stock.

What is said by experienced stock men to be the greatest clean up ever made at the International by a single exhibitor in a single class was credited to the M. S. C. horse string. "Leila", college Percheron, placed first in the aged mare class for her breed and was later returned Senior Champion and then Grand Champion of the show. Then "Utelem", two year old Percheron mare, took down first honors at her age and was returned Junior Champion, giving the M. S. C. string a sweep of the highest awards. The other college entry in this class, Dunham's Marie was third in the aged mare group, while the three together won the award for best three mares by a single exhibitor.

Prizes were also won in other horse classes and on entries of sheep, swine and beef cattle, bringing the M. S. C. total to 34 awards for the 1925 show. Thirteen of these were won in swine classes, seven in sheep, and seven in beef cattle events.

The Roads As Compared To 30 Years Ago

Under no circumstances would the average citizen of Hillsdale County be willing to go back to the mud-bespattered rutted times of 1885 or 86 when it was impossible to get anywhere by wagon road after a heavy storm without wallowing hub-deep in the mud and when from early in October to the first of June Michigan roads were more or less broken and unfit for use, but there is always an under current of dissatisfaction with the state administration because so much of the tax-payers' hard earned dollars go to building splendid gravel or concrete highways. Of course we in North Adams know this effects the sensitive pocket-book of the property holder, and how little he feels he gets in return also how much he has to deny himself in order to maintain he costs of a care-taker on the highway. No doubt when the total cost is reckoned up to the county of the miles of good gravel roads out of this village and its upkeep there will be howl fit to wake the dead, but after all the automobile and its sisters the power trucks have come to stay—and who is there among the least of these kickers who would care to put away his automobile or his truck for all time and never use them again, to save the cost of good highways?

We pondered as we passed along for thirty miles on a road as smooth as railroad, stretching through two counties, how delightful to be able to thus travel in November when under old conditions it would be so rough and humpy the machine would probably be put out of business in short order.

Michigan under the able administration of Alexander Groesbeck has come to her own in good roads True it has cost her a tidy sum and its going to continue costing.—It is safe to presume that as long as Governor Groesbeck stands at the helm the highway program is a winner.

THE FACTOR

In front of the trade-house, in conversation with David, stood a tall, military-looking man, with iron-gray hair and mustache. Around the door lounged a group of curious company Indians. Advancing and gripping the newcomer's hand, the factor of Wailing River exclaimed:

"Bon jour, Monsieur Steele! Welcome to Wailing River! My daughter and David have told me of our good fortune."

As the old soldier continued, with a slight French accent, Steele was aware of being secretly appraised by the keen eyes of the other.

"You are to be our guest for as long as you will honor us. In this valley, for a man of science, there is much of interest."

"You are very good to a stranger, sir. David and I have been out from Nepigon since May. We need supplies and my stuff should also be overhauled. Some of it got wet bucking this river of yours."

"Too bad! You found it a hard river to pole and track?"

"We certainly did. David has a nose for quick water as keen as a mink's for fish, but we took too long a chance in the big white-water."

At the mention of the rapid the face of St. Onge hardened. He leaned eagerly toward the speaker.

"The Devil's mile! It got you too?"

"Oh, we pulled out of it with a wetting. You see, I was with the best bow-man on the Nepigon, so we saved the canoe and our own skins as well."

Slowly the Frenchman shook his head; then suddenly asked:

"You saw nothing on your way up-river—nothing peculiar, no signs of a canoe?"

Steele wondered at the question as he answered:

"No, we met no one. I imagine the Indians don't travel it, too much strong water, and then there's the taboo—they're shy of the lower river, aren't they?"

At the words, the narrowed eyes of St. Onge shifted to the ground. He made no answer to the man who watched his set face, wondering, as it vitally affected the trade, why the factor avoided this subject of the Indians' fear of the Windigo. Presently St. Onge broke his silence.

"You will pardon me, Monsieur Steele, I am a poor host. If you were in the water you spoiled your flour—you are hungry?"

Steele glanced at the grinning David who plaintively placed a sinewy hand on his stomach.

"Yes, we lost our flour and we saw no game, had to fish our way up the river, so, colonel, we are a bit hungry."

Snapping his fingers with impatience at his seeming lack of hospitality, the factor called to the loungers at the trade-house door:

"Michel! Tete-Boule! Bring up Monsieur Steele's stuff from the foot of the portage; and, Michel, David here will eat with you. See that there's plenty of caribou stew for supper. He's starved out." Turning to Steele, the factor added: "My daughter is now overseeing the cooking of our dinner, monsieur. I trust you will find it to your taste."

"You are mighty kind to a couple of bush-battered strangers, Colonel St. Onge. We are not exactly starved, you know. We travel with a net, but a straight diet of pike and trout grows a bit tiresome. You can sell us supplies to take us through to Nepigon?"

"You will not need to outfit for Nepigon," the factor's eyes grew bitter. "You will pass Laflamme's post at Lake Ogoke."

"Monsieur Steele will desire to be shown his room, father, before we dine," called a woman's voice. Turning, Steele saw, opening the gate in the dog-stockade surrounding the factor's quarters, Denise St. Onge, trim in white serge. Casting an embarrassed look at his frayed jeans, his hand sought his unshaven chin as she joined them.

"Welcome, again, to Wailing River, monsieur," she said cordially, giving him her hand.

"My daughter seems to need no introduction. She has told me of your meeting at the river. Denise, Monsieur Steele is bound for the Nepigon by the Ogoke trail." The eyes of father and daughter met in a significant look. "Laflamme, monsieur, can give you anything you wish—including Scotch whisky."

The girl's dark eyebrows contracted at the mention of the Ogoke trader's name.

"So he's giving the Indians whisky, is he?" said Steele.

"You are surprised?" laughed the factor bitterly. "For Monsieur Laflamme it seems that Canadian law does not exist. With his whisky he will soon have the fur trade of the whole district."

"They said as much at Fort Hope. But the authorities—why don't they act?"

St. Onge shrugged eloquently. "I do not know. He is running things with a high hand—has support of the strongest at Ottawa."

Steele turned with a smile to David who had been an interested listener to the conversation.

"I think that we shall have to pay Monsieur Laflamme a visit, David."

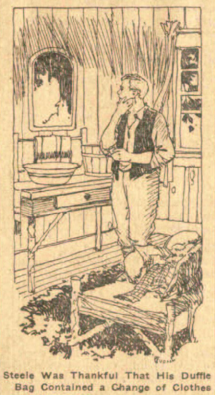
St. Onge and his daughter exchanged glances.

"Daveed like to shake de han' of Mister Laflamme," replied the Ojibway, dryly.

"I pity Laflamme when you do. He'll carry his arm in a sling for a month if he ever falls into that wolf-trap of yours."

"You see, colonel, David is under the impression that Laflamme is an old friend," Steele enlightened his host, whose face reflected acute interest. "Sometimes in meeting old friends he forgets in his joy that his hand-shake is famous from Nepigon to Norway House. In this case, David," he added grimly, "you'll have to remember that we're not on the Nepigon and must not mistake Monsieur Laflamme's throat for his hand."

Steele smiled inwardly as St. Onge's eyes shifted to meet those of his daughter, then focused quizzically on the grinning face of the half-breed. If the situation at Wailing River was a source of mystification to St. Onge's guest, Steele was satisfied that the guests had now balanced the score, to the truth of which surmise the face of the Frenchman patently testified.



Steele Was Thankful That His Duffle Bag Contained a Change of Clothes and Moccasins.

"But come, I forget my manners, monsieur. We have a room and bed for you as long as you will honor us. My head man, Michel, will take care of David."

"Thank you, sir!" And picking up the bag containing his personal belongings, Steele followed his host.

The house of the factor of Wailing River was built of square-hewn spruce logs, carefully chinked against the January winds of the Height-of-Land country. In front, a roofed porch of hewn slabs commanded a view of the river which here gave no intimation of the swift metamorphosis which, a third of a mile below, turned it into a riot of white rapids. Beside the porch a bed of violets and wood anemone were now bloomless, but beyond, in their second flowering, white Canadian violets and the blue of fringed gentian and harebells against a background of northern golden rod bore gay witness to the care of one who loved flowers.

Familiar with the bare and uninviting interiors of the houses at the fur posts, often presided over by an Indian or half-breed, wife of the factor, the living-room Steele now entered bore resemblance to those he had seen solely in its huge sheet-iron stove. The rough walls hung sparingly with small French etchings framed in white birch, the rustic furniture shaped from spruce and cedar poles, the shelves of books, and the rugs of moose and bear and wolf, had, by the alchemy of taste, been fused into a room—a home.

"I did not know there was a room like this north of Winnipeg, mademoiselle," Steele said in frank admiration.

"Oh, monsieur! would you have us live like the Indians? But you are laughing at our poor little home."

"Please don't," he begged. "It is charming—this room. And all the books!"

"It was hard on our packers," broke in St. Onge, "but I insisted on having the books if I was to be marooned up here in this valley. The winter would be long without them—and the violin."

"I envy you the winters here with that violin, sir," said Steele, smiling at his hostess. "I hope to hear it again, mademoiselle—your superb playing."

Her face brightened. "It was only a mood—today at the rapids, monsieur. I go there when lonely, to play to the troubled waters. You thought me sad—I saw it in your face; but I was only homesick for Touraine. Tonight we shall have something gay."

But Steele felt that it was not loneliness which had driven Denise St. Onge to the restless waters.

"Monsieur, you will wish to see your room. Our Ojibway servant, Charlotte, will bring you hot water." And St. Onge led Steele to a room on the second floor of the house, the capacity of which was strained by a cot and washstand, whither a square-built, half-breed woman followed shortly with a steaming bucket.

Steele was thankful that his duffle bag contained a change of clothes and moccasins. Hot water, a shave and fresh clothes speedily worked a miracle in the tattered stranger who had startled Denise St. Onge at the rapids.

When Steele rejoined his hostess he felt more at ease. He even had a suspicion that she approved his changed appearance. At the thought, something like a thrill swept him—to be followed by a shrug of annoyance. He had not seen an attractive woman in months and was paying the penalty. Yet, as he watched her pour the tea while her father dispensed caribou stew and fried trout, a quality—rarer than mere comeliness; an evident fineness of fiber, a savor of personality in this factor's daughter, which meant race and background—impressed itself upon him, and a strong curiosity to know the history of these people whom he had stumbled upon in the bad-lands south of the Albany—to learn the cause of the fear and heartache which this lonely girl had so poignantly revealed in the gorge, possessed him.

"You are collecting Indian relics and utensils for the American museum?" asked the Frenchman. "You are an ethnologist?"

"Yes, I have been in the field four years for the museum."

"You have found much of interest?"

"Last year and this summer, I shipped by Hudson's Bay canoes considerable stuff from Fort Hope and Henley House. Lake Makakibetan on the Albany has some remarkable burial places, unlike anything I've seen. And the Ojibways up there are still very wild and superstitious—medicine men, sorcerers, fear of spirits and the Windigo, and all that."

The factor paused, fork in air. Slowly he replaced it on his plate, untouched; then asked:

"You have never been in this valley before?"

"No," replied Steele, puzzled at his host's tense manner, "but what I heard on the Albany interested me. It seems to be Windigo country among the Albany Ojibways—under a sort of taboo. It must be a serious handicap to your trade, although the very fact that you're here proves that it is not generally considered haunted country by the Indians."

The fine features of St. Onge stiffened. With a glance at his daughter who watched him with parted lips and wide eyes, as though fearful of what he was about to say, he replied bitterly:

"That is our problem, monsieur. The company rashly builds a post on this river which, for a hundred miles below the rapids here, is to the Ojibways a place of spirits; then sends me here to get the fur of the upper country. At Albany, they laugh at this talk of Windigo and spirits keeping the Indians from trading here. They even order me to send hunters to trap the valley below us—when they have avoided it for generations."

"They only betray their ignorance by belittling Indian superstition, sir. I was followed and shot at on the Albany this summer for photographing some Ojibway children. They believed the lens was an evil eye and that the children would be bewitched."

> The factor has his troubles, evidently, and is worried by them. What is the true inwardness?

Sugar or Candy

Granulated, lump, pulverized and brown sugars, though differing in texture and flavor, are practically alike in composition. They contain little or nothing but sugar. A pound of candy may be considered the equivalent in fuel value of a pound of suger. Water, which has no fuel value, is used in making candy, but so, too, are chocolate and nut meats, which have higher fuel values than sugar. The proportion of sugar in thick sirups, such as honey and molasses, is about three-fourths of a pound to the pound, and in jellies, jams and rich preserves, about one-half of a pound to the pound.

Aunt Harriet's Share in Her Grand "Party"

Aunt Harriet lived in a remote Kentucky village, and was locally famed for kindness of heart and good will toward her neighbors. For many months she had been saving her slender means "to give a grand party," she said.

At last the great event came. All Aunt Harriet's friends, dressed in their best, were present, and the evening was most enjoyable, the only drawback being the mysterious absence of the hostess.

Meeting her the next morning one of the youthful guests of the night before spoke rapturously of the party.

"I'm certainly glad you enjoyed yourself," returned the old lady, beaming with satisfaction. "So it really was a success? Yes? My! I certainly should like to have seen it."

"But why were you not there, Aunt Harriet?"

"My Lord, child," answered Aunt Harriet, her face still shining with delight, "I had to stay in the kitchen and wash the dishes."—Everybody's Magazine.

"He told me constipation is what makes so many growing children sickly. Poisons from the waste matter spread through the little bodies, and lower their resistance to disease. So I'm very careful to guard against constipation. I simply give them a little Nujol every night.

"Nujol isn't a laxative at all, you know, but it keeps them just as regular as clockwork. They like it, and the doctor says it's just the thing for them."

Nujol helps Nature in Nature's own way

Mothers are the best friends of Nujol. When their children's health is at stake they seek the remedy that medical authorities approve because it is so safe, so gentle, so natural in its action.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination, without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

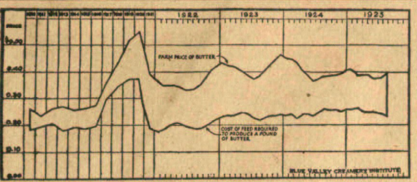
Dairy Cow Good Feed Market, Survey of Costs Discloses



THAT the dairy cow has been a good market for farm feed in the past year is shown in a survey just completed by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. The cost of feeding a dairy cow for the 12 months ending August, 1925, averaged only 25.5 per cent more than in the prewar period from 1910 to 1914. This conclusion is based on farm prices of hay, grain and purchased feeds commonly used for dairy cows, as reported by the United States Department of Agriculture. It was assumed that 18 pounds of hay, 3 pounds of corn, 2 pounds of oats and 1 pound each of bran and cottonseed meal represented a typical balance of roughage and various concentrates in making up the dairy cow's daily menu.

Prices of dairy products have risen farther above the prewar level than is true of feed costs. The price of butter at the farm in the last 12 months was 56 per cent higher than the 1910 to 1914 average. The price paid to producers of fluid milk in the last 12 months was 48 per cent above prewar figures. Allowing equal value to butter and milk, the combined advance in dairy products is 52 per cent. No other farm animal earns as much as a dairy cow in converting feed into cash.

BLUE VALLEY CREAMERY INSTITUTE

THE HEN is one of the best money makers on the farm and the back yards of the country when she is well bred, well fed and comfortably housed, declares the Blue Valley Creamery Institute after a careful study of the 1925 poultry situation. The above chart, prepared by the Institute, tells its own story. It shows the results of culling poor layers from the flock, feeding them a balanced ration and keeping them in a modern type, fresh-air poultry house. Flocks of poultry properly cared for make three times as much profit per hen as flocks handled carelessly, the Institute experts state. Pure-bred fowls of known production ancestry should be used. Chicks should be hatched so they will be matured and laying before the high-price egg season. Only healthy, strong, big-bodied pullets and hens with deep bodies and widespread ribs and pelvic formation should be used in the laying and breeding pens. Skim milk has been found to be the cheapest source of egg-making proteins that can be obtained on the average farm.

Marion Marsh of Hillsdale formerly of this vicinity might have been undiscovered had he not become talkative and given away the details of a stealing scrape to a boy chum recently. Last August the barn of Fred Sheldon of Woodbridge township was entered by parties unknown and about 100 bushels of wheat stolen in the night hours. The officers of this county up to within a few days past were unable to get any clues as to who committed the crime and it is more than likely never would have known had young Marsh kept his mouth shut, all of which goes to prove that crime will out. Marsh and his companion in crime are out on $2,000 bail furnished by their parents.

Reports from Florida indicate that J. P. Speer who recently arrived there, has secured a position at a good salary. He is located at Holly.

Mrs. Rose Marks underwent an operation for removal of growths from the nose. Dr. Johnson performed the operation in his office at Hillsdale on Monday.

Letters from Michigan people who have been in Florida for a while indicate that traffic is still headed that way. It is said that the East Coast Highway extending from Jacksonville down, is filled with automobiles in a terrific rush to get below the frost line. These machines carry licenses from almost every state north of Mason's & Dixon's line, but a large majority are from Michigan and Illinois. Indications are that Florida will double her population during the winter months, but a lot of these enthusiasts are certain to find only disappointment and dry bones. Among the bunch are hundreds of soldiers of fortune who care little for their future and have a habit of roaming like the wild Bedouins of the desert. Such people never become citizens anywhere, or if they do, are mighty poor ones anyhow. They have no common interest with others, no care for the morrow and are practically hoboes—camping wherever night overtakes them. Thus, they go on through life and at last come to the end—homeless, disconsolate and deserted. A rather gloomy picture we have painted, is it not? We are glad only a few comparatively, come under this head.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Rochester—The Rochester postoffice was destroyed by fire early Thursday. The blaze started in the basement and spread rapidly. No mail was destroyed, but much was badly soaked with water.

Albion—Rev. Carl Smith, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., former Albion young man and son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith, of this city, has been called to the pastorate of the Baptist church of Grand Ledge, Mich.

Albion—Succeeding Harold B. Norman, of Reed City, and George Price of East Tawas, resigned, Allen Renshaw, of Bronson, and Wendell Edwards, of Royal Oak, have been elected editor and business manager, respectively, of the Albion college Pleiad.

Saginaw — Manager J. George O'Brien, of the Automobile Club of Northern Michigan, has announced that B. R. Ricksen of Detroit, former manager of the Detroit branch of the Detroit Auto club, has been named manager of the Bay City club, effective January 1.

Holland—According to Captain C. A. Lippincott, the Holland coast guard is to retain its usual crew, during January and February, during which months the station usually was closed. Since all-year traffic now prevails the station has been ordered to remain open.

Pontiac—C. A. Melick and C. S. Boehler, engineers of the state highway department, with City Manager C. W. Ham and city and county engineers recently inspected the proposed plans for widening Saginaw street to conform to wider Woodward avenue. The city has asked the state to approve the plans.

Lansing—The State Conservation Commission will place augmented corps of trappers in the northern Michigan woods this year in an effort to eradicate wolves and other predatory animals it was announced recently. A number of complaints that wolves are killing deer have been received from Upper Peninsula counties.

Ypsilanti—Mayor Hugh E. Vandewalker, of this city, has set what is said to be a world's record for one month's life insurance work by obtaining applications for 717 policies, totaling $1,370,350. The work was done in the course of a contest conducted by the company in which prizes were offered to the agent doing the greatest amount of business in one month.

Monroe—The city commission has adopted a resolution fixing December 30 as the date for a special election to choose a municipal judge, following the official canvass of the vote polled on December 7 on the question of consolidation of courts. The new judge will assume his duties January 1, and will receive a salary of $6,200. He must be a lawyer, the commission ruled.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Francis W. Kelsey, director of Near East Research and head of the Latin department of the University of Michigan, has been elected a foreign correspondent of the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Letters, of Paris, according to a report received here. The appointment was made in honor of Dr. Kelsey's work in the excavation of Carthage last spring as a member of the France-American party.

Ypsilanti—Training of the new women's band at the State Normal College here will begin immediately after the reopening of the school following the Christmas holidays, according to an announcement by Prof. John F. Barnhill, faculty manager of the organization. More than 100 students have been enrolled as prospective members. The girls were asked to express a choice as to instruments when enrolling and 32 chose the saxophone.

Port Huron—Leo O'Brien, one of two men bound over to the Circuit Court on a charge of conspiring to defraud three insurance companies by a fire which partially destroyed their grocery store at 2726 Little street, has changed his plea from not guilty to guilty, and has been ordered to appear before Judge Eugene F. Law for sentence. His partner, William Rowland, who also pleaded not guilty, will appear for examination tomorrow.

Battle Creek—A combination of the Postum Cereal company of this city and New York with the Jell-O company, Inc., of Batavia, N. Y., is about to be affected if stockholders of the two concerns will vote approval of plans made by their officers. There have been rumors for the last few days of a deal whereby the Postum Cereal company would acquire a majority of the Jell-O company stock, or vice versa the sum mentioned as the acquiring price being $30,000,000.

Grand Rapids—The directors of the Michigan Bell Telephone company, who met here Thursday, authorized the expenditure of $6,855,000 in extensions to telephone plants throughout the state. Of this amount $2,150,000 is for Detroit. Expenditures in Grand Rapids from this appropriation will total $750,000, which is in addition to the $8,000,000 expended here the last two years. The directors inspected the Grand Rapids plants where progress is being made on the actual merger of the old Citizens' Telephone company's property with the Michigan Bell.

Cass City—The regular monthly meeting and dinner of the Cass City Community club, an organization composed of business men and farmers, was held Thursday for the purpose of discussing ways and means of obtaining better mail service for cities of the thumb district north of Imlay City. These towns are serviced with but one mail train from each direction a day and it was the concensus of opinion that business men and farmers should co-operate with their congressmen in procuring mail service by bus or automobile from Imlay City.

Owosso—Twenty-one employees of the Osburn & Sons' Store here will receive $357.14 each from the estate of the late James L. Osburn, the last of the line of Osburns who conducted the business since 1857.

Homer—Charles Williams, 31 years old, of Albion, was drowned recently when a coupe in which he was riding went over a bridge inside the city limits of Homer. Homer Deming, 16, of Homer, dived into the icy water and recovered the body but efforts at resuscitation were fruitless.

Benton Harbor—A bill asking congress to appropriate $160,000 for the construction of a new postoffice building here was introduced last week by Representative John C. Ketcham. An appropriation of $10,000 for the purchase of a postoffice site at Sturgis was also asked by Ketcham.

Ionia—The Ionia Exchange club will have as its guest and speaker, Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit, next Tuesday noon. He will come to this city through an invitation of Mayor Fred W. Green, chairman of the club's program committee. The banquet is expected to be the largest ever held by the club and will be staged at Reed Inn.

Lansing—Lansing is to turn back time in its flight and hold an old time dancing party. Through the efforts of the general guild of the St. Paul's Episcopal church, the interest of Mrs. Henry Ford has been enlisted in aiding plans for such a party here the evening of December 18. The affair will be held in the 119th Field Artillery armory.

Lansing—The state conservation commission, meeting here recently, authorized John Baird, director, to set aside from four to eight sections of state-owned land in Montmorency county for a state game reserve. The land is about nine miles from the Turtle Lake hunting club. Territory surrounding the reserve will be open to the public for hunting.

Saginaw—The Saginaw county clerk has received a petition from seven members of the committee on roads and bridges of the Allegan county board of supervisors urging Saginaw supervisors to take action against any repudiation by the state of the state reward monies due the counties amounting to over $6,000,000. The petition was referred to the next session of the supervisors, which will be Monday.

Pontiac—To investigate the possibility of procuring for Pontiac an airplace factory, as suggested in a recent statement from E. Leroy Pelletier of Detroit, R. G. Neal, president of the Pontiac Board of Commerce, has appointed a committee. Pelletier told the board there was a possibility that Eddie Rickenbacker would locate such a factory here. A petition presented by the Pontiac realty board asked that immediate action be taken on the matter.

Menominee—Dead for at least 10 days while his wife and six children awaited his return, the body of Henry Frock, 44 years old was found recently deep in the woods where the man had frozen to death after being injured by a falling tree he had cut down. Frock was accustomed to visit his family every week end and when he failed to come home for two Sundays in succession, his wife became alarmed and started an inquiry which resulted in the finding of the body.

Lansing—Another chapter in the governor's reorganization of the Michigan State Fair was written last Tuesday when the fair board met here. In addition to the announcement of the personnel of committees intended to perform various mangerial functions in connection with the fair, the governor was expected to disclose the findings of the recent administration audit that was made of the fair books He also was expected to make a pronouncement of policy to be followed in future expositions.

Mt. Pleasant—With the ruins of Central Normal's administration building still smoking, following the $500,000 fire which destroyed the main building and library, the faculty and student body were rallying to supply the needs of the moment. All classes were held Monday afternoon as usual. Workmen were razing the few parts of the wall yet standing, so that access may be gained to the large safes which have the records of the school. The fire, of unknown origin broke out early last Monday morning.

Monroe—Dr. Denias Dawe defeated Mayor James S. Gilmore by a vote of 2,130 to 999 in the municipal election held recently. Dr. Dawe, who is a former representative, carried all six precincts of the city. Alexis Navarre, the third candidate for mayor, received 100 votes. It was reported that 60 per cent of the voters were women. Those elected as city commissioners were: George Danz, Arthur Navarre and Charles Curson, while Frank Daiber, Theodore Weisell and William Dusablon did not have opposition.

Lansing—Statistics published recently by the census bureau at Washington, show that farms in Michigan are decreasing in numbers and size. The condition is one that is also reported by most other states in the series of summaries the bureau has been issuing. The number of farms in Michigan, according to the 1925 figures, is 192,334, compared with 196,247 in the census of 1920, and their average area was 93.8 acres this year compared with 96.9 acres five years ago. The value per acre was also declining.

Ann Arbor—The University of Michigan has gone into the theatrical business in all seriousness. "Tambourine," the twentieth annual production of Mimes of the university, played its premiere last Monday night at the Whitney Theater. The usual first night audience of dramatic critics, college professors and students saw a cast of college men play women's parts with the expertness that has brought about engagements at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and in several Middle West and other Eastern cities.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Submits National Budget—Echoes of His Farm Bureau Address.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE transmitted to congress Wednesday the annual budget, together with a message in which he disclosed some important policies of the government. The budget calls for a total of $3,156,130,358 for the fiscal year of 1927. This is an increase of $50,000,000 over the current fiscal year, and the President explained that in the cost of administering the government the bed rock had probably been reached and in the future increases commensurate with growth must be expected. The prospectus surplus for 1926 was reduced to $262,000,000 by the cost of the soldiers' bonus above estimates and other unanticipated expenditures; but the surplus for 1927 will be about $330,000,000, thus meeting the proposed tax reduction.

Enforcement of the prohibition law is becoming much more expensive. The budget asks for $21,940,529 for this purpose. Of this total the coast guard is to get $11,634,000 for its activities in preventing rum smuggling. In addition to this, the President proposes that ten new coast guard cutters be built at a cost of $9,000,000 and that the personnel of the guard be increased.

In response to the demands for better air forces the budget includes an increase of $300,000 in the allotment for the army air service and of $4,000,000 for the navy bureau of aeronautics. It asks for new navy planes costing $9,000,000 and new army planes costing $6,000,000. Figures submitted by the President tended to controvert the assertions of Colonel Mitchell that the air forces are being starved. "For the air services the estimates carry a total of $42,447,000, being $16,793,000 for the army, $22,391,000 for the navy, $2,750,000 for the air-mail service of the Post Office department and $513,000 for the national advisory council for aeronautics," the President said.

"These amounts include contract authorization, but do not include funds provided in other budget items for the pay of commissioned air service officers, pay, housing, and general maintenance for the enlisted air service personnel, and certain classes of supplies and services of a general character furnished for air service activities. If we include these items, the total for the air service in 1927 will amount to not less than $76,000,000.

"They propose procurement from the industries of airplanes, engines and accessories to the amount of $20,954,000. The remaining $21,493,000 is for maintenance, operation, experimentation, and research.

"This government is pursuing an orderly policy toward building up its air service. We realize that our national air defense problem is primarily an industrial problem. We also know that the airplane industry today is dependent almost entirely upon government business for its development and growth. We do not contemplate any competition between the government and industry in the production of airplanes."

In line with his warnings against paternalistic tendencies of the federal government, the executive calls for a halt in federal aid legislation, proposing that in the future federal appropriations for highway construction be limited to interstate through routes.

In the interest of saving money on rents the President suggests an appropriation of $10,000,000 a year for the construction of new buildings to house government departments permanently in the District of Columbia.

IN THE nature of a message to congress and the nation was President Coolidge's address before the convention of the American Farm Bureau federation in Chicago. It probably will have its effect on farm legislation in congress, but it was not pleasing to the majority of the farm bureau men who listened to it. This was because Mr. Coolidge took a definite stand against any radical price-fixing legislation or revision of the tariff. He attacked directly the McNary-Haugen bill, which would provide government assisted corporations in taking over the marketing of the United States farm surpluses in foreign countries and thus prevent the dumping of the farm output on the home market, with consequent slumps in price. There was no guarantee that the government always would give a high price, he said, while with the government once established in business it would be a blow at the farmers' own co-operatives.

The President argued that the farmer gets far greater benefit from the tariff than the sum which is added to the prices of manufactured commodities that the farmer buys. On the other hand, all citizens other than farmers pay more for many things, because the agricultural clauses of the tariff assist the farmer to attain higher prices in the American market for his products.

One of the severest critics of the President's address was S. H. Thompson of Quincy, Ill., president of the Illinois Agricultural association, and the federation showed its sentiments by electing Mr. Thompson its president. He defeated O. E. Bradfute of Ohio, head of the federation for the last three years and representative of the conservative farm leaders. The convention also adopted this resolution:

"We indorse the enactment of a federal law based on the principle of a farmers' export corporation, providing for the creation of an agency with broad powers for the purpose of so handling the surplus of farm crops that the American producer may receive an American price in the domestic market and we instruct our officers and representatives to work for the early enactment of such a law, founded on sound economic policies and not involving government subsidy."

The McNary-Haugen bill, modified and given a new name, will come up again in the present session of congress, but in Washington it is believed it will again be defeated.

THE regular Republicans in the lower house easily elected Nicholas Longworth of Ohio speaker. The Democrats cast their vote for Finis Garrett of Tennessee and the insurgent Republican delegation from Wisconsin with one man from North Dakota voted for Henry A. Cooper. Then, with Mr. Longworth in the chair—already being called "czar"—the majority proceeded to nullify the committee discharge rule which was forced on the regulars last year by the LaFollette radicals. This time 22 insurgent Republicans joined with 170 Democrats and four third party men in opposition. The revised rule on committee discharge put through by the Republicans does away with the initiation of discharge by only 150 members and requires 218. Then, on two subsequent votes, 218 are required to instruct a report within 15 days.

Business started in the house with a rush and a flood of bills was introduced. The tax reduction measure was given precedence and general debate on it continued through the week. Minority reports were submitted by Hull of Tennessee and Rainey of Illinois, Democratic members of the committee on ways and means, and both of them spoke against the bill, Rainey declaring it was formulated in the interest of millionaires. Advocates of the measure were numerous and as they included both Republicans and Democrats it was predicted that hostile amendments would not have much chance.

What to do about assignments for young Senator LaFollette, and whether or not to seat Gerald P. Nye as successor of the late Senator Ladd of North Dakota, were the main questions for the Republican senators last week. The respective committees in charge of these problems were divided in opinion. LaFollette himself, meanwhile, in the congressional directory, designated himself as "Republican (Progressive)." The seating of Mr. Nye depended on the legality of Governor Sorlie's action in appointing him.

DRAWING up its report, the Lampert aircraft investigation committee of the house of representatives decided favorably on 19 propositions. First and most important, it recommends the establishment of a department of national defense with unity of command and headed by a civilian secretary with undersecretaries for land, sea, and air; or, if such a department is not immediately possible, either a unified air service or a separate air corps in the army and the navy.

The other propositions are designed to develop aviation with liberal appropriations and legislation and to correct alleged injustices suffered by aviation officers.

Carrying the indorsement of President Coolidge, the annual report of the national advisory committee for aeronautics was submitted to congress. It recommends the creation of a bureau of air navigation in the Department of Commerce to regulate and encourage commercial aviation, continuance of a policy of aircraft development in the light of the loss of the Shenandoah, and extension of the air-mail service to all sections of the country.

IT WAS the army's turn last week to jump on Col. William Mitchell in his court-martial trial, and a score of high officers, including Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, and Brig. Ben. J. E. Fechet, assistant chief, were called to rebut the colonel's testimony. General Patrick admitted defects in the service, shortage of planes, lack of training and the like, but laid the blame on congress which had made insufficient appropriations. He said that while antiaircraft fire was "not entirely effective," it was one of the agencies against air attacks that should be used and developed. Capt. R. G. Rath, an army aviator who won the Distinguished Service medal in the war in France, gave testimony that discredited the efficiency of Colonel Mitchell when he commanded the air forces there. Mr. Reid, the colonel's counsel, plied Captain Rath with insulting questions and remarks belittling his courage until the audience hissed and General King, member of the court, protested to its president, General Howze. Major Gullion, assistant judge advocate, angered the defense by again attempting to introduce evidence that Mitchell had cribbed large parts of his book, "Winged Defense." The court once more ruled this out of order.

GREAT BRITAIN'S quarrel with Turkey over the Mosul oil region is fast approaching a climax. The League of Nations council, which according to the advisory finding of the world court is competent to decide the question, was told officially by Turkey that that nation would not admit the world court's competence to give an advisory opinion to the council, and when the council accepted the opinion, the Turkish representative withdrew from the negotiations for the time being. The British insisted that the council proceed to debate and decide the boundary dispute, fearing that if the matter were postponed until the March session Turkey would attempt to seize and occupy the Mosul region by force.

On Thursday General Laidoner of Esthonia, special agent of the league, reported that the Turks were committing atrocious acts of violence along the provisional Mosul frontier, deporting the Christian inhabitants, occupying villages, confiscating arms, imposing heavy fines, demanding women, pillaging houses, and in some cases taking life.

Djabir Bey of Damascus, representing the Syro-Palestine independence organization and the rebellious Druses, tried to get a hearing from the council to tell of French maladministration of the mandate, but the French and British delegates objected successfully.

IN THE Tacna-Arica plebiscitary commission Chile moved that the date of the plebiscite be fixed for February 1. General Pershing opposed this as not giving enough time to arrange for a fair and free vote, and Peru supported him. They agreed the commission should pass the electoral regulations January 15, with February 15 for registrations and April 15 for the plebiscite. Chile then decided to appeal from this decision to President Coolidge, the arbiter.

Unpublished Novel by Hugo Found in Paris

Paris.—The manuscript of a novel written by Victor Hugo ten years before "Les Miserables" appeared has been discovered.

The project is the idea of Gustave Simon, the venerable literary executor of Hugo.

Announcement of the discovery says: "It should be interesting to know that Victor Hugo's literary executor, Gustave Simon, the scholar and bibliophile, is still busy and that after years of research he has discovered the manuscript of 'Les Miseres,' a novel written by Victor Hugo more than ten years before the appearance of 'Les Miserables.'

"Except for the last two chapters, 'Les Miseres' was ready for publication when Victor Hugo was sent into exile, which drove all thoughts of finishing the novel from his mind. The manuscript was thrown aside and not even looked at for ten years. Hugo then took the manuscript, read it, was dissatisfied and decided to rewrite the whole story. 'Les Miserables' was the result.

"Exile had caused changes in Hugo's mind and it had its effect on his story, so that while 'Les Miseres' has the basic theme of 'Les Miserables,' there are essential differences in the two works.

"The earlier novel will read like a new book. In 'Les Miseres' there is none of what is usually called the love interest, and Cosette, one of the famous figures, does not appear."

POULTRY

SUGGESTIONS ON EGG INCUBATION

Incubation is the natural process through which the egg must pass to produce the chick. Our object, when hatching larger numbers of chicks, is to substitute for the natural method of hatching with hens. The incubator has solved the problem. It has grown from the mere hatching boxes to machines that are capable of producing a large percentage of strong, healthy chicks. Some hatching boxes are still on the market; the medium to high priced incubators are the ones to purchase. The initial price is of small consideration when compared with good, livable chicks.

The hen prepares the egg. Her owner generally receives it in good condition. What he does to the egg before it is actually placed in the incubator, greatly influences its hatchability. The fresher the eggs, the larger the percentage of hatch will be and the stronger the chicks.

The proper care of hatching eggs will increase the hatch. They should be turned daily if kept longer than five days. The best temperature is from 50 to 60 degrees Fahrenheit. Germ development starts at 68 degrees, so care should be taken to see that the eggs do not reach that point.

More eggs are ruined by becoming too warm before they are set than by chilling. When an egg is kept in a room where the temperature is 70 to 80 degrees, germ development starts. There is not enough heat to continue incubation; consequently many embryos die then or during the first few days in the incubator. Under such conditions, the eggs will show clear or nearly clear when candled on the eighth day.

When selecting an incubator, be governed to a large extent by the machines that are giving the best results in the community, not only for number of chicks hatched but for the condition of the chicks as well.

There are two general types of smaller incubators—the hot-water and the hot-air. The greatest problem with hot-water machines in general is proper ventilation; moisture is the greatest problem in the hot-air machine. The water in the water-heated incubator does not influence moisture in the egg chamber. Lack of moisture means that there has been too great an amount of evaporation. In the water-heated machines the air does not circulate so freely. With slower moving air, there will be less evaporation. The fact that many of the smaller hot water incubators have very little ventilation, makes it necessary to air and cool the eggs daily.

The hot-air incubators are quite different. The heat is furnished by the air so it is necessary that the air be in more rapid motion. This causes greater ventilation and evaporation, hence moisture usually must be added.

In operating the incubator follow directions. Most incubator companies give very complete directions regarding the operation and control of their machines.

Uniformity of temperature is a great controlling factor. An incubator run at a uniform temperature of 102 degrees will do better than one varying from 101 to 105 degrees, Gradual variation is not detrimental.

Too high temperature lowers the vigor of the chicks. In some machines, it is considered best to start at 101 degrees, increase to 102 degrees the second week, and only allow the standard of 103 degrees to be reached a few days before the hatch. Above everything, the eggs should not get too hot.—Noel Hall, Extension Specialist, Missouri state poultry experiment station, Mountain Grove.

Sanitary Poultry House Is Necessary for Eggs

Chickens will not give adequate returns in eggs or growth when kept under insanitary conditions.

The construction of the poultry house should receive first attention. Sufficient air space, lighting, and ventilation should be provided, and the entire house cleaned at frequent intervals.

While these precautions cannot be depended upon to control mites and lice, they aid the poultryman in determining when these pests are present. Furthermore, the fowls are kept in vigorous condition, which in itself aids in controlling pests. Dirty and insanitary houses provide ideal breeding conditions for insects and germs which are detrimental to poultry. Diseased fowls, or those with malformed bills or feet, fall ready prey to lice, mites, and other insect pests, and should be removed as soon as discovered.

Proper Feed for Pullets

It is a mistake to let the pullets forage for themselves. Grain alone will not supply the necessary feed for building the framework and the body of the birds which are to become a part of the future laying flock. A mash containing a liberal supply of protein and minerals is needed. If the pullets are on good range they will not consume so much mash of this sort as they would without range, but it should be constantly before them.

Correct Food for Eggs

In supplying feed to fowls there are three kinds of constituents which should be present in certain fairly well-fixed proportions if the desired results are to be obtained most economically. These constituents are mineral, nitrogenous, and carbonaceous, all of which are contained in corn, wheat, oats, and barley, but not in the right proportions to give the greatest egg yield. In addition some animal feed and green feed should be supplied.

Odd Freak of Wheels

A stuck throttle on the locomotive of a Pennsylvania railroad passenger locomotive near Hamburg, Pa., caused one of the most freakish accidents in the history of the railroad. The train was traveling nearly sixty miles an hour when the engineer discovered that he could neither take off, nor put on steam. The train was rapidly approaching a station so he turned on the air and brought the train to a stop with the brakes. But the wheels of the locomotive continued to revolve at a high speed, wearing grooves in the rails and creating a terrific noise. The engine was stopped only after water had been poured on the fire to reduce the steam pressure. It required more than an hour to bring the wheels to a halt.

WHY SUFFER ANOTHER DAY WITH INDIGESTION?

The big seller today for acute and chronic stomach misery is Dare's Mentha Pepsin and it is such a fine, pleasant and supremely good medicine that if the first bottle you buy doesn't help you—your druggist will return the purchase price.

One man writes, "I Cannot understand why any person will continue to suffer from gastritis or indigestion when Dare's Mentha Pepsin is available."

And tens of thousands of people—many of whom almost died with stomach agony—think the same way.

It's the right medicine for any person who suffers from bad digestion, gas, heaviness and that feeling of suffocation which is always dangerous.

For gastritis, indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach agony—acute or chronic, keep Dare's Mentha Pepsin in mind.

THE FUR CANOE

SYNOPSIS.—With David, half-breed guide, Brent Steele, of the American Museum of Natural History, is traveling in northern Canada. By a stream he hears Denise, daughter of Col. Hilaire St. Onge, factor at Wailing River, play the violin superbly. He introduces himself and accepts an invitation to make the post his home during his stay. He finds the factor worried and mystified. The "log chateau" is a real home.

"But they missed you!" laughed the Frenchman. "Yes! Our inspector, Monsieur Lascelles, in his desire to get fur ignores the conditions here entirely."

At the mention of the name Lascelles, Steele sensed a swift change in Denise St. Onge. His curious eyes caught a faint color in the girl's temples as she avoided his glance. In a moment she had control of herself but he wondered if this then was the cause of her heartache.

"My position is most difficult, you see," continued St. Onge. "Laflamme controls the upper country with his whisky. We get considerable Little Current and Drowning River trade, but Michel and I have to meet them with our goods over at Portage Lake. There are many who fear to come to the House of the Windigo, on the Spirit rapids, as they call it."

"Strange your people at Albany fail to realize this!"

"They will realize it now—this summer, for we have come to an impasse, as we say in French."

"How is that, sir?"

"Why, my Indians, except Michel, who is a hard-headed Iroquois from the Nipissing and laughs at this devil talk, will not now go into the bush alone. They are always seeing and hearing things. Our hunter, Tete-Boule, refuses to leave the post since he found some prodigious tracks in the muskeg and heard screaming at night. Monsieur, our people are panic-stricken." St. Onge gravely shook his head. "And now, as you say in English, the climax is capped."

Steele leaned toward his host, keenly curious of what was coming, as St. Onge finished dramatically:

"Our fur canoe, which left here early in July, with four men, never reached—Albany!"

"Never reached—Albany?" repeated the astonished listener. "They sent you word, by canoe?"

"Yes, they sent a relief party upriver to find my men who were long overdue. They feared they had lost their boat in the Albany rapids and were following the shore."

"And this search party found nothing?"

"Nothing!" St. Onge lifted shoulders and hands in eloquent gesture. "Men, fur, canoe; gone, wiped out, swallowed up!"

"But there must have been something washed up alongshore," vehemently protested Steele, "the shell of the canoe—small stuff—and a paddle always comes ashore."

"Nothing!" repeated the factor. "They searched the Albany and then the lower Wailing, for they had to pole and track most of the way as you know. Above the Devil's mile they found the first camp of our people, but below, not a body, or paddle, or scrap of canoe—nothing!"

To Steele this was incredible—this mysterious tragedy of the fur canoe. He wished he had known what had happened on the Wailing but a few weeks before, when he and David fought day by day its stiff current on the way to the post.

"It's simply unbelievable, colonel," he vigorously objected. "A swamped canoe, broken up in a big rapid, is bound to throw something on the beach below. We noticed nothing, but we were not on the lookout."

That there was more to this story Steele was convinced; but what personal bearing could it have on Denise St. Onge?

"Yet those are the facts, monsieur, and our people are mad with fear. Thank Heaven! Michel had a bad ankle and was not with the boat. He tells the Indians that the canoe and bodies are held in the big eddy, but I doubt it."

Steele stared at the factor, unable to accept the sole inference to be drawn from his host's remark. St. Onge was surely facetious.

"That leaves us the Windigo theory, colonel," he laughed, but to his surprise his pleasantry was met by so grave a face that for an instant Steele was in doubt of the mental balance of the Frenchman, harassed by the misfortunes of the summer. The dark eyes of Denise St. Onge, fixed on the window, were cryptic. Then the factor smiled inscrutably as he said:

"Monsieur, I am a furtrader on a river believed to be haunted. It would be a policy most ruinous for me to admit a belief in the supernatural—in this Indian tradition. Is it not so? But," and the speaker glanced at his daughter, "as well believe it the Windigo; what other solution is left? Men and canoe disappear—like that!" and he snapped his fingers.

It was clear that St. Onge was dissembling—for some reason he was loath to give his guest the whole story. But why? What was there in this tragedy of fear and death that a stranger should not know? Why, since St. Onge had so frankly revealed the crisis he faced at Wailing River—the threatened loss of the trade and abandonment of the post, due to the superstition of the Indians—did he withhold his own solution of the riddle? Certainly there was more, much more, in this strange situation which Steele had accidentally stumbled upon, than the loss of the fur canoe. The furtive glances of father and daughter at Steele's reference to Laflamme, the free-trader; her evident embarrassment at the mention of Lascelles, inspector at Albany; and above all, her mood of despair at the rapids, voiced so poignantly by her violin; these could bear no relation to the tragedy of the fur canoe—to the panic of the Indians at the ill-starred post.

"Were your men trustworthy?" he suddenly asked.

"Absolutely. They could not desert and hope to dispose of the fur. We and the Hudson's Bay people have an agreement. On the Albany at that time they would surely have run into the Fort Hope York boats and the Martin's Falls and Henley House brigades. Besides, two of them left young wives here."

"Still, I'm sure Michel is wrong about the eddy," ventured Steele, hoping to draw out the factor. "The Big Pelican whirlpool, below Lac Seul, the worst I've ever seen, always throws out the stuff sucked into it in the course of a few hours."

St. Onge lifted his heavy eyebrows in a nod of assent. "Oh, Michel is in doubt about it also, but that is what he tells the Indians. A man of parts is Michel, monsieur. He is more than my right hand here."

"Yes, he looks like a good man. Did you notice David, colonel?" Steele's face lighted as he mentioned his swarthy comrade.

"He seemed most intelligent," replied St. Onge, "and looks as if he could pack four hundred over a portage, if he wished."

"He can, colonel." Then Steele gambled with his host's curiosity. "What worries me is how to keep him from wringing Laflamme's neck when we reach Ogoke—and, aside from getting supplies, we wish to stop at Ogoke, Colonel St. Onge."

The factor was palpably interested. His narrowed eyes seemed to search those of his guest in an endeavor to read his thoughts. Then, leaning forward, elbows on table, he asked tensely:

"Why?"

"I am sorry, but that is David's secret."

"Oh, I see! It is right, then, that you do not tell. But I was curious, monsieur, for today when he reached here, he asked at once how many days' travel it was to Ogoke lake."

That St. Onge should be vitally interested in the man, who, by the use of whisky, was winning the fur trade of the whole headwater country of the Wailing, was natural, but the observant Steele sensed more to the story than mere trade rivalry, in the attitude of the factor. However, he dropped the subject and returned to the lost canoe.

"It's by far the strangest case I have heard of—four men in a loaded canoe, wiped out without leaving a scrap of birchbark or a sliver of spruce as a clue, and a wonderful opportunity for the study of this Windigo superstition at first hand."

"Eighteen thousand dollars in fur!" sighed the factor, whose face was drawn and old, as they left the table.

"Will you come with me to the trade-house, monsieur? For a time my daughter will be busy with the dishes. Then we shall have some music, Denise?"

"If you wish," and addressing Steele she added suggestively: "It will be gay music tonight, monsieur, I promise you—in honor of your arrival at the 'House of the Windigo.'"

"But I like your sad music, mademoiselle," he said, "and I am clever at washing dishes, if I could be of service."

There was challenge in her black eyes as she countered: "Ah, monsieur, but you are more clever, I fear, at concealing your thoughts."

As he walked with the factor to the trade-house he wondered precisely to what she had alluded.

St. Onge was writing a lengthy report of the situation at Wailing River to his chief at Albany, three hundred miles downstream, so Steele joined David and Michel seated beside the post canoes on the beach, smoking after-supper pipes. In front of the Indian shacks, a group of shawled women talked in hushed voices. Near them, three men, squatted on their heels, Indian fashion, conversed, heads together. No shrill shouts broke the quiet. Even the play of the dusky children seemed suppressed. Truly, thought Steele, St. Onge had not exaggerated. The air hung heavy with fear. The Indians were in a panic. Dread of the fabled Windigo had wrought its spell. At this rate it would not be long before the foxes would bark in the clearing of the abandoned post—before padded feet would roam at will in what was now a home. And the girl up there—what would become of her?

"Well, David, has Michel told you of the fur canoe?" demanded Steele.

David's broad face wrinkled in a grin. Taking his pipe from his mouth, he spat deliberately before he answered with another question.

"How long we stop here?"

"I don't know. Why?" Steele was interested.

"Wal, Michel an' Daveed lak to drop down to de beeg strong water. We strike back in seven-eight sleep, maybe."

"What's your idea? It's not just to make another search on a mere chance of finding something. There's something else cooking under that black hat of yours."

But David was noncommittal. "We tak a look at de las' camp fur canoe made, an' shore below, for little piece."

Steele was secretly delighted at the excuse this expedition of David's would give him for prolonging indefinitely his stay at Wailing River. As a student of Indian mythology and worship of the supernatural, the probing of this mystery—the study of its effect on the post Indians—demanded his best efforts. It was a rare opportunity for an ethnologist, a student of folklore, to gather data at first hand. But over and beyond that was the riddle of this girl whose hands of an artist were now busy with the dishes up there in the factor's house.

"But what do you expect to find, Michel? There have been two canoes over the ground. The Windigo have swallowed canoe, fur and men."

The small eyes of the Indian snapped. "Daveed and Michel nevaire see M'sieu Windigo. We lak to hav' look at heem. Tete-Boule," with a gesture toward the three men grouped in front of the shacks, "he hear Windigo one, two, many tam. He fin' track een muskeg—ver' beeg. But he hav' fear to tak Michel to de track. Maybe down on de beeg rapids, Daveed an' Michel shake han' wid de Windigo. Maybe we fin' he is hongree—den we feed heem—some lead." And the smile faded, while the swart features of the Indian set stiff with hate.

"Ah, ha!" thought Steele. "These two old foxes have got something in their heads."

But knowing his people, he did not press them for an explanation. Later, alone with David, he would be told. So he filled his pipe and sat down.

"Michel," he asked, "why did the Revillon Freres build this place at the head of these rapids instead of up at Ogoke lake where they could buck Laflamme, face to face, for the trade of the whole country?"

For a space Michel smoked, ignoring the question; then he grunted through the stem of his pipe:

"You see M'sieu Lascelles at Albanee?"

"No, I stopped with the Hudson's Bay people. Why?"

"Wal, eef you see M'sieu Lascelles maybe you know why," was the reply.

"Where were you before you came here?" asked Steele.

"At Albanee."

"You know him, then. But he can't be a good fur man to build here—in the bad-lands, at these Spirit rapids of the Ojibways."

"De man who build dees pos' die Me'sieu Lascelles ees no fool; he not keep eet for fur—he keep eet—for 'noder reason." After which startling statement Michel became a sphinx to Steele's further questioning.

More than ever mystified by what he had heard, he left the men on the river shore, and rejoined his host.

In the warm candle light of the factor's quarters Steele soon lost himself in the playing of Denise St. Onge. There was no trace of the troubled eyes, of the reserve of the girl who had sat mute through the evening meal, listening to the talk of the men, in the gay creature who now conjured with her violin mad dances of the Polish and Hungarian peasants, love songs of Italy, French and German opera. Here was rare temperament, technique, training—all wasted in this wilderness. It was monstrous—inexplicable! What could have brought them here?"

"It is superb, mademoiselle—your playing," he cried impulsively, "you have appeared professionally, of course, in France?"

The culmination of the missing fur canoe is serious for St. Onge. What a mystery!

Jenny Lind, Genial Friend

Jenny Lind came again and yet again to the Taylors' congenial homestead; her kindness, "sensitive, capricious and restless as it is, her humanities and impetuosities" won the affections of mother and boy alike, says the Christian Science Monitor. "Great impulses, a humble Christian heart watching and praying to bring her into subjection of God's will, she is a great addition to my life," wrote Alice Taylor. . . . Nor was it to him (James Spedding) only that the great cantatrice of the world's worship brought her message of beauty and joy. In many a letter of that date we catch glimpses of her shining preseuce in that quiet home.

She Didn't Get It

"You kissed me last night and mother didn't like it."

"How can she dislike what she didn't sample?"

Sports Help Samoans Keep Physically Fit

The Samoans are the finest set-up men physically on this footstool and they keep fit with the open-air life on the sea. In one group of the islands the Samoans are baseballers. In another group they became so devoted to cricket that they knocked off work to play the game, matches between villages lasting weeks at a time playing six out of the seven days—for the Samoans are deeply religious, Christian at that. So obsessed were they with cricket that ordinances had to be passed to limit the time of playing it. They do not box, but they wrestle some—catch-as-catch-can.

The dwellings of the natives are thatch whares or huts; of the whites, lumber. There are neither minerals nor oil in Samoa. Wild pigs are abundant.

The Samoans are of clean habits, mentally and physically, and idolatry has gone out. They have superstitions, of course, and they have native dances.

The principal crops for export are cocoa, copra—the dried kernel of the coconut—and a little rubber.—Mr. Mills, in Adventure Magazine.

Love and Immortality

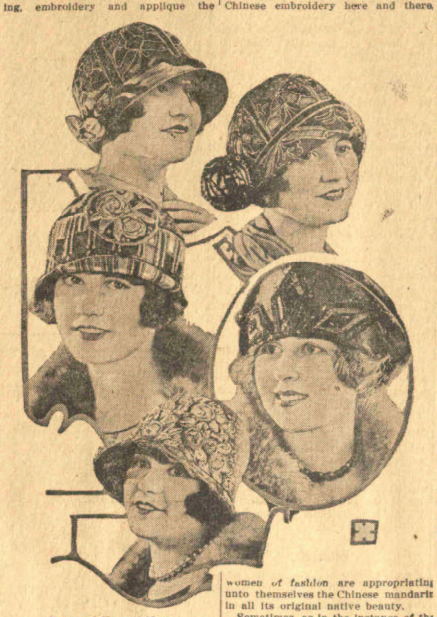
Some one has written that love makes people believe in immortality, because there seems not to be room enough in life for so great a tenderness, and it is inconceivable that the most masterful of our emotions should have no more than the spare moments of a few years.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

PIQUANT DANCE MILLINERY; FAVOR CHINESE EMBROIDERY

GENIUS is lavishing modernistic art on the piquant dress hats which so add to the picture at dinners, dances and various social functions. Nowadays creators of our chapeaux take not only the needle in hand, but the brush as well, for handpainting adds to the glory of present-day millinery.

Even the small sports felt hat departs from its role of simplicity to allow artists to paint a few colorful leaves or a conventional design on its snug fitting crown.

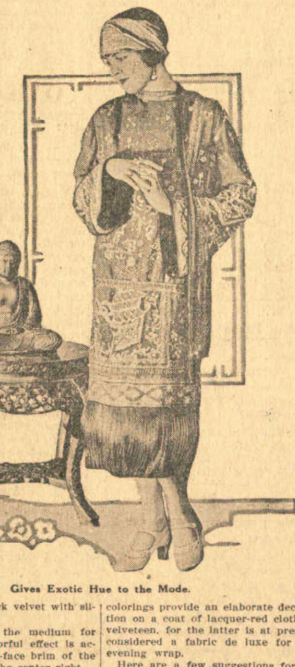
From the standpoint of hand-painting, embroidery and applique the group of hats in the illustration abound in fetching ideas.



Group of Formal Hats.

Both the chapeaux at the top of the picture display a riotous combination of color, gilded leather, and intriguing stitchery. Velvet motifs in gay hues have their edges encrusted with gold paint and there are interworkings of metal thread, with glimpses of gold tissue combined with gold leather.

The plaque of embroidered roses in the hat to the left below supplies brilliant color, the rest of the model being created of black velvet with silvered black ribbon.



Gives Exotic Hue to the Mode.

With chenille as the medium for hand stitchery a colorful effect is acquired on the off-the-face brim of the cunning chapeau to the center right.

A marked adherence to metallic effects is registered throughout the program of dance hats. Gold and silver laces form exotic trimming while tissues of the same form the hat proper. Such is the lovely model shown last in the group a dainty structure of shimmering gold lace and tissue. All the season's most entrancing colors seem to have been gathered up and reflected in handmade French flowers clustered upon the crown.

Fashion continues to revel in an orgy of gay colors. Our wraps, our hats, our frocks and our costume accessories are vibrating with metallic splendor together with exotic hue.

To this era of gorgeousness, Chinese art and stitchery are contributing a magnanimous share. The smartest black satin frocks are very nearly losing their identity embellished as they are in trimmings of Chinese embroideries which are extravagantly colorful. In the matter of evening wraps, not satisfied with "touches" of Chinese embroidery here and there, women of fashion are appropriating unto themselves the Chinese mandarin in all its original native beauty.

Sometimes, as in the instance of the evening wrap illustrated, a band of handsome fur is added, which the more accents the color glories in oriental embroidery.

Of course not every one can afford an all-over embroidered Chinese mandarin wrap. However, this fact need not be discouraging, for somewhere, somehow if we have managed to introduce even a simple motif or so of Chinese inspiration we may congratulate ourselves for having obeyed the mandates of the mode. For instance, embroidered motifs done in Chinese colorings provide an elaborate decoration on a coat of lacquer-red cloth or velveteen, for the latter is at present considered a fabric de luxe for the evening wrap.

Here are a few suggestions for introducing a bit of the Oriental into dress design. Form the full-below-the-elbow portion of one's cloth, velvet or satin frock of a strip of Chinese embroidery; to the ends of a scarf collar attached to a simple dress, add borders of colorful stitchery; a vestee of Chinese, paisley or peasant embroidery will transform the most unpretentious dress into a garment of pronounced style distinction.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Popularity of Jersey

Jersey is attaining an undreamed of popularity, owing to the fact that it is the ideal material for the two-piece jumper and the sports frock. The most careful dressers match the dress with a plain felt hat of the same color.

Where to Wear One's Waist

Practically every woman will have a waistline this winter. She may not know where to put it but she will have one somewhere between her shoulders and hips. This has followed the introduction of the tight bodice and the shaping of the backs of the topcoats. The position of the waistline depends on the designer and on the height and weight of the wearer.

Separate Sleeves Ready Made

To remodel an old dress or to adapt a short-sleeved model for winter wear, there are smart sleeves of lace or chiffon gathered into a tight wrist band and trimmed with bands of chiffon in varied colors, or ribbon.

English Language Heard Everywhere

"The whole world is talking English," writes Doctor Van Rossem in The Hague Post, after a tour through the five continents. "You land in the French colonies in Cochin-China and instead of 'bonjour' you hear 'good morning.' You are introduced in a French club in Madagascar and instead of 'enchante' you are welcomed with the words 'How do you do?' I found that only one clerk spoke French in the French colony of Bichela-Mer in the Pacific. It's the same thing in China and India. And what is the reason?" he asks. "The ships are English, the money is in American hands; custom officers, military attaches, legation officials, everybody speaks English." There is another reason, the French official in the colonies doesn't care a rap about the whole colonial business. He counts the days when he will stroll again on the Boulevard des Capucins. And then there is the well-known English attitude. An Englishman arrives at Corfu or on an island in the South seas and he says: "Henceforth everybody will have to speak English. I will not understand another language." The people might refuse, but pretty soon somebody begins to say "goodby" when he should say "good morning," and the Englishman has won out again.—Pierre Van Paassen, in the Atlanta Constitution.

Remember Robin Hood Stories

Don and mother went with grandfather to a neighboring town, where grandfather was to preach. After the services a stranger kindly invited them to dine with her at the inn. They accepted, and were just finishing dinner when the hostess turned to Don and asked if he had had all he wanted.

"No," was the prompt reply. And when questioned further, announced he wished a pot of ale.

His amazed mother asked what he meant, well knowing the child did not know what ale meant.

"Isn't this an inn?" asked the child. And when mother said it was, he replied, "When Robin Hood's men went to an inn they always asked for a pot of ale."

Cashed Old Check

If Not More

"That daughter of mine is crazy to go away to school this fall. How much do you suppose it will cost me?"

"How much have you got?"—Life.

Why have RHEUMATISM?

OH, what a wonderful feeling to be free from that miserable rheumatism. To know again the joy of limber joints and active muscles—freedom from that agonizing pain!

How often have you longed for some relief as you suffered torture from swollen, inflamed muscles and joints—how often have you said you would give anything in the World for a few hours comfort!

But you didn't know that all you had to do to get real relief from this nerve wracking misery was just to build rich, red blood, did you? You didn't know that rheumatism had to be stopped from the inside by destroying the impurities that cause it—by building millions of red cells in your poor, weak blood, did you?

Until you fill your system full of healthy, rich, red blood you will never end your rheumatism. S. S. S. will surely help you. That's because S.S.S. helps Nature build the red-blood-cells that fight off the impurities that cause rheumatism.

Conquer rheumatism! S. S. S. has shown the way. For generations S. S. S. has brought blessed relief and comfort to thousands of rheumatic sufferers.

When the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build goes coursing through your system, it purifies the blood in your body. Rheumatism vanishes—skin blemishes disappear—you begin to get hungry again and enjoy your food—strength and power fill your body—you are vigorous—red-blooded and ready for action. Know this joy of living again! Take S. S. S. and banish rheumatism!

S.S.S.

Parent Teachers Meeting

The regular monthly Parent Teachers Meeting was held at the school house and a good crowd was present to listen to a real interesting program of music, readings and solos. Following is the program:

Piano solo, Grace Williams; southern reading, Mrs. Aingie Benge; paper, The Primary Fund and its Apportionment, Mrs. Josephine Jones; paper, Birds, Mrs. Anna Mc Farland; reading in costume; The Oregon Indian Legend, Mrs. Mayme Pendell; vocal solo, Mrs. Virgil Hunt accompanied at the piano by Lucille VanWert.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Laura Meeks; vice president, Mrs. Eva Overly; secretary and treasurer, Mary Wertz. This Parent-Teacher association is becoming one of the most interesting and necessary meetings of our village. The basic idea of a get-together between Patrons and teachers of the high school is one of the best and a long-needed want. Until these problems can be threshed out and the two parties understand each other there will be a broken chain always. We note the work is going on to this end and we hope it will continue.

The school will present an interesting Christmas program at the M. E. church Thursday evening Dec 24. Most of the program will be composed of an operetta lasting about 1 hour.

Students at Northwestern University are tickled. The tickle is due to the fact that their football team made a good record during the fall. As a result of the tickle, the students committed arson by setting fire to an apartment house, when the firemen came to put out the blaze which might have wiped out the city, the students charged the firemen took the hose away from them and turned it upon the fire fighters themselves. Later, the students "slugged" the mayor of Evanston and it became necessary to call out soldiers to quell the brilliant scholars of Northwestern. Northwestern with its ten thousand students seems to bear a resemblance to many other great universities in that it is a training school for lawlessness and mob violence.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon by Rev. D. A. Wright of Waldron and interment was in East Hill cemetery, Osseo.

Over at Hillsdale the City councilmen are considerably roiled at the fact that citizens do not pay much attention to the ordinance relative to getting in the way of firemen going to a blaze. It is claimed that last Sunday while a fire was in progress in the city so many private autos were parked near that the fire fighters could not lay hose, therefore there is a good prospect for 29 of said citizens to spend some time in jail or pay a heavy fine, orboth. Threats have been made several times but nothing further done. The city dads mean business this time, boys!

Death of George Taylor

George Taylor died at his home here Monday, Dec. 21, after a short illness. He was born September 1842. in Pennsylvania, and came to Michigan with his parents when eight years of age settling on the farm in Moscow township where he resided for many years, coming to North Adams eight years ago, where he has since lived.

Mr. Taylor enlisted in the army of the Civil war and served nine months as a member of the 5th and 7th Michigan Cavalry.

He is survived by the wife, one grandson, George Taylor, Jr., one brother, John Taylor, of Moscow township, nephews and nieces.

Funeral services were conducted at the home in this village on Thursday at one o'clock p. m., Rev. Hunt officiating and interment was in the local cemetery.

Gov. Groesbeck Looking After the Roads

As usual, Gov. Groesbeck is at the helm directing matters pertaining to the state highway program which is known as "his program'" and the democrats are somewhat speculative as to what he intends to do with the matter of paying back the state's share of the expense of concrete and gravel road construction to the several counties, There is some talk concerning this matter and it is claimed the state owes the counties $200,000 annually on this indebtedness.

Perhaps the most interesting phase of the gossip is the proposal that, in order to make available more money for trunk line construction and paving, the state's indebtedness to the counties account rewards for roads built under State supervision, be repudiated by legislative enactment.

Not so long ago the State Highway Commissioner was exhorting the people to start an extensive highway building campaign and thus get in on the state aware proposition, and the consequence is a number of counties have gone heavily into debt to do this. Now. if the state refuses to pay to them this award money, where will they come out of the mess? Looks like there might be a storm brewing now don't it?

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Port Huron—Building permits for 40 new homes for working men, the average cost of which will be $2,500, have been issued to Otto Fetting, who represents a syndicate. Work on a number of the homes has been started.

Cheboygan—Great disappointment was sustained by members of the coastguard service in this region when it was announced that contrary to past custom, stations will be kept open throughout the winter, instead of closing during the month of January and February as previously.

Paw Paw—Recommendation for appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point, of Bernard Blakeman, Paw Paw, has been forwarded to the war department by Representative John C. Ketcham, Fourth Michigan district. Paul H. Mason was named as first alternate.

Ypsilanti—The Torch club of professional and business women has completed a survey of the city for names of those who wish to attend night school and have given 180 names over to Professor J. Burns Fuller, of Roosevelt high school and Superintendent A. G. Erickson, of the city schools. As soon as organization is made, work will begin.

Mt. Clemens—The request of Postmaster W. C. Hacker, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., for truck service between Detroit and Mt. Clemens to supplement facilities afforded by railroad and electric car service has been granted by the postoffice department for the 10 days preceding Christmas, it was announced by Representative Louis C. Cramton, Seventh Michigan district.

Ypsilanti—U. Stanley Wilson, 45 years old, a resident of this city for the past three years, died recently after an illness of four days. He had been superintendent of schools in Lapeer, Millington and Quincy. He was a graduate of the State Normal College here and of the University of Michigan. While at the latter school he was leader of the men's Glee Club.

Grand Rapids—C. H. Leonard, president of the Grand Rapids Refrigerator company, said that the option for the purchase of the company's plant and business by the Electric Refrigeration corporation, a combination of the Kelvinator and Nizer corporations, has been extended to February 1, and that $50,000 has been paid. The purchase price is approximately $6,000,000.

Ann Arbor— "Tambourine," the twentieth annual Michigan Union opera, including in its personnel 110 men students of the university left at noon last Friday for Chicago, the first city in which the opera will be presented on its tour of 13 cities throughout the Middle West and East. The opera "special" comprises three pullman cars, a dining car and a baggage car.

Lansing—Doubt that oysters served at a church banquet in Eaton Rapids the evening of November 18 caused the typhoid epidemic that is sweeping over Eaton county towns, was expresed by Dr. R. M. Olin, head of the state department of health. Meanwhile, the little town of Eaton Rapids continues its battle against the disease, which has spread to Charlotte and East Lansing.

Ann Arbor—Members of the board of regents of the University of Michigan held their regular monthly meeting here last Friday night. Among other topics scheduled for discussion was the protest received from the League of Catholic Women of Detroit censuring Dr. Clarence Cook Little for his recent Lansing address realtive to birth control. Copies of the letter of protest have been mailed to each member of the board.

Saginaw—Probably the boldest bit of thievery that criminal circles of the state have known in some time was committed here when a new automobile was taken from the sales room floor of the Davision Automobile company and driven out through the service department. It takes half an hour to put a new car on the floor. The company is not open all night and not until a police officer noticed doors of the concern open was there any suspicion.

Mt. Clemens—The tentative plans of Major Thomas G. Lanphier, of the first pursuit group at Selfridge field, are that the mid-winter maneuvers to Camp Skeel, Oscoda, Mich., will begin January 17 and continue for a week, the same as the operations so successfully executed last February. The maneuvers this year, according to the Selfridge commander, will not feature the war game as last year, but will partake more especially of the practice of gunnery, as applied to the air service.

Lansing—Indications are that depositors in the defunct Farmers' and Merchants' State bank at Grand Ledge will not suffer any loss in connection with financial difficulties that closed the doors of the institution is seen in an order just handed down by Judge Russell R. McPeek, of the Eaton County Circuit Court, at Charlotte. The affairs of the bank were taken over by the trust department of the American State Savings bank of Lansing and the chancery case involving receivership was taken before Judge McPeek.

Jackson—A new district office has been opened by the state highway department at 829 Greenwood avenue, it was announced by George C. Brown, district maintenance supervisor. Brown, who was formerly resident road engineer for Jackson, Lenawee, Washtenaw and Hillsdale counties with an office in the county highway commissions building, now has charge of all trunk road maintenance for Jackson, Hillsdale, Branch, Calhoun, Livingston and Eaton counties. With him will be associated Carl Vinton, a resident construction engineer.

Jackson—The loaning and discount department of the newly-formed Jackson Citizens' Finance company will be opened during the latter part of December. More than $100,000 capital has been subscribed, according to officers of the company.

Marshall — The Tekonsha High school debating team has won its second debate, defeating the North Adams team. The question was "Resolved that the proposed child labor amendment to the national constitution be adopted by the United States."

Saginaw—Indications that the state highway department intends to place construction of a permanent road between Saginaw and Bay City in the 1926 program is shown in a request to the county commission to secure right of way on three miles of the proposed route.

Stanton—The town chorus, under the direction of Mrs. John Lewis, wife of the Montcalm county prosecuting attorney, is at work on Christmas music, both for the pageant at the Congregational church and for community singing at the municipal Christmas tree.

Port Huron—Beginning Tuesday the fares on the bus lines operated in connection with the City Electric Railway Co., which in turn is owned by the Detroit United Railway, were increased to 10 cents. Since the buses began operating some months ago, four tickets for a quarter have been sold. School children still will be permitted to ride on the four-for-a-quarter tick-etc.

Monroe—Road "M-10", running from Elm avenue, Monroe, to the Ohio state line, a distance of 14 miles, and the northern extension, 4 1-2 miles, connecting with the Telegraph road at Loranger's corners, has been opened for through traffic from the north, via Flat Rock, to Toledo on the south. The road from Monroe to Toledo, better known as the "New Dixie Highway," was built by state forces with the aid of prison labor.

Grand Rapids—Although no complaint had been made against her, Mrs. Don Avery, of Cedar Springs, appeared before Justice William Totten, of that village, declared she was guilty of having assaulted Mrs. Mavin Town, of Cedar Springs; and asked to be fined. The justice complied and ordered her to pay a "fine" of $1 and costs of $1. Prosecuting Attorney Earl W. Munshaw is pondering over the question of what to do with the money.

Ann Arbor—In response to a petition circulated by 200 members of the Michigan Union demanding a reorganization of the management and board of directors, Richard Barton, recording secretary of the Union, has announced a special meeting for 7:30 p. m., Jan. 14. An insurgent element, supposedly headed by Albert Adams, of Kansas City, president of the Union, is behind the movement, alleging "gross inefficiency" in the management of the club's affairs.

Lansing—The State prison commission has authorized Harry L. Hulbert, in charge of the construction of the new State prison near Jackson, to proceed with the building that will house the heating and power plant, W. H. Porter, the chairman, announced. Modern conveniences will be afforded the inmates of the new institution, acording to present plans. Hot running water will be piped to every cell. This will be made possible by installing a hot water heating plant.

Lansing—The State Conservation Commission, at its meeting last week, approved Director John Baird's plans for an investigation of fish life in the larger lakes of the state and authorized him to have one of the ichtyologists at the University of Michigan accompany the netting crews. These crews are to be headed by Robert Ellsworth, "commodore" of the State's fisheries fleet, and are to be made up of the commercial fishing inspectors whose boats are laid up during the winter.

Ann Arbor—With last Friday evening marking the beginning of Christmas vacation for thousands of University of Michigan students, with the streets leading to railroad, interurban and motor bus stations filled with hurrying crowds and with the backfiring of ancient flivvers homeward bound, sounding the dominant note of campus activity,, the fulminations occasioned by Dr. Clarence Cook Little's determined stand on liquor law enforcement appear to have died away.

Grand Rapids—Fire, which swept the third floor of the Brown-Graff Paper company's paper warehouse Sunday, caused damage of about $20,000, it is estimated. The baled paper and rags burned stubbornly and firemen worked over the stock for nearly 10 hours. Water seeped through the other two floors into the basement. Joe Brown, of this city, is president and general manager of the concern. E. H. Graff and S. L. Graff, both of Kalamazoo, are vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

Lansing—As the result of many recent complaints, Charles J. DeLand, secretary of state, has issued a warning that currency should not be sent to the state department. Many persons, he said, mail bills for automobile licenses. Neither the state deparment nor the sender can verify the amount claimed to have been sent. Some instances have been reported in which applications and other documents disappeared with the money. DeLand recommends that all remittances be by certified check, draft or money order.

Grand Rapids—Last week's bank clearings in Grand Rapids totalled $11,007,061, a new record, according to Chauncey Guest, manager of the Grand Rapids Clearing House association. This total is $3,768,980 greater than the figures of the corresponding week in 1924. The average daily clearings last week were $1,834,510.24. Most bankers attribute the showing to a general increase in business. Clearings throughout 1925 have all along shown a substantial increase over the corresponding periods for the preceding year.

FOREIGN POLICIES TOLD BY KELLOGG

U. S. Willing to Co-Operate in European Rehabilitation—Bars Politics.

New York.—Foreign policies of the Coolidge administration and reasons for them were explained here by Secretary of State Kellogg.

His speech ran the whole scale from the Saklatvala exclusion case to the Locarno security treaties.

Using a meeting of the Council of Foreign Relations as his forum, the secretary addressed these pronouncements to American citizens and to foreign chancellories:

A warning to American bankers against "indiscriminate" loans to German states and municipalities, although the State department "has not felt itself called on to object to such loans as against the public interest."

Reaffirmation of the government's desire to co-operate in European rehabilitation, but keep clear of European politics.

A declaration that he had as much faith "in the spirit of Locarno as in the treaties of Locarno."

An expression of hope that China will realize her aspirations for freedom from unequal treaties.

An exposition and reiteration of the American war debt funding policy.

A defense of his own action in excluding aliens who desire "to teach their pernicious doctrines of communism" in this country.

Mr. Kellogg spoke from a carefully prepared manuscript. It was disclosed the address was regarded as of such importance that the section dealing with foreign debts and that touching upon the American attitude toward European conferences, although it contained no direct reference to the Geneva disarmament movement, has been cabled in full by the State department to American diplomatic missions in Europe.

Attempt Made to Kidnap Son of Countess Salm

West Palm Beach, Fla.—Persistent rumors of attempts to kidnap the infant son of Countess Ludwig Salm-von Hoogstraeten, the former Millicent Rogers, were renewed here when it became known that private detectives guarding Waikii, the countess' Palm Beach home, had fired six shots at two men shortly after one o'clock in the morning.

New York.—The Countess Salm, whose husband, Count Ludwig Salm-von Hoogstraeten, is suing for separation on the grounds of abandonment, will be served with papers in the case at her cottage in Palm Beach, Fla., according to Herman B. Goodstein, the count's lawyer.

Bob LaFollette Held Regular by Senators

Washington.—The senate Republican committee on committees voted to assign "Young Bob" LaFollette to committees as a Republican.

While Senator LaFollette was treated as a Republican and virtually admitted to the inner councils, Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota Progressive, was to all intents and purposes held to be not entitled to a seat in the senate by the privileges and elections committee.

The senate committee on privileges and elections voted in favor of a report against the seating of Gerald P. Nye by a 9 to 2 majority.

Ask Higher Price to Make Chicago Milk Pure

Chicago.—Milk producers supplying Chicago offered to guarantee Chicago pure milk provided a one-cent per quart increase in the price of milk, to 15 cents a quart, is allowed in order to reimburse them for their loss. After an all-day session in the office of their attorney over the controversy between city officials and the farmers regarding the demands for tuberculin tests for cows, that way out was put forward by the farmers, who announced that they would consult with the Chicago distributers.

Alien Property Custodian Dies in Capital Theater

Washington.—Frederick C. Hicks, alien property custodian, died of heart disease while witnessing a performance in the Belasco theater here.

Prior to his appointment as alien property custodian on April 10, last, Mr. Hicks had taken an active part in national Republican politics and had served four terms in congress from the First New York district. His home was in Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y. He was fifty-four years old.

Mexicans Arrest Plotters

Mexico City.—Several members of the Vera Cruz legislature have been arrested after the alleged discovery of a revolutionary plot.

Mellon to Be Rail Director

Washington.—Secretary Mellon will be director general of railroads after January 1, under a proclamation issued by President Coolidge. The duties of the office have virtually been decided.

Heavier Parcels to Canada

Washington.—Postmaster General New announced an agreement with Canada to permit parcel post packages to that country to weigh 15 instead of 11 pounds.

Loses German Property Case

Washington.—The United States lost the suit in the Supreme court to prevent American holders of German treasury notes from satisfying their claims from property seized by the alien property custodian.

Scopes Given to January 10

Nashville.—John T. Scopes, defendant in Tennessee's anti-evolution trial, was given until January 10 to file assignments in error in his appeal before the state Supreme court.

FROM BOOM STATE

Thousands of northerners who have migrated to Florida during the fabulous real estate boom, as well as native Floridans, are represented in this session of congress by a new member, R. A. Green of Starke. He succeeds Frank Clark, who voluntarily retired, after 20 years' service, to live on his citrus fruit grove.

BRITAIN BACKS PLAN FOR LEAGUE ARMY

Favors Military Force to Enforce Decisions of Council.

Geneva.—Great Britain consented in principle to proposals of Belgium and France for an agreement to establish a League of Nations military force to enforce the decisions of the league council.

The agreement, which was prepared by Foreign Minister Benes of Czechoslovakia and which has the support of the "little entente" calls for the examination by the preparatory committee arranging the disarmament conference of the size, population, wealth, geographical position, industrial resources and size of the army and navy of all members of the league. Then lists of the proportionate military aid they should undertake to give the league, in case a member is attacked, are to be prepared.

The accord on the proposal was reached in the name of England by Foreign Minister Austen Chamberlain, who came to Geneva and took over the discussions with Belgium and France from Sir Robert Cecil.

France Opposed to Bills Which Will Boost Taxes

Paris.—The cabinet of Premier Aristide Briand is in a shaky condition after the rejection by the finance committee of the chamber of deputies of Finance Minister Louis Loucheur's entire plan for the financial rehabilitation of France.

All the measures proposed by Loucheur and rejected by the chamber finance committee called for tax increases and would have meant enormously increased taxation. Only the fiscal frauds provisions submitted by Loucheur were acceptable to the deputies. The rejection followed action of several French towns and communes declaring that they would not submit to tax increases.

Mrs. Colby Sails for Europe; Won't Ask Divorce

New York.—"Amicable separation" several months ago of Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state during part of the Wilson administration, and Mrs. Colby was disclosed when Mrs. Colby sailed for Europe on the Mauretania. Although admitting they have lived separately several months, both Mr. and Mrs. Colby denied Mrs. Colby was going to Paris to obtain a divorce.

Mr. and Mrs. Colby were married in Stockbridge, Mass., June 22, 1895.

Indict Nine for Jail Plot

Chicago.—Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman and Wesley H. Westbrook, former warden of the Cook County jail, and seven others, now under indictment for their parts in the Druggan-Lake jail scandal, face the possibility of further sentences of two years each in the penitentiary under the terms of indictments returned by the federal grand jury.

Delano Heads Opium Board

Geneva.—Frederic A. Delano of Washington, formerly of Chicago, was appointed by the council of the League of Nations as president of the special commission to study substitution of other crops for the poppy in Persia.

Irish Guards Seize Barracks

Belfast.—The Prince's dock barracks were seized by members of the special constabulary, who declared that they would hold them until their demands for pay due them before their disbandment are met.

Former Private Becomes Shah

London.—Riza Khan Pehlevi, who rose from the ranks in the Persian army, took the oath of office as shah of Persia before the Mejliss, says a dispatch from Teheran.

Golfer Breaks Neck

Denver.—John McGowan, fifty-five, Denver bond broker and golfer, was fatally injured when a ledge on the Denver Country club golf course caved in and he fell five feet, breaking his neck.

General Chase Dies in Capital

Washington.—Brig. Gen. George F. Chase, retired, died at the Walter Reed hospital. He was appointed to the military academy from Illinois and graduated in 1867.

KILLS INCOME TAX PUBLICITY CLAUSE

House Also Raises Exemptions for Heads of Families to $3,500.

Washington.—Repeal of the publicity provision of the 1924 revenue act was approved by the house by an overwhelming margin.

An amendment by Representative La Guardia (Ind., Rep.) restoring the clause of the present law requiring amounts paid by taxpayers to be open to public inspection was rejected by a viva voce vote so decisively that its sponsor did not even request that a count be made.

The house in committee of the whole also approved provisions of the ways and means committee bill relating to personal exemptions and corporation taxes.

Amendments both increasing and reducing the amount of the exemptions as proposed in the committee bill were beaten. The effect was to approve the increase from an exemption of $1,000 to $1,500 for single persons and from $2,500 to $3,500 for heads of families as provided in the committee bill.

An amendment by Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Dem., N. J.) to increase the exemptions still further to $2,500 and $5,000 respectively was voted down by a vote of 64 to 207. Mrs. Norton in her first speech asked the greater exemptions for the benefit of the working people.

No serious attack was made upon the 12½ per cent tax on corporation earnings of the present law. This was approved after the house had rejected an amendment by Representative McKeown (Dem., Okla.) reducing the rate to 8 per cent.

Battling Siki Murdered After Fight in Gotham

The body was found lying face downward on the sidewalk about 100 feet east of Ninth avenue in the district known as "Hell's Kitchen."

He had been shot twice from the rear. Siki's wife, an octoroon, was notified and she went to the police station, where she identified the body as that of her husband.

It is the theory of the detectives working on the case that he went into one of the numerous night clubs near by and became involved in an argument and that he was followed into the street and murdered.

"Battling" Siki, who first sprang into public notice when he won the world's light-heavyweight championship from Georges Carpentier in 1922 in Paris, had had many escapades which frequently resulted in brawls.

Japan Sends Troops to Guard Manchurian Road

Tokyo.—Thirty-five hundred Japanese troops were rushed to Manchuria to protect the Southern Manchuria railway and other interests in the wide battle area around Mukden. Thousands of soldiers, rushed from Korea, have arrived at Mukden to reinforce the garrison there until four battalions arrive from Kyushu, whereupon the former will return to Korea.

Peking.—The Dutch minister, Oudenijk, dean of the diplomatic corps here, called on President Auan Chi Jui and made a formal protest against the failure of the contending armies to allow the international train to get through to Tientsin.

The further retreat of Gen. Feng Yu-Hsiang's forces before the advance of Gen. Le Ching-Ling's troops in the sector between Peking and Tientsin makes Peking the next stand of the Christian general.

Alexander Moore Resigns as Ambassador to Spain

Washington.—Although anticipated in Washington ever since the inauguration of President Coolidge last March that Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburgh would leave his ambassadorship to Spain this year, the announcement from Madrid that he had informed King Alfonso of his resignation surprised Washington.

The original appointment of Mr. Moore, who married Miss Lillian Russell, was personal with the late President Harding.

Ma Ferguson Cuts Evolution

Austin.—The Texas textbook commission appointed by Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson has cut all references to evolution from the biology books, including a statement that man is an animal.

Lissner Quits Ship Board

Washington.—Meyer Lissner has resigned from the shipping board, effective December 31. He was the member from the Pacific coast.

Hears Astor Tax Rebate Suit

New York.—Federal Judge John C. Knox began hearing the suit for recovery of $5,000,000 from the government which the Astor estate alleges was illegally collected as an estate tax from a trust fund left by the late Viscount William Waldorf Astor.

Named U. S. Attorney

Washington.—Roscoe C. Patterson was nominated by President Coolidge to be United States district attorney for the western district of Missouri.

Refuse Oil Rate Increase

Washington. — The interstate commerce commission ruled that rail rates on petroleum from the Smackover-Eldorado fields in Arkansas to New Orleans and surrounding territory may not be increased.

Senate Confirms Mitchell

Washington.—The United States senate on Monday afternoon confirmed the appointment of William D. Mitchell as solicitor general of the United States.

"The Best Laid Schemes"

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

"NO WONDER?" Mrs. Jessup said speculatively, dropping the paper, fresh from the mail box.

Marian, her daughter, on tenterhooks for the sheet ever since it came, asked acidly: "What is it that's no wonder? And are you through reading the news?"

"Here! Take the paper," said the mother, "but don't have a fit when you find out Jim Martin is going to sell out, stock, lock and barrel, and go somewhere—maybe California."

"Don't be scared—he told me all about it yesterday," Marian's accent was triumphant.

"Where? I'd like to know!" Mrs. Jessup cried, sharply.

"Oh! At the Green tea room—we had lunch there—he took me—said he was coming to tell me if we hadn't met in town—"

"And you never told me a word!" Mrs. Jessup ejaculated. "I do hate slyness—"

Marian had vanished, saying over her shoulder: "Don't wait dinner for me—I'm going for a long ride."

Nineteen—and never a free breath all that time—life was as sluggish as waveless, as a mill pond, margined by high green banks. If only her father had lived! He might possibly have dominated her mother. Failing that, Marian was glad he had escaped. Grandpap Dan, who had always held with and up for his daughter, would have made other escape impossible. Else why that will, giving the daughter everything in fee—even forbidding her to provide for her only child if she married to please herself and displease her mother.

A widow indeed for fifteen year, all in a whiffet, Mrs. Jessup had changed—left off mourning, bought a fashionable bonnet, along with garments fitter for her daughter than herself. Psychology might explain it, albeit she lacked something of forty-five. She was not giddy, but whenever Jim Martin had come—Marian flushed a dark red, and set her teeth as she recalled looks of invitation, actions of allure, above all transparent artifices to secure a solitude of two. Yet she had been shaken indeed when Jim had said difficultly: "Honey—I've got to do it—no other way out. It'll all come right—if only you stand fast—and don't rile her—not about anything. You see, I'm leaving you the same as herself. With a clear field I'm dead sure Judge Dandy can make the riffle. Particularly, if you play safe—make out you're so set against a stepfather you're likely to run off with the first man that asks you, as sure as she gives you one. That'll tickle her pink. She knows you won't do it. You can compromise on going off to college. Then when the honeymoon has sobered to a dog-trot—say in a year—I'l come back and tell her she owes you to me as a consolation prize—"

Possibly Jim capitalized public curiosity. Certainly his sale drew a record crowd, also record prices, so he went away, with hope in his heart, and money in both pockets, leaving his namesake Jim-Dandy, the slashing bay, to keep Marian in mind of him. But he made sure the local paper should follow him. A printed announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Jessup and Judge Dancy reached him just a day ahead of wedding cards. A week later there was an anonymous note with these words: "The plot thickens. Watch out." Three weeks later—the deluge. A honeymoon party of three as Jim's uninvited guests.

Behind a glowering bridegroom and bride trailed Marian, frowning, downcast, refusing to raise her eyelids, or do more than nod to him by way of greeting. Jim did the honors of his new environment magnificently.

He asked never a question, save as to old friends and neighbors. Beneath the surface and harmony, he sensed a widening rift. Judge Dancy was always at his wife's elbow. Jim knew she wanted private speech with him, but for three days could not compass it. Marian came to the rescue at last—demanding, upon the fourth morning, to be taken by her stepfather to see some famous views, which only he could properly explain. Jim pleaded important business and went a little way with the pair—then dashed back to Marian's mother, who greeted him with: "Thank the Lord! didn't believe we'd make it."

"Shoot quick! My guess is, he'll be back in an hour," from Jim.

"Sooner maybe," the wife sighed, running on: "Oh Jim! Jim, what made you go away? You're my only hope—you don't even know the mess I'm tangled in. My Marian, all the child I've got, swearing to marry the first that asks her—and he—the judge—scheming to keep her under his eye until he can fetch back from South Africa that no-account grandson of his—make him ask her and get all the money. He wanted it—not me; when he found he could do nothing but let me have it, he hatched up this scheme. And I'd always hoped you'd marry her—and take care of us both—"

"So had I," Jim said heartily: "Not too late for it yet."

"Almost!" cried the mother: "That oaf is comin' home this way. May be her any time now—"

"Don't fret," from Jim: "I'll get busy right away."

That afternoon he swaggered a bit as he said to the Danceys: "Wish me joy. I've struck a gusher—thousand-barrel one. Also I've married Marian."

Short Obituary

A lively western boy, playing with his chum, suddenly interrupted the ball game by saying, "Bet you don't know what happened at 5:30 this morning?" "What?" the other boy asked. "My uncle passed away." "What's that?" "He died." And the ball game was resumed.—Capper's Weekly

What Pretty Girl Did for Sick Stomach

Miss E. Rich of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I don't know what the cause was, but every few days my stomach would feel all bloated up with gas, my appetite was poor and I felt sick to my stomach—to say nothing of headaches.

"I never thought of using Carter's Little Liver Pills until nothing seemed to help. After using Carter's I felt relieved at once—and now as soon as my stomach 'talks' back I answer with Carter's and have the last word."

Solves Farm Problems on Air

SOLVING the farmer's problems over the radio is the task which is being performed by E. B. Heaton, Farm Adviser of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. His agricultural talks and advice reach every nook and corner of rural America through WLS—the Foundation's broadcasting station, Chicago, every Tuesday and Thursday noon during the farm program. Mr. Heaton at that time conducts his "Farm Question Box" in which he endeavors to answer any question the farmer propounds. When more detailed information is requested than he is able to send through the air, Mr. Heaton uses the mail. The farm service, of which Mr. Heaton has charge, is equipped with a corps of trained workers, each a practical farmer and an expert in some particular field. Thousands of letters from all parts of the country come to Mr. Heaton's desk.

Program Of Activities 1925-1926 Slogan Mobilize For Law Observance And Law Enforcement

Prayer has ever been our practice and our source of power. We call upon all members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to pray daily for God's blessing upon our leaders and our entire membership that they may have wisdom in the development and execution of plans to promote law observance and law enforcement. The following are recommended as special activities:

1. A definite plan for increasing membership should be adopted by each state, which will culminate in Membership Week, beginning Mothers' Day, May 9th, 1926, the plan to include an invitation to all women and men to commit themselves to law observance and law enforcement by joining the W. C. T. U. or the Y. P. B.

2. Enlist new women and renew the interest of former members by a campaign of organization that will place a local W. C. T. U. in every community, and will bring into active membership all who have ever been members.

3. Lay strong foundations for total abstinence through renewed presentation of scientific temperance instruction in the schools: win the teachers through the presentation of this subject in normal schools, training schools and at teachers' institutes, thus promoting a knowledge of the scientific fact that total abstinence promotes health, public morals and longevity.

4. Enlist young people by securing signatures to the Patriotic Roll of all between the ages of fourteen and twenty five, using their names as a basis for organizing a Y. P. B.

5. Win a million children through enlisting them as Prohibition Guards. Make each unit of the Prohibition Guards the basis for a loyal Temperance Legion.

6. Enlist the support of all Christian men and women in a citizenship campaign for the election of men and women to public office who observe the law themselves and are really interested in making prohibition a success.

7. Enlist the public through a campaign of education whereby the facts in regard to prohibition will be made known through The Union Signal, through the press, pulpit and platform, and through up-to-date literature.

8. Enlist the co-operation of other organizations: The Council of Jewish Women, the Woman's Catholic Protective Union, and other organizations of women by urging them to adopt a program of their own to promote law observance and law enforcement.

9. Concentrate the work of the departments on their relation to law observance and law enforcement, that those interested in other reforms may see that their progress is promoted by law observance and law enforcement.

10. Carry on a campaign of education to expose the fallacies of the proponents of the sale of beer and wine.

11. Emphasize department work with the recommendation that each local union adopt not less than six departments and appoint superintendents or directors.

12, Enlist the public by placing historic and reference temperance books in public libraries. That the story of the fifty years' work of the Woman's Christmas Temperance Union may be known, see that "Women Torch Bearers" is on the list.

13. Hold a border conference in each border state, this to pave the way for a larger knowlege of the internationol aspects of the liquor problem.

14. Urge the local unions to subscribe for the Monthly Budget of leaflets issued by the National W. C. T. U. This supplies up-to-date material for programs, and from the catalogue of publications which will be furnished free, material on all department work can be ordered.

15. Subscribe for the Union Signal, which is the textbook for state and local leaders. It is indispensable to a knowledge of what is being done for law observance and law enforcement. See that it is placed in libraries and public institutions, and see that three officers in each union have it and that the subscription list in every union is equal to one-sixth of the membership.

16. Broaden our work through education as to the danger in habit forming drugs.

17. Lift moral standards through education in social morality on the basis of the single standard of morals.

18. Carry on a campaign to help outlaw war by promoting a sound public sentiment for world peace. —The Union Signal.

It has been claimed by the pessimists that Michigan had no oil within her borders, but the aforesaid critics will have to come off their roost and admit the case for sure since there are oil producing wells in the Saginaw valley and another will be bored at once. Of course no one has yet been able to strike a "gusher" but the day is coming when Michigan will take rank as an oil producing state, because the stuff is here without doubt and the only question is striking the right location. We presume Osseo is not in the oil producing strata but we believe the day is coming when there will be something doing right in Hillsdale county.

20 Observation Stations To Test Causes Of Radio Fading

Investigation of "fading" on a scale never before attempted in the United States will be made in mid-January at twenty observation stations, it was announced today by J. K. Smith of the Stewart Warner corporation.

Hitherto such experiments have been carried on in isolated sections of the country between two or at most three stations. The results of such research have been negligible There is still no explanation of why signals should be stronger in the winter when static electricity leaps out of one's hair or sparks out of the rug at one's feet, and weak in summer when there are apparently no static charges in the things about us, according to Mr. Smith.

The Stewart Warner observation posts will chart readings on selected distant stations every two minutes during the period of the tests. The results will be averaged and plotted on a map similar to that issued by the government weather bureau. It is the belief of the engineers conducting the tests that curves which will make possible a comparison of effects and a search for causes will result. If so, the experiment will be repeated at regular intervals throughout the winter.

"By a comparison of 'fading' and the static curves with those of the U.S. weather map it will be possible to determine the effect of weather on such phenomena" said Mr. Smith, "By plotting the curves of 'fading' and static in tests on stations of varying wave length, some tangible progress may be made toward discovering what frequencies are best for broadcast.

"The plan to hold the tests originated in a discovery that Chicago reception this year has failed to follow the accepted rules. There have been several clear, cold nights on which it has been impossible to hear stations 500 miles distant.

"On the other hand, there have been warm, wet nights entirely free from static and perfect for broadcast reception from distant points."

On Monday evening 200 of the elite of Highland Park danced to the old-fashioned strains of "Moneymusk", "The Irish Washerwoman", "Yankee Doodle" and "Captain Jinks" furnished by a special Ford orchestra and sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford. Mr. and Mrs. Ford were guests of the company and took a hand or more properly a foot, in these dances so tis said. The styles which Henry is inaugurating in dancing will probably not find much support among the younger class of semi flappers and others who dance the naughty "Charlestown" and "Bunnyhug" but among real good common folks of the middle age. Mr. and Mrs. Ford's new idea of refining modern dances will undoubtedly gain a hearing. It is becoming obvious that the extreme rawness of the modern dance cannot much longer be endured by right-thinking citizens who would like the young folks to keep somewhere within the bounds of decency.

Ford Sponsoring Air Work

The latest reports via Radio are that Henry Ford has arranged with New York capitalists to prepare an airplane flight from Spitzbergen in the far north to the Pole. This is to be undertaken to establish some facts relative to flying in cold climates and to satisfy the experimental desires of a group of men who expect aviation to cover the entire Globe in a comparatively short time. Mr. Ford is already the principal actor in aeroplane work in this country having established the factory at Dearborn. It occurs to us that more than likely he is figuring on navigating the air fully as generally as his little "Flivvers" have navigated the land, in which case a little block of stock in his aeroplane factory would be more than a "bonanza."

As an example of what stock investments will do and won't do we like to call your attention to this matter. We hear a lot of talk about the anxiety to sell stocks in fox farms and the like and they go begging for customers, but we would like to have our readers notice the difference between these fly-by night jokes and a real good stock. If you ever see any of this aeroplane stock floating around loose begging for a hand out please grab it at once, because you'll never see it again. No! there is no likelihood of any aeroplane stock from Henry's factory being offered for sale among the citizens of this county or any other county but fox farms and such gilt-edged things as that are surely going strong. A fox farm is all right if you could buy these breeding animals for what they are worth. But if you can't you had better side-track it.

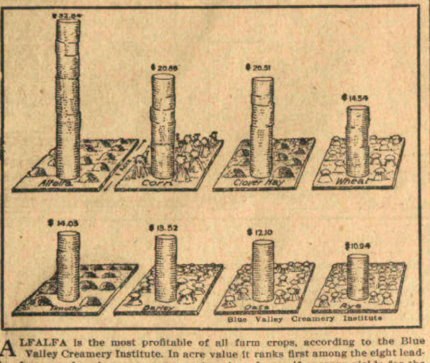
Alfalfa Leads All Crops in Profit to the Farmer

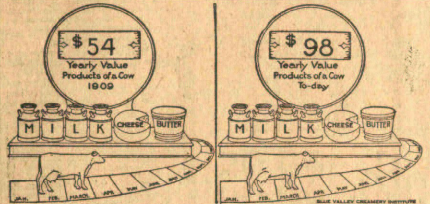


ALFALFA is the most profitable of all farm crops, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. In acre value it ranks first among the eight leading forage and grain crops grown on American farms, if average yields for the United States from 1921 to 1924 and average farm prices during that period may be taken as an index. Its acre value, according to the Institute's experts was $32.84, which is $11.98 higher than that for corn; $12.33 higher than clover hay; $18.30 per acre more than wheat; $18.79 greater than the acre value of timothy hay; $19.32 higher than the acre return from barley; $20.74 more than oats and $21.90, or nearly three times greater return, than the acre yield of rye.

Alfalfa is a concentrated hay feed that reduces feed cost, provides the protein which corn and other grains lack to make milk, beef and mutton economically. In feeding value, pound for pound, it is equal to shelled corn, if based on amounts of digestible nutrients each contains. As dry forage it is considerably more valuable than clover hay, and by far more valuable than timothy hay.

Alfalfa has another very important value which makes it practically indispensable on every farm where dairy cows are fed. Not only will it produce huge crops at a profit several times a year but it also enriches the soil while it grows.

Value of Cow's Yearly Work Shows Gain of 81 Per Cent



THE VALUE of a cow's yearly production of dairy products in 1909 was $54. Today it is $98, an increase in 15 years of 81 per cent, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. During the same period, however, total milk production increased 51 per cent, the number of dairy cows 19 per cent and the purchasing power of their products 17 per cent. The average amount of milk produced by each cow increased from 3,434 pounds in 1909 to 4,368 at present, or 27 per cent, which shows that the average production of milk gained with the larger numbers of cows and that both increased at a greater rate than the purchasing power of each cow's production. In other words, the institute points out, the value of each cow's production has not kept pace with the value of commodities the farmer must buy. As cows producing 4,368 pounds of milk a year are low-profit makers, the importance of high-producing animals is emphasized by the institute's experts. Better breeding, better feeding and the elimination of low-producing cows will make more profitable dairy herds and increase the value and purchasing power of each cow's products, the Institute concludes.

Detroit's Wondreful Growth

There is much said to-day concerning the changing of the country's population from different centers of the land. It is not that we believe the reports are exaggerated but that we have failed to comprehend the trend of the times wherein the cities were picking up momentum and the country was losing its velocity, and we want to say this fact never was so thoroughly impressed upon our mind as when we visited Detroit, the metropolis of Michigan recently and viewed the changes taking place all over the city. Little sub divisions which were out in the country a scant three years ago are now coming to their own, in many ways and not only do prospective buyers flock in but all kinds of capital is centering right in Detroit. These great monied men are seeing the wonderful possibilities of the enlarging of Detroit and are taking the burden of the first investment off the general public. A man can go to Detroit now and find anything he wants in real estate which he can buy to suit himself, and lay the deed aside for two or three years merely keeping up his taxes and go back to the place where he bought and find Lo! a young city of teeming thousands and blocks of splendid brick stores stretching for miles on paved streets sewers being laid in what he supposed were wheat fields, water mains being installed and electricity being added, so that in a short time comparatively, the country like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde transforms so suddenly that the owner of a lot will be completely upset.

Yet this panorama of life is transpiring every day and every week and every month in Detroit where the great melting pot of three continents is simmering.

One of the best sub-division districts we have ever seen is now in what is known as Grand River District toward Redford and Farmington. Here the land lies very high and slopes gently in all directions. The prospects look better than that in the low-lying river bottom lands about Dearborn and the Ford properties. This new plat is called Brightmoor and contains all that humanity needs to make an ideal residence district. B. E. Taylor & Co. and Knowles Brothers have bought several thousand acres in this place and platted it into business lots also some residential portions which are being rapidly snapped up. Every week sees these sub-divisions filled with satisfied buyers. Just a word concerning B. E. Taylor. The amount of money which is tied up in this deal can hardly be realized, but suffice to say both the Taylors and the Knowles Brothers are behind it with plenty of capital to turn the property into a teeming city. All lots sold here are subject to both sewer and water. Sidewalks and the sewers and water are now being put in, as shown by long lines of big tile awaiting the work of the gigantic ditching machine which works every day in the week. With human precision it digs these trenches for miles if need be, and the work of laying the pipes goes on ceaselessly. To one who has money to invest there is one request which the company wishes to make and that is come and look. Just investigate what has been done in the past three years and then ponder on what it will mean to Detroit with the Great Lakes to Ocean canal completed(and that will be done) and the great International bridge across the River. Then take a casual survey of Henry Ford's activities alone to say nothing of the hundreds of other big industries centered in Detroit and you will want to own a patch of real estate in a spot where values cannot possibly go back but must advance. The only absolutely safe and sure investment that capital knows. The Knowles Brothers and B. E. Taylor control altogether 4,200 acres of this city property, have 80 salesmen and restrictions as to building run from $6,000 to $15,000 If you doubt the increase in property values during the past two or three years, go to the men who own property and want to sell, or have to sell. They'll tell you what they paid to start and tell you what they are expecting to make. Men who have bought in Detroit, have constantly been deluged with offers for their property, which is radically different from some properties in North Adams or Florida. Don't put your money in something which is being taxed far beyond its value to build concrete highways and remains always the cadaver that it was. Leave such things alone and go where the progress is always forward.

Comparing Growth of Cities

Miss Olive Hall of San Diego California (an old Neighbor) who went west some years ago is very enthusiastic concerning the growth of her particular city and sends us some clippings from local papers which shows the comparative advantages and growth of California and Florida cities, the latter where so many of our Michiganders are wintering and will undoubtedly continue to winter as the the years go on. Miami, Florida is the county seat of Dade Co., located 366 miles south of Jacksonville which is the port of entry to the state. Miami is the mushroom town of the state springing up as one might say almost over night, but it owes its popularity mostly to Henry Flagler a millionaire promoter, who built the wonderful railroads on viaducts for many miles over the shallow sand bars of the Gulf of Mexico to Key West. Cynical people sneered at the Flagler enterprise and said it never could be done, but Henry stuck to his text and finally had the pleasure of seeing this wonderful line in operation with regular trains. We have never seen it and do not know how the terrible Gulf storms effect the running schedule of the road but this must interfere at times. Flagler had $30,000 when he struck the state which he invested in orange groves. Finally his resources increased until he became immensely rich which is no sign every amateur investor can ganver in acres of diamonds in the same way.

Miami has a tropical climate being below the frost line and is blessed with a wonderful harbor has through connections with all the principal southern towns of Florida by means of canals traversing the country in every direction, bank deposits of $46,000,000 and the largest newspaper with a circulation of 41,012 and calls itself the "World's Greatest Winter Resort." In 1900 it had a population of only 1681 now it is estimated to have a population of 150,000 souls. In eight months of 1925 the building permits have reached $32,566, 703 and still going stronger. This certainly means something to the permanent population of the state. San Diego, California, county seat of San Diego county, 130 miles south of Los Angeles, Largely built by John D. Spreckles the sugar king, bank deposits $62,610 643. Paper with daily circulation of 44,022, best natural harbor on the Pacific coast, splendid all year climate not so much rain as Florida, population in 1900 17,700 now 140,500. One of the greatest summer resorts of the Pacific coast, attracting all classes of Eastern people, many for consumptive diseases. It might be said that while San Diego does not show a biff and boom as Miami, it yet has a steady healthy normal growth which means permanency and also means it will be the big town of Southern California some day. Miss Hall writes she is much pleased with the location, is as we understand interested in investments there and has only one real worry. Her brother, Watson Hall, is now practically disabled by rheumatism and does not leave his wheel chair. The Halls went there expecting to receive some benefit in health but such has not been the case. Miss Hall sends regards to all inquiring friends in Michigan.

The Tax Situation

As remarked in another column of this issue the lower tax rate is taken quite complacently by a number of our citizens. The good roads and our school system seem to be the principal eaters of municipal money. We don't feel that the school system can be curtailed, in fact in comparison with some others, we need additions and they are bound to come sooner or later, so we may as well smile.

Regarding the miles of splendid highways leading from North Adams in all directions, everybody who drives an automobile, feels they are a wondeful up-lift to the community even though the upkeep at times, may pull heavily on our pocket-books. While the average property holder endeavors to pay his taxes promptly, there are times when some would like to thresh it out with the officials, and this becomes a chronic complaint if persisted in. For the benefit of this class it might be said our tax officials are elected by the largest public vote and must be considered good managers of municipal business, otherwise they would not be placed in authority, so it is well to consider the burden has to be borne jointly—share and share alike, and no tax collector under such circumstances would dare to favor one tax-payer to the detriment of any other or for his own personal interest. In certain back woods, rough and ready communities this is sometimes done, but the ever-watchful eagle eye of the State government at Lansing is fixed on every county and township official with a red-hot candle power though but few of these men realize it. Matters of this nature are much differently watched than they were a short ten years ago. So pay your taxes to build more roads to accommodate more speed buggies to carry more midnight "hooch" to grog more workers to manufacture more speed buggies to carry more farmers to town in 30 seconds to save more time to do more work to raise more potatoes to sell for 50c per bushel, to make more money to pay more taxes to build more——! Here's where we get off the time-worn phrase so plain yet so complex: "The philogeny recapitulates its ontogany."

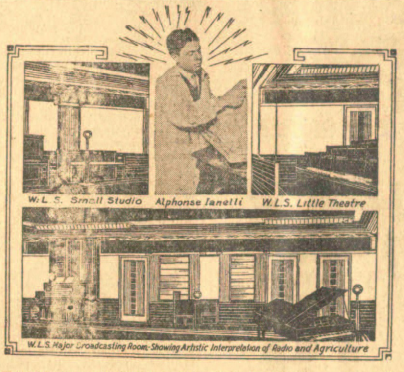
New "Radio Art" Studio Has World's Smallest Theater



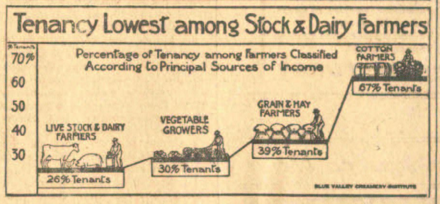
W.L.S. Major Broadcasting Room-Showing Artistic Interpretation of Radio and Agriculture

"RADIO ART," an adaptation of the decorative idea to express broadcasting, has been applied for the first time to the new radio studio of WLS, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation station, in the Hotel Sherman, Chicago. It is said to be one of the most beautiful radio suites in the world. Radio service is the theme of decoration. Everything gives the impression of motion; the walls, ceiling, and even the furniture.

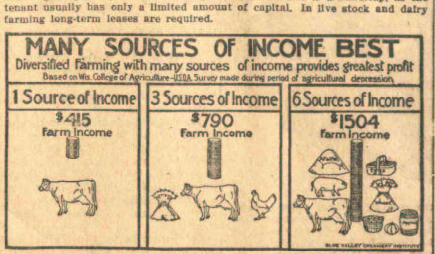
Alphonse Ianelli, one of the country's most noted designers and interior decorators, has succeeded in interpreting radio to fit a decorative scheme portraying modern times. Twin studios have been provided. One is for orchestras, bands and dramatic productions. The smaller one is used for soloists. Separated from the larger studio by a plate glass window is the smallest theater in the world, open to the public. A loud speaker enables the audience to hear the program as it goes on the air while they are watching the actual broadcasting.

Black, red and silver is the color scheme. Ethereal energy and motion, captured by the artist's brush, greet the eye. Representation of sound waves on the walls and ceiling gives the visitor the impression he has stepped inside a dynamo of power. Black and red chenille carpetings also bring out the radio lines of motion. The reception room has a distinctly agricultural background, portraying the "voice of the farm," typifying the educational work of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

Most Dairymen Own Farms, Tenancy Survey Reveals



LESS tenancy is prevalent among dairy farmers than any other type of farmer, is the declaration of the Blue Valley Creamery Institute after a complete study of the percentage of tenancy among farmers classified according to the principal sources of income based upon Census Bureau reports. One alarming element of the survey is that farm tenancy is increasing out of proportion to the total number of farms. According to the census of 1880, 25.6 per cent of all the farms were operated by tenants; in 1890, 28.4 per cent; in 1900, 35.3 per cent. During these forty years the total number of farms increased 61 per cent, while the number of tenant farmers jumped 139.6 per cent. The total number of farms operated by owners only showed a gain of 33.8 per cent. Cotton farming leads in the percentage of tenancy, the Institute finds, because of the large number of "croppers." The percentage is also high in the case of other cash crops, which require only a limited investment. The short term leases do not permit the tenant to engage in dairy, live stock or fruit farming to advantage. And the cream cow is, after all, the greatest friend that the tenant farmer can tie to. She produces ready cash regularly every week. The larger investment also is a handicap, as the tenant usually has only a limited amount of capital. In live stock and dairy farming long-term leases are required.



DIVERSIFIED farming, with many sources of income, provides the greatest profit, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute, which has completed a study of farm income data obtained on 262 farms by investigators of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. Farms with six sources of income had an average yearly income of $1,504; those with three, $790, while those farmers who were dependent upon only one source of income made less than $500. The big lesson to be gained from this study, the Institute explains, is that the farmer who raises products of many kinds makes a living and a reasonable profit, while the one who depends upon a single kind of animal or crop has only a single source of income and small profits for a year's work.

Winter Building

It used to be supposed that the matter of winter construction in cities was almost prohibitive, but late years there is precious little if any difference in the way the firms of such places go about the building program. The Manufacturing News gives the following pointers concerning winter building and it would appear from a casual observation. Labor bonuses are eliminated. Labor turnover is reduced. Contractors lower their margins of profit in order to keep busy. Seasonal discount on materials. Seasonal rates of transport companies. Earlier returns on the investment. If you should inquire you will find that the city of Detroit is keeping up well in the scale of winter building, with approximately one-half of the amount going on regardless of the weather The only method which requires extra precautions is concrete work and even that is taken care of by housing so that concrete pouring by means of hot water and steam keeps the industry moving.

Sojourners in Florida

Rev. and Mrs. M. D. Carrel who left here not long since are located at Lynn Haven Florida, and write very entertainingly of their new home. For the benefit of our readers we are publishing the letter:

Lynn Haven, Florida, Dec. 15, 1925

"We are greatly missing our home paper. Will youkindly change the address to Box 16, Lynn Haven Florida, until further notice. We are here in the land of "Blooms and Booms" as a friend designates in a letter received just the other day. The name is very appropriate. The flowers are everywhere in evidence, not only orange blossoms whose fragrance seems to surpass in unadulterated sweetness any other bloom that blossoms but roses of many varieties are to be seen all about us. The foliage of great magnolia trees and orange and grape fruit trees with their large glossy leaves and trees and shrubs of many varieties look as though they had no dream of "killing frosts."

Few days here are chilly enough to demand a fire for comfort. If the nights are chilly a little turpentine pitch wood kindled in the morning suffices. For the past three or four days before writing we have needed no fire for heating To-day we have had a succession of April showers starting with a thunderstorm some time during the night, and clearing for a pleasant day tomorrow. You would not care to use the space in the North Adams Advocate to tell the little I have learned about the booms in a two weeks' sojourn. They are here; the movement toward Florida is on and what the outcome will be this deponent will not undertake to say. Mrs. Carrel and I rode the other day along the shore of St. Andrews Bay from Lynn Haven to Panama City, the county seat of Bay county. Tourists are everywhere; evidences of an unusual and very intense interest in real estate in all places-

Great tracts of rough and wild pine lands are being cleared by means of mattock and fire and stakes driven to mark boundaries blocks and lots, while showy real estate offices were appealing to passers-by, to examine the marvelous values which they are able to dispense. Shanties of wood and groups of canvas tents indicative of what is being done to relieve the stress and distress of multitudes of tourists pouring into communities already full to overflowing. The proprietress of one of the hotels at Lynn Haven says that she is turning down as high as 15 applications in a day for room and board, and it is very difficult to find needed accommodations along any of the thoroughfares leading toward the south. Inadequate transportation facilities are halting all enterprises looking toward permanent increase of accommodation by placing an embargo on bulding material and merchandise not absolutely essential to life and health. So labor halts and many who have expected to find lots of work at highest wages are greatly disappointed if not in actual need. I think the authoriities are alert and seeking to do all possible to avoid unnecessary suffering among the transient guests but it wouldn't be well for those planning to spend the winter in Florida. to come without some definite arrangements for shelter and food while they are here."

M. D. Carrel

Cider mills around Kalamazoo have gone into the grape juice business on a large scale and report says they have produced this fall right around 382,000 gallons of this delicious Bill Bryan toddy.

THE WINDIGO

SYNOPSIS.—With David, half-breed guide, Brent Steele, of the American Museum of Natural History, is traveling in northern Canada. By a stream he hears Denise, daughter of Col. Hilaire St. Onge, factor at Walling River, play the violin superbly. He introduces himself and accepts an invitation to make the post his home during his stay. He finds the factor worried and mystified. The "log chateau" is a real home. From St. Onge he learns of the mysterious creature of evil, the windigo, and the disappearance of a canoe and its crew, with the season's take of furs.

She shook her head, wistfully. "At the Conservatoire they had planned for me—a career, but father was coming out to Canada—and I could not have him come—alone."

"She was the favorite pupil of the great Mario," announced St. Onge, proudly, "but her love for her old father could not suffer a separation, so she is sharing with me—" the Frenchman rose and nervously paced the room, then, with a gesture of hopelessness, finished, "the loneliness and the—hell of this spirit-ridden valley."

Steele's eyes were on the fine profile of the girl as she followed her father's nervous pacing. Frankly ignoring his presence, she made no effort to conceal the solicitude pictured by her sensitive face. What a sacrfice she had made! To give up career, life—all that people, cities, civilization mean to the artist—how could St. Onge have permitted it? What a tragedy he had stumbled on at Wailing River!

"I've told David he could go down the river with Michel, sir," Steele hastened to change a too painful subject.

"They will find nothing, monsieur."

"Has Michel told you exactly what they are going to look for, Colonel St. Onge?"

The factor stopped his pacing. "Why, what is there to seek, monsieur, except the evidence which has escaped us?"

"Based on a familiarity with the way David's mind works, coupled with an idea of my own, my guess is that they will not spend much time following the shore."

St. Onge's black eyebrows lifted in surprise. "What do you mean; they are going into the back country?"

"Precisely."

"What for?"

"To find a trail!"

"A trail—through the muskeg? But they couldn't get out that way. A trail leading where?"

"That's what puzzles me, colonel."

"Oh, you are wrong! My men never stole that fur. We shall find something yet to prove they were broken up in the big rapid—"

"And then, father, it may be too late," added the low voice of Denise St. Onge.

The bronzed face of the old soldier noticeably reddened at the remark, but he avoided his daughter's eyes.

It was Greek to Steele—this innuendo, and besides, he was hungry for music. "Please, mademoiselle, just a little more—if you are not too tired," he begged.

But the gay mood was not to be recaptured. She shook her head, put aside her bow and violin, and with chin in hand sat with brooding eyes on the bearskin rug at her feet. As the factor talked of the trade, the glance of his guest shifted constantly to the masses of the girl's hair, stray tendrils of which caught and held the light of the candles; to the hand of the artist, with its tapering fingers, which masked her cheek; to the trim foot, in the house moccasin, and rounded ankle; and within him was born the determination to help this girl in her secret trouble, if the aid of a stranger were possible.

Shortly, with a few words of apology, she bade them good night.

With a sigh, as she left the room, the factor went to a cupboard and produced a bottle and two glasses.

"You will honor me, monsieur, by joining me in a glass of cognac? This, and the books, I insisted on having if I were to be exiled to this valley."

Steele poured himself a modest drink. "It is not right, colonel, that you should squander this good stuff upon me. In a few weeks I shall be in New York, while your supply is limited."

"It is not wasted if appreciated," protested St. Onge, "but I fear you have a suspicion of it; you have hardly a taste there," and he deliberately filled his own glass, and raising it with the toast, "Your health, monsieur, and the devil take the Windigo and their friends!" swallowed the brandy.

It was not long before the potent spirits asserted themselves in the Frenchman's manner, which grew appreciably warmer.

"Monsieur Steele," he said, "you doubtless ask yourself why I, a retired colonel, in the army of France, should find myself a trader of fur for the Revillon Freres in Canada—should have brought a girl, educated, refined, to this wilderness?"

"It was, of course, a surprise, sir, to find a woman of the charm—of the remarkable musical talent of your daughter here, in this valley. It is marvelous—her playing. She should have a career, sir."

"Yes, a career!" echoed St. Onge, as he poured himself another drink, "and she has lost it, lost it because she would not leave me."

The liquor had aged the once handsome face of St. Onge. Lines multiplied about the eyes and mouth as he slouched in his chair. All trace of the soldier had vanished; in his place sat a man, broken—conquered by life.

"You have not been in Canada long?" Steele ventured, hoping that the Frenchman would now talk more freely.

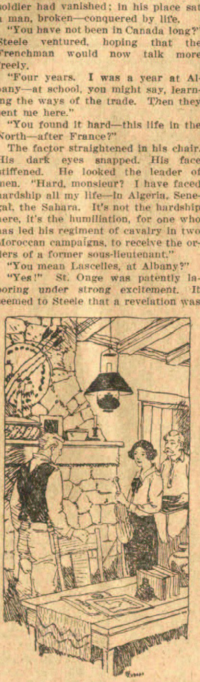
"Four years. I was a year at Albany—at school, you might say, learning the ways of the trade. Then they sent me here."

"You found it hard—this life in the North—after France?"

The factor straightened in his chair. His dark eyes snapped. His face stiffened. He looked the leader of men. "Hard, monsieur? I have faced hardship all my life—in Algeria, Senegal, the Sahara. It's not the hardship here, it's the humiliation, for one who has led his regiment of cavalry in two Moroccan campaigns, to receive the orders of a former sous-lieutenant."

"You mean Lascelles, at Albany?"

"Yes!" St. Onge was patently laboring under strong excitement. It seemed to Steele that a revelation was imminent, but the factor turned to the bottle. "Monsieur," he protested, "you do not flatter my cognac!"



She Shook Her Head Wistfully.

"I am enjoying it, sir," replied Steele, pouring himself a drink to humor his host, to which he added water, for the brandy was powerful. That the cognac habit was an old story with St. Onge was evident, and the younger man wondered what relation a fondness for strong liquor had to St. Onge's presence in Canada. Then he opened abruptly:

"By keeping this post active, under the conditions here in this valley, Lascelles must have realized the chances he took. I cannot understand a fur-trader of judgment doing such a thing."

The face of the Frenchman hardened. "Why this post was built in this place, I do not know; but I do know why Lascelles sent me here." St. Onge leaned toward Steele as he repeated bitterly. "He sent me here—to ruin me."

"To ruin you?" gasped the other. "I don't understand. It is to his interest as an inspector that every post in his district should make a profit." Then he suddenly remembered the mysterious statement of Michel, "M'sieu Lascelles ees no fool; he not keep eet for fur; he keep eet for noder reason." That explained it; the head man knew. "But why?" pressed the curious Steele.

The factor rose and paced the floor, his hands working nervously. Turning impulsively to the man he had met but a few hours before, he exclaimed:

"Why I am telling you this, I do not know. It is an affair the most private, but I am alone with my troubles—and you are a gentleman—a man of heart. You will understand."

Steele tingled with expectancy.

"It surprised you to hear that I was sent here to make a failure of the trade, but that is the truth," went on the factor.

"But for what reason, sir?"

St. Onge shook with emotion. "Because that canaille at Albany desires to marry my daughter!"

Steele wondered, now, why he had not guessed. Of course, the failure of St. Onge as a trader would put him into the hands of his superior at Albany, so he had been sent to the doomed fur post on the Wailing.

"You will leave the company, then?" he hazarded, sick with thoughts of the girl who was the stake in this mad game of Lascelles.

"I must, if I fail here. Up to this year, I have beaten him, in spite of the odds—shown a small profit. And this year, at Portage Lake, we had a good trade—better than ever before—in spite of Laflamme. But the loss of this fur canoe destroys our four years' profits. Monsieur, I am a ruined man."

There was little Steele could say. For a space St. Onge walked the floor with his bitter thoughts, then he began:

"We have been a proud family, the St. Onges. My grandfather fought under the great Napoleon. My father was killed at Sedan. We have always been soldiers, bearing an honored name, but I, the last, am unworthy of it. Cards and this," pointing to the bottle, "have done it. They lost me my old home in Touraine; my poor wife died while I was deep in the Sahara, at Lake Tchad. She is all I have left—Denise." The voice of St. Onge softened as he spoke of his daughter. Then he finished fiercely:

"Give her to that bourgeois? Never!"

Conscious of the fact that the voice of the enraged factor carried to the remotest corner of the house, the embarrassed Steele rose to check further revelations which could prove only a source of pain and mortification to the girl who heard them.

"It is very late, sir—we may be disturbing your daughter," and he offered his hand with a "good-night!" when the pat of moccasins drew the attention of both men.

Clothed in a loose garment, caught at the waist by a Cree sash, her wayward hair in a great coil at the nape of her neck, Denise St. Onge stood in the doorway. She was a figure of peculiar beauty and dignity as she calmly said: "Father, Monsieur Steele doubtless desires to rest after his long journey. It is late."

St. Onge pulled himself together. "Pardon me, monsieur, you are tired. Good-night."

Red with confusion, Steele met the level eyes of the girl who had heard her personal affairs so intimately discussed with a stranger, and marveled to find there no humiliation, no anger, as he murmured a good night and sought his room.

There, for a time, he sat smoking, as he watched the moon drift down to the purple ridge beyond the river. His thoughts traversed the events of the day; the meeting with Denise St. Onge; the news of the loss of the fur canoe and the panic of the post Indians; the startling revelation by the factor of what the future might hold for him and the girl downstairs. As for this fur canoe—St. Onge was palpably holding back something there. But what? And his daughter—had he told the whole story? Could it be that she had already bound herself to Lascelles, to save her father? That would account for the heartache, but not for the fear he had seen in her eyes at the rapids. Fear of whom? Would the old soldier, in spite of his protestations, allow her to sacrifice herself? This Windigo matter—what a rare chance for a first-hand study of the Ojibway superstition! What a monograph it would make for the museum! There was certainly much to do here until they were forced to race the ice down to Nepigon.

Steele undressed and was soon asleep. Presently, from a dream in which timber wolves in full cry were running an old caribou across a frozen lake, he waked to find himself sitting upright in his cot. Across the valley floated a low wail. The man stirred. For a space the hush of the forest night returned. Then from the somber shoulder of the ridge rose sobbing as of a creature in torment.

Wide awake now, nerves tingling, Steele sprang to the window. The voice ceased. The man waited, expectant. Was it a trick of his senses, had he dreamed it, or— Then the eerie wail filled the night with horror, rising in wild crescendo to climax in a demoniacal shriek.

The brain of the excited and mystified man at the window was working swiftly. "Lynx," he muttered, "No! Wolverine? No, not at this time of the year. Wolf? Impossible!" Then his mouth shaped a grim smile. "The Windigo!"

Apparently the Windigo is performing for Steele's benefit. What can the thing be?

All Ages Poetic

For my part, I can call no age absolutely unpoetic; how should it be so since there are always children to whom the acorns and the swallow's eggs are a wonder, always those human passions and fatalities through which Garrick as Hamlet in bob wig and knee breeches moved his audience more than some have since done in velvet tunic and plume? . . . To be quite fair toward the ages, a little ugliness as well as beauty must be allowed to each of them, a little implicit poetry even to those which echoed loudest with servile, pompous, and trivial prose.—George Eliot.

Claim That Voltaire Invented War "Tanks"

The fact that tanks play an important role in warfare has led one student of history, and Voltaire, to declare that Voltaire was the real inventor of the armored tank.

According to this claimant, Voltaire announced the invention, about 1750, of the "Assyrian Chariot," which was armed like the modern tank. With this invention Voltaire proclaimed that he could crush the armies of Frederick the Great, then waging the Seven Years' war. Marshal de Richelieu, however, turned down the invention and Voltaire, in 1770, offered it to Czarina Catherine of Russia, who was then engaged in war with the Turks.

Catherine ordered a pair of the tanks, but later informed Voltaire that they were useless except against troops in massed ranks, as she personally had seen them tested.

White Gold

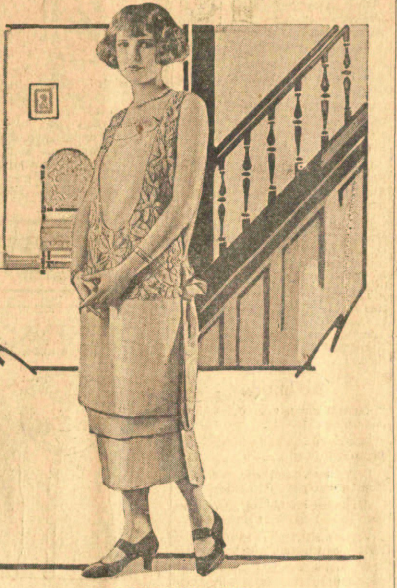
This metal is an alloy of gold, nickel and palladium, a rare metal of the platinum group. Pure gold is 24 carats fine. The fine gold most seen is 18 carat—18 parts of gold and six of palladium and nickel. There are various formulas, in which the proportions of the latter metals differ. Green gold is similarly alloyed with silver, red with copper, and blue and gray with iron.

About the best cure for a swelled head is a dose of common sense.

TRIMS OF METAL LACE POPULAR; SNUG FITTING HATS IN VOGUE

IN KEEPING with the elaborate note metal laces trim many an evening gown. Athwart the sheen of shimmering satin or regal velvet, flounces and embellishments of scintillating laces send their silvery gleam in fascinating manner. Note the word silvery, rather than golden, for, while gold lace is used to some extent, silver effects are preferred.

It is an all-over silver lace which forms the bodice portion of the lovely flesh-colored satin frock in the picture. The satin is handsomely manipulated in three tiers to form the skirt. Of course the frock is sleeveless, as all evening gowns must be.



A Fetching Evening Gown.

So pronounced is the use of metal lace milady is wearing the separate blouse entirely made of metal lace. This fashion is the outcome of the vogue for two-piece gowns, which has become so widespread that our evening dresses, as well as our sports frocks, follow this mode. If one is not partial to solid metal lace there are obtainable handsome laces of silk which are threaded with silver. These are trimmed with silver buttons and loops, and the effect is indescribably lovely. With rippled black velvet skirts, white brocade blouses are worn over-patterned with silver design.

Very effective is a sleeveless sheath-like robe of black velvet, which departs from its simplicity through means of two rippling flounces of metal lace, each edged with fur.

Godets inset about the hemline offer another charming use for silver and gold lace. This method is especially employed in connection with georgette frocks of lovely color.

Speaking of lace in general, the message comes from every authoritative source that lace of every description will be the outstanding feature of frocks for the near future.

Millinery stylists voice their approval of wide, narrow or no brim at all. It is therefore left for each woman to decide the question for herself. If "actions speak louder than words," the little snug-fitting chapeau wins, for while we enthusiastically discuss graceful wide brims most of us wear small hats of style distinction.

To the woman of elegant mode, the little hat made entirely of wide belting ribbon makes appeal for smart town wear. The model in the lower left corner of the picture is typically high class. It is of black belting ribbon from start to finish. Double pearl with rhinestone pins forms a scintillating trim.

Another belting ribbon model is illustrated to the left at the top. It is hats of this trend which promise a successful vogue for the coming mid-season.

Group of Snug Fitting Hats.

The exclusive-looking chapeau to the right center is such as a woman of discriminating taste will choose. It is styled of suede cloth in conjunction with mole fur.

One of the newest features introduced in Paris is the box-like turban. Necessarily the crown is very tall and conventional in lines, but it carries style and is decidedly becoming.

New Scarf

A narrow little crepe de chine scarf of much charm has a band of embroidery in bright colors around the ends, and a cuff of the same embroidery through which both ends of the scarf are slipped to make it fit snugly around the neck.

The Added Touch

The winter frocks would lose half their effectiveness were it not for the scarfs. The latter furnish the touch of brilliant color which the softer colorings need to bring out their full beauty. The silk scarfs are usually worn wrapped tightly around the throat, with the ends hanging over one shoulder, one falling in front and one in back.

Brown Shoes Are Smart

Brown shoes are shown in a number of different combinations of leather. Black shoes, both kid and patent leather, are also smart.

FARM POULTRY

PLAN TO PRODUCE STRONG CHICKS

The condition and health of the parent stock largely determine the condition and health of the offspring. No question is more important than that of constitutional vigor.

The actions of the fowl indicate to a considerable extent its physical condition. A weak bird is usually inactive and droopy. It does not scratch or forage actively. The loudness and frequency of the crow of the male and the cackle of the female are indications of strength. The large, bright-red comb and wattles indicate health. The eye is the mirror of the body and is a good indication of either health or disease, the healthy fowl having a good, bright, clear eye, while the diseased bird's eyelids droop and present a sleepy appearance.

The brightness and brilliancy of the plumage are indications of constitutional vigor. Feathers on a fowl of low vigor usually grow slowly and appear to be dull and ruffled, as compared with the close-fitting, smooth, fully developed, bright plumage of the vigorous fowl. The strong bird also has a good appetite and a large crop.

The causes of loss of vigor may be summed up as follows:

First—Inbreeding without knowledge of the principles of breeding. Poultry raisers sometimes have a bird with exceptionally fine plumage, and for that reason mate the bird in their breeding pens regardless of its vigor or its relation to other birds in the same pen. There is a distinction between line-breeding and inbreeding.

Second—Use of pullets and immature male birds. As a rule, pullets lay more eggs than hens, yet it has been proven by experiments that the chicks from hens are larger when hatched and that they mature more quickly and produce stronger and more vigorous specimens than those hatched from pullets. A half-grown cockerel should never be used for breeding purposes.

Third—Increased egg production. Forcing fowls to lay by continuously feeding heavy, rich foods tells upon the health of the females and often injures their breeding qualities.

Fourth—Crowding. Poultry raisers make a mistake too often of crowding a great number of birds into small quarters and then expecting the best results from the flock.

Fifth—Lack of exercise. If strong, healthy chicks are desired, the fowls in the breeding flock must be required to exercise by being forced to scratch for part of their food in a litter, or by being given plenty of range.

Sixth—Care of eggs for hatching. Eggs for hatching are often kept in places that are too hot or too cold. Clean nests should be provided, eggs gathered daily and kept in a temperature of from 50 to 60 degrees and not held more than ten days before being set.

Seventh—Improper incubation. An incubator which cannot be regulated with any degree of satisfaction, which lacks the proper provision for both ventilation and moisture, which is first too hot and then too cold, should not be used. The germ of the egg is weakened so that it cannot free itself from the shell, and the chicks which hatch are poor and sickly, either dying in less than two weeks after hatching or having very low vigor.

Eighth—Insanitary quarters. Where the poultry house is allowed to become filled with filth, lice and mites, which suck the life blood from the fowls, chickens cannot be strong and healthy.

Ninth—Inferior breeding stock. No one should attempt to raise chickens from drones, from birds that are not true to type, from birds that have been seriously sick with some disease, if he expects to be successful in the poultry business. All these things can and should be avoided.

Tenth—Breeding from a flock indiscriminately. Many flocks contain a great many birds which lay only during the spring season. Breeding should be done with birds which are known to be good winter layers.—T. W. Noland, Director, Missouri State Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove.

POULTRY NOTES

A turkey hen can cover from fifteen to twenty eggs during incubation.

Raising geese, exclusively, would hardly be found profitable. The laying season is too short, lasting only about two months.

* * *

Without a good mash before them all the time your hens will fall short in egg production.

* * *

The free use of kerosene or crude oil on the roost and in the cracks in your poultry house will help to exterminate mites.

* * *

Watch for any bad habits among your layers. If you find any broken egg shells around on the floors, make an effort to locate the guilty one and try to break up the habit or dispose of the offender.

* * *

Market white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in separate packages. Eggs irregular in shape, those which are unusually long or thin-shelled, or which have shells otherwise defective, should be kept by the producer for home use.

* * *

While ducks are naturally hardy, seldom get sick, and are practically immune from contagious diseases, they do occasionally die from spinal meningitis. Another thing, young ducks bathing in cold water are apt to suffer from cramps.

Pimples

What can I do?

"OH, why can't I have a skin like other girls? Why do I have to have these ugly pimples, blotches and blackheads?

"If I could only find something that would clear up my skin and give me back my soft, rosy complexion, I know I would be the happiest girl in the world! What can I do?"

Is that you talking? If it is, you don't have to worry a minute! Just build up the rich, red blood in your body. Then your skin will be as clear and soft as anybody's.

That's what S. S. S. has been doing for generations—helping Nature build rich, red blood! You can build red-blood-cells so fast that the impurities that cause breaking out on the skin hardly get into the system before the pure blood annihilates them—kills them right out—stops them from breaking out through the skin.

And then this rich, red, pure blood feeds and nourishes the tissues of the skin and keeps it looking healthy.

That's all there is to it. Healthy, vigorous, red blood such as S. S. S. helps Nature build, makes you healthy all over. It beautifies your skin—drives away pimples, blackheads, blotches, rash, boils and eczema—gives you back your appetite—builds firm, plump flesh and fills you full of new life and energy.

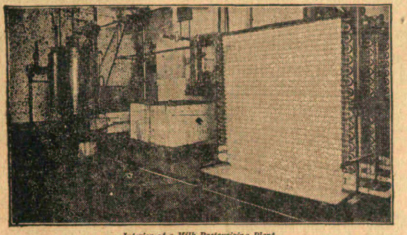
Chief Inspector Sounds Keynote to Purifying Nation's Milk Supply



Interior of a Milk Pasteurizing Plant.

At the 14th annual convention of the International Association of Dairy and Milk Inspectors held at Indianapolis, recently, leading authorities of the United States and Canada submitted interesting and informative papers relative to the purification of the nation's milk supply.

In the closing session of the series of meetings, Dr. Roy F. Leslie, Chief Meat and Dairy Inspector of Cleveland, Ohio, emphasized the great importance of co-operative measures by the producer in the production of clean milk.

"With co-operation on the part of the milk producers," said Dr. Leslie, "much can be done along this line that would otherwise be impossible." He then told of how the public was kept informed of steps taken to control the milk supply with a view to safeguarding the health of all who use milk and dairy products.

"In Cleveland," said Dr. Leslie, "more than 70% of the milk is sold at one or another of a system of chain stores where the customer is given an allowance of 2 cents on the purchase of each quart of milk."

The 2 cents allowed covers the cost of delivery in the home and represents a saving of about 12% to the consumer.

Milk in Cleveland must be sold within 36 hours of pasteurizing.

Mr. J. V. Quigley, dairy adviser, Kansas City Consumers' League, Kansas City, Mo., followed with an account of the work of purifying the milk supply of that city.

He stated that milk produced in dairies where they follow all sanitary regulations such as clean stables, clipped udders and flanks of milk cows, thorough grooming and brushing of the animal before milking, and periodical tests for bacteria, brought to producers in the league 2 cents to 3 cents more per quart of milk than is received by those who were not members of the Kansas City Consumers' League.

Throughout the series of meetings, stress was laid upon the rapid strides being made towards a thorough and comprehensive inspection program of the milk supply of cities throughout the United States and Canada.

It is certain that the results of this work are reflected to a great extent in the increased consumption of milk by the people of the United States, and this increased consumption is sure to be reflected in monetary advantages for both the producer and the distributer. High quality will increase milk consumption and high consumption of milk will keep the milk market steady.

Horace Greening and wife of Hillsdale and William Barker and wife of this village will spend Christmas at the home of Mrs. Mae Mallory.

Ross Watkins and family of Hamilton Ind. were Christmas guests of Dr. and Mrs. O. G. McFarland. Mrs. Watkins is a sister of Mrs. McFarland.

The semi annual meeting of the Abigail Rebekah Lodge was held last Friday evening at I. O. O. F. Hall with a good attendance of members. The election of officers resulted as follows; Noble grand, Lillian Fuller; vice grand, Martha Horn; recording secretary, Ida Relyea; financial secretary, Addie VanAken treasurer, Sarah Winchell. Installation of officers will be held in January. One of the pleasant features of Friday evening's meeting was the presence of 8 members of Howard Rebekah lodge of Jonesville.

A Christmas meeting of the Woman's Club was held last Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Addie Baker. There was a good attendance of members and a few guests. Roll call was answered with Christmas Quotations. A paper, Christmas Carols of all the Nations, was read by Miss Ethel Clement. Music was in charge of Mrs. Elfrieda Calhoun. Songs were sang by the club and Mrs. Mildred Miner Hunt sang a solo. The house was decorated with Christmas colors and a Christmas tree holding gifts for each member was a pleasant feature of the program. The next meeting will be held Monday January 4th at the home of Mrs. Gladys Williams.

LEMON COCOA Butter

Wasn't it the other day you said "This weather is bad for the hands?" Well, you needn't let that worry you.

Lemon juice, as you know, is slightly astringent and splendid for the treatment of roughness; the Cocoa Butter is, of course, the best of all tissue builders.
